TITLE: COMMUNIST INFILTRATION OF THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

CHARACTER OF CASE: INTERNAL SECURITY - C

REFERENCE: 25 58440 6327

SYNOPSIS OF FACTS: Investigation indicates that there are 39 labor unions in the motion picture industry; more than half are A.F. of L., the others are independent unions. There are no C.I.O. unions in the motion picture industry. About half of the unions appear to be controlled by the Communists or follow the Communist Party line for business reasons, realising, perhaps, that it is a good business policy to follow along rather than resort to opposition tactics. The so-called "cultural groups" in the motion picture industry, actors, actresses, and writers, appear to be under the control and direction of the Communist Party and follow the Communist Party line in all details and revise their position without difficulty when the Communist Party changes its policy. Quite a number of directors and executives are well known Communists, others follow the Communist Party line and change without hesitation when there is a change in the Communist Party line. The Communists in Hollywood have set up many Communist controlled front organizations which follow every change dictated by the foreign policy of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union with headquarters at Moscow, Russia.

DETAILS:

AT LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA:

The Bureau instructed that a comprehensive report be prepared indicating the Communist infiltration and possible control of the motion picture industry. It was suggested that the report cover the activities of the Communists in the field of labor organizations, showing the extent to which the Communist Party has gained control and direction of the activities of that section of the skilled, unskilled and technical workers in the Hollywood studios. It has been found in this field that there are thirty-nine separate labor organizations which operate as bargaining agencies for their individual groups, with approximately 20,000 members.

The first portion of this report deals with labor organizations and groups, while the second main portion of this report deals with the activities of the Communists among the writers, actors, actresses, executives, directors, and the so-called intellectuals in general.

While both of these groups have been subject to Communist penetration, and while the methods of penetration have not been the same, it being necessary to approach the working man from a different angle than the intellectual, nevertheless both groups form a part of a broad campaign to influence the motion picture industry as a whole, and the binding and directing force is clearly traceable to the activity of the Communist Party.

It has been found that the Communist activities in the motion picture industry are not in any sense local but on the contrary they form a part of a gigantic world-wide conspiracy of control which has its origin and direction in the Communist Party of the Soviet Union.

It has been observed that the activities, whether they be in the Communist controlled labor unions, the Communist controlled cultural groups, or the Communist front organizations under Communist control, follow every change dictated by the foreign policy of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union.

In each instance when the Communist International, which has its headquarters in Moscow, Russia, sets up a policy to be followed by the Communist Parties throughout the world, these Communist groups in Hollywood have followed "The Communist Party Line". (1) (W)

CONFIDENTIAL

For example, from August, 1935, when GEORGI DIMITROFF in the Seventh World Congress of the Communist International, held in Moscow, Russia, laid down the formula for what was called "The Popular Front", up to the time of the signing of the pact between HITLER and STALIN on August 23, 1939, every Communist controlled organization in Hollywood labor unions, cultural groups and front organizations followed that policy. On August 23, 1939 the non-aggressive pact between HITLER and STALIN was announced to the world, within a period of sixty days these same Hollywood organizations completely reversed their position and began advocating isolation, opposition to the lend-lease policy, and called the war an imperialist war. X(U)

Again on June 22, 1941 when HITLER attacked Russia and the Communist Party line was changed, these same groups changed likewise and are now for all-out prosecution of the war and pretend to be bending every effort to defeat HITLER in accordance with the announced Communist Party line.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE, COMMUNIST PARTY, U.S.A., NEW YORK CITY, RETAINS ITS SPECIAL JURISDICTION OVER HOLLYWOOD CULTURAL GROUPS FOR PURPOSE OF PREVENTING EXPOSURE

X(U)

Source A has stated that as far back as 1934 the Communist Party began to lay plans to utilize Hollywood and the motion picture industry for the Communist cause, but it was not until the fall of 1936 that a full realization of this possibility was reached. On November 13 and 14, 1936, there was held in San Francisco a conference of writers from all over the United States. It was called the Western Writers Congress. The call for this congress was issued by HARRY CARLISLE, an important functionary of the Communist Party in California at the time. He had been centering his activities in the Hollywood section. CARLISLE was a member of the National Council of the League of American Writers which was organized in the spring of 1935 in New York City. This national council was affiliated with the International Union of Revolutionary Writers whose headquarters were in Moscow, Russia. CARLISLE had also been national organizer of the JOHN REED CLUB, a Communist group which preceded the formation of the League of American Writers.

Representing the Central Committee of the Communist Party at this congress were VICTOR J. JEROME and MICHAEL GOLD. JEROME was a member of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, and GOLD is the well known Communist writer on the staff of the "Daily Worker", the official paper of the Communist Party in America, located in New York City.

Writers and personages from, or connected with, Hollywood, attended this conference as delegates, and were:

CONFIDENTIAL

As a result of the WESTERN WRITERS CONGRESS, Source C (W) has stated that early in 1937, VICTOR J. JEROME was sent to Hollywood to direct the activities of the Communist Party in the motion picture industry (1)

After his arrival here a decision was made that owing to the importance of Hollywood and the prominence of those personages, actors, actresses, writers, directors and others who were drifting over into the Communist Party and the various front organizations, it would be necessary to separate the Hollywood activities of the Party from all connection with District No. 13 of the Communist Party and place it directly under the jurisdiction and supervision of the Central Committee of the Communist Party in New York City. This arrangement applied only to those units of the Party which were composed of prominent actors, actresses, writers, directors, and executives. It did not apply to rank and file Communists who were members of labor unions. (U)

This decision was carried out and from that time on the Hollywood cultural faction was completely independent and had no official connection with the local management of the Communist Party. (U)

To further protect the Hollywood luminaries who were then flocking into the Communist orbit in such numbers, directives were issued that all party membership books were to be destroyed and all documentary evidence of every kind was also to be destroyed. (U)

In addition to the foregoing precautions, all units to which personages belonged were made "closed units". A "closed unit" is one which retains the same membership continuously, taking in no new members, thus preventing a leak. (U)

Members of these units, when paying their dues to the party, merely bought the required dues stamps and then destroyed them. (U)

Source D furnished to Agent a copy of a "strictly confidential" report dated January 22, 1934 which was prepared by a party who had been a member of the Communist Party and who may have been a member of the Communist Party at the time the report was made. This report was made for the "Association of Motion Picture Producers, Inc." and contains much valuable preliminary information as this was approximately two years before the Central Committee of the Communist Party, U.S.A. at New York City began to realize the possibilities of the motion picture industry to the Communist Party. This report is copied herein: (U)

["Subject: Activities of Individual Communists and Organizations in Hollywood.] (U)

"The following information on individual Communists and Communist organizations, subsidiary and otherwise, operating in Hollywood, is furnished for your information. (U)

"The Los Angeles sub-district of District 13 of the Communist Party USA, now has a total of 105 units functioning in Los Angeles and immediate vicinity, with a total membership of approximately 1750 persons. This, however, does not include membership of several thousand in their numerous subsidiary and auxiliary organisations. (U)

CONFIDENTIAL

"In Hollywood proper, there have been established six separate units of the Communist Party during the past five months, at the beginning of which there existed only one unit whose activities were somewhat limited, and the spreading of its influence to the extent of the formation of six units is a significant barometrical reading of the growth of the party in Hollywood. (W) (W)

"While there are six units that are acknowledged, there is a seventh which might be termed a shadow unit, which is being kept secret until some time after February. This seventh unit is composed mainly of former Socialist Party members who have broken away from the Socialist Party and have become affiliated with the Communist Party and the existence of this unit will not be made known until after the state convention of the Socialist Party. Among the notable members of this latter unit, are Mr. and Mrs. NASH, having been identified as state secretary of the Socialist Party. (W) (W)

"The former Socialist Party headquarters located at 1453 Vine St., Hollywood, has been taken over by the Communist Party and its subsidiaries. Among some of the organizations holding meetings there are the JOHN REED CLUB, the Pen & Hammer Club, and a recent newly organized social group of the motion picture workers. This headquarters is known as the Commonwealth House. (W) (W)

"One of the Communist Party units held its meeting at the Commonwealth House on Thursday, January 11th, at which comprehensive reports on the activities of this unit and its members during the past and on its future work was rendered. The major concentration decided upon the building of the Motion Picture Workers Union. (W) (W)

"A Mr. WOLF, an organizer of one of the Hollywood Units of the Communist Party, known both as HERMAN WOLF and HARVEY WOLF, is the organizer of the new revolutionary union, which is known as the "Motion Picture Workers Industrial Union." It appears that WOLF was formerly employed as a laboratory worker in a studio and has a wide acquaintance among the workers in the motion picture industry, and he is now applying himself assiduously to the building of this new union. (W) (W)

"The Communist Party fraction of the new union is composed of WOLF, NEIL BRANT, the GOLDBLATT brothers (Young Communist League members) EDDY CLARK, BILL GHIER, HELMAR BERGMAN, LOU HEIFETZ, Mr. and Mrs. GORDON, Gardenia, and a few others. Not all the fraction members are members of the Communist Party, and though this is somewhat of an unusual situation, it is permitted in this instance because of the superlatively revolutionary psychology and ideas of the persons involved. They follow the party line and decisions unerringly. (W) (W)

"From confidential reports, WOLF is being careful in his selection of members for the union and appears to be concentrating on the carpenters, painters and other laborers, and is shying away at this time from the writers. This is mainly because the inarticulate worker is more tractable than the intellectual and can be counted upon to follow the leaders' instructions or appeals in the case of an emergency. (U)

"The policy in building the new motion picture union is to carefully build up a solid membership of the studios employees, then when the membership is sufficiently strong enough, WOLF and the other party members will propose affiliation with the Trade Union Unity League and it is believed that the rank and file of the membership will have by this time been sufficiently impregnated with Communist Party psychology. After this move has been accomplished, the writers and other more temperamental of the workers will be solicited for membership. (U)

"As a means to an end, an association of motion picture employees has been organized. This organization bears the front of a social organization, but is in reality utilized as a recruiting field for the new motion picture employees union. (U)

"This social group meets with and listens to HELMAR BERGMAN and other smooth tongued Communists, and absorbs Communist germs without realizing it. WOLF refers to the social group as the "educational" group and is frank among the comrades in the party in Hollywood to admit that it was organized for the purpose of lining up prospects for the union. (U)

"Other brevities on Communist Party activities in Hollywood include the following: (U)

"The Hollywood section of the Communist Party commemorated the passing of NICOLAI LENIN at their own section, Sunday night, January 21st at the Commonwealth House, 1453 Vine St. (rear) at 8 p.m.; Dr. TASHJIAN was the chairman of the meeting, and NEIL BRANT was the main speaker. (U)

"Members of the Hollywood section of the Communist Party have received instructions from the sub-district headquarters in Los Angeles that the election campaign will be one of the major campaigns of the party this year. Every party member stands instructed to register "Communist". The old evasion of "decline to state", is definitely abolished and all party members must register "Communist". (U)

"The Hollywood section of the Communist Party is planning to establish the Daily Worker in Hollywood (The Daily Worker is the official organ of the Communist Party in the United States). It appears that after considerable dickering, they have made arrangements with the owner of a newsstand located at 6363 Hollywood Blvd. to stock and carry this publication and copies may be procured at this address at the present time. (U)

"One of the outstanding activities of the Hollywood section of the party is the maintenance of a propaganda group as the "Hollywood Discussion Club," which trading on the leniency of the School Board in its policy of permitting Communist subsidiaries and Communist camouflaged organizations to use the school buildings for their propaganda work, organized a committee to arrange and conduct meetings of the Hollywood Discussion Club. The committee first secured the Vine St. School for these meetings. Meetings were held in this building for a matter of several months, then it became apparent that the location was not the best so far as drawing power was concerned, and accordingly, the committee sought a more advantageous location, with the result that the school building located at the corner of Santa Monica Blvd. and Van Ness Ave. is now being utilized for dissemination of all sorts of Communist propaganda. Party members believe that larger crowds will be attracted in this location and that the party's influence will grow among those attending these meetings in the near future. (U)

"A Communist Party member named WILLIAM GHIER, who is also an actor and now employed in the studios, has conducted negotiations with the School Board for the use of the school buildings. In his applications for permits to the Board and when appearing before them, he is known as WILLIAM GREEN, and it appears from his talk or cover with members, that he wears the ultimate in the matter of facial innocence and expression, and is never suspected of being a Communist. In the past, at regular intervals, it has been necessary for him to appear before the School Board for a renewal of the permit to use the building, and at these times this mild appearing Communist used the fictitious name of Mr. WILLIAM GREEN, impressing the Board members with his integrity. (U)

"Several interesting new members have been added to the Communist Party units in Hollywood, among them being, DON GORDON, the writer, BEN PRIVAL, the artist, who has a small studio located at 6768 Hollywood Blvd., PRIVAL has been active in the John Reed Club; his wife, ZORA PRIVAL is also a party member. Another recent party member is PAUL RYAN, who conducts the Hollywood Book Store on Hollywood Blvd. RYAN is a student and a clever writer and is, incidentally also very active in the John Reed Club. His nom de plume is MICHAEL QUIN and he is on the staff of the "Partisan", the John Reed Club publication, and is now attached to Unit #4 as Agitprop director, but will only remain until such time as this unit develops sufficiently to provide an agitprop director to take his place. By territorial division he belongs to another of the Hollywood Units. (U)

"The "Partisan" is the official publication of the John Reed Clubs of Hollywood, Carmel and San Francisco with mailing address Box 2088, Hollywood, and is termed the "revolutionary journal of art, literature and opinion." It is published in Hollywood, Cal. and made its first appearance in Volume 1, #1, December, 1933. (U)

"The writers and artists union of the John Reed Club meets separately every Wednesday night at the Commonwealth House, 1453 Vine St., rear. (U)

"One of the other units of the Hollywood section of the Communist Party is concentrating on agitation among the laundry workers in the Hollywood territory. Leaflets have been distributed among workers in the Hollywood Laundry at Sunset and Tujunga, and others at the Community Laundry and the Pride Hand Laundry. NEIL BRANT is the director of the laundry activities of the Hollywood section and will present a plan of action for the units in the near future. (U)

"Other Communist subsidiaries existing in Hollywood proper include: Two branches of the International Labor Defense, namely the Ben Boloff Branch and the Karl Leibknecht branch, German speaking. Two units of the Young Communist League, and two Young Pioneer troops, and International Workers Order, adult branch and International Workers Order, youth branch; a branch of the ICOR and a unit of the Workers Ex-Servicemen's League. Also the Communist Party has fraction members in five groups of the Bellamy Clubs; one of said groups sends delegates to the "Anti War Conference" and to the "United Front Conference Against Fascism. (U)

"There also exists in connection with the John Reed Clubs, the block of painters engaged in frescoe and mural paintings; a branch of the W.I.R. (Workers International Relief) is in process of formation. Already there is functioning a Workers Film and Photo League, under the leadership of the W.I.R.; it is composed chiefly of petty bourgeoisie elements, but it holds alluring possibilities for exploitation by the Communists; CLARK, a cameraman and member of Unit #4 Communist Party is assisting in the extension of this organization. There is also a branch of the National Students League in Hollywood, which was organized by the Young Communist League. (U)

"The "Red front", an organization of Communist members for use as defense squads and strong arm tactics when coming in conflict with the police, has been organized during the past several months. It is described by the Communists as the vanguard of the Communist Party and members from each of the 105 units are assigned to this organization. The "Red front" is already well organized in New York, Chicago and other metropolitan centers, and will always be found at the front in fights, demonstrations and other places where serious struggle is anticipated on the part of Communist Party leadership. (U)

"The Relief Workers Protective Union is a Communist organization of workers on county relief roll; has two locals located throughout Hollywood, as well as a Communist Party fraction working in one of the Hollywood Unemployed Cooperative Relief Association units. (U)

"Will endeavor to keep you advised from time to time of any outstanding progress being made by the Communists in their endeavor to penetrate into the motion picture industry, or any other activities that may interest you." (U)

Source D also on February 20, 1933 furnished to the Association of Motion Picture Producers, Inc., a report in which Source stated that the Communists "John Reed Club of Hollywood was a branch of the international Union of Revolutionary Writers and Artists," members of which are to be found amond the writers, actors, actresses, artists and scenic painters and others employed in the various motion picture studios. (U)

Source further stated that a communication from the "Workers International Relief" addressed to JOSEPH TURCHINSKY was available which made mention of the fact that SAM ORNITZ, a writer, was employed by one of the studios and that a copy of a letter of ORNITZ' addressed to the International Labor Defense in Los Angeles was also available. (U)

Source then stated "The Workers International Relief is a Communist subsidiary and auxiliary mass organization having a dual mission, that of rendering assistance and relief in strikes, and has charge of proletarian cultural activities, presenting propaganda films and entertainment, and the establishing of Communist children's summer camps." It further stated that the national chairman of the Workers International Relief, BISHOP WILLIAM MONTGOMERY BROWN, is an avowed Communist and its national secretary, ALFRED WAGENKNECHT, is a member of the Central Executive Committee of the Communist Party, U.S.A. (U)

Source stated that JOSEPH TURCHINSKY, to whom the letter was addressed, is an active and militant member of the Communist Party, in charge of Workers International Relief in this section. Source further stated that "The International Labor Defense with which SAM ORNITZ is connected, is another of the Communist subsidiary and auxiliary mass organizations, functioning for the defense of persons (particularly Communists) arrested for seditious activities against the Government, and the defense of Communists and sympathizers arrested for unlawful activities during strikes, demonstrations, riots, and other disturbances." (U)

CONTEMPORARY FILM DISTRIBUTORS

Source E in 1935 made a report to the employer of Source E relative to the above-named organization. This report is copied in full below: (U)

"RE: Aaron Brodsky

"There is, in Los Angeles, a group which calls itself the "Contemporary Film Distributors". Those comprising the group are AARON BRODSKY, KATE BRODSKY (his wife) CHANDLER WESTON and his wife. AARON BRODSKY is the general head of the group.

"AARON BRODSKY is the western representative of the Garrison Film Company, a company producing liberal and revolutionary motion pictures in the east. It is controlled and financed by Communists, although this fact is shrouded in secrecy. The production of these films is a part of the propaganda program of the Communist Party.

"Naturally, BRODSKY handles principally Garrison films but he is not restricted in this matter. A brief review of the circumstances leading up to BRODSKY'S present enterprise, is necessary to an understanding of the situation as it exists today.

"In 1935, AARON BRODSKY joined the Communist Party. He was also a member of the Film and Foto League, a left-wing group of Bohemian type persons who had aspirations to become actors and actresses.

"Later, the Film and Foto League was reorganized and the "New Film Group" supplanted it. After a brief existence, this organization was in turn dissolved in February, 1935. One half of the membership, interested in the production end of the business, is still loosely holding together, talking about making revolutionary or liberal pictures, but actually doing nothing. The other part of the membership, less interested in the "arty" phase of the business than in the more lucrative "showing" of the pictures, set itself up in business. In spite of the fact that the name they adopted (Contemporary Film Distributors) gives the impression of big business, there are only four persons in the entire organization, and they are Communists.

"BRODSKY himself, makes a salary of from $150 to $200 per month, at present, on the showings of motion pictures. This salary is based on "labor charges" he makes for showing pictures to various organizations, groups, affairs, etc. When sound pictures are shown, a larger charge is made than for a silent picture. In addition to this, BRODSKY receives a 10% commission from the Garrison Film Company, when he shows a Garrison film. However, his steady income is derived from a job which he holds, but which is not known to this writer.

"Every effort is made to delude the public as to the true character of the revolutionary films, not only by BRODSKY but by the Communist Party as well - IF - it is thought that only by such deceit can they guarantee that the pictures will be shown. For instance, it is known to a few leading Communists, that a woman known as Miss WILSON, bargained with the Public Library for the showing of certain pictures. Miss WILSON assured the Library employee that these pictures had no connection whatever with the Communist Party or with Communism. She produced a card (one of which is attached hereto) showing that these pictures were to be shown in the Hollywood Women's Club. Her listener was convinced that if the pictures were to be shown in so reputable a place, they must be above criticism! But - these cards were on display in the offices of the Communist Party, and the "Modern Film Group" which purported to be presenting the pictures was actually a small group of Communists attached to the Professional Section of the Communist Party.

"Another card accompanies this article, which lists four of this same group of pictures and showing that this group of pictures was to be shown in the Industrial Section's Headquarters. The Industrial Section is a section of the Communist Party. In comparing the two cards attached, it will be found that pictures, 2, 3, 4 and 5 are the same in both instances. It is ridiculous to assume that the so-called "Modern Film Group" would have no connection with Communism or the Communist Party, with evidence like this on hand.

"It is timely to suggest that organizations, clubs, etc., which are approached by personable men or women who make attractive offers for the showing of motion pictures, should make a thorough investigation of the persons approaching them, and of the film or films offered, before making any arrangements. These Communist agents have developed a finished technique and can make a thorn appear as attractive as a rose.

"This policy has been adopted by the Contemporary Film Distributors, as well. Mrs. AARON BRODSKY is the "front" for the organization, making contacts with various organizations and groups and attending to all business arrangements. BRODSKY attends to the technical end of showing the films. Mrs. BRODSKY is the bookkeeper for the group, as well."

The first "card" referred to in the report above is identified as follows:

"The Best of Foreign Films at the Industrial Section, 546½ S. Spring St."

The second "card" is identified as follows:

"Modern Film Group presents
Five internationally important Sound Films! . . . .
Hollywood Women's Club, 7078 Hollywood Blvd."

The five films mentioned on card No. 1 are the following:

"Thunder Over Mexico"
Mexican Film by EISENSTEIN and UPTON SINCLAIR

"Crime and Punishment",
French Film with HARRY BAUERS

"Alone" - Russian Film

"A Nous La Liberte"
French Film by Rene Clair

"The Wave"

22

The five pictures mentioned on Card No. 2 are the following:

1. "Youth of Maxim" - Russian
   Directed by KOSINTSEV & TRAUBERG

2. "Crime et Punishment" - French
   Directed by PIERRE CHENAL, with music by HONNEGER

3. "Alone" - Russian
   Directed by KOSINTSEV & TRAUBERG, music by SHOSTOKOVITCH

4. "A Nous la Liberte" - French
   Directed by RENE CLAIR

5. "The Wave" (Redes) - Mexican
   With photography by PAUL STRAND

It will be noted that four of the five pictures are listed on both cards. It is reported that all of these films are of a propaganda nature.

WORKERS' FILM AND FOTO LEAGUE

[Source F furnished] to Agent a copy of a confidential report concerning the activities of the Workers Film and Foto League which held a mass meeting on February 6, 1935 at the Commonwealth House, 1453 Vine Street, Hollywood, California. Several of the Communist Party members who were most active at that time are still active in the affairs of the Communist Party in Los Angeles at the present time. SAM ORNITZ, the featured speaker on that occasion, is one of the staunchest Communists in California today. This report is as follows:

"Preliminary activities are in progress in Hollywood, for the organization of a bona fide Workers' Film and Photo League. These activities include the holding of meetings to which the public and persons interested in the production of motion pictures, are invited. Interesting talks, as well as the showing of motion pictures, are provided for entertainment. The talks are designed to inform the people of the aspirations and plans of the new organization.

"In the past, there has been in existence a small group which called itself the Workers' Film and Photo League, but this small group was handicapped for lack of funds, for want of support from technicians and was in reality a one-man organization. J. SIMINOFF owns the camera and some of the paraphernalia, and he has done most of the photographing and other work alone. Now, however, it is planned by certain of the Communist Party members, to make a real organization out of the remnants of the old, with a Party fraction guiding the organization. Among those Party members who are active in forming the new group, are BETTY SMITH, recently arrived from New York, Mr. SALTER, also from New York, EDDIE O'TOOLE, BILL MILLER, BILL GHIER and the WALLACES.

"On Tuesday, February 6th, SAM ORNITZ was the featured speaker at one of these meetings. The meeting was held in Commonwealth House, 1453 Vine Street. Approximately 65 people were present. An admission charge of 15¢ was made.

"ORNITZ said that the purpose of the League was to eventually produce motion pictures, depicting events in the class struggle, etc. In order to produce pictures which may be put on a paying basis, it is necessary to draw into the League film technicians, camera men, grips, cutters, electricians, etc. ORNITZ warned his listeners that they must not come into the Workers' Film and Photo League with the expectation of winning personal glory or fame. They must not come in for "art's" sake. They must come into the League with the full understanding that association with the organization will place upon them the stigma of being called a Red; They must come into the organization understanding that they will have to face HYNES and his murderous Red Squad; they can expect that when they go out to photograph scenes at a demonstration, they will probably be thrown into jail and get their heads bashed in, as well. However, ORNITZ added, the members of this League will have the compensation of a conscience which rests assured in its conviction that the owner of said conscience, has done his best for the revolutionary cause. "Personally", said ORNITZ, "I don't see any fun in living unless you can take these chances. I don't know what justification there is for your living unless you are willing to be beaten up or jailed for the cause of the revolution."

"ORNITZ sneered at the type of motion pictures which is being produced. He said that the actors are tired of love scenes and "all that rubbish". They want to make revolutionary pictures, which actually deal with the class struggle. He declared that it was a revelation to him when he found that so many of the actors and extras are Red.

"ORNITZ spoke of having been in Kentucky and of seeing the hunger, misery and want of the poor people there. He said it would have been invaluable if he could have made pictures of the children with their bodies emaciated from hunger, and their little legs that looked like sticks. He added that he is under indictment in Kentucky and that he was exiled from there.

"He declared that the major studios are now considering making some Russian pictures. He told of the gradual radicalization of some of the greater lights in the picture business. He referred to "Red Square", the picture which Columbia was preparing to make. He said, in connection with this, that LAWRENCE STALLINGS was assigned to write the script for "Red Square". STALLINGS had always been viciously opposed to the Soviet Union. In fact, he became furious when the revolutionary country was mentioned in his presence. In order to gather the proper information for his assignment, he went to Russia in the company of MILESTONE, the director, who is a Russian by birth.

"After spending a little time in Russia, MILESTONE and STALLINGS returned to America. STALLINGS' sentiments towards the Soviet Union appeared to have undergone a complete change. He is now quite sympathetic towards Russia, and the script which he wrote for "Red Square" proved to be exceedingly sympathetic towards the Red Government.

"At this point, LOU HEIFETZ, who was sitting in the audience, asked ORNITZ for permission to make a statement. ORNITZ begged that he do so, and HEIFETZ said, "Comrades, I have bad news for you. I was at Columbia today and they are not going to make "Red Square". I saw the script which STALLINGS wrote and regard it as the finest piece of literary work I have seen for some time."

"ORNITZ displayed great chagrin at this announcement. HEIFETZ added further that the publicity man at Columbia said to him, "There's no use talking - we've got to sell the Americans on Russia."

"The meeting then continued in its informal way, with questions from the floor, and either ORNITZ or O'TOOLE answering them.

"Someone in the audience asked if any technicians belonged to the Film and Photo League as yet. O'TOOLE replied that there are camera men, cutters and writers in the membership at present. It might be mentioned at this point that he announced that HARRY KOMER, formerly a member of the YCL, is a cutter at M.G.M.

"Scraps of pictures which SIMINOFF had taken, were shown, at this time, but because they were shorts and were not correctly assembled the effect was bad."

LARGE FINANCIAL CONTRIBUTORS TO THE COMMUNIST PARTY AT AN EARLY DATE (1935 - 1936)

Source G furnished the Agent a copy of a report which was prepared early in 1936 for certain picture producers. This report is as follows:

"From among the fabulous-salaried executives, directors, actors, scenario writers, etc., of the motion picture industry, have come the Communist Party's most liberal financial supporters. Without the huge monthly contributions of these persons, the Communist Party would have been handicapped in maintaining the extensive headquarters at 224 S. Spring Street and at 230 S. Spring Street.

"These contributors are given the utmost in protection by the Communist Party. One trusted Party member acts as collector, and once each month, visits the various contributors for the purpose of making the collections. An official receipt is given. Only a trusted few of the Party members know the names of the contributors. There is one outstanding example of exposure, and that was the case of where JAMES CAGNEY'S name was broadcast after letters had been found, identifying him as a Communist sympathizer and supporter. This experience caused a tightening of the apparatus handling collections, etc.

"JAMES CAGNEY'S name is among those at the head of the list of heavy contributors. He can be counted upon to make additional contributions in emergency cases, as well as to maintain his regular monthly payments.

"FRANK DAVIS, assistant producer and director, whose home is at 338 N. Barrington Drive, Brentwood Heights, makes a regular monthly donation of $500.00 to the Communist Party. DAVIS recently flew his own plane to Yuma, where he was married to TESS SLESINGER. TESS SLESINGER, incidentally, divorced her former husband because he did not share her radical ideas. She is a scenario writer. She, like DAVIS, is a staunch supporter of Communism.

"Last May, FRANK DAVIS, accompanied by Mrs. BERYL LA CAVA, wife of GREGORY LA CAVA (motion picture director), went to Russia. He declared that his purpose in visiting Russia was to determine for himself, that HEARST was printing lies about that country. DAVIS said he was going to fly over the Ukraine and convince himself that starvation was unknown there.

"Before leaving for New York, on the first stage of the Russian trip, FRANK DAVIS made a gift of a Ford V-8 coupe to the Los Angeles Section of the Communist Party. The Ford had been one of his personal cars and the signing over of the certificate of ownership seemed a trifling thing to him. At the time he left for Russia, he was donating $100.00 per month to the Party. The increasing of the monthly contribution to $500.00 apparently indicates that his devotion to Communism has increased considerably since that time.(S)(U)

"It may be interesting to note here that last summer, the C.E.C. of the Communist Party sent a man known only as "LAWRENCE", from New York to Los Angeles, for the specific purpose of organizing the wealthy sympathizers into a disciplined group. These wealthy Communist sympathizers were told that the Party needed their support and would protect them. Since that time, the monthly collections have been made in an organized manner and the income of the Communist Party has been incredibly increased. A certain percentage of all collections remains in the treasury of the Los Angeles Section, some goes to the District and the balance to New York.(S)(U)

"MARION AINSLEE, scenario writer, was also among the contributors to the Party. Last summer, she was donating $50.00 per month. In September, she went to Russia to join her husband, who has been a student in the University of Moscow for about three years. He is majoring in "Organization" and upon his return to the United States, the Party will assign him to some major position in this field. MARION AINSLEE will return to America with her husband, and without a doubt, her donations will resume their regularity.(S)(U)

"SAM ORNITZ, writer, has long been identified with the revolutionary movement. His monetary contributions to the cause of revolution and the sovietization of the United States, are made through the International Labor Defense. Besides his monetary contributions, he contributes much in writing. He also speaks at various radical affairs and is mightily interested in the production of motion pictures which will act as mediums for the dissemination of revolutionary propaganda.(S)(U)

"GUY ENDORE, writer, is also listed as a sympathizer and contributor.(S)(U)

"RUTH CHATTERTON, the star, is described as being extremely sympathetic and can be counted upon to make liberal contributions when called upon.(S)(U)

"LIONEL STANDER, the comedian who is becoming so popular, is a member of the Communist Party and is probably assessed by the Party, for a considerable percentage of his large salary.(S)(U)

"FRANK TUTTLE, motion picture director, is among the devotees to the Soviet idea. The extent of his contribution to the movement, has not been learned by the writer, but it is understood that he is most liberal. His wife, TANYA, was the sponsor of a large affair held at the fashionable Trocadero, some time ago, the proceeds of which went to the Scottsboro Defense.(u)

"EDWARD G. ROBINSON, star, is an admitted Communist sympathizer. He contributes heavily. Last summer, he attended the "protest meeting" held at the Vine Street Playhouse in Hollywood, which was held for the purpose of the so-called attack upon BILL GHIER. It may be recalled that BILL GHIER, a member of the Communist Party, was assisting in the presentation of the anti-fascist play, "Till the Day I Die", at the Vine Street Theater, at that time. One night, he claimed, he was way-laid as he left the Theatre and severely beaten. Communists and sympathizers immediately arranged the protest meeting, at which GHIER, leaning heavily upon a cane and attempting to look wan, was the star. EDWARD G. ROBINSON attended this meeting, occupying a seat down front. He was among those most vociferously voicing their anger at the attack upon GHIER.(u)

"It was learned that KING VIDOR is beginning to show leftward tendencies. At a meeting of writers and press correspondents, KING VIDOR remarked that Russia is making the very best motion pictures being produced anywhere in the world today. He attributed this fact to the fact that the producers "are not hampered by having to consider box-office results", as the Soviet Union is not interested in profits.

"VICTOR SHAPIRO, publicity man at Twentieth-Century Fox, has joined the band of Communist supporters. He is willing to contribute not only money but his ability as publicity man, as well, offering all of the facilities at his command, for conversion to Communist requirements.(u)

"It has been reported that LEWIS MILESTONE is rapidly becoming a believer in the Russian precepts, and that he is willing to contribute to the cause in any way he is able to.

"It may be apropos to make some reference here to the play, "Bury the Dead." On March 29th, this play was read at the Womens' Club on Hollywood Boulevard, with FREDERIC MARCH and his wife, FLORENCE ELDREDGE, reading the major roles. Among the notables attending this reading were JAMES CAGNEY, LIONEL STANDER, ONSLOW STEVENS, DUDLEY NICHOLS (who recently refused to accept the academy award, claiming that it was not a fairly conducted procedure and that it is an empty gesture), FRANK TUTTLE and his wife and JOHN CROMWELL, the well known director who has a magnificent estate in Hidden Valley.

CONFIDENTIAL

"It is understood that there has been considerable friendly rivalry among the directors and actors, in attempts to secure the coveted roles. A clipping from the "Western Worker" indisputably identifies some of these motion picture celebrities with the powerful anti-war play. (enclosed). In the Los Angeles Times of April 19th, 1936, an article appeared, wording of which was as follows,

" 'BURY THE DEAD' TO BE PRODUCED.

" 'The reception accorded 'Bury the Dead' in New York has prompted Contemporary Theatre to produce this anti-war play in Los Angeles.

" 'Following a conference with JOHN CROMWELL and EGON BREECHER, who will co-direct, Contemporary Theatre has announced that 'Bury The Dead' will go into rehearsal immediately. According to the present plans, it will open in May.'

"GEORGE HELLGREN, who is credit manager for the loan association conducted by the Fox Studios, and who is head of the safety department as well, is a heavy contributor to the revolutionary movement. He contributes to every campaign and activity. He is employed at the Fox Westwood Studios. (4(u)

"CLIFFORD ODETTS, well known writer, is another Communist Party member and supporter. He came to Hollywood recently from New York and accepted a position at $2500.00 per week at Paramount Studios.

"Regarding: CLIFFORD ODETTS.

"The following was learned today from a reliable and extremely confidential source.

"CLIFFORD ODETTS is the author of the anti-fascist play, "Til the Day I Die" and of "Waiting for Lefty". These plays created a great furor when presented. For a long time, ODETTS, although a well known writer and playwright, had been struggling for a livelihood in New York.

"After the smash successes of his plays, the motion picture producers sat up and took notice of him. He was offered an enticing job at the salary of $2500.00 per week, in Hollywood. It appears that ODETTS did not even have to make up his own mind on the matter, for the C.E.C. of the Communist Party - upon learning of the offer - instructed

ODETTS to go to Hollywood without delay and accept the ~~writer's~~ ~~CONFIDENTIAL~~ ODETTS carried out his instruction and upon reaching Hollywood, signed a contract for two years or so. ODETTS draws a salary of $2500.00 per week which is promptly confiscated by the Communist Party, and ODETTS is given a small allowance by the Party." (A) (U)

INTRODUCTION OF COMMUNIST PARTY ACTIVITIES IN HOLLYWOOD MOTION PICTURE LABOR UNIONS

Source H has stated that it was not until 1934 that the Communist International (Comintern) headquarters in Moscow, Russia discovered the tremendous possibilities of the motion picture as a means of propaganda to serve the foreign policy of the Soviet Union and spread its brand of Communism everywhere throughout the world where motion pictures are shown. (A) (U)

Source stated that up to that time, which was the latter part of 1934, the Communist Party in the United States had had no specific instructions to concentrate on the Hollywood motion picture industry with the object of capturing the labor unions of the workers in that industry and influencing others in cultural fields in Hollywood. (A) (U)

Source stated that this is correct is borne out by what took place at a meeting of the Communist faction of Los Angeles County held at 2500 Brooklyn Avenue, Boyle Heights, in the fall of 1933 at which time SAMUEL DARCY, then the Communist Party organizer of District 13 of the Party under which the territory of Southern California operates, severely criticized one of the comrades for mentioning the possibility of penetrating the motion picture industry. DARCY said at that time that Communists had no business wasting their efforts in "swanky Hollywood". Their place, he said, was down in the industrial districts, the shipyards and the harbor where the real Communist work was to be done. (A) (U)

Source H stated that at about the same time, or shortly before that time, a Russian motion picture director, SERGEI EISENSTEIN, had made a picture in Mexico in cooperation with UPTON SINCLAIR, called "Thunder Over Mexico". This picture was called "an epoch of revolution" by Communists and sympathizers. It was exhibited extensively in the United States and at the Lux Theater in Hollywood.

EISENSTEIN came to Hollywood at this time and was received with much acclaim by executives, writers and actors alike. He was wined and dined and shown every consideration. He was much impressed with the industry but criticized the type of pictures made. He stated that they were not sufficiently socially conscious.

CONFIDENTIAL

Source stated that late in 1934 EISENSTEIN returned to Russia and has never returned to the United States so far as Source is informed. Source further stated that not long after EISENSTEIN arrived in Russia an article was published in the "Communist", the official monthly organ of the Comintern in the United States. [In this article the possibilities of Communist penetration of the Hollywood motion picture industry was stressed and propaganda possibilities of the motion pictures were enlarged upon. Source further stated that in the spring of 1935 direct orders came down in mimeographed form (these communications are called "directives") from the top structure of the Party to all units in the Los Angeles section that there must be an intense concentration on Hollywood and the motion picture industry. The article emphasized the fact that the Communists must try to capture the labor unions for, if this could be done, they could be of much service in influencing the type of pictures produced and thus serve the Soviet cause.] The article emphasized that at the same time work must be done among the cultural group, writers, artists, actors, actresses, and others, to enlist their assistance toward the Communist cause.

There is being set out below a history of activities of the Communist Party as they were applied to the labor unions in the motion picture industry in Hollywood from the year 1934 when the Communist Party decided to enter that tield, until the present time.

HOLLYWOOD STUDIO UNIONS

[Source I, who has been a member of the A.F. of L. labor unions in Hollywood for many years, has stated that the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, an autonomous group of local unions identified with the American Federation of Labor, is one of the oldest group of unions now in existence in the United States. In fact it is older than the American Federation of Labor itself.

When it affiliated with the A.F. of L. in the early nineties of the last century it was granted jurisdiction over the working crafts in the theatrical business, stage carpenters, stage electricians, property men, grips, flymen, and later when the motion pictures came into existence, the motion picture machine operators.

Source stated that when the motion picture industry came into existence it was looked upon as a branch or rather an extension of the theatrical business, differing only in principle by reason of the fact that the camera and projection machine were interposed between the actors and the audience.

CONFIDENTIAL 31

CONFIDENTIAL

Source I further stated that by reason of this fact the I.A.T.S.E. claimed jurisdiction over all workers in the motion picture industry contending, and rightly, that their charter issued by the A.F. of L. covered this field. Shortly after the first motion picture studio was erected in Hollywood in 1911 the I.A.T.S.E. began organizing the workers in the Hollywood studios. This was about the year 1912. This jurisdiction was recognized and I.A.T.S.E. was the only union organization in Hollywood for some years.

Source I further stated that in the meantime, with the great expansion of the industry and the practice of building large outdoor sets and spectacular effects which took the place of painted backgrounds and makeshift sets, the building trade crafts, carpenters, painters, plasterers and others were casting eyes on this field and preparing to enter it.

In 1921 the I.A.T.S.E. called a strike of its workers in a dispute with the studios. Immediately the building crafts stepped in and broke the strike, and succeeded in establishing themselves as a part of the Hollywood studio union organizations where they have remained up to the present time. The I.A.T.S.E. was left with a smaller group of locals which they have succeeded in retaining.

Source I further stated that in 1933 in a dispute with the Hollywood producers, the I.A.T.S.E. called a strike. Again the building trades, especially the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, broke the strike by taking the place of the members of the I.A.T.S.E. This strike was purely a jurisdictional one, as was the one in 1921.

Source I further stated that as a result of this fight over jurisdiction, the workers in the motion picture industry in Hollywood became very much disgusted and began deserting the unions. Membership of all groups dropped until they could be numbered in a few hundreds instead of thousands. The result was that a very chaotic condition existed in 1933 as many of the workers had lost confidence in the A.F. of L.

He stated that up until this time the Communist Party had ignored the motion picture unions, not considering them worth bothering about. It was concentrating on factories, shipping and large industrial concerns. This was the Communist Party line at that time.

Source I further stated that suddenly awaking to the situation and taking advantage of the disorganized condition of the studio unions, the group of Communists and fellow travellers in Hollywood held a series of meetings in the fall of 1933, the result of which was a decision to enter the motion picture field, and in January of 1934 they created an organization for the purpose of entering the field. This organization was the MOTION PICTURE WORKERS INDUSTRIAL UNION. It was an independent group completely under the control of the Communist elements, taking orders from the local functionary of the Communist Party. (U)

MOTION PICTURE WORKERS INDUSTRIAL UNION

(U) Source J has informed the Los Angeles Bureau Office that the Motion Picture Workers Industrial Union was formed on or about January 1, 1934. He has stated that this union was formed for the purpose of taking over and organizing all workers of all classifications in the motion picture industry into one organization. Prior to that time, in 1933, he stated there was a strike in the motion picture industry called by the I.A.T.S.E. which had a foothold in the motion picture industry since about 1912. He stated that this strike failed and due to the failure the I.A.T.S.E. structure practically fell apart and there were left only about 160 members which gave an opportunity for a new group to step in. The result was that the M.P.W.I.U. was set up and began to function.

This union was independent - was not affiliated with the A.F. of L. (The C.I.O. at that time had not come into existence). Source J stated that although the M.P.W.I.U. was under the control and domination of the Communist Party, working through the Communist Party fraction of the union, it never affiliated with the Trade Union Unity League. Demands were made on the organizer of this union, H. G. WOLFE by LAWRENCE ROSS (the correct name of LAWRENCE ROSS was LAWRENCE ROSENFELD), the section secretary of the Communist Party, ELMER HANOFF, organizer for the Communist Party, MAYER BAYLIN, a functionary of the Communist Party, and JAMES ALLEN, organizational secretary of the Communist Party, made demands on WOLFE that the M.P.W.I.U. affiliate with the T.U.U.L. Source stated that WOLFE emphatically declined to affiliate and the union continued to function as an independent union. (U)

The officers of this union were the following persons:

HELMER BERGMAN, President, January 1, 1934 to April 1, 1934.
WILFRED W. LYON, President, April 1, 1934 to February 1, 1935.
MILDRED FLEMING, Secretary.

HELMER BERGMAN. Source K has stated that BERGMAN was born in Sweden but is a naturalized citizen by reason of the naturalization of his father; that BERGMAN was a propagandist for the Communist Party of Russia; that he taught in the Communist Workers School in Hollywood at 1757 North Highland Avenue in 1934; that his subject was "The Communist Manifesto". (U)

Source stated that BERGMAN went to Russia in 1935 with HENRY McCARTY, a writer in Hollywood; that McCARTY paid the expenses of both on this trip; that they stayed in Russia for about three or four months. He stated that when they returned to the United States BERGMAN became the local chairman of the American League Against War and Fascism, and that in 1935 BERGMAN attended the Communist Party Section Convention which was held at 226 South Spring Street, Los Angeles. He stated that at this convention BERGMAN officially represented the American League Against War and Fascism. Source further stated that in 1936 BERGMAN met with the Soviet representatives of the Russian motion picture industry who were in Hollywood to select skilled workers for the motion picture industry in Russia. He stated that BERGMAN aided them in selecting this group to go to Russia and work in the Soviet Union. He stated that some of the persons selected to go to Russia were HELMER BERGMAN, WILFRED W. LYON, BORIS GOLDBLATT, SAM GOLDBLATT, ALLEN HUNTER, JAMES B. ALLAN, and some others, about ten or twelve in all. Of these parties BERGMAN, LYON, and the two GOLDBLATTS were leaders in the Communist Party in the Los Angeles area. He stated that BERGMAN stayed in Russia about two years. The others returned at the end of one year. He further stated that after BERGMAN returned from Russia he lectured at open forums, dinners, small community forums, discussion clubs, all of which were very pro-Soviet and pro-Communist. He stated that BERGMAN carried on this activity until about one year ago when he became inactive. He also stated that BERGMAN is a close associate of NORA HELLGREN and her husband, GEORGE HELLGREN, and that BERGMAN has made his headquarters at the HELLGREN home since 1933. (U) (U)

NORA HELLGREN. [Source M has informed] the Los Angeles Bureau Office that NORA HELLGREN is an outstanding member of the Communist Party; that she was born in Pennsylvania and went to Europe as a social worker; that she was also on the Ford Peace Ship Mission which went to Europe during the World War; that later she became the English secretary to CHICHERIN, the first foreign commissar in the Soviet Union. Source stated that she is very familiar with Russian affairs; that she is one of the old trusted members of the Communist Party in Hollywood; that she is about 58 years of age at the present time. He stated that her husband, GEORGE HELLGREN, was born in Chicago, Illinois of Swedish parentage; that GEORGE HELLGREN is about forty years of age and is the credit executive at the Twentieth Century Fox Studios; that he is also the credit adviser of the Motion Picture Cooperative Buyers Guild. He stated that it is his belief and understanding that GEORGE HELLGREN is not a member of the Communist Party, but that he supports everything that NORA

HELLGREN believes in and follows the Communist Party line and is just as enthusiastic about Communism as NORA HELLGREN is, but it is believed that he has never been accepted as a member of the Communist Party.

WILLFRED W. LYON. [Source N has informed] that LYON was born in New Jersey and is about 45 to 48 years of age; that he was active in liberal and discussion groups during the UPTON SINCLAIR campaign for Governor of California in 1934; that LYON is a high precision mechanic and an expert on motion picture cameras. Source stated that LYON was employed in 1934 by the Mitchell Camera Company, manufacturers of motion picture cameras; that he organized the men in that plant and brought them into the M.P.W.I.U. Source stated that in 1936 he was selected by the representatives of the Soviet government to go to Russia and work as a motion picture mechanic; that LYON stayed in Russia about nine months and when he came back to this country he became active in the union organization in the C.I.O. Rubber Workers Union. He stated that LYON was radical for years but was not a Communist until he came back from Russia in 1937, at which time it was reported that he joined the Communist Party and had been made a member of the Section Committee of the Communist Party in Los Angeles. Source stated that it was also reported that he went to Salt Lake City more than a year ago and that it has been further reported that he has dropped out of Communism completely and has had no connection with the Communist Party in the last two years.

MILDRED FLEMING. [Source O has advised] that MILDRED FLEMING was born in the United States and is approximately forty years of age; that she was a reader in the studios and became secretary of the M.P.W.I.U. He stated that when the M.P.W.I.U. was dissolved, she became an enthusiastic member of the Motion Picture Democratic Committee and was married to STANLEY ROGERS, an art director. He stated that she is a reader in the studios at the present time. He further stated that she wrote articles for "Black and White" in 1939, a publication put out by the Young Communists League. He further stated that she was a member of the League of American Writers and very active at the Hollywood Writers School. He stated that she is a very close friend and associate of DON GORDON, a reader at Paramount, and a very active member and supporter of the Communist Party. He stated that her husband, STANLEY ROGERS, is a sponsor of the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties. Source further stated that ROGERS is also a member of the executive board of the Motion Picture Cooperative Buyers Guild.

ETTORE CONTINI. [Source P has stated] that CONTINI, the treasurer of the M.P.W.I.U., was a reader at the Universal Studios and a close friend of MILDRED FLEMING and DON GORDON. He stated that in 1933 and 1934 CONTINI was a member of the Young Communists League; that he was appointed a delegate from the M.P.W.I.U. to the American Youth Congress which met in Los Angeles early in 1934. He further stated that CONTINI became a Civil Service employee in the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Office as a stenographer or clerk in 1935 and that he is still employed in the Sheriff's Office. Source P stated that it is believed that CONTINI has not engaged in any Communist Party activity since he has been in the Sheriff's Office.

H. G. WOLF. Source Q has stated that WOLF was born at Covington, Kentucky in 1882, that he was engaged in the theatrical business from about 1901 to about 1924 at which time he came to Hollywood and worked in the Hollywood studios until about 1933. Source stated that WOLF became the organizer of the M.P.W.I.U. January 1, 1934 and continued as organizer until 1936 at which time the union was dissolved. Source further stated that WOLF became a member of the Communist Party about November, 1933 and left the Communist Party the latter part of 1935; that from 1935 to date he has been employed as a utility worker in Hollywood and is a member of Local 724 of the Utility Workers Union, A.F. of L., Hollywood.

ED M. GILBERT. Source R has advised that GILBERT was born in West Virginia and is about 45 years of age; that he is at present on the executive board of the M.P.W.I.U. Source has stated that by profession GILBERT is a set designer or draftsman and that he is now employed in various studios in Hollywood. He stated that in 1941 GILBERT was the President of the set designers guild, which is affiliated with the A.F. of L., a studio union. Source has further stated that he has been a member of the Communist Party since 1933 and has held many Communist Party fraction meetings at his home and has been otherwise very active in the Communist Party affairs; that he is a real fanatic on the subject of Communism. Source further stated that in 1935 GILBERT was the representative of the top fraction of the Communist Party to the Labor Commission of the Communist Party for the city of Los Angeles; that he was a delegate to the Conference of Studio Unions and a close associate of HERBERT K. SORRELL, and that he is and has been for a long time a member of the Motion Picture Democratic Committee.

IRWIN P. HENTSCHEL. Source S has advised that HENTSCHEL was born in Montana and that he is about 38 years of age; that he is an iron worker or prop maker and is regularly employed at the Hollywood studios. Source stated that HENTSCHEL is a member of Local 44, I.A.T.S.E. in Hollywood; that he was a member of the executive board, M.P.W.I.U. and has been a member of the Communist Party since 1934. Source stated that evidence of his membership in the Communist Party and his activities in the Communist Party is contained in correspondence between ROY HUDSON, a member of the Central Committee of the Communist Party in New York City and the leading Communist in trade union work in the Party and JEFF KIBRE, the leading Communist in Hollywood trade union work at that time. (This information is contained in Exhibits No. 1 and 2 which will be attached to this report.)

DON GORDON. Source T has informed Agent that the Communist Party name of DON GORDON is JOHN SHERWOOD and that he was born in the state of Connecticut and is about 46 years of age. Source has stated that from 1934 to 1936 GORDON was a member of the executive board of the M.P.W.I.U. He further stated that GORDON has been a member of the Communist Party since 1936; that in 1936 he solicited Source to become a member of the Communist Party. Source further advised that GORDON is at the head of the reading department of Paramount Studios at the present time. He further stated that GORDON is a member of the League of American Writers and that he has taught at the Writers School. He also stated that GORDON had contributed articles to the magazine "Black and White" published by the Young Communists League and managed by WILL ROGERS, JR., and that he was also connected with the "Clipper", the official organ of the League of American Writers.

JOHN LOOSCHEN. Source U has advised Agent that LOOSCHEN was born in California and that he is about 47 years of age; that he is a member of Local 946 Studio Carpenters, A.F. of L. Source further advised that LOOSCHEN was a member of the executive board and sergeant-at-arms of the M.P.W.I.U. He further advised that in 1934 LOOSCHEN was a member of the Pen and Hammer Club and that he joined the Communist Party in 1934 and withdrew about a year and a half later. Source stated, however, that LOOSCHEN is still sympathetic to the Communist party. He further stated that LOOSCHEN attended a meeting at the Embassy Auditorium about September, 1942 which meeting was for the benefit of the "People's World" and at which meeting MIKE QUIN, a "People's World" columnist, and JOHN PITTMAN, another "People's World" columnist, were the principal speakers. He further stated that ED ROBBIN, the Communist Party radio commentator, was the chairman of this meeting.

LOUIS HEIFETZ. Source V has informed that HEIFETZ was born in Boston, Massachusetts, and was a script writer, that he is at the present time a member of the Screen Writers Guild. Source stated that HEIFETZ has never been a member of the Communist Party, that he has been solicited on many occasions to join the Party, but he has never done so, but he always follows the Communist Party line specifically.

RUDOLPH KOHL. Source V has informed that KOHL is a member of Local 644 of the Studio Painters. He further advised that KOHL was a member of the executive board of the M.P.W.I.U. and was active in this union, having recruited more members into the Communists than any one individual, Source V stated that KOHL has been a member of the Communist Party since 1934. He advised that KOHL was appointed a regional director of the Hollywood Studio organization campaign of the C.I.O. in 1934 by HARRY BRIDGES, at which time the C.I.O. was endeavoring to take over the studio unions and at that time the unions were all A.F. of L. or independent. Source stated that KOHL is still an active Communist and that he attended the National Convention of the Communist Party in 1939 as a delegate from California.

CONFIDENTIAL

HELMER PEDERSON. [Source W has advised] the Los Angeles Bureau Office that PEDERSON was born in Norway or Sweden and that he claims to be a naturalized citizen. Source stated that PEDERSON is an ex-Socialist; that he is a member of Local 946 of the Studio Carpenters, and that he is about sixty years of age at the present time. Source stated that PEDERSON was a member of the Communist Party in 1935 and 1936 and was active in Swedish clubs.

ARTHUR JOHNSON. [Source X has informed] Agent that JOHNSON was never a Communist; that he was definitely against the Communists. He stated that JOHNSON was working in the machine shop at Technicolor and that he was a member of the executive board of the M.P.W.I.U. He stated that JOHNSON saw that the M.P.W.I.U. was Communist controlled and he withdrew from the M.P.W.I.U. Source stated that he is at the present time a very active Technocrat.

BORIS GOLDBLATT. [Source Y has informed] the Los Angeles Bureau Office that GOLDBLATT was born in Russia. He is about sixty years of age and claims to have been naturalized in New York City as soon as it was possible for him to become naturalized after his arrival in the United States. Source stated that GOLDBLATT claims to have taken part in the 1905 revolution in Russia. Source stated that he works at the present time as a studio carpenter and is a member of Carpenters Union 946. He further stated that GOLDBLATT is the father of SAM GOLDBLATT and LOUIS GOLDBLATT, outstanding Communist Party functionaries in California. Source stated that BORIS GOLDBLATT was a member of the executive board of the M.P.W.I.U. and made a trip to Russia in 1935 when the Soviet Government took over a group of Hollywood workers in the motion picture industry to participate in the Russian motion picture industry. Source stated that BORIS GOLDBLATT is a staunch fellow traveller and follows the Communist Party line on all occasions, but he stated that BORIS GOLDBLATT has never been a member of the Communist Party. He stated that GOLDBLATT has confined his activities to the I.C.O.R.

SAM GOLDBLATT. [Source Z has informed] Agent that SAM GOLDBLATT was born in the United States. He also claims that his father, BORIS GOLDBLATT, was naturalized in New York City. Source stated that SAM GOLDBLATT is a member of Local 683, Laboratory Technicians, I.A.T.S.E., Hollywood. He also stated that SAM GOLDBLATT was a member of the executive board of the M.P.W.I.U. and was a member of and a leader in the Young Communists League in 1934, 1935 and 1936. Source stated that SAM GOLDBLATT is now a member of the Communist Party under the name of TED MILLER; that he is extremely active in Hollywood union matters serving the Communist Party and has supported various front organizations and the Motion Picture Democratic Committee.

CONFIDENTIAL

LOUIS GOLDBLATT. Source Z has further advised that LOUIS GOLDBLATT, a brother of SAM and son of BORIS, has not been active in the motion picture field, but that he has been the secretary of the State C.I.O. Industrial Union Council at San Francisco for several years and very active in Communist affairs throughout the state, and that he left Los Angeles in March, 1942 and the reason is that he is now in Chicago, Illinois, carrying on C.I.O. organizational work.

LINE NOW CHANGES (1935)

Source 2-A has informed the Los Angeles Bureau Office that in April, 1935, instructions were sent out by the Central Committee of the Communist Party that the Party line had changed and that all independent unions were to be liquidated and their members sent into the A.F. of L. unions with the object of capturing the A.F. of L. This policy was followed by the M.P.W.I.U. In a short time this union took in a large number of members and was well on the way to becoming the leading union in Hollywood. In a short time the Communists in the union and their fellow travellers began to desert and go over into the various locals of the A.F. of L. All of these A.F. of L. locals were mere shells.

In order to bring about the dissolution of the M.P.W.I.U. the Communists used every trick of sabotage known, such as circulating rumors that it was a company union and advising all workers to stay away from it, although they themselves had built it.

Source stated that as a result of this the M.P.W.I.U. gradually went out of existence and in February, 1936 it was officially dissolved.

Source further stated that this union was the forerunner and prepared the way which has enabled the Communist Party to gain control over six A.F. of L. labor unions in the Hollywood motion picture field, the number of workers in which was approximately 8,000. In addition to these six A.F. of L. labor unions, the Communist Party has gained control over six independent labor unions which were called guilds and which had approximately 2,000 members. Source stated that in addition to the A.F. of L. labor unions and the independent guilds referred to herein, there were approximately 25 other labor organizations in the motion picture industry in Hollywood with an approximate membership of 18,000 to 20,000. These 25 guilds and unions represented their members for the purpose of collective bargaining. The Communist Party did not completely control these groups but it was, incidentally, waging a campaign to take over these groups and force them into the Communist Party line for the benefit of the Communist Party.

CONFIDENTIAL

Source stated that this period of the life of the M.P. W.I.U. was the period during which the Communist Party of the United States advocated the changing in their program by revolutionary methods. The slogan during that period was that the American people must adopt "the revolutionary way out of the crisis."

Source stated further that this was the period of acute depression in the United States which the Communist Party was exploiting for the purpose of fomenting revolution and before the change in the Communist Party line early in 1936 which ushered in what was called:

"THE POPULAR FRONT"

At this time the position which the Communist Party took was that the New Deal was the first step toward Fascism and that President ROOSEVELT was setting himself up as a dictator, and that this was the last Presidential election we would see.

Source stated that there was a meeting held in the Hollywood Conservatory of Music about June, 1934 under the auspices of the M.P.W.I.U., at which meeting MAURICE SUGAR from Detroit, Michigan, was the principal speaker. He stated that SUGAR was brought to the Pacific Coast by the John Reed Club of Hollywood, which afterward became the League of American Writers, Hollywood Chapter, and affiliated with the International Union of Revolutionary Writers, set up in Kharkov, Russia in November 1930.

Source stated that at this meeting MAURICE SUGAR attacked the ROOSEVELT Administration and New Deal, saying:

> "This is the beginning of fascism in America; that ROOSEVELT was the coming dictator; and the N.R.A. was the 'National Run-Around'".

Source stated that the whole trend of SUGAR'S address was that no confidence could be placed in democracy and democratic principles as practiced in the United States and that the only solution was the establishment of "a workers' government".

Source further stated that the John Reed Club which brought SUGAR to Hollywood, was a Communist front organization, the dominant figure of which was HARRY CARLISLE, born in America, a member of the Communist Party and a leading Communist in Southern California at that time. He stated that other members active in the John Reed Club at that time were:

HELMER BERGMAN - Communist Party functionary
JOHN HOWARD LAWSON - Dominant Communist in Los Angeles area

NEIL BRANT - member and organizer for the U.E.R.M.W.A. (It is reported that BRANT has a Government job in Washington at the present time)

DAVIDA FRANCHI (D. A. COREY) - A member of the Communist Party and in 1936 the organizer for the Hollywood Section of the Communist Party.

LAWRENCE ROSS (LAWRENCE ROSENFELD) - Section Secretary of the Communist Party in Los Angeles.

MELVINA GOODMAN - A member of the Communist Party.

DR. V. A. K. TASHJIAN - Chairman of the Control Commission of the Communist Party in Los Angeles.

DUDLEY NICHOLS - Fellow traveller, writer and director.

NORA HELLGREN - A high Communist Party functionary.

MAYER BAYLIN - A member of the Section Committee of the Communist Party in Los Angeles. (He was ordered deported seven or eight years ago but so far as is known he has not been deported.)

Source 2-A further stated that during the spring of 1934 CAREY McWILLIAMS spoke at a M.P.W.I.U. meeting; that McWILLIAMS is at present the Director of the Housing and Immigration in the Governor OLSON Administration, and is a sponsor for many Communist front organizations such as the American Peace Mobilization, National Federation for Civil Liberties, National Lawyers Guild, League of American Writers, National Negro Congress, Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, Hollywood League for Democratic Action, Motion Picture Democratic Committee, American Civil Liberties Union, International Labor Defense, and many others. (The first official act of Governor EARL WARREN was the removal of CAREY McWILLIAMS from office.)

The same source further stated that JACK M. WEATHERWAX spoke at a meeting sponsored by the M.P.W.I.U. at the Vine Street School. His subject was the "Breakdown of Capitalism and the Need for A Workers Government". Source stated that WEATHERWAX has been exposed by the JACK TENNEY Legislative Investigating Committee of the California State Legislature, as a member of the District Committee of the Communist Party in California.

Source further stated that in the spring of 1935 orders came down from the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the U.S.A. that all independent unions should be "liquidated" and that the Communists and their influence should be transferred over into the established A.F. of L. unions and where there were no A.F. of L. unions already established, it should be the duty of all Communists to organize such workers under the A.F. of L.

Immediately upon receipt of these instructions the Communist leadership of the M.P.W.I.U. went over into the various A.F. of L. locals in Hollywood and began to work in those unions. (It should be understood that at the time that the M.P.W.I.U. was organized there were a great many legitimate local A.F. of L. unions covering a great part of the motion picture industry in Hollywood, but due to a disastrous strike called by the I.A.T.S.E. in 1933 these unions were deeerted by their membership and had become mere shells.)

EFFORTS OF C.I.O. TO INFILTRATE THE STUDIO UNIONS

Source 2-A has informed Agent that at the time of the dissolution of the M.P.W.I.U. in February, 1936, there had already started a split in the A.F. of L. JOHN L. LEWIS, who at that time was preaching the dictrine of industrial unionism, had already early in 1936 split away from the A.F. of L. and formed the Committee for Industrial Organization. The theory of industrial unionism is basic in the Communist program and its sympathies were for the C.I.O. in preference to the craft unionism of the A.F. of L. Source stated that at that time the Communists had already deserted the M.P.W.I.U. and used their influence to re-build the already existing A. F. of L. craft unions in Hollywood. They found themselves building up those craft unions when secretly they were in favor of the C.I.O., therefore the only way out of this anomalous position was to take over the craft unions of Hollywood as a body, if possible, and affiliate them with the C.I.O.

The same source further stated that although there are many other unions in the studios, the I.A.T.S.E. group is dominant. This alliance by no means has the majority of workers under its jurisdiction, but it does have jurisdiction over the "key" crafts, cameramen, laboratory workers, sound men, the majority of electricians, grips, property men, projectors, prop makers, etc. He stated that in addition to this it has jurisdiction over the projectors in the motion pictures everywhere and it is this latter fact that makes this alliance the strongest union structure in the industry.

Source stated that the I.A.T.S.E., being the strongest unit in the industry, the Communists began their attacks upon this group. They reasoned that if they could capture the I.A.T.S.E. the rest would be easy.

Source further stated that in the fall of 1937 HARRY BRIDGES, regional director of the C.I.O., on the West Coast, appointed RUDOLPH KOHL, a member of the Communist Party in Hollywood, as regional director for the Hollywood Section. At the time he was appointed KOHL was a member and had at one time been the business representative of Local 644, Studio Painters, A.F. of L. This local was not a unit in the I.A.T.S.E.

KOHL'S duties were to direct the campaign to take over the I.A.T.S.E. into the C.I.O. KOHL at the time was a member of the A.F. of L. union.

COMMITTEE OF MOTION PICTURE ARTS AND CRAFTS (C.O.M.P.A.C.)

Source 2-B has stated that about December, 1937 another organization, the Committee of Motion Picture Arts and Crafts (C.O.M.P.A.C.) was set up in the motion picture industry which was conceived and dominated in the usual Communist Party manner. The purpose of this organization was to draw the workers of every type and kind in the studios, using the prevailing acute unemployment problem as a base. Although its activities were presumably directed towards solving the unemployment problem by means of division of work and the creation of jobs and other means, in reality it was a scheme to make contacts and propagandize workers along the lines of the Communist Party, and particularly to create sympathy for the C.I.O.

Source stated that at first meetings of the heads of this group outright opposition to the I.A.T.S.E. was expressed and plans were devised to weaken the influence of the I.A.T.S.E. This organization was working in conjunction with the attempt of the C.I.O. to enter Hollywood. RUDOLPH KOHL, the appointee of HARRY BRIDGES heretofore mentioned, was leader in all of its activities. JEFF KIBRE, a well known Communist leader mentioned in connection with this same attempt, was also active.

Source further stated that the controlling individuals in this organization were:

JACK HOLEN, Chairman, a member of Painters Union #644. (He is now dead)
CHARLOTTE DARLING was secretary.
ED M. GILBERT, whose Communist Party connections and activities have been set out above.
LIONEL STANDER, who in 1934 introduced himself to the M.P.W.I.U. as a member of the Communist Party and who was active in the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, American League for Peace & Democracy, and North American Aid to Spanish Democracy.
GEORGE E. BODLE, fellow traveller who is a member of the National Lawyers Guild and a follower of the Communist Party line. (at present Assistant Director of the Man Power Commission on the Pacific Coast)
LILLIAN HELLMAN, member of the League of American Writers, American Peace Mobilization who sent the call of the Fourth Writers Congress of the League of American Writers and a fanatical follower of the C.P. line

HERBERT BIBERMAN, National Vice-President of the American Peace Mobilization and director of the Southern California American Peace Mobilization; member of the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, League for Peace and Democracy, Motion Picture Democratic Committee who personally picketed the White House with the American Peace Mobilization two days before HITLER attacked STALIN on June 22, 1941. BIBERMAN is a member of the League of American Writers and has appeared on a very large number of programs. He has followed the Communist Party line unhesitatingly.

IRWIN P. HENTSCHEL, whose record appears supra.

HERBERT K. SORRELL, business representative of the Studio Painters Union No. 644, President of the Conference of Studio Guilds, ex-President of the California State Non-Partisan League, a member of the Communist Party as exemplified by Communist Party Membership Book for 1938 No. 60622, which gives his Communist Party name as HERBERT STEWART, and the minutes of the Section Committee; also the minutes of the Section Committee of the Communist Party for 1938 show that he was a member of the Communist Party in 1938.

Professor NORMAN T. BYRNE of Los Angeles City College, and a member of the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League. BYRNE conducted the Hollywood Peace Forum, the organization which took the place of the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League. Source stated that BYRNE also spoke before many forums, churches, schools, and clubs which follow the Communist Party line and his meetings were always advertised in the "New Masses" and over a period of eight or ten weeks in 1939 and 1940.

Source further stated that the C.O.M.P.A.C. remained in existence only eight or nine months, during which time it acted as a transmission belt for the Communist Party, drawing studio workers into such political setups as the Motion Picture Democratic Committee, American League for Peace and Democracy, Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, and the laying of the foundation for the organization which was to take its place, the United Studio Technicians Guild (U.S.T.G.).

Source further stated that the C.O.M.P.A.C. died a natural death about September 1, 1938.

THIRTY-FOURTH CONVENTION OF THE I.A.T.S.E., CLEVELAND, OHIO
JUNE 6 to 9, 1938

Source 2-C has stated that RUDOLPH KOHL, who had been appointed regional director of the C.I.O. for Hollywood by HARRY BRIDGES, failed in his efforts to handle the situation favorable to the Communist Party. Source stated that KOHL made no progress toward winning the studio workers over to the C.I.O.; that a few months before the C.O.M.P.A.C. went out of existence JEFF KIBRE appeared on the scene. During that time KIBRE became a member of the I.A.T.S.E. and worked about one month in the Property Department. He stated that KIBRE began to take part in union activities and made speeches to the various unions and within about thirty days he emerged as the adviser to the executive board of Local No. 37, I.A.T.S.E., which local had a membership of approximately 3500.

KIBRE also became the leader and director of what was called "The I.A.T.S.E. Progressives". Source stated that the term "Progressives" is one that is used by Communists when working in trade unions to conceal their real affiliations. KIBRE then used his influence, with the support of other Communists, to work in the international convention of the I.A.T.S.E. held in Louisville, Kentucky from June 3 to 6, 1940. Photographic copies of letters which appeared in the record of the convention proceedings is attached hereto as Exhibit No. 1. These letters show the Communist activity directed by KIBRE. This exhibit also shows the connection with and instructions from ROY HUDSON, a member of the Central Executive Committee of the Communist Party, U.S.A., and directing head for all trade union work of the Communist Party in the United States. (See Exhibit No. 1, Page 8).

Source stated that further evidence of KIBRE'S connections with the Central Committee of the Communist Party in New York is shown in KIBRE'S letters to BOB REED (Exhibit 1, Page 3) in which KIBRE solicited the advice of JACK SATCHEL, a member of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, U.S.A.

Source stated that further connections of KIBRE with the District Committee No. 13 of the Communist Party is shown in a copy of a letter to WALTER LANTER, State Trade Union Director of the Communist Party for California. (Exhibit No. 1, Page 9).

Further connections of KIBRE with the Communist Party are shown in the copy of his letter to LOUIS GOLDBLATT, a member of the District Committee of the Communist Party and State Secretary of the C.I.O. at San Francisco at that time. (Exhibit No. 1, pages 4 and 5)

Further connections of KIBRE with Communist Party functionaries are shown in a letter from MAC WEISS, Acting State Assistant Secretary of the Communist Party in Ohio to ROY HUDSON, above mentioned. (Exhibit No. 1, pages 7 and 8)

Further evidence of such connections of KIBRE with the Communist Party, U.S.A. is shown in the affidavit of EZRA F. CHASE, a member of the Communist Party in Los Angeles at that time who stated under oath that "JEFF KIBRE has been for some years past a member of the Communist Party . . . and was assigned to "special" work in the studio unions. More specifically, the I.A.T.S.E. Local No. 37 and to the organizing of special studio units of the Communist Party of the U.S.A." (Exhibit No. 1, Page 12)

Source 2-C further stated that due to the exposure of the activities of KIBRE and LEWIS P. HINTSCHEL at the Cleveland Convention in 1938, when their connections with HARRY BRIDGES were exposed (Exhibit No. 2, Pages 7, 8 and 9) their efforts failed and as a result of this failure the international officers of the I.A.T.S.E., GEORGE E. BROWNE, President, and WILLIAM BIOFF, BROWNE'S West Coast representative, retained control of the Hollywood locals of the I.A.T.S.E. This control exercised by BROWNE and BIOFF over the I.A.T.S.E. locals had been established on January 2, 1936 when a closed shop agreement and full recognition of the I.A.T.S.E. was entered into by the Motion Picture Producers Association and I.A.T.S.E., which agreement is still in effect.

At this juncture it must be stated that BROWNE and BIOFF have been convicted on a charge of extortion at New York City in Federal Court in which the charges alleged that they had obtained several hundred thousand dollars from the motion picture producers under threats of calling strikes, and are now serving long sentences in Federal prison, and other charges are still pending against them.

The I.A.T.S.E. as the bargaining agency for its members and the Motion Picture Producers Association maintain the same relations as were set up in 1936.

I.A.T.S.E. LOCALS NOW IN HOLLYWOOD

Source 2-D has informed Agent that immediately following the victory of the I.A.T.S.E. in the September 20, 1939 election, Local No. 37 was broken up into seven separate locals and Local 37 went out of existence.

Source has further stated that the seven locals which were formed from the former membership of Local 37 are the following, giving the approximate membership:

No. 1, Affiliated Property Machinists No. 44; membership 1,500.
No. 2. Motion Picture Studio Grips No. 80; membership 1,700.
No. 3. Studio Set Electricians 728; membership 1,100.
No. 4. Studio Projectionists No. 165; membership 500.
No. 5. Studio Laborers and Utility Workers No. 727; membership 1,000.
No. 6. Make up Artists No. 706; membership 1,000.
No. 7. Motion Picture Costumers No. 705; membership 1200.

Source further stated that separate and distinct from Local No. 37 there are the following three I.A.T.S.E. locals which had been automous since their formation in 1929 and 1930 and were never at any time a part of Local No. 37, which was the first I.A.T.S.E. local in Hollywood, going back to about 1912. They are the following:

No. 1. International Photographers Local 659; 650 members.
No. 2. Sound Technicians Local No. 695; 1,000 members.
No. 3. Laboratory Technicians Local No. 683; 1,350 members.

Source further stated that after the breaking up of Local No. 37 I.A.T.S.E. into seven units and the failure of KIBRE and the Communists to capture these unions, they switched their tactics and began setting up an independent organization which was to be a bridge over which the studio workers could cross into the C.I.O. The name of this organization was the UNITED STUDIO TECHNICIANS GUILD. (U.S.T.G.)

UNITED STUDIO TECHNICIANS GUILD (U.S.T.G.)

Source 2-E has stated that due to the failure of the Communists to gain control of the Hollywood locals of the I.A.T.S.E. by action of the National Convention at Cleveland, it became necessary to change tactics. Within sixty days after the Cleveland Convention, June 6-9, 1938, the Communists began setting up an organization under the leadership of JEFF KIBRE which they called the United Studio Technicians Guild. Source stated that although JEFF KIBRE directed and practically controlled the U.S.T.G. he denied membership in this organization and throughout the life of this group he retained his membership in Local 37 of the I.A.T.S.E.

Source further stated that the purpose of the U.S.T.G. was to take in all members of the I.A.T.S.E. locals in Hollywood and have the U.S.T.G. supplant the I.A.T.S.E., the ultimate object being to affiliate the U.S.T.G. with the C.I.O. under HARRY BRIDGES. Source further stated that the campaign began in September 1938. It had the support of all Communist influence in Southern California. Source stated that the investigation of BROWNE and BIOFF and the ensuing publicity made it possible for the leaders of the U.S.T.G. and those who were sympathetic to meet the members of I.A.T.S.E. locals and point out to them that they were controlled by a "bunch of racketeers and gangsters" and that the only way to get honest unionism was to join the U.S.T.G. Source stated that the organization grew with amazing rapidity and within a period of nine months the membership had reached approximately 2200. Aside from this there were thousands of others who were sympathetic but were not members of the I.A.T.S.E. He stated that at this particular time the U.S.T.G. was well on the way to taking over the Hollywood unions and would have succeeded had it not been that the I.A.T.S.E. had secured and made public the letters and communications which showed that the U.S.T.G. was a Communist directed movement, that KIBRE was a member of the Communist Party, that he was the stooge of HARRY BRIDGES, and that he was taking orders from the top structure of the Communist Party represented by ROY HUDSON of the Central Executive Committee of the Communist Party, U.S.A. (See exhibits No. 1 and 2 attached hereto.)

Source stated that further evidence of Communist control of this group was in the activities of the following individuals who were members of the executive board of U.S.T.G.:

SAM GOLDBLATT. Source 2-F stated that GOLDBLATT was a member of the Laboratory workers at Fox Studios and that he is a member of the Communist Party; that GOLDBLATT was formerly a member of the Young Communists League; that he made a trip to the Soviet Union and worked there for about a year in motion pictures; that he is a close associate of NORVAL CRUTCHER and works with CRUTCHER; that his father, BORIS GOLDBLATT, was in Russia with him; that his father was born in Russia; further that his brother LOUIS GOLDBLATT, the right hand man of HARRY BRIDGES, has a long Communist Party record under the name of TED MILLER and that LOUIS GOLDBLATT worked with JEFF KIBRE in his efforts to capture the studio unions. (S) (W)

JOSEPH KRONEBERGER. Source 2-G has stated that KRONEBERGER is a member of the Communist Party under the name of JERRY BROWN; that he was active in the Motion Picture Democratic Committee. He was also active in the Laborers Non-Partisan League and Hollywood Anti-Nazi League and other Communist front organizations. (S) (W)

JUNIUS NIELSON. Source 2-H has informed that he is well acquainted with NIELSON and that to his personal knowledge he knows that NIELSON was charged with Communist activity in the A.F. of L. union and that he was expelled from Local No. 724 of the Studio Utility Workers on the charge that he was active in the Communist Party. (S) (W)

ISADOR BESBECK. Source 2-I has stated that BESBECK was well known to him personally and that he knows that BESBECK was charged with Communist activity in Local No. 37 of the I.A.T.S.E. in the latter part of September, 1939 and that he was expelled from that union on that charge.

J. H. MacISAACS. Source 2-J stated that to his personal knowledge he is a member of Hollywood labor unions, that MacISAACS was charged with Communist activity before Local No. 37 of the I.A.T.S.E. and that he was expelled from that union in the latter part of September, 1939 on said charge.

Source 2-K reported the following to the Los Angeles Bureau Office: that the following parties were members of the executive committee of the U.S.T.G. and so far as known were not Communists although they were active followers of JEFF KIBRE of the Communist Party line.

LOUIS KRIEGER
GEORGE H. DAVIS
CHARLES G. GUTHRIE
CHARLES W. ROSS
HERMAN LIPNEY
HOWARD J. ROBERTSON, Chairman of USTG.

Source further stated that about the first of August, 1939 ALEX SAUNDERS, who had been the secretary of the U.S.T.G. from its inception, made affidavit relative to the control of the U.S.T.G. by HARRY BRIDGES. This affidavit was filed with the National Labor Relations Board of the Los Angeles section and has to do with the election that was held on September 20, 1939 to determine the bargaining agency for the U.S.T.G. election. Source stated that it was shown that he was a Canadian and that he later returned to Canada and in June, 1940 he was reported as being in the Canadian Army. Source stated further that his picture appeared with HARRY BRIDGES in some paper at the time. The paper is not known but it probably was the "People's World".

EDWARD HEIN. Source 2-L has stated that HEIN was a member of Local 37 of the I.A.T.S.E. and that he succeeded SAUNDERS and was made "office manager". Source further stated that HEIN remained in that position for a period of two weeks only, at which time he resigned and made an affidavit, the meatier part of which is as follows:

"During the two weeks I worked there I became convinced of the fact that the U.S.T.G. was not a true democratic union organized by and for the best interests of its members, but on the contrary was dominated and controlled by CHARLES J. KATZ, an attorney, and JEFF KIBRE both non-members of the U.S.T.G., and by SAM GOLDBLATT and a few personally interested other parties whom I do not know."

CONFIDENTIAL

Source stated that the above affidavit was signed August 24, 1939 before MILTON TAYLOR, a notary public.

Source further stated that HEIN testified before the TENNEY Investigating Committee that the office was deluged with Communist propaganda such as the "People's World" and Communist inspired leaflets.

Source further stated that at a hearing of the JACK TENNEY Committee, HEIN testified that during his term as office manager of the U.S.T.G. the office was deluged with Communist pamphlets, leaflets, magazines and newspapers and in his opinion the organization was under the control of the Communists (The Communist connection of JEFF KIBRE has been set out above).

Source stated with respect to CHARLES J. KATZ that he is one of the attorneys for the Communist Party and one of the attorneys for HARRY BRIDGES; that he was formerly associated with LEO GALLAGHER, leading Communist Party attorney; that KATZ is also a member of the National Lawyers Guild, the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, the League for Peace and Democracy, the Motion Picture Cooperative Buyers Guild, the North American Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy, the Motion Picture Democratic Committee, the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, and others. Source further stated that the exposure of the above mentioned facts turned the tide away from Communist influence and the great majority of members of the U.S.T.G. recognized it as a Communist controlled union and would have nothing further to do with it.

Source further stated that the U.S.T.G. before the communications above mentioned were published, feeling that the situation was well in hand had already called for a National Labor Relations Board election. He stated that the election was held on September 20, 1939 and undoubtedly because of the exposure of Communist influence over the U.S.T.G. it lost the election by a two to one vote. He further stated that if the U.S.T.G. had been successful in this election it would have meant that eventually the C.I.O. would have gained control of all of the labor unions in Hollywood and of the entire motion picture and theatrical business because he stated that the I.A.T.S.E. is the key union organization in this industry, that the I.A.T.S.E. is still an international group of unions within the A.F. of L. and has approximately 80,000 members in the United States and Canada.

Source further stated that JEFF KIBRE, having been exposed a second time as working in the interests of the Communist Party, resigned as adviser to the executive board of Local No. 37, I.A.T.S.E. in Hollywood and left that field. He stated that the next that he heard of KIBRE that he was the organizer of the Fishermen's Union at San Pedro, California in June, 1941. He further stated that he is informed that KIBRE the present time is the international representative of the Fishermen's Union - C.I.O. on the Pacific Coast.

Source further stated that the Communists, having failed to capture the Hollywood local of the I.A.T.S.E. by the device of setting up the U.S.T.G. as a separate union, they went back into their own various locals apparently as good members. He stated that there were a few expulsions by the I.A.T.S.E. of some of the leaders of the U.S.T.G., but these were few. He stated that the great majority were taken back into the various unions and that the past was forgotten.

STUDIO PAINTERS LOCAL NO. 644

Source 2-M has reported that Local 644 of the Studio Painters gained a foothold in the studios in the early twenties. Source stated that this union had a precarious existence from its inception until about 1933 when as a result of a strike in that year its membership followed the other studio workers in desertion of the A.F. of L.

Source further stated that when the M.P.W.I.U. was formed in 1934, which organization as we have seen above was the first Communist controlled union in the studios, it laid the foundation for the Communist activity which followed. Source stated that the Painters came into the M.P.W.I.U. in large numbers; that RUDOLP W. KOHL who was not a member of the Communist Party at that time but who about six months later joined the Communist Party, had instituted a membership drive among the Painters and drew into the M.P.W.I.U. several hundred of the painters. Source further stated that while they were members of this union over a period of about a year, many of them became thoroughly indoctrinated with Communist ideas.

Source further stated that when the Communist Party line was changed in the spring of 1935 and the independent unions, of which the M.P.W.I.U. was one, were to be liquidated, RUDOLPH W. KOHL left the M.P.W.I.U. and influenced all painters to do likewise.

Source stated that as a consequence of this order the painters went over into Local 644 almost in a body. He further stated that about this time the following incident occurred: KOHL recruited about 120 members into the M.P.W.I.U. in a period of about ten days; that within one week after he had done this he received orders from GEORGE MAURER, in charge of the Labor Commission of the Communist Party in the Los Angeles Section, that the Party line had been changed and informed them that he had been advised that he must not recruit any more members of M.P.W.I.U. but that he must go back into the A.F. of L. and build up that union. Source stated that

KOHL by this time having become a good Communist Party member, promptly obeyed; that he went over to the Studio Painters Local No. 644, leaving the other painters behind in the M.P.W.I.U. Source stated that this caused a lot of confusion but eventually KOHL convinced them that his leaving them temporarily was for the best interests of the workers and after a short period he succeeded in justifying his action by getting them over on his side again. (U)

Source stated that KOHL, who was recognized as a sort of leader among his group, began actively working to build up Local 644; that he succeeded and shortly thereafter he was elected Business Representative of that union and held the position for several years. Source further stated that during this time due to KOHL'S influence this union became the leading Communist dominated group in the Hollywood studios. He further stated that it has continued to be controlled by the Communist elements up to the present time. Source further stated that KOHL continued to be the leader of this union until the painters strike in 1936 at which time HERBERT K. SORRELL, by taking an extremely active part in the strike, emerged as the strong figure in that union. Source further stated that in ~~1937~~ SORRELL supplanted KOHL in the leadership of this union. (U)

Source stated that KOHL in the fall of 1937 was appointed by HARRY BRIDGES as regional director for the C.I.O. in the Hollywood studios. He stated that his efforts in that capacity failed and the C.I.O. attempt failed so KOHL went back to work in the studios as a painter and KOHL was succeeded by JEFF KIBRE and the U.S.T.G. in the next attempt of the Communist Party to take over as herefore related. (U)

HERBERT K. SORRELL

Source 2-N has informed the Los Angeles Bureau Office that SORRELL having supplanted KOHL as the leader of Painters 644 and as this union was spearhead of Communist penetration, having been developed out of the M.P.W.I.U., he, SORRELL, became the leader of the Communist factions in the Hollywood unions. (U)

Source stated that while SORRELL was exercising this authority the Motion Picture Producers Association (M.P.P.A.) represented by their labor committee man, PAT CASEY, saw in SORRELL and his leadership an opportunity to develop another labor structure within the A.F. of L. which would contest the power and authority of the I.A.T.S.E. as the I.A.T.S.E. was still under the same leadership of BROWNE and BIOFF.

CONFIDENTIAL

Source further stated that CASEY favored SORRELL in all negotiations regarding labor to such an extent that SORRELL could get almost anything he wanted from the M.P.P.A. Source stated that in these negotiations SORRELL went outside the jurisdiction of his own union and managed to secure representations from other unions and secured with the help of CASEY wages and working conditions that the regular business representatives of those unions could not secure for themselves.

Source stated that as a result of these favors at the hands of CASEY and the combined efforts of Communist sympathizers, SORRELL soon emerged as a leader of certain unions mentioned heretofore which leaned toward the Communist position.

Source further stated that the build-up of SORRELL at one time reached the stage where CASEY proposed to E. J. MANNIX, an executive of M.P.P.A. that SORRELL be set up as the labor czar in Hollywood to handle for the unions all their affairs. Source stated that CASEY had made the statement that SORRELL "was easy to do business with and better results could be obtained under such an arrangement." However this suggested arrangement was turned down by Mr. MANNIX and LOUIS B. MAYER, executives of the M.P.P.A. This was in the spring of 1941.

Source further stated that SORRELL was working at this time in conjunction with the Communist Party is borne out by his testimony before the TENNEY investigating committee of the State Legislature in Los Angeles when SORRELL stated that JACK MOORE, Secretary of the Communist Party in Los Angeles County, was in the habit of calling upon him in the union office and giving him directions for his union activities.

Source further stated that SORRELL having developed as a leader of those locals which had strong Communist fractions in them, the next move was to set up an organization which would tie all of these locals into one body under the domination of SORRELL. In fall of 1941 the Conference of Studio Unions was formed.

CONFERENCE OF STUDIO UNIONS

Source 2-O has stated that this so-called "Conference of Studio Unions" is a small, compact group of delegates or representatives of a bloc of labor unions in the Hollywood motion picture industry which has been taken over and is now under control of the Communist Party operating through its members in those unions which have captured key positions. (U) activities looking toward the taking over of all studio workers and their unions into the Communist Party orbit. It is the organization upon which the Communist Party relies for eventual complete domination of motion picture workers. (U)

The unions which have already been taken over and which are under Communist influence and which are represented by this conference are:

(1) STUDIO PAINTER, LOCAL 644 of the International Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhnagers of America.

(2) Laboratory Technicians, Local 683, of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees.

(3) SCREEN OFFICE EMPLOYEES GUILD, an affiliate of Studio Painters, Local 644, above.

(4) SCREEN CARTOONISTS GUILD, an affiliate of Studio Painters, Local 644, above.

(5) SCREEN SET DESIGNERS GUILD, an affiliate of Studio Painters, Local 644, above.

(6) STUDIO MACHINISTS, LOCAL 1185 of the International Association of Machinists.

All of the unions above named are affiliated through their international and national bodies with the American Federation of Labor. Each affiliated union must pay a per capita tax of five cents.

The membership of above groups is approximately eight thousand (8000).

The Conference of Studio Unions was set up at a specially called meeting of the Studio Painters Union on November 2, 1941.

The organization is governed by a President, Chairman, Vice-Chairman and Secretary-Treasurer. Each union body affiliated is represented by not more than three delegates, one of whom must be the business representative.

HERBERT K. SORRELL is president of the Conference of Studio Unions. He is also business representative of Studio Painters, Local 644. 54

CONFIDENTIAL

NORVAL D. CRUTCHER, is Chairman. He is also Secretary-Treasurer of Laboratory Technicians, Local 683.

D. T. WAYNE is Vice-Chairman. He is also business representative of Studio Machinists, Local 1185.

RUSSELL L. MCKNIGHT is Secretary-Treasurer. He is also President of Laboratory Technicians, Local 683 and Editor of "FLASHES", the official publication of Local 683.

Other delegates or representatives composing the Conference are:

JOHN R. MARTIN, business representative of Laboratory Technicians, Local 683.

GLENN PRATT, business representative of Screen Office Employees Guild.

WILLIAM POMERANCE, business representative of Screen Cartoonists Guild.

ED MUSSA, business representative of Screen Set Designers Guild.

BERNARD LUSHER, Secretary Screen Office Employees Guild.

BLANCHE COLE, Screen Office Employees Guild.

DAVE HILBERMAN, Vice-President Screen Cartoonists Guild.

ED M. GILBERT, Screen Set Designers Guild.

CARL HEAD, Studio Painters, Local 644.

WILLIAM BALL, Studio Painters, Local 644.

JOSEPH STERNAD, President Screen Set Designers Guild.

GEORGE E. BODLE, was, up to a few weeks ago, the attorney for the organization. (He has been appointed to the War Manpower Commission for this district).

LOUIS R. STEIN, has taken the place of BODLE as attorney for the conference.

While the stated object of this "conference" is "To bring about joint economical action and closer unity of the unions to protect individual autonomy of the crafts," the real purpose is to act as a closely knit governing body secretly coordinating the activities of the member unions with the "party line" of the Communist Party. (u)

The group acts, in reality, as a "top fraction" of the Communist Party to interpret the line and guide all activities in the direction of the political position of that party. (u)

The actions, resolutions and recommendations of the organization coincide with the line of the Communist Party in detail.

It has passed resolutions and sent copies to the President of the United States demanding a second front at once.

It has passed resolutions demanding the immediate independence of India.

It has passed resolutions protesting the deportation of HARRY BRIDGES, and has sponsored and circulated pamphlets to this effect.

It has passed resoluations, and put out to the public, pamphlets on the negro question identical with the present program of the Communist Party on that issue.

It is an integral part of Labor's Unity for Victory Committee, a Communist inspired group.

It is affiliated with, and has supported financially, the United Citizens for Victory Committee, also a Communist inspired group.

It is a sponsor for the War Symphony Committee, a recent Communist front organization in Southern California.

It passed resolutions demanding the release of EARL BROWDER when he was imprisoned in Atlanta prison.

It sponsored the "Open Letter to the American People", written by DALTON TRUMBO.

This conference and the group of unions it represents are recognized by the responsible A.F. of L. leaders in Hollywood as constituting the Communist "Bloc", and as the wedge being driven by the Communist Party into all labor organizations in the motion picture industry with the ultimate objective of taking over control of all workers in the industry.

CONFIDENTIAL 50

CONFIDENTIAL

HERBERT K. SORRELL, the president of the organization, and virtual dictator of the group, is a Communist of long standing, and a member of the Party. At a meeting of the TENNEY Committee of the State of California investigating subversive activities, his connections with the party were proven. When shown documentary proof of his attendance at a convention of the Los Angeles section of the Communist Party, he admitted that he had attended, but stated that "he did not know it was a Communist convention."

At the same inquiry he admitted his connections with JACK MOORE, the local Secretary of the Communist Party at that time.

SORRELL is business representative of Studio Painters, Local 644. This union is one of the first organizations in the labor field in Hollywood to go over to Communist control. The control of this union since 1935 has been by members who were active in the Motion Picture Workers Industrial Union in 1934. This latter group was completely Communist dominated. Its attempt to take over the Hollywood studio workers failed.

NORVAL D. CRUTCHER, the Secretary of Laboratory Technicians, Local 683 is a Communist Party member, and has been active in Communist circles since 1934.

D. T. WAYNE, business representative of the Studio Machinists is a close fellow traveller of the Communist Party line and a satellite of SORRELL. This union is virtually an outgrowth of the Motion Picture Workers Industrial Union.

RUSSELL L. MCKNIGHT, Secretary-Treasurer of the conference, is president of Laboratory Technicians, Local 683, and the Editor of "FLASHES", the official publication of that union. This publication follows the Communist Party line; was isolationist before Russia was attacked, and violently patriotic immediately after. It quotes extensively from "IN FACT", a Communist publication, and the magazine "FRIDAY" (now defunct). It has reprinted articles from many other Communist publications; has run articles by known Communists and fellow travellers such as LAL SINGH, CAREY MCWILLIAMS, SAM KALISH, DR. HERBERT B. ALEXANDER, GEORGE SELDES, SAM GOLDBLATT, and others.

Other delegates making up the conference who are communists and fellow travellers are:

CONFIDENTIAL

GLENN PRATT, business representative of the Screen Office Employees Guild.

BERNARD LUSHER, Secretary Screen Office Employees Guild.

WILLIAM POMERANCE, business representative of Screen Cartoonists Guild, and ex-field representative of the local Labor Relations Board.

DAVE HILBERMAN, Vice-President of Screen Cartoonists Guild.

ED M. GILBERT, a member of the Communist Party of long standing.

ED MUSSA, business representative of the Screen Set Designers Guild.

GEORGE E. BODLE, the attorney for the conference has been involved in Communist activities for years. His position is well known.

While the Conference of Studio Unions ostensibly operates in the union field, it is part of an interlocking combination of all Communist front organizations in Hollywood, of which there are some thirty or more.

Its specific duties are, however, to work in the trade union field and act as a liaison between the Communist Party and Hollywood Studio Unions.

[Source 2-O has stated] (E)(W) that the local union from which all of this activity originally started was Studio Painters Local No. 644, the history of which has heretofore been given. As stated it received its impetus for Communist activity from the M.P.W.I.U.

[Source 2-O has stated] (E)(W) that the other unions forming this conference are the followings (W)

LABORATORY TECHNICIANS #683. [Source 2-P has stated] (E)(W) that this union is a local and a part of the I.A.T.S.E., that it was organized and granted a charter by the I.A.T.S.E. in 1929. He further stated that it has functioned as a regular and conservative local until 1941; that its membership is composed of workers who develop and process the film for motion pictures. He further stated that the department over which this local union has jurisdiction and control of the workers is one bottleneck which could disrupt the entire industry under a given set of conditions. He stated that the tremendous expense of producing a picture is finally reduced to an image on a narrow strip of film 33 mm in width. He stated that this narrow strip of film, which represents the entire efforts of the industry, must be processed, much of it in a dark room in this department. From this department the product then spreads out fanwise throughout the world.

Source stated that it has always been the contention of the Communists that if they could succeed in getting control of the workers in this department the industry would be at their mercy. Source stated that the Communists and fellow travellers working in this union since 1936 utilizing their usual tactics of slander, false rumors and finally accusations that the regularly elected officers were secretly conniving with BROWNE and BIOFF, they finally succeeded in 1941 in causing anti-Communist officers of the union to resign in disgust and the Communist element in the union took over control which they now exercise. He further stated that this union has followed the Communist Party line from isolation to the present war; has passed all resolutions identical with those of the Communist program and is affiliated with Hollywood Writers Mobilization for Defense, Labor's Unity for Victory Committee and has issued pamphlets protesting the proceedings of deportation of HARRY BRIDGES; resolutions advocating a second front has been adopted; the independence of India has been urged and resolutions on the negro question ; was sponsor for the War Symphony Committee; works in connection with the League of American Writers, and supports every phase of Communist front activity. (U)

Source further stated that the officers of this union, #683, I.A.T.S.E., are the following:

RUSSELL L. McKNIGHT, President. He is editor of "Flashes", the official paper of the union.

MELVIN G. YOUNG - Vice-President.

PAUL JAFFE - Recording Secretary.

NORVAL CRUTCHER - Secretary-Treasurer.

JOHN R. MARTIN - Business Representative.

CHARLES GREENBERG - Sergeant-at-arms.

RALPH BLANCHARD - Member of the Executive Board.

FRANK REGAL - Member of the Executive Board.

ARTHUR LEVENHAGEN - Member of the Executive Board.

DOROTHY ALEXANDER - Member of the Executive Board.

GEORGE SHAW - Member of the Executive Board.

THEODORE FOGELMAN - Member of the Executive Board.

SAMUEL HORN - Member of the Executive Board.

Source 2-P has stated that everyone of the persons named above, with the exception of CHARLES GREENBERG, is either a Communist Party member of a fellow traveller. They all follow the same line in its devious changes. Source further stated that previous to this time this union announced in its official publication, "Flashes", that the war was one of imperialism, made no appeals for national defense, ridiculed the passage of the Selective Service Act, and supported the general isolationist policy of the Communist Party at that time. (C)(U)

Source stated that "Flashes" did then as it does now quote from such Communist publications as "In Fact" and "Friday", and reprints in substance articles appearing in the "People's World", the official publication of the Communist Party on the Pacific coast. Source further stated that it has invited to speak before its membership such well known Communist Party members and fellow travellers as:

CAREY McWILLIAMS
SAM KALISH
DR. HEBERT B. ALEXANDER
DALTON TRUMBO

Source further stated that since HITLER'S attack on STALIN this union has completely reversed its political viewpoint and is now all out to win the war. Source stated that it has passed resolutions demanding a second front, independence for India, protested the deportation of HARRY BRIDGES, and issued pamphlets to that effect, and follows implicitly every detail of the Communist Party demands.

SCREEN OFFICE EMPLOYEES GUILD

[Source 2-Q has stated (C)(U) that this union was originally organized as an independent group in about 1937. He stated that after being in existence some three or four years it came under the influence of HERBERT K. SORRELL and the Communist elements within it and in 1941 it was issued a charter by Local 644, A.F. of L. Studio Painters, and is now affiliated through Local 644 with the International Brotherhood of Painters, Paperhangers, and Decorators of America.]

[Source further stated that this union has jurisdiction over all clerical workers and secretaries in the Hollywood studios, although the A.F. of L. has a regular established office workers union in the Los Angeles area where these workers rightfully belong. This group has affiliated itself with the International Painters organization. The reason for this odd combination is the preference for the Communist leadership of SORRELL over affiliation with regular A.F. of L. Office Workers Union.]

[Source 2-Q has stated] that the following are the officers of this union:

MARGARET BENNET - President

BLANCHE COLE - Recording Secretary

BERNARD LUSHER - Financial Secretary

CLAIRE HARGAN - Treasurer

JACK REID - Warden

BARBARA ALEXANDER - Conductor

GLENN PRATT - Business Representative

Source further stated that the officers named constitute the executive board. He further stated that the officers of this union and the union as a body follows the Communist Party line and in so doing has passed the same resolutions and engaged in the same activities mentioned above regarding Local 683. Source further stated that GLENN PRATT, the business agent of this union, has recently entered the Officers Training School of the Army and ED M. GILBERT of the Screen Set Designers Union has been elected to take PRATT'S place as the business agent of this union. GILBERT is a member of the Communist Party.

SCREEN CARTOONISTS GUILD LOCAL NO. 852

[Source 2-R has informed] that this guild has jurisdiction over cartoonists, sketch artists, and animators engaged in making animated cartoons in the motion picture industry. [Source 2-R has stated] that this guild was organized about 1939 originally as an independent group. He further stated that in 1941 the guild succumbed to the influence of SORRELL and was issued a charter by Local 644, Studio Painters, and therefore is now affiliated with the International Association of Painters, Paperhangers and Decorators of America.

Source stated that this affiliation of the cartoonists with the painters and paperhangers was brought about by the help which SORRELL rendered to this guild in getting better working conditions and wages and which help was made possible by the favoriteism shown SORRELL by PAT CASEY. was an important factor in winning the confidence of this guild by SORRELL.

Source further stated that this same process was employed by SORRELL in all the other unions and guilds which were members of the Conference of Studio Unions.

[Source 2-R stated (X)(U) that the officers of this guild are the following:

JACK ZANDER - President

DAVE HILBERMAN - Vice-President

ERIC LARSEN - Treasurer

PEPE RUIZ - Financial Secretary

AL ARMATUZIO - Warden

A. C. CAMER - Conductor

WILLIAM POMERANCE - Business representative

[Source 2-R has stated (X)(U) that the officers of this guild and the guild as a body follows the Communist Party line and in so doing has passed the same resolutions and engaged in the same activity mentioned above regarding Local 683.

SCREEN SET DESIGNERS GUILD

[Source 2-S has stated (X)(U) that this guild has jurisdiction over set designers, draftsmen, and illustrators, that the workers composing these crafts over a period of years have had various organizations, none of which were successful. Source stated that at one time they were classed as scenic artists and formed a union on that basis but it soon went out of existence. Source further stated that further attempts were made which likewise failed. He also stated that it was not until 1939 that they formed a stable organization. Source further stated that in the fall of 1941 this organization affiliated with Painters Union Local No. 644, thus coming under the influence of HERBERT K. SORRELL and this Painters Union No. 644 which had been dominated by Communist influence since 1935 as has heretofore been shown.

Source further stated that the membership of this guild is limited, being only approximately 300 members. He stated that as a consequence this guild does not have the usual number of paid officials. He stated that the business of this guild is transacted at the office of its attorney, GEORGE E. BODLE, 608 South Hill Street, downtown Los Angeles; however since BODLE has been appointed as Assistant Director of the War Manpower Commission on the Pacific coast in charge of Southern California district, this guild is now located at 9441 Wilshire Boulevard, Beverly Hills, telephone CRestview 1-4051.

Source 2-S has stated (V(u)) that the present officials of this organization are the following:

JOSEPH STERNAD - President

ED MUSSA - Business representative

LESLIE THOMAS - Executive board member

LEW GOULD - Executive board member

ART LONERGAN - Executive board member

FRITZ WILLIS - Executive board member

ED M. GILBERT - Executive board member

Source further stated that the officers and executive board members above named handle all of the affairs of this guild and the general membership does not even have a vote in the affairs of the guild.

Source further stated that the officers of this guild and the guild as a whole follow the Communist Party line and in so doing have passed the same resolutions and engaged in the same activities mentioned above regarding Local 683.

Source 2-S has stated that of the officers named ED M. GILBERT is known to be a member of the Communist Party and has been to the knowledge of source a member of the party since 1933. Source has stated that in 1934 and 1935 GILBERT was a member of the executive board of the MPWIU mentioned above. He further stated that in 1935 GILBERT was made chairman of the top fraction of the Communist Party in the Hollywood studio units, being appointed to that position by GEORGE MAURER who was in charge of the Labor Commission of the Communist Party of southern California. STUDIO MACHINISTS LOCAL NO. 1185 (S.M.L.)

Source 2-T has informed (3/44) that the Studio Machinists Local No. 1185 is, as are all of the other locals that make up the Conference of Studio Unions, a unit of the international group affiliated with A.F. of L. He further stated that this local is one of the unions of the International Association of Machinists.

Source 2-T has further stated (3/44) that workers who belong to this union are highly skilled mechanics engaged mostly in building and servicing motion picture cameras and other high precision work of like character.

Source further stated that this union came into existence as an outgrowth of the M.P.W.I.U. heretofore mentioned; that in 1934 and 1935 the majority of the machinists in the Hollywood studios were members of this Communist dominated M.P.W.I.U. Source has stated that it had taken in the entire crew of machinists then engaged in the experimental plant of Technicolor Corporation; that it had also taken in all of those workers employed in the Mitchell Camera Company, the largest manufacturer of motion picture cameras in the United States. Source has further stated that while this plant was not a part of the motion picture studios proper, its products were used solely in the production of motion pictures. He has further stated that this union also had taken into its ranks a large percentage of skilled mechanics in the studios proper.

Source further stated that the Communist program and party line at that time was accepted by the machinists members of that union almost wholeheartedly. He further stated that the leaders of this group and the individual to whom the machinists group within the union looked to for leadership was WILFRED W. LYON, who is referred to above as President of the M.P.W.I.U. and who later made a trip to Soviet Russia to work in the motion picture industry there and who was selected by the delegates from the Soviet Union in 1936 to go to Russia for that purpose.

Source further stated that when the Communist Party line changed in the fall of 1935 and all Communists were instructed to join the A.F. of L. unions, this group of machinists left the M.P.W.I.U. and applied for a charter from the International Association of Machinists, an international affiliated with the A.F. of L. Source stated that a charter was granted and about 1937 this local No. 1185 was created in Hollywood.

Source 2-T further stated (3/44) that the union followed the usual procedure of new unions in building up its membership; that at the same time Communist influence was at work in the union and by the summer of 1941 this union under the leadership of its business representative, D. T. WAYNE, had gone over officially into the group called the Conference of Studio Unions, dominated as above stated by HERBERT K. SORRELL. Source further stated that the original meeting called to set up the Conference of Studio Unions was authorized officially by this Local 1185 and Local 644 of the Studio Painters. He further stated that at this meeting SORRELL and D. T. WAYNE represented their respective unions as the original base for this conference.

Source further stated that this union No. 1185 is represented in all of its transactions by this business representative, D. T. WAYNE. No other officer appears in any negotiations for the union or apparently take part in any of its political activity. He stated that WAYNE is the Vice-President of the Conference of Studio Unions.

[Source 2-T stated] that this union acting through its spokesman, D. T. WAYNE, has affiliated with the same organizations and pursued the identical line as has Local 644 Studio Painters. He has stated that Mr. WAYNE is completely under the domination of HERBERT K. SORRELL.

[Source 2-T has further stated] that this union has followed the same procedure as to resolutions and protests as has Local 683 Laboratory Technicians mentioned above. He has stated the union follows the Communist Party line as an integral part of the Conference of Studio Unions.

Source 2-T has stated that this Conference of Studio Unions is the group of A.F. of L. unions which has penetrated the Studio Union A.F. of L. structure and planted the Communist Party line by boring from within, which has been the tactics used for twenty years by the Communist Party and practiced in the earlier days by WILLIAM Z. FOSTER who from 1920 to 1928 was the secret agent of the Communist Party, U.S.A. in charge of organized labor activities, during which time he denied he was a Communist and posed as a legitimate labor leader.

[Source 2-T has stated] that it was not to be implied that this Conference of Studio unions controls the majority of A.F. of L. workers in the studios. There are many other A.F. of L. locals not Communist controlled, but this small group composing this Conference are more or less key unions. He further stated that they have the backing of the entire Communist structure and the sympathy of the large number of fellow travellers in the cultural group, and due to this fact they possess strength out of all proportion to the number of locals and membership.

[Source 2-T has further stated] that the publication in which the affairs of this Conference of Studio Unions are handled is the monthly paper "Flashes", issued by Local 683 of the Laboratory Technicians.

CONFID

Source has also stated that this union uses the daily "Variety", a trade paper which is extremely partial to the activities of this conference and to HERBERT K. SORRELL. This source further stated that RALPH RODDY, who is in charge of labor dues for "Variety", apparently is a fellow traveller and follows the party line. These newspapers will be treated under separate headings.

HOLLYWOOD GUILD COUNCIL

[Source 2-U has reported that the guilds making up the Hollywood Guild Council are the bargaining agencies for what is known as "the cultural groups, writers, artists, directors, readers and publicists." These guilds although not affiliated with A.F. of L. or any other labor group are the bargaining agencies for their members. It should be noted that as in the case of writers, directors and art directors, the matter of salaries is an individual matter. Those guilds in their bargaining negotiations deal with such matters as working conditions, screen credits, etc.]

WORKS FOR THE FORMATION OF THE HOLLYWOOD GUILD COUNCIL

Source 2-U has further stated that after the defeat of the Communist controlled United Studio Technicians Guild (U.S.T.G.)/the National Labor Relations Board election held on September 20, 1939 as above related, [the Communist elements not being able to function within the I.A.T.S.E. proceeded to set up another organization outside the A.F. of L. As a base for their operations they created another organization "The Hollywood Guild Council". This council was composed of representatives or delegates from what is called "the cultural groups". They are the following:

Guild	Approximate membership in 1941
Screen Directors Guild	350
Screen Readers Guild	250
Screen Publicists Guild	200
Screen Set Designers Guild	350
Screen Office Employees Guild	900
Screen Cartoonists Guild	500
Total	4,000

CONFIDENTIAL

Source 2-O further stated that the Hollywood Guild Council was set up in the fall of 1939, shortly after the U.S.T.G. was dissolved; that when this guild council was organized the Screen Set Designers Guild, Screen Office Employees Guild, and Screen Cartoonists Guild, were not affiliated with the A.F. of L. This affiliation was not made until the fall of 1941. The others never were affiliated with the A.F. of L.

Source further stated that the purpose of this Hollywood Guild Council was to afford a base of operations to carry on Communist propaganda and keep alive the attempt to penetrate the other unions. They attempted to draw into the council many of the A.F. of L. locals but were not successful. The activities were confined to these various guilds which had always been more or less subject to Communist infiltration.

Source further stated that the leading group and the one which practically controlled the Hollywood Guild Council was the Screen Writers Guild. All of the activities of this council had their origin in the Screen Writers Guild. The officers and leading figures in the Screen Writers Guild are almost all members of the League of American Writers. This League of American Writers has been in control of the Screen Writers Guild for many years and has succeeded during that time in having its members placed in key positions in this guild.

The political viewpoint of the League of American Writers has dominated the Screen Writers Guild completely. The other guilds mentioned never played a great part in the Hollywood Guild Council for the reason that they were not so easily organized. To a large extent they lent their names and appointed delegates to the council. It might be said that they "trailed along."

Source 2-U further stated that the activities of the Hollywood Guild Council extended from the fall of 1939 to June 22, 1941, at which time HITLER invaded Russia, which automatically ended the HITLER-STALIN pact. He stated that this period was one in which the line of the Communist Party was isolationist and anti-war and anti-preparation for defense. He further stated that the Hollywood Guild Council during this period fell into line with that position. However it accomplished very little, being overly conscientious in its activities.

Source further stated that immediately after the invasion of Russia this council had no further place as a propaganda group inasmuch as the majority of the representation of the guilds were writers, directors, artists, etc. They transferred their activities from a position of isolation to one of violent patriotism. He further stated that after the change in the Communist Party line caused by the invasion of Russia was made clear, which took approximately three to four weeks, the directing heads of the guild council began an intensive campaign in support of the war. They transferred their activities to other fields, the principal one of which became the Hollywood Writers Mobilization for Defense.

Source further stated that the Hollywood Guild Council did not go to other organizations as a body but the individual members went as individuals and joined and supported such organizations as the Writers Mobilization for Defense, The Citizens Unity for Victory Committee, Laborers Unity for Victory Committee, The Committee for the Care of Children in Wartime, the United Russian Relief, Committee for Medical Aid to Soviet Russia, American-Russian Council for Friendly Relations, The Hollywood Canteen, Victory Bond Drive, and many other forms of war activity.

Source stated that as a result of this transfer of activities to these other groups by the leaders of the council, it became inactive and at the present time it remains as a mere name only.

Source further stated that so far as it has been possible to ascertain the Hollywood Guild Council did not make public the names of the individuals who were its leaders and directors. The council never took direct action as a body but it acted as a sort of steering committee or advisory club for the various guilds that made up the council. Source stated that the following persons were the most active in the affairs of the Hollywood Guild Council:

SHERIDAN GIBNEY - President, Screen Writers Guild, 1941.

ROBERT ROSSEN - Secretary, Screen Writers Guild, 1941.

LESTER COLE - Treasurer, Screen Writers Guild, 1941.

MARY McCALL, JR.- Member Screen Writers Guild, 1941.

JOHN HOWARD LAWSON-Member of Screen Writers Guild, 1941.

JEROME CHODOROV - Member of Screen Writers Guild, 1941.

ALLEN SCOTT - Member of Screen Writers Guild, 1941.

ED M. GILBERT - President, Screen Set Designers Guild, 1941.

GLEN PRATT - Business Representative, Screen Office Employees Guild, 1941.

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

DAVE HILBERMAN - Vice-President, Screen Cartoonists Guild, 1942.

FRANK TUTTLE - Screen Directors Guild, 1941.

DON GORDON - Screen Readers Guild, 1941.

LESLIE MASON - Screen Publicists Guild, 1941.

Source 2-U further stated that the approximate membership of the Hollywood guilds affiliated with the Hollywood Guild Council was 4,000, the majority of whom were members of the Screen Writers Guild and Screen Office Employees Guild. He further stated that the Hollywood Guild Council is now practically inoperative due to the war conditions and the further fact that since it was set up the Screen Office Employees Guild, the Set Designers Guild, and the Screen Cartoonists Guild became affiliated with the A.F. of L. in the fall of 1941 and are now a part of the Conference of Studio Unions as noted heretofore.

Source further stated that some of the guilds mentioned above were affiliated with the Hollywood Guild Council and are independent groups and have no connection with national unions.

SCREEN WRITERS GUILD
1655 No. Cherokee Avenue,
Hollywood, California

Source 2-V has reported that the Screen Writers Guild is an independent organization not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor; although it calls itself a guild it is a labor union and is the bargaining agency for writers in the Hollywood motion picture industry.

Source 2-V has stated that the Screen Writers Guild was organized in 1934, that it is the first union group in the cultural field to come under domation of the Communists and fellow travellers. In fact it was organized by a group of writers who were then members of the John Reed Club of Hollywood, a Communist front organization that afterwards became the Hollywood chapter of the League of American Writers in 1935. Source stated that prominent among this group of original organizers were:

HOWARD LAWSON
SAMUEL ORNITZ
DUDLEY NICHOLS
GUY ENDORE
HARRY CARLISLE

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

All of the above have long records of Communist activity in the Hollywood motion picture industry.

Source further stated that the Screen Writers Guild ever since its inception has taken the leadamong the organized cultural union groups in the Hollywood motion picture industry in following the Communist Party line in all its devious changes. He further stated that this guild was mainly responsible for setting up the Hollywood Guild Council, a Communist dominated group. Although not affiliated with the Conference of Studio Unions, it has probably acted in support of that body which, as has been shown, is another Communist controlled group of A.F. of L. local Hollywood unions. Source further stated that this guild is the sponsor and moving force in the Hollywood Writers Mobilization for Defense; that it sponsored the publication "Communique" which was published and distributed from its headquarters. He further stated that it is one of the sponsors of the Hollywood Canteen which was recently set up for the purpose of furnishing entertainment for the armed forces. He further stated that its officials and members have been active in every form of Communist and Communist front activity in southern California for years.

Source 2-V has further stated that the Communist domination of the Screen Writers Guild has been so continuously obvious that in 1936 a small group of writers revolted against this domination and attempted to oust the Communists from control. This revolt was led by a small group of writers, most active of whom were JAMES K. McGUINESS, JOHN LEE MAHIN, HOWARD EMMETT ROGERS, PATTERSON McNUTT, BESS MEREDITH, HERMAN J. MANCKIEWICZ, ROBERT RISKIN and SAMSON RAPHAELSON.

Source further stated that one of the foremost "red baiters" as he was called at the time was Mr. MANCKIEWICZ, one of the highest paid writers in Hollywood. Source stated that MANCKIEWICZ ran a full page advertisement in the Hollywood Reporter, a trade daily, which he headed as follows:

"PROPOSED CHARTER
FOR LOCAL NO. 1, SONS AND DAUGHTERS OF 'I WILL ARISE' SCREEN WRITERS
UNION"

He signed the communication:

"Writers of Hollywood unite!
You have nothing to lose but your brains!
HERMAN J. MANCKIEWICZ,
Grub Street, Beverly Hills, California.
In the Year of the Terror, One,"
New Theater June, 1936. P.25

Source 2-V further stated that despite the fact that this small group had exposed the Screen Writers Guild as being Communist controlled, it lost the fight and the guild continued as usual. Source stated that again in 1941 another revolt against the Communists in the organization took place. Some of the same group tried again; notably Mr. ROGERS and Mr. McGUINESS were active. This time they succeeded in forcing the resignation of JOHN HOWARD LAWSON, DONALD OGDEN STEWART, and RING LARDNER, JR. from official positions. These three have long been known for their Communist activity. He further stated that the resignations of LAWSON, STEWART and LARDNER were merely concessions to a state of affairs, as at this time Communists and fellow travellers were still suffering from the effects of the HITLER-STALIN pact, but source stated that after Russia was attacked by HITLER and the Communist Party line changed and permitted Communists to pose as good, loyal American citizens and at the same time denounced anyone as "fascist" or "Nazi" who brought up the question of Communism, the Communist elements became bold and again openly took the reins of the Screen Writers Guild.

Source further stated that the close connection between the League of American Writers and the Screen Writers Guild is evidenced by the membership of many of the officials and members in both organizations. He further stated that members of the League of American Writers are in complete control of the Screen Writers Guild.

Source 2-V reported to the Los Angeles Bureau office that the following parties were elected officers of the Screen Writers Guild on November 12, 1942:

MARY McCALL, JR.	President
LESTER COLE	Vice-President
FRANK PORTER	Secretary
FRANCIS EDWARD FLAGG	Treasurer
HAROLD BUCHMAN	Executive board member
HUGO BUTLER	Executive board member
MARC CONNELLY	Executive board member
PAUL JARRICO	Executive board member
GORDON KAHN	Executive board member
HARRY JURNITZ	Executive board member
GLADYS LEHMAN	Executive board member
JANE MURFIN	Executive board member
WALDO SALT	Executive board member
ALLAN SCOTT	Executive board member
JAY GURNEY	Alternate executive board member
FELIX JACKSON	Alternate executive board member
TALBOT JENNINGS	Alternate executive board member
JOHN LARKIN	Alternate executive board member
NAT PERRIN	Alternate executive board member
BETTY REINHARDT	Alternate executive board member
MARGUERITE ROBERTS	Alternate executive board member

Source 2-V and 2-W further stated that the following officers of the guild are followers of the Communist Party line as indicated below:

MARY McCALL, JR., President of the Screen Writers Guild, is supported by the Communist elements in the organization; was elected November 12, 1942 as President; was active in the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, a Communist front organization, until the signing of the STALIN-HITLER pact; spoke under the auspices of the Hollywood League for Democratic Action, a Communist frontisolationist organization, on February 21, 1940, at the Philharmonic Auditorium, Los Angeles, in which the program was "Hollywood Accepts MARTIN DIES". She stated at this meeting "MARTIN DIES was worse than Communism". She was one of the members of the Screen Writers Guild who wired a demand to Congress on March 5, 1940 that it eliminate the DIES Committee. She sponsored the Russian anniversary celebration at the Shrine Auditorium on November 8, 1942. She was a member of the committee on arrangements. She is a member of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization for Defense, a member of the League of American Writers, and teaches at the Hollywood Writers School and follows the Communist Party line explicitly.

LESTER COLE, Vice-President of the Screen Writers Guild, is a member of the League of American Writers. He was one of the signers of the letters of "150", "400", which were part of the struggle between STALIN and TROTSKY for control of the Communist Party. He was a signer of the call for the Fourth Congress of the League of American Writers, which was a supporter of the American Peace Mobilization. He is an instructor in the Hollywood Writers School, a Communist dominated school run by the League of American Writers. He has been a follower of the Communist Party line for many years.

FRANCIS EDWARD FIRAGOH, Treasurer of the Screen Writers Guild, is a member of the League of American Writers. He was one of the signers for the call for the Third Congress of the League of American Writers. He is a member of the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League and the Hollywood Writers Mobilization for Defense.

HAROLD BUCHMAN is a member of the executive board of the Screen Writers Guild. He is also a member of the League of American Writers, a member of the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, and a member of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization for Defense.

MARC CONNELLY is a member of the executive board of the Screen Writers Guild and is a member of the League of American Writers. He signed the call for the Third Congress of the League of American Writers. He is a member of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization for Defense. He teaches at the Hollywood Writers School. He follows the Communist Party line. He was a member of the arrangements committee for the Russian anniversary celebration November 8, 1942 at the Shrine Auditorium in Los Angeles.

CONFIDENTIAL

PAUL JARRICO, member of the executive board of the Screen Writers Guild, is a member of the League of American Writers. He teaches at the Hollywood Writers School and is a member of the National Federation for Constitutional Rights, a Communist front organization. He is a member of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization for Defense. He signed the call for the Fourth Congress of the League of American Writers which endorsed the American Peace Mobilization. He follows the Communist Party line faithfully.

GORDON KAHN is a member of the executive board of the Screen Writers Guild and a member of the League of American Writers. He was an associate editor of "The Clipper", the official organ of the League of American Writers, Hollywood chapter. He was a member of the Motion Picture Cooperative Buyers Guild, a Communist front organization. He was one of the signers of the call for the Fourth Congress of the League of American Writers which endorsed the American Peace Mobilization. He follows the Communist Party line faithfully.

HARRY JURNITZ is a member of the executive board of the Screen Writers Guild and a member of the League of American Writers. He is also a member of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization for Defense.

WALDO SALT is a member of the executive board of the Screen Writers Guild and a member of the League of American writers. He was an associate editor of "The Clipper", the official organ of the League of American Writers, Hollywood chapter. He is a member of the Motion Picture Cooperative Buyers Guild, a Communist Party front organization. He was one of the signers of the call for the Fourth Congress which endorsed the American Peace Mobilization. He follows the Communist Party line faithfully.

ADRIAN SCOTT is a member of the executive board of the Screen Writers Guild and a member of the League of American Writers. He teaches at the Hollywood Writers School and is a member of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization for Defense. He follows the Communist Party line strictly.

JAY GORNEY is a member of the executive board of the Screen Writers Guild and a member of the League of American Writers. He teaches at the Hollywood Writers School. He was a co-author of the plays "Meet the People" and "Zero Hour", both of which were isolationist and were sponsored by the American Peace Mobilization. They were produced by the Hollywood Theater Alliance, a Communist front group, and directed by HERBERT BIBERMAN, a well known Hollywood Communist. GORNEY follows the Communist Party line strictly.

Source 2-V conpiled a list of the members of the Screen Writers Guild who are Communists and/or fellow travellers in the League of American Writers and who have been identified for many years as engaged in Communist activity.

JOHN HOWARD LAWSON	PHILIP EPSTEIN
SAM ORNITZ	SIDNEY BUCHMAN
DUDLEY NICHOLS	PHILLIP DUNNE
TESS SLESSINGER	EDWARD CHODOROV
FRANK DAVIS	JEROME CHODOROV
DOROTHY PARKER	LILLIAN HELLMAN
ALLAN CAMPBELL	CEDRIC BELFRAGE
MARION SPITZER	MAC BLITSTEIN
MADELINE RUTHVEN	HARRY CARLISLE
H. S. (HY) KRAFT	VERA CASPERAY
LESTER COHEN	MOLLY CASTLE

ELLA MAE WINTERS	ARTHUR KOBER
JOHN BRIGHT	ALBERT MALTZ
ROBERT TASKER	ROBERT MALTZER
JOHN WEXLEY	W. L. RIVERS
ROBERT ROSSEN	GEORGE SKLAR
THEODORE DREISER	ORSON WELLES
JULIUS EPSTEIN	VICTOR A. YAKHONTOFF

Source 2-V has stated that all of the above are active members of the League of American Writers and the Screen Writers Guild; that they are all identified either as members of the Communist Party, fellow travellers, or members of such front organizations as the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, the Hollywood League for Democratic Action, Hollywood Peace Forum, Hollywood Theater Alliance, United Refugees Committee, Hollywood Committee for Writers in Exile, Rescue Ship Mission, Hollywood Writers Mobilization for Defense, Consumers United, Motion Picture Cooperative Buyers Guild, National Federation for Constitutional Rights, SCHNEIDERMAN-DARCY Defense Committee, United Spanish Aid Committee, HARRY BRIDGES Defense Committee, American Peace Mobilization, American-Russian Institute, American Society for Cultural Relations with Russia, Committee to Aid Agriculture workers, League of Women Shoppers, Western Writers Congress.

Source 2-X has reported that the Screen Directors Guild of Hollywood was organized in February, 1936 for the purpose as stated at that time to bring the directors of motion pictures into line with other labor unions in the industry. This source also furnished information relative to the various parties who are active in the affairs of this guild.

This effort was made by a small group of motion picture directors who professed the "progressive" position, and who maintained in a broad sense that the motion picture should carry a social or political message rather than being what they claimed it was at the time, merely an "escape mechanism" for the masses. In reality the term "progressive" meant sympathy for the Communist cause which was then just beginning to make headway among the intellectuals of the Hollywood motion picture industry.

The names of those composing this small group were:

KING VIDOR
LEWIS MILESTONE
FRANK TUTTLE
WILLIAM K. HOWARD
JOHN FORD
FRANK BORSAGE
HOWARD HAWKS
WESLEY RUGGLES
JOHN CROMWELL
WILLIAM WELLMAN
ROUBEN MAMOULIAN
GREGORY LACAVA
CLARENCE BROWN
EDWARD SUTHERLAND
H. BRUCE HUMBERSTONE

The difficulty in organizing these directors whose salaries ran into thousands of dollars per week and reducing them to a status of trade unionists was no small one.

The position and duties of the director of motion pictures place him closer to the producer or employer than to the worker. At times his interests lead him actually into the production field where he becomes an employer of a kind.

For these reasons the Screen Directors Guild is in no sense strictly a bargaining labor union, although the Communist theoretician claims that it is, but the directors as a class have not yet discovered the fact. Actually the Screen Directors Guild occupies an anomalous position among Hollywood labor organizations which plays at going through the motions of a labor union. The high salaries of the directors and their preferred position among the elite of the motion picture world contradicts any questions of "wages and working conditions".

This leaves the Screen Directors Guild with but one basic reason for existence which, to a small group within the organization, is all in all. This reason is ideological, or, as this group would express it if driven into a corner, "cultural". By "cultural" is meant production of motion pictures sympathetic to the cause of Communism and the political economy of Soviet Russia.

100344

This is no implication that the entire membership of the Screen Directors Guild, or even the majority, are of this viewpoint, or that the organization as a body reacts in that direction. It is the usual small group within the organization that works to steer it into this type of activity.

The Screen Directors Guild, of necessity, confined within narrow bounds as a bargaining agency. Also any political activity it is free to adopt is circumscribed.

Yet in spite of those restrictions the Screen Directors Guild has sponsored such organizations as the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, a Communist inspired project, the Hollywood Canteen, likewise controlled by Communist elements, the War Symphony Committee, and others. It was affiliated with the Hollywood Guild Council mentioned heretofore.

There is considerable Communist activity among the individual members of the directors guild, but they function as individuals and take part in outside organizations and groups.

The Communist Party has for years made every effort to take into its folds motion picture directors. They have recognized the strategic position of the director in injecting propaganda into a picture. In this they have been somewhat successful heretofore.

But at the present time the field is wide open. The position of Soviet Russia as an ally, and the large number of pictures now being made based on the war situation, permits those directors so inclined to inject into the picture such Communist propaganda as would not have been possible heretofore. And for the making of such pictures the Hollywood producers invariably select those directors and writers who are sympathetic to the Soviet union and the Communist cause.

The officers of the Screen Directors Guild are the following:

GEORGE STEVENS - President

ERNST LUBITSCH - First Vice President

NORMAN TAUROG - Second Vice President

WILLIAM A. SEITER-Secretary

TAY GARNETT - Treasurer

J. P. McGOWAN - Executive Secretary

MABEL WALKER WILLEBRANDT - Counsel

Board of Directors: (in addition to the above)

DAVID BUTLER	GEORGE CUKOR
EDWARD H. GRIFFITH	HENRY HATHAWAY
HOWARD HAWKS	MARK SANDRICH
A. EDWARD SUTHERLAND	RICHARD WALLACE
WILLIAM A. WELLMAN	SAM WOOD

Alternates to the Board:

FELIX FEIST
REEVES EASON
IRVING PICHEL
LESLEY SELANDER

Of the above officials few have been openly active or have expressed publicly sympathy for Communism or its philosophy.

GEORGE STEVENS. [Source 2-X has reported (S&W) that GEORGE STEVENS is President of the Guild; that he has been identified with some of the Communist front organizations. He represented the guild in the United Citizens for Victory Committee, and spoke at a meeting in the Philharmonic Auditorium in September of 1942. He has had some connections with the Hollywood Theatre Alliance, a Communist inspired project, and has affiliated with various Russian Relief drives. His activities have been of a mild nature.

ERNST LUBITSCH has been looked upon as a fellow traveller but directed the picture "Ninotschka", which was anti-Communist satire. This would cancel out any Communist leanings previously held. For directing this picture he was attacked by the Communists in the industry and out.

Of NORMAN TAUROG, WILLIAM A. SEITER, TAY GARNETT, and J. P. McGOWAN, there is no record of any activities.

Of the Board of Directors the same can be said, with the exception of IRVING PICHEL, one of the alternates.

IRVING PICHEL. [Source 2-X has stated (S&W) that Mr. PICHEL has long been active in circles allied to the Communist Party. Sponsor and active in the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, and sponsor of the United Spanish Aid Committee, both strictly Communist front organizations. He teaches at the Hollywood Writers School, conducted by the League of American Writers. While PICHEL has been identified with the foregoing organizations he seems to know when to draw back and not go too far. However, he follows the Communist Party line, but safely.

CONFIDENTIAL

None of the rest of the officials of the Screen Directors Guild have been involved to any serious extent in Communist activities as appears at this time; however this does not mean that the Communist Party has ignored the motion picture director. On the contrary there has been an intensive campaign to influence the directors and it has been successful to quite an extent. But in doing this a different tactic was used than those which were applied to other groups and labor unions. It would not serve the purposes of the Communists nearly so well if they were to control the Screen Directors Guild from the top by electing their members and fellow travellers to the offices in the guild. It would be much better to influence the individual director and use him where he would serve their purpose by his control of the picture as it was produced. Besides there would be a danger if any of the directors became publicly known as Communists and sympathizers--their position in the industry would not allow of it, particularly if they should be in control of the Guild.

The following members of the Screen Directors Guild in Hollywood are known followers of the Communist Party line:

FRANK TUTTLE. Source has stated that TUTTLE is a member of the Communist Party (BURT-HONEYCOMBE). He has been active in almost every Communist inspired group operating in Hollywood; Sponsor of the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League. He has been active in the Hollywood Peace Forum which succeeded the Anti-Nazi League and became isolationist when the Communist Party line changed. He is a member of the Hollywood League for Democratic Action, a Communist anti-war group following the Communist Party line. TUTTLE spoke at a mass meeting of a group at the Olympic Auditorium on April 6, 1940, in Los Angeles, which meeting was to "Keep America Out of the War". He is a member and active in the Motion Picture Democratic Committee, a Communist group that changed to isolation when the Communist Party line changed. He is a member of the Zukas Defense Committee-defense of Communist ZUKAS sentenced by Yorty Committee investigating subversive activites. He was a sponsor of the United Spanish Aid Committee and other Spanish civil war aid committees and it is reported that approximately $300,000 was collected for this purpose and that a great portion of it was collected for the purpose of bringing to the United States writers who were in exile and other radical factors who were in internement camps in various European countries for their radical and Communist activities. It is also reported that a large portion of this $300,000 was never accounted for to anyone. (U)

ORSON WELLES is a member of the original "Group Theatre", New York, Communist controlled theater project affiliated with the New Theatre League, a branch of the International Union of Revolutionary Theatres. He is a member of the League of American Writers. He signed the Fourth call for Writers Congress which was a support of the American Peace Mobilization. He is chairman of a committee from Hollywood demanding that deportation proceedings against HARRY BRIDGES be dropped. He is active in the Rescue Ship Mission, a Communist collection agency for funds never accounted for. WELLES is now very patriotic, having changed with the Communist Party line. He was also a sponsor of the United Spanish Aid Committee and other Spanish civil war aid committees and it is reported that approximately $300,000 was collected for this purpose and that a great portion of it was collected for the purpose of bringing to the United States writers who were in exile and other radical factors who were in internement camps in various European countries for their radical and Communist activities. It is also reported that a large portion of this $300,000 was never accounted for to anyone.

JAY LEYDA is now Technical Director on "Mission to Moscow", a picture now being made by Warner Brothers. He has a long record of Communist activity. He was director of propaganda via the theatre for International Union of Revolutionary Writers in Moscow in 1934-35. He is associate editor of "New Theatre", a publication controlled by the Communist Party, issued in New York from 1935 to 1939. He was associated with the Film Library of the Modern Museum, Rockefeller Foundation in New York in 1940. He was discharged for Communist activity in July, 1940 by IRIS BARRY, Curator, as a result of popular pressure. He has been engaged in many other activities.

HERMAN SHUMLIN is a former Broadway producer, now a Hollywood director. He has followed the Communist Party line faithfully for many years. He is a member of the "Group Theatre" in New York, and active in all of its affairs. He was sponsor for the "Theatre Committee for Defense of the Spanish Republic". He was a member of the Hollywood Citizens Committee for Federal Theatre, and a member of the Executive Board of the Theatre Arts Committee (T.A.C.). He was a supporter of the American Peace Mobilization. He has engaged in many other activities, all of which followed the Communist Party line from the Popular Front to Isolation, to violent patriotism.

JOHN FORD has shown Communist sympathies to a limited extent. He is identified as attending Communist social gatherings in Hollywood luminaries homes. (BURT) Sponsor for the Steinbeck Committee for Agricultural Workers, a Communist controlled group (met at the Philharmonic Auditorium, Los Angeles, March 21, 1940). The activities of FORD were of a mild nature, and in all probability he is an innocent. He was third Vice-Chairman of the Motion Picture Democratic Committee.

JOHN CROMWELL is one of the original organizers of the Screen Directors Guild. He is a member of Hollywood's Committee to Protect Civil Liberties, a completely dominated group. He is sponsor of the Hollywood Committee for Writers in Exile", a Communist project.

HERBERT BIBERMAN is one of the leading Communists in the Hollywood section. He is a member of the National Council of American Peace Mobilization. He picketed the White House for the American Peace Mobilization, and is local chairman of that organization, as well as [illegible] Peace Forum. He was involved in an attempt by the United Studio [illegible]

Guild to take over Hollywood unions for the Communist Party. He is a contributor to "New Masses", New Theatre magazine. He is a member of the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League and Motion Picture Democratic Committee. There are many other instances of Communist activity on his part. He is now patriotic in conformity with the Communist Party line.

LEWIS MILESTONE follows the Communist Party line. He supported the New Theatre League, which is affiliated with the International Union of Revolutionary Theatres, with headquarters in Moscow, Russia. He wrote articles for the New Theatre magazine in March, 1937. He is a member of the Executive Board of the Motion Picture Spanish Aid Committee, a Communist front organization. He signed a letter of "150" which was protest against investigation of Moscow trials. This fact is proof that MILESTONE was interested in inner workings of the Communist Party. He is a sponsor of the Hollywood Theatre Alliance, a Communist organization. He has engaged in many other activities.

E. A. DUPONT is editor of the Hollywood "Tribune", a Communist publication issued in 1939. This publication was short lived as the HITLER-STALIN pact caused its death.

WILLIAM DIETERLE is a follower of the Communist Party line. He is a member of the Hollywood Committee for Writers in Exile, a Communist front organization, and of the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League. He gave interviews to the "Daily Worker", the Communist Party's official publication (1939). He was named as a member of the Communist Party by IVAN COX in December of 1937.

JORIS IVENS has long been identified with Communist activities. He is an original member and active in the New Theatre League, an affiliate of the International Union of Revolutionary Theatres. Contributor to the New Theatre magazine, and director of "Documentary" films. He is a sponsor of the Motion Picture Guild, a Communist controlled organization for the making of propaganda films (1939).

PARE LORENTZ has engaged in activities practically the same as IVENS.

DUDLEY NICHOLS was formerly a screen writer and member of the League of American Writers. He is now a producer and director. He has a long record of Communist and Communist front activities while connected with the League of American Writers.

HERBERT KLINE is one of the original group that set up the New Theatre League. He is editor of the New Theatre magazine. He is one of the original founders of the League of American Writers in conjunction with EARL BROWDER, MICHAEL GOLD, etc. He is now in Mexico making so-called "documentary" films. He has a long record of Communist activities.

GARSIN KANIN follows the Communist Party line. He is a member of the Hollywood Committee for Writers in Exile, a Communist Party front. He is a contributor to "New Masses", a Communist publication. He signed a resolution to support the "Peoples Front" in England, about April 1, 1941. The "Peoples Front" in England corresponded to the American Peace Mobilization in the United States. EARL BROWDER and other known Communists were also signers of this resolution. He sponsored the Hollywood Theatre Alliance, a Communist undertaking.

There are others among the directors of Hollywood who have evinced sympathy for the Communist cause, but it is of a milder nature and follows the same general pattern.

SCREEN PUBLICISTS GUILD - 1735½ No. Vine Street, Hollywood, California

Source 2-Y has stated in substance the following with respect to the officers and activity of certain individuals in the Screen Publicists Guild. The officers are:

LESLIE MASON	-	President
TEET CARLE	-	Vice-President
DAVID McCOIG	-	Secretary
TED TAYLOR	-	Treasurer

The Executive Board members are the four above named and the following:

WILLIAM BELCHER	ROBERT JOSEPH
WILLIAM BLOECHER	BESSIE KAMINS
JERRY BRETTINGRAM	DON McELWAINE
JOHN CAMPBELL, JR.	CAMERON SHIPP
CHARLES CASHON	JOHN DEL VALLE
NAT JAMES	ARTHUR ZELLNER

Source has stated that none of the above named officers have been identified as being members of the Communist Party or as having taken part as individuals in any Communist activity of the usual Hollywood variety, yet the organization as a body has affiliated itself with known Communist inspired groups.

Source has stated that this union has been represented by its President LESLIE MASON who has acted as a delegate and as a member of or as sponsoring the following: The Hollywood Guild Council; Labors Unity for Victory Committee; Hollywood Writers Mobilization for Defense, which was a part of the Screen Writers Guild; and the League of American Writers. He has also sponsored the Hollywood Canteen which is sponsored generally by Communist elements.

Source has stated that the only other member of this guild who has at times represented the organization as a delegate is DON KING who is considered by conservative labor unions in Hollywood to be a fellow traveller but he has never engaged in any decided activities. He further stated that the number of members in the union is not large, approximately 350; that on this account it has had very little influence on the larger groups or those engaged in Communist front activities.

SCREEN READERS GUILD, 1655 North Cherokee Street, Hollywood, California

Source 2-Z has reported as follows on this guild. He has stated that the following are the officers:

JOHN WEBER - President

LILLIAN BERQUIST-Vice-President

JESSIE BURNS - Corresponding Secretary

RUTH FASKEN - Recording Secretary

BILL COLE - Treasurer

HAL LEVY - Member Executive Board
BERNARD GORDON- Member Executive Board
WESLEY HAINES - Member Executive Board
LEWIS CLAY - Member Executive Board
FRANK CLEAVER - Member Executive Board
WILLIAM SHENKER- Member Executive Board

Source has stated that the Screen Readers Guild is not a large group, perhaps not over 250 to 300 in all. He further stated that some are employed regularly at the various studios, while others do what is called free lance reading. Their duties are to read books, magazines and all forms of published material and make synopses from which stories or scenes may be adapted to the motion pictures.

Source has further stated that the readers have been to a large extent influenced and dominated by the Screen Writers Guild. The reason for this is that the readers consider themselves potential writers and their ambitions lie in that direction. For this reason the Screen Readers Guild follows the lead of the Screen Writers Guild in all matters. It is affiliated with the Hollywood Writers Mobilization for Defense, the Hollywood Guild Council, and is active in supporting any political activities and fronts which the Screen Writers Guild advocates.

SCREEN DIALOGUE DIRECTORS GUILD

Source 3-A has stated that this organization is an independent group not affiliated with the A.F. of L. and that it came into existence in 1936. He stated that it was an attempt to organize into a guild or union that might be termed an anomalous section of the directors guild. It was composed of a small section of this group whose activities are of a rather specialized nature, direction of the dialogue in the picture. These duties naturally develop into the domain of the director of the picture and therefore the status of the dialogue director is somewhat vague.

Source stated that as a body this guild has never affiliated with the usual Communist efforts to consolidate groups such as the Hollywood Writers Mobilization for Defense, the Conference of Studio Unions, or any of the other Communist inspired groups. He further stated that this guild is not at the present time taking a part as group in any of the usual undertakings for war purposes such as the Hollywood Canteen, Russian Relief, etc.

Source stated that the original organizers and those most active in the organization in the past are and have been the following:

WILLIAM L. BROSSEAU	TED STANHOPE
STANLEY J. GRANDON	JAMES LERNER
ED L. DAVENPORT	MILTON SACKSON
LESTER SCHAFFER	RICHARD LaPAN
EDWARD E. KAYE	EDWARD J. CORNEL
EUGENE BAILEY

Source has stated that with the exception of RICHARD LaPAN none of the above have been identified with Communist activities. He stated that LaPAN was for some years a member of the Communist Party in Hollywood and did important work for the party among the prominent Hollywood luminaries, but he stated that LaPAN broke with the party about five years ago and since that time has become violently opposed to it. He further stated that LaPAN at the present time is not employed at the studios and so far as he knows LaPAN has abandoned all political activity.

AMERICAN GUILD OF MUSICAL ARTISTS

Source 3-B has reported that this organization is not strictly a Hollywood group but is national in its scope and is composed of prominent musicians, soloists, directors and others. He stated that it is not a Hollywood union in the sense that it acts as a bargaining agency, as all members of this organization are also members of the American Federation of Musicians, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, whi bargaining agency for musicians. Source further stated t..at this not been active in Communist circles but has supported some organizations suspected of being Communist front organizations, such as Russian War Relief; that it has furnished musicians free of charge to such organizations as the Russian War Relief. He further stated that it is one of the sponsors of the Hollywood Canteen and furnished a great deal of the music, and perhaps all of the music, that is given at the Canteen for entertainment purposes. He stated positively that it has not sponsored such organizations as the Hollywood Writers Mobilization for Defense.

Source 3-C has stated (X)(U) that Screen Actors Guild is the only labor union in Hollywood which does not function under a charter from an international group affiliated with the A.F. of L. Being the only group of its kind, that is a union of Screen Actors, it exists only in Hollywood and for this reason it functions by a direct charter from the A.F. of L. through the Actors Equity Association.

SCREEN ACTORS GUILD

Source 3-C has stated (X)(U) that KENNETH THOMPSON, Executive Secretary of the Screen Actors Guild, performs his duty as Executive Secretary of the Guild and does not take part in any activities outside the needs of the guild as a labor union. He does not object to the Communists functioning in the union, neither does he support them. He has never been referred to as a Communist or fellow traveller. JEFF KIBRE in 1939 stated with respect to THOMPSON: "THOMPSON is vacillating and cannot be held in line."

Source 3-C stated (X)(U) that the following are the officers of this guild:

KENNETH THOMPSON - Executive Secretary

JAMES CAGNEY - President

GEORGE A. MURPHY - First Vice-President

PAUL HARVEY - Second Vice-President

WALTER ABELL - Third Vice-President

LUCILLE GLEASON - Recording Secretary

PORTER HALL - Treasurer

WALTER ABELL - Member, Board of Directors
JAMES CAGNEY - Member, Board of Directors
EMMA DUNN - Member, Board of Directors
GEORGE A. MURPHY - Member, Board of Directors

LLOYD PIDGEON - Member, Board of Directors
ELIZABETH RISDON-Member, Board of Directors
FRANCHOT TONE - Member, Board of Directors
CHARLES TROWBRIDGE - Member, Board of Directors
JANE WYMAN - Member, Board of Directors.

Source 3-C has stated that the affairs of the Screen Actors Guild are conducted in a different manner from the rest of the unions in the Hollywood motion picture industry. He stated that all matters are in the hands of the elected officers and Board of Directors; that this union does not hold membership meetings regularly; that it has a called meeting when something special is called in order that the membership may vote on some specific question, but he stated that this occurs only on rare occasions and that the only regular meeting is the one which is called once per year for the purpose of electing officers.

Source further stated that due to this arrangement whereas the membership acting as a body can take no action on such affairs, Communist Party members, fellow travellers, and sympathizers among the Hollywood Actors carry on their work through other organizations such as "fronts". They act as individuals without the official sanction of the union, the Screen Actors Guild.

JAMES CAGNEY. Source 3-C stated that CAGNEY has contributed large sums of cash to the Communist Party. This feature is being treated elsewhere in this report.

GEORGE A. MURPHY. Source has stated that MURPHY is the First Vice-President, is very friendly with the C.I.O. and PHIL A. CONNALLY, President of the C.I.O. and Secretary of the L.A.I.U.C. He stated that he considers MURPHY very sympathetic to the Communist cause but that he would not be willing to call him a fellow traveller.

Source further stated that PAUL HARVEY, WALTER ABELL, LUCILLE GLEASON and PORTER HALL have not been active even in any front organizations.

FRANCHOT TONE. Source stated that FRANCHOT TONE has been very active in Communist front organizations, has contributed large sums of money to the Communist Party, and has been very active in matters in which the Communist Party has been involved.

RICHARD LaPAN. Source stated that LaPAN in about 1935 or 1936 was the collector for the Communist Party amongst the motion picture people. At that time LaPAN stated that he had collected large sums of money from JAMES CAGNEY and others in the Screen Actors Guild. He stated that in 1934 LAWRENCE ROSS was Secretary of the Communist Party in Los Angeles County and on one occasion he sent a hurried call to Hollywood insisting that LOUIS HEIFETZ see JAMES CAGNEY at once and get $200.00 as he needed it immediately. A presumption grew from this bit of information that CAGNEY might at any time be subject to call for Communist funds. (X)(U)

Source 3-C has stated that the following members of the Screen Actors Guild have taken part in and supported Communists and Communist controlled front activities in the Hollywood section over a period of six or seven years to his own personal knowledge: (X)(U)

LUCILLE BALL	IDA LUPINO
ROMAN BOHNEN	FREDERICK MARCH
VIRGINIA BRUCE	PHILIP MERIVALE
MORRIS CARNOVISKY	MAURICE MURPHY
DOROTHY COLLINGORE	CLARENCE MUSE
FRANCES FARMER	IRVING PICHEL
HELEN GOHAGEN	LUCIAN PRIVAL
JOHN GARFIELD (correct name JAKE GARFINKEL)	LOUISE RAINER
	PAUL ROBESON
STEWART HAMBLEN	GALE SONDERGAARD
WALTER HUSTON	ART SMITH
FRED KEATING	LIONEL STANDER
VICTOR KILLIAN	FRANCHOT TONE

A. F. of L. LOCAL UNIONS NOT MENTIONED HERETOFORE

(X)(U)

Source 3-D has stated that the following sixteen unions which have not heretofore been mentioned in this report are A.F. of L. unions and should be mentioned here in order that all unions in the motion picture industry may be accounted for. He has stated that of this number nine form a part of the I.A.T.S.E. group affiliated with the A.F. of L. through the national organization of the I.A.T.S.E. They are the following:

AFFILIATED PROPERTY CRAFTSMEN LOCAL 44.

INTERNATIONAL PHOTOGRAPHERS LOCAL 659.

INTERNATIONAL SOUND TECHNICIANS LOCAL 695.

MAKEUP ARTISTS LOCAL 706.

MOTION PICTURE COSTUMERS LOCAL 705.

MOTION PICTURE SET ELECTRICIANS LOCAL 728.

86-

MOTION PICTURE STUDIO GRIPS LOCAL 80.

MOTION PICTURE STUDIO PROJECTIONISTS NO. 165.

STUDIO LABORATORY AND UTILITY WORKERS LOCAL 727.

Source has stated that the following A.F. of L. local unions are not a part of the I.A.T.S.E. group but are affiliated with the A.F. of L. through their various international bosses:

Local	Approx. Membership
STUDIO DRIVERS (TEAMSTERS) LOCAL 399	1,000
STUDIO PLASTERERS LOCAL 755	550
STUDIO CARPENTERS LOCAL 946	2,200
STUDIO UTILITY WORKERS LOCAL 724	1,600
AMERICAN FEDERATION OF MUSICIANS LOCAL 47	500
INTERNATIONAL BROTHERHOOD OF ELECTRICAL WORKERS LOCAL NO. 40	1,300
BUILDING SERVICE WORKERS LOCAL 99	500

[Source has stated in the above-named unions it cannot be said that there is any large amount of Communist infiltration. A campaign for this purpose has been carried on for the past five or six years but has not been successful. He has further stated that in no one of these unions has any of the officers been won over to the Communists cause; however, among the membership of some of these unions Communists and their sympathizers had been active prior to June 22, 1941, the date on which HITLER attacked STALIN. Since that time, however, he states that Communist Party instructions have been that there is to be unity with the A.F. of L. and that no serious attempts should be made to capture official positions in those unions. He stated, however, that this does not mean that they have dropped their activity; in fact it has been intensified but it has been turned in numerous directions. He stated that the purpose now is to utilize the present structure of these unions and influence the membership to support such extra-union activities as aid to Russia, resolution for a second front, independence of India, support for the various projects put out by the Communists such as nurseries for the children of war workers, labor management committees and all war activities determined by the position of the Communist Party line toward the Soviet Union.]

AFFILIATED PROPERTY CRAFTSMEN NO. 44 (I.A.T.S.E. Affiliate)

Source 3-E has advised that none of the officers of this union are Communists or fellow travellers and for that reason same are not being listed.

Source 3-E, however, has stated that the following members of this union are listed as Communists: FRED HAUSHELL, Communist Party name FRANK OAKES, and IRWIN P. HENTSCHELL, whose Communist Party name is JOHN F. MYERS. It will be noted that HENTSCHELL has been mentioned heretofore in Exhibit No. 1 and Exhibit No. 2 in the correspondence between JEFF KIBRE and ROY HUDSON and other officials of the Communist Party in connection with their activities at the 34th Annual Convention of the I.A.T.S.E. held at Cleveland, Ohio, June 6-9, 1938, in which ROY HUDSON questioned the loyalty and ability of HENTSCHELL.

HUGH P. MASON. Source 3-E has stated that MASON was registered for voting purposes as a Communist in 1936. It has also appeared at the JACK TENNEY Legislative Committee testimony that MASON attended the Communist Party fraction meetings and that Communist Party meetings were held in his home.

Source 3-E has stated that the following members of Local No. 44 have been listed by the officials of the union as having carried on and supported Communist propaganda at union meetings:

HARRY CHERNIN	WILLIAM M. DOUGLAS
WILLIAM WILFROID	ARTHUR FRIEDSON
LOUIS HAZEY	ROBERT AMES
JOHN C. PELTON	MURRY PASCH
ROY W. VICKEY	GEORGE HAINES

INTERNATIONAL PHOTOGRAPHERS LOCAL NO. 659 (I.A.T.S.E. affiliated With A. F. of L.

Source 3-F has stated with respect to the possible Communist infiltration into the International Photographers that there has been no infiltration of Communists into the officials of this group. He stated the only member of this group who seems to have Communist connections is JAMES WONG HOWE, a Chinaman. He stated that HOWE was a member of the Motion Picture Cooperative Buyers Guild and that he was a member of the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League and it is considered that he has been very sympathetic to the Communist cause but it is not known definitely that he has ever been a member.

INTERNATIONAL SOUND TECHNICIANS LOCAL 695 (I.A.T.S.E. affiliated With A.F. of L.

Source 3-G has informed the Los Angeles Bureau office that there is no evidence that there is any Communist infiltration into this union to such an extent as to have any influence whatever on the union's activity as a body. Source has stated, however, that HAROLD SMITH, the business agent of this union, has been identified as consorting with Communist elements in Hollywood. He further stated that SMITH was voted for office at the Labor National Convention of the I.A.T.S.E. at Columbus, Ohio in June, 1942 and was part of what was termed the Communist bloc from Hollywood. He was a delegate from his union to Labors Unity for Victory, a Communist front meeting held in the Los Angeles Central Labor Council Hall, September 14, 1942.

Source stated that SMITH is not what would be called a stable man by the Communists. He uses them and they use him for certain purposes but it can be said that the Communists do not control him.

Source further stated that the other officers of this union have not been implicated in Communist activities and union as a body has not supported Communist proposals which follow the Communist Party line.

MAKE UP ARTISTS LOCAL NO. 706 (I.A.T.S.E. Affiliated With A. F. of L.

Source 3-H has reported that the membership of this union is comparatively small and is made up of old time actors and for that reason any Communist activities have fallen on barren ground. He stated that the only member of this union who is a fellow traveller is RAYMOND LOPEZ. He stated that LOPEZ was a member of the Communist Party and active in the M.P.W.I.U. mentioned heretofore and for some seven or eight years has carried on Communist propaganda and has been identified with Communist front organizations. He further stated that LOPEZ is a man of little force and does not have the ability to influence anyone.

MOTION PICTURE COSTUMERS LOCAL NO. 705 (I.A.T.S.E. AFFILIATED WITH A.F. OF L.

Source 3-I has stated that J. C. EDWARDS is the business agent of this union. He has stated that EDWARDS is not a Communist nor a sympathizer with Communism; that this union has an approximate membership of 600, which is composed principally of persons of foreign extraction, such as can be found in the garment industry. Source has stated that while the tendency of these types is to lean toward the left, the fact that they are exceedingly well paid in the motion picture industry overrides completely any political viewpoint they might desire to adopt.

MOTION PICTURE SET ELECTRICIANS LOCAL NO. 728

Source 3-J has informed (S)(U) that the officers of this union appear to have no communist connections; however he has stated that among the membership there has been some who have been active. The following individuals have been reported as having supported the U.S.T.G. and the Communist program to take over the Hollywood Studio Unions:

JERRY (J.N.) FATKIN. Source has stated that FATKIN is an electrician who is on call to the various studios when needed. He stated that FATKIN supports all proposals advanced in the interest of the Communist Party line at all meetings of the union.

ROY H. RICE. Source 3-J has stated (S)(U) that RICE is a steward in the union and that he is on call as a set electrician; that it is reported that he is an associate of FATKIN in following the Communist Party line in all union meetings.

Source has stated that MIKE ELLISON, BILL GORSMAN and GEORGE KATZMAN, members of this union, have cooperated with FATKIN and RICE at all times in following the Communist Party line.

Source 3-J further stated (S)(U) that within the last few months there has developed an internal situation within this union which may result in this membership group going over to the Conference of Studio Unions dominated by Communist influence under the leadership of HERBERT K. SORRELL. He further stated that PAT CASEY, the Labor Relations Man between the studios and the unions, is in favor of lining up with the Conference of Studio Unions. He stated, however, that GUY RUSHING, the secretary of this union, is opposed to any Communist infiltration, but the business agent, A. J. MORAN, seems to favor collaboration with Communist controlled unions at the studios. He stated, however, that it cannot be stated that MORAN is a Communist but at times he has been known to sympathize with Communist programs and has advocated following some activities which are a part of the Communist Party line.

Source 3-J has stated (S)(U) that the following parties who are members and not officers of this union are known to have Communist sympathies:

JOEL KRONISH
FRED HOUNSCHELL
GEORGE MEROHOFF
WILLIAM KANE
GEORGE DAVIS
WILLIAM GORSMAN
ED HARPER
JOSEPH KHOMENKO
HERMAN LIPNEY
WILLIAM SHARK
CHARLES GUTHRIE

MOTION PICTURE STUDIO GRIPS LOCAL NO. 80 (I.A.T.S.E. Affiliated with A. F. of L.

Source 3-K has informed (X(U)) the Los Angeles Bureau Office that none of the officials of this union have any Communist connections. He further stated that the whole union is patriotically opposed to all Communist influence.

MOTION PICTURE PROJECTIONISTS LOCAL NO. 165 (I.A.T.S.E. Affiliated with A. F. of L.

Source 3-L has informed Agent that this local is a small group with only about 200 to 250 members. He stated that the officers are free from Communist connections. He further stated that there is one member, EDWARD LEVEGUE, who is a member of the Communist Party under the name of HERBERT FORD. He stated that LEVEGUE was a member of the M.P.W.I.U. in 1934 and 1935 and at that time was very sympathetic to Communism and later joined the Communist Party and has informed that he retains his membership in the Communist Party. (X(U))

LABORERS AND UTILITY WORKERS LOCAL NO. 723 (I.A.T.S.E. Affiliated with A. F. of L.

Source 3-M has informed (X(U)) Agent that this union is one of the I.A.T.S.E. group and that at one time this union had jurisdiction over utility workers and laborers in the studios, but within the last few years another union, the Studio Utility Employees No. 727, affiliated with the International Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers Union Of America, affiliated with A. F. of L., has taken over most of this type of workers, which has left this union with only about 250 to 300 members. He stated that as a result there is no Communist activity in the union at all as it is expected that sooner or later this union will voluntarily go out of existence.

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF MUSICIANS LOCAL NO. 47

Source 3-N has reported (X(U)) to the Los Angeles Bureau Office that this union is an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor and represents all organized musicians in the Los Angeles section as the bargaining agency. He stated that this union is not strictly a Hollywood union but it does encompass all musicians who work in the studios in Hollywood.

Source 3-N stated (X(U)) that the officers of this union at the present time are the following: J. K. (SPIKE) WALLACE, is the President and business representative.

JOHN GROEN - Vice-President

FRANK B. PENDLETON - Recording Secretary

AL C. MYERS - Financial Secretary
JOHN M. BOYD - Trustee
H. C. GREEN - Trustee
RICHARD DICKERSON - Trustee

ZARHN BICKFORD - Member Board of Directors
JACK BAPTISTE - Member Board of Directors
ART GINDLER - Member Board of Directors
MAURI H. PAUL - Member Board of Directors
GEORGE H. SMITH - Member Board of Directors

The officers are also Members of the Board of Directors.

Source 3-N stated that this union is one of the largest groups of the A.F. of L. in southern California, having a paid up membership of approximately 8,000. He further stated that although this organization has a clause in its constitution which demands expulsion from the union of any member or members who are Communists, who advocate Communism or any other subversive doctrines, or who engage in subversive propaganda, the union as a body has cooperated with known Communist groups in the Los Angeles locality.

Source further stated that the Musicians Local No. 47 from about 1937 to 1940 was conducted in a conservative manner; that JACK TENNEY was President of the union during that time. He stated that the union has a hall at 1417 Georgia Street, which is owned by the union. He further stated that TENNEY was elected to the California State Legislature in 1938 and he afterward became a member of the Sam Yorty Assembly Investigating Committee and in 1941 TENNEY succeeded YORTY in the committee which was afterwards known as the Tenney Legislative Investigating Committee and was also known as the Anti-Subversive Committee of the California State Legislature.

Source stated that TENNEY ceased to be the President of the union in 1940 and J. K. WALLACE was elected to succeed him. He further stated that after TENNEY went out of office as President, WALLACE, SAM ALBERTS, MISCHA ALTMAN, HENRY ALBERTI, and a man by the name of BAN became active in the union; that ALBERTI, ALTMAN and BAN have been identified as members of the Communist Party up until 1940. He stated that prior to that time ALBERTS was not known as a Communist Party member but was considered a fellow traveller.

Source 3-N has further stated that the Communist line activities of this union are expressed through its President, J. K. WALLACE who sits in the forefront to support the Conference of Studio Unions, which is completely Communist controlled and under the leadership of HERBERT K. SORRELL, a well known Communist. He further stated that the union passed a resolution about October 1, 1942 demanding the opening of a second front. He further stated that WALLACE as a delegate to Labors Unity for Victory...

Committee, a Communist dominated group, went on record as saying that his union had gone on record as supporting the Committee for the Care of Children in Wartime, a Communist sponsored group. He further stated that as an individual WALLACE'S name appears on a pamphlet written by DALTON TRUMBO, a well known Communist writer in Hollywood, as a sponsor. He further explained that this pamphlet was a protest against the deportation of HARRY BRIDGES. He further stated that WALLACE, speaking for this union, has led the attack on the activities of the Anti-Subversive Committee and JACK TENNEY personally. (TENNEY was elected to the State Senate in the November, 1942 election.)

[Source 3-N further stated] that WALLACE and this union take credit for the establishment of the Hollywood Canteen, which behind the scenes is controlled by a group of Communists and fellow travellers in Hollywood. He stated that this canteen furnished entertainment and refreshments for the armed forces without charge. He further stated that the general impression is that WALLACE is not a Communist Party member but he sponsors Communist activities and is a close associate of HERBERT K. SORRELL and has made statements for his union that it will support demands made by SORRELL and his Conference of Studio Unions in any demands that they will make on the motion picture industry.

STUDIO DRIVERS LOCAL NUMBER 399

[Source 3-O has stated] that there has been an intensive campaign carried on by the Communists to penetrate and overtake this union, a campaign which was led by known Communists, fellow travellers and sympathizers. This local union was considered by them to be a key union in that roup of A.F. of L. locals not a part of the I.A.T.S.E. bloc. In this they ere correct for the reason that if they could succeed in capturing this group would provide an important wedge to penetrate the teamsters group on the est coast.

The campaign reached its height in 1941. At this time the heads of the union, Mr. JOSEPH TUOHY, Business Representative, and RALPH CHARE, Secretary, who, with all other officials of the union, are opposed to radical activities, succeeded in expelling two of the Communist leaders from the union on charges of Communism. The two leaders were GENE BRADY and BEN BUDMAN, whose record appears in the files of the Los Angeles Bureau office.

These expulsions tended to stop activity and at the esent time it is of little importance, although there is a sizeable group Communists and fellow travellers in the union. However, they are strictly ndercover and give little trouble.

[Source 3-O has collected (u) the information about these members himself, personally, through other members of the union. He stated that they were active in the U.S.T.G. in 1939; that they supported the Motion Picture Democratic Committee, which was a Communist front organization. He stated that they also objected to the expulsion from the union of BEN BUDMAN and GENE BRADY because of their Communist activities. The expulsion was made by a vote in an open hearing of the union. AL CAYA acted as the spokesman at the first hearing. At the second hearing, which took place in 1941, BRADY and BUDMAN sought the advice of GEORGE SHIBLEY, an attorney at Long Beach, California who has been involved in Communist activities and is a member of the Lawyers Guild and whose practice is confined to individuals and organizations of a Communist viewpoint and the men mentioned above voted against expulsion. They did not support the American Peace Mobilization or other fronts outside their labor union.

STUDIO PLASTERERS LOCAL NUMBER 755

[Source 3-P has stated (u) that this union is one of the conservative bloc of unions. BEN MARTINEZ is the business representative of the union and has been cooperative in combating Communist activity in the Hollywood unions.

[Source 3-P has stated (u) that there are no Communist activities in this union of any consequence; that the membership is limited and it is not one of the larger key unions; that the membership is approximately 400.

CONFIDENTIAL

94

Source 3-P further stated that the only members of the union who have shown Communist tendencies are:

RUDOLPH PARDUCCI
HENRY GREUTEST
HAROLD F. WILSON

He further stated that their activities have been confined to conversations with their own union members. He further stated that this union's membership is composed of Italians largely and that the work which they do is ornamental plaster cast work.

STUDIO CARPENTERS LOCAL NUMBER 946

Source 3-Q informed Agent that this union is apparently free of any outward Communist activities. He stated that it is an old line group, the members of which are for the most part men identified with the picture industry for many years. He further stated that the membership of this union tended to lean toward the conservative side. He also stated that it had been reported that there had been some Communist agitation in the past but at the present time it does not show. He stated that the officers of the union are in no way involved in radical activity of any kind; however their position is one of neutrality toward Communist activity.

Source 3-Q further stated that at a meeting of this union in June, 1941 of various conservative heads of Hollywood unions to combat Communist activity the representatives of this group would not cooperate. Attempts were later made to get their representatives to do so but without results. He further stated that the membership of this union is approximately 2,200 and that the position which the officers took on the situation with respect to Communists was one of aloofness, contending that there was no problem within the organization they represented.

STUDIO UTILITY EMPLOYEES LOCAL NO. 724

Source 3-R informed Agent that the membership of this union is approximately 1,600 and that there is no serious attempt by the Communist element to penetrate this group. Attempts have been made in the past but such attempts were entirely unsuccessful.

Source has stated that the officials of the union are in no way implicated in any radical activity; in fact it is one of the organizations in the Hollywood industry that has been aware of what has been going on and has consistently taken steps to prevent any Communist activity within the ranks of the membership.

CONFIDENTIAL

In addition to the conservative position of the union officials another factor operates to prevent Communist activity. And that is that the membership is composed of common laborers who drift in and out of the union. There is a large turnover in membership and as a consequence it is impossible for the Communist elements to concentrate on the members to build up a permanent faction.

The officials of the union, particularly LEW HELM, Business Representative, and H. C. ROHRBACH, JR., Secretary, have cooperated with other conservative union leaders in Hollywood unions to put down, or prevent Communist activity in the unions.

HOLLYWOOD UNIONS FREE OF COMMUNIST PARTY INFLUENCE

Source 3-S has stated that the following motion picture unions in Hollywood, California, have, so far as he has been able to ascertain, remained entirely free of Communist Party influence. They are the following:

INTERNATIONAL BROTHERHOOD OF ELECTRICAL WORKERS, A.F. of L. LOCAL 40, Approximately 900 members

BUILDING SERVICE WORKERS NO. 99, A.F. of L., approximately 500 members

SOCIETY OF MOTION PICTURE INTERIOR DECORATORS, INDEPENDENT - approximately 250 members

MOTION PICTURE HAIR STYLISTS GUILD - Independent approximately 250 members

ARTISTS MANAGERS GUILD - Independent - approximately 100 members

SCRIPT CLERKS GUILD - Independent - approximately 250 members

UNIT MANAGERS GUILD - Independent - approximately 100

FIRST AID MEN AND WOMENS UNION - Independent - approximate 150 members

SOCIETY OF MOTION PICTURE FILM EDITORS - Independent approximately 650 members

Source 3-S stated that two of the above named A.F. of L. .B.E.W. Local No. 40 which has about 900 members, and the Building

CONFIDENTIAL

Service Workers No. 99 with an approximate membership of about 500, have not shown any activity along Communist lines as organizations. The officials of these unions have not been identified with any form of Communist activity to his knowledge.

Source 3-S further stated that the seven independent unions named are small groups loosely organized and have not joined with any other unions in any activity of any sort so far as communism is concerned. He stated that they function as small independent groups in efforts to better their working conditions. He further stated that these unions could not be considered key groups and it therefore appears that there has not been intensive concentration on them by the Communist Party. It has always been a contention of the Communist element in Hollywood that if they could get control of the key unions, particularly those which are a part of the Conference of Studio Unions and several other I.A.T.S.E. locals, not yet a part of the latter group, they would have the situation well in hand, and then could force the remainder of the unions to fall in line with their wishes.

GENERAL SUMMARY OF THE LABOR UNION SITUATION IN THE HOLLYWOOD MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

Source 3-T has assisted in summing up the labor union situation as it exists in Hollywood and has pointed out the various efforts which have been made by the Communists and the Communist Party to get control of the various unions and guilds, and has gone a little farther and has shown the way in which the motion picture guilds and unions have endeavored to follow the Communist Party line which he has stated has been "without deviation". He has further pointed out that while the motion picture unions and guilds are at the present time on the surface at least for an all out war effort, that one who is familiar with their tactics can readily see that the Communist Party at the present time is losing no opportunity to further the interests of the Communist Party at the present time.

This summary is as follows:

"In its attempt to take over and control the motion picture industry in Hollywood, plans for which were laid down about twelve years ago, the Communist Party has consistently pursued policies and methods which were adjusted to different group interests and which varied in application according to the different changes in the party line of the Communist International (Comintern).

"In Hollywood there were two main lines of procedure; one for influencing the so-called cultural groups, writers, actors, artists, directors, etc., and another for penetration and the capturing control of the studio trade unions. Tactics used were not the same, although there was under cover coordination of all communist interests and controlled groups.

"As has been shown heretofore, the initial attempt to enter the trade union field in the motion picture industry was the formation of the Motion Picture Workers Industrial Union. This union, although not affiliated with the Trade Union Unity League (T.U.U.L.), was set up along the same lines of that basic communist organization and had the same object in view.

"At the time of the formation of the M.P.W.I.U. in 1934 the line of the Communist Party was to form independent unions, mould them into revolutionary unions and work for the eventual overthrow of capitalist democracy by means of violent revolution.

"This line of the Communist Party is clearly laid down in THE COMMUNIST, the official monthly organ of the Communist Party of the United States for June 1930, at Page 509, where it is stated:-

> 'We should keep in mind that the Party has also at its disposal other organizations, schools of the class struggle, schools of Communist strategy and tactics, where it can and in fact should recruit workers by the thousands who are insufficiently prepared, and in need of preliminary schooling. Such are, first of all, the revolutionary trade unions.'

Again, on page 512 it stated:

> 'The TUUL is an independent leader in the economic struggles of the working class. It is an uncompromising foe of the A.F. of L. Its task is to mobilize the masses, win them to its side, embrace them organizationally within its own folds and to destroy the A.F. of L.'

"This was the first method of penetration of the Hollywood motion picture industry by way of the Motion Picture Workers Industrial Union which was completely Communist dominated and which followed the Communist Party line implicitly.

"At the Seventh World Congress of the Communist International held in Moscow July 25th to August 20th, 1935, at which Congress EARL BROWDER was one of the delegates from the United States, a decision was made to alter the methods and tactics of the world Communist movement. What was called at that time the 'United Front', later called the 'Popular Front', was set up. All the various Communist parties throughout the world were ordered to conform and change their methods and tactics.

"In the trade union field this united front tactic called for the abandonment of revolutionary tactics, substituting therefor the boring-from-within process whereby all Communists were to join and work within the then existing trade unions, which meant in the United States the American Federation of Labor. They were to try and capture the leadership and key positions in the unions and bend the organizations over to the Communist Party line which had now become 'support of bourgeois democracy, opposition to fascism, etc.'. This change in the Communist Party line was determined by the foreign policy of the Soviet union which was then advocating 'collective security' against the tendency toward fascism.

"This line for action of Communists in trade unions was laid down by GEORGE DIMITROF, head of the Communist International, at this Congress as follows:

> 'Hence, the main task of the Communist Parties of the West at the present time is to develop the campaign for unity in the trade union movement and to bring it to its consummation; to see to it that all Communists, without exception, join the trade unions, there to work systematically and patiently to strengthen the solidarity of the working class in its fight against capital, and thus attain the conditions that will enable the Communist Parties to rely upon the trade unions.' (Report of DIMITROF to Seventh World Congress - Page 44)

"EARL BROWDER, on his return to the United States from this Congress, repeated this formula at the November (1935) Plenum of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the United States, as follows:

> 'The Seventh World Congress formulated a new tactical line because new conditions have arisen, not because the old line was wrong. The Communists are Marxists, Leninists and Stalinists. We adopt such tactics as best suit the concrete conditions. We will adopt new tactics again when changing conditions demand it. What Communists do not change, of course, is their strategic aim——the proletarian revolution and socialism. Naturally, the Seventh World Congress made no change in that at all. On the contrary, it equipped the working class vanguard with such a tactical line as will enable them to fight most effectively for this aim in the present world conditions.'

(BROWDER'S report - Page 6)

"Then, respecting the trade union situation, specifically, BROWDER had this to report:

'Our party faces a great responsibility in the present trade union situation.....in order more fully to carry through this role, we must complete the organization of the unorganized Communists, those who are eligible but have not yet joined the trade unions. All party organizations must consider it one of their tasks to bring the Communists into the organized trade union movement.'

(Pages 53-54, BROWDER Report)

"As a result of this decision of the Seventh World Congress held in Moscow, Russia, and the subsequent report of EARL BROWDER to the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the United States, the Motion Picture Workers Industrial Union of Hollywood, a revolutionary trade union, was quietly dissolved in February, 1936, and all Communist Party members, fellow travellers and sympathizers obediently went over and joined the then existing A.F. of L. unions in the Hollywood motion picture industry and began to work according to instructions based upon the Moscow decisions.

"Then followed the various maneuverings heretofore described——the formation of such groups as Conference of Motion Picture Arts and Crafts (COMPAC), United Studio Technicians Guild (USTG), Conference of Studio Unions, and a host of smaller groupings, all of which was determined by the Communist Party line.

"During this period and up to the signing of the STALIN-HITLER pact on August 23, 1939, the Communist Party made tremendous strides both in capturing unions and gaining influence all through the motion picture industry. Concealing their identity by pretending support of democracy, registering politically as members of the Democratic party, and carrying out the Trojan horse tactics of the Communist International, their influence spread among the rank and file [redacted] unions.

"However, with the announcement of the STALIN-HITLER pact there was a lull in the progress. For the duration of that pact, August 23, 1939 to June 22, 1941, the Communists confined their operations in the unions mainly to collective bargaining for the members, dropping the outward Communist political agitation almost completely. Politically, they were in very bad odor. But however, this bad odor affected them politically they retained their hold on the union groups because the Hollywood motion picture producers, through their labor representative, PAT CASEY, favored the Communist controlled unions. This enhanced the prestige of the Communist controlled leadership which was thereby enabled to hold on during that rough period.

"The change in the Communist Party line that came with this signing of the STALIN-HITLER pact on August 23, 1939, a change which demanded that Communists abandon support of democracy as exemplified by the Popular Front, and work for isolation, oppose national defense, conscription, Lease-Lend aid to Britain, in effect give aid and comfort as far as possible to Nazi Germany and the Axis powers, was followed by the Communist controlled Hollywood unions cautiously. They took the then Communist position that it was an imperialist war and America should have none of it. But this line was followed in a very cloudy and ambiguous manner. However, some of the unions went so far as to support the American Peace Mobilization.

"In the main, however, such support was an individual matter with some of the leaders of the Communist persuasion within the unions. But it was very limited for the reason that it is an important part of Communist strategy that Communist union leaders must always be protected from exposure. They are instructed to confine their activities mainly to their union affairs, particularly during a period when the party is under such fire as it was during the period of the HITLER-STALIN pact. The party line was carried more openly at this time by the cultural groups, and "front" organizations with which many of the Communists were working secretly.

"With HITLER'S attack on Russia on June 22, 1941, a new period was ushered in. The change in the position of Soviet Russia and its subsidiary, the Communist International, from one of collaboration with the Axis powers to one of antagonism, and the subsequent alliance of Russia with Great Britain and the United States was immediately reflected in the union activities of the Hollywood motion picture industry.

"From a position of opposition to the war in every respect, the Communist controlled groups now suddenly became violently patriotic and began shouting for all-out support of democracy, the war, national defense, second front, and in favor of everything they had condemned just a few weeks before. This is the situation as it prevails at this time.

CONFIDENTIAL

"And it is on this situation which the Communist Party relies to eventually control and dominate the Hollywood studio unions. By assuming the garb of ultra patriotism, giving all support to every project for national defense and taking part in all efforts to prosecute a successful end to the war, it is outwardly going along with the tide. But at the same time it is working feverishly undercover to build the party influence, recruit members into its ranks and to take advantage of every channel and avenue to build membership and influence.

"In this it, the Communist Party, is following out the basic principle of the Seventh World Congress of the Communist International, which EARL BROWDER clearly stated in his report on this Congress given at Madison Square Garden in New York City, on October 3rd, 1935, when he stated:

> 'If, nevertheless, war breaks out, it is their duty to work for its speedy termination, and to strive with all their might to utilize the economic and political crisis produced by the war, to rouse the political consciousness of the masses of the people and thereby hasten the downfall of capitalist class rule.'

(BROWDER'S report - Page 7)

"The tactics pursued by the Communists and fellow travellers within the Hollywood unions, and the cultural groups as well, are, at the present time, not easily distinguishable. Masking their efforts, as has been said, behind an all-out war effort, they are utilizing all their forces in work among the thousands of workers in all categories. Their activities take the form of agitation for the second front, Russian relief, sympathy for the Soviet system of government, freedom for India, negro equality, defense of HARRY BRIDGES, pressure to have Communists placed on the War Manpower Commission, Civilian Defense, Rationing Boards, and all government appointed agencies, entertainment of and propaganda among the armed forces, etc. etc. All this is part of the Communist Party line at this time.

"All attempts to capture leadership and key positions in the unions by the usual tactics of slander, innuendo and false accusations against the conservative leaders have been temporarily abandoned. In their place have been substituted the program activities mentioned above and an approach to these conservative leaders for cooperation with the Communist Party line.

"In this program the Communists in the unions have the fullest support from the cultural groups, writers, actors, directors and the Hollywood "intelligentsia" generally who follow the Communist Party line. These latter have great influence and prestige. Of all groups in the Hollywood sector these cultural groups are the most susceptible to Communist influence. Having greater latitude as theoreticians and artists their necks are generally found to be much farther out than those of the Communist trade unionists who are instructed to play a much closer game.

"To summarize the present union situation in Hollywood it must be stated that while the campaign to take over the remaining unions from the top, not yet under Communist control, has now been halted, the foundations for a future coup by the Communist Party, its fellow travellers and sympathizers is now being laid. Utilizing the position and prestige of Soviet Russia in the war effort, the Communist Party is building a strong following among all departments of the motion picture industry, a feat not particularly difficult at this time due to the peculiarities of the industry, its strong racial factors and foreign ties.

"Due to the war situation the picture may appear confusing; but it will become somewhat clearer if it is borne in mind that the leaders of the Communist International have stated many times with authority, that 'support of bourgeois democracy is not a principle; on the contrary, it is only a tactic to be applied under certain conditions.' This principle is clearly set forth in the report of EARL BROWDER quoted above.

"The tremendous influence of Hollywood and the motion picture on the ways and customs of the people of the United States and the world must not be underestimated. The Communist International has understood this for many years and has been laying plans accordingly. It is fully aware of this influence and for that reason has concentrated on both the trade unions and the cultural departments.

"On the surface the increasing influence of the Communist Party and its fellow travellers is not so apparent, amalgamated as it is with the war effort. But behind the scenes this influence is growing and has now become so strong that it is able to influence the type of picture being made, or prevent anything being put into a picture which is considered contrary to the Communist Party line.

"Despite all protestations by the Communists and their fellow travellers that they now stand for complete support of democratic processes, that they are for all-out support of the war, and despite the fact that they now appear in the garb of ardent American patriots, they are working furiously behind the scenee to build the party and its influence in order that they may render service to the Soviet Union and its foreign policy, even though that policy should lead to direct antagonism to the interests of the government of the United States.

"This principle is clearly understood by all members of the Communist Party and trusted fellow travellers. It was clearly stated by EARL BROWDER in his speech in Madison Garden, New York City, on October 3rd, 1935, quoted above.

"A statement made by a Communist of some importance in the Los Angeles section, EUGENE LINDER, within the last thirty days, to the effect that they expected, within the next five years, to bring about the proletarian revolution, is indicative of the party position.

Source 3-T has stated that LINDER has been a Communist Party member since 1934, at which time he attended meetings at Unit J-6, Hollywood Sub-section. He further stated that in 1937 LINDER made a trip to Russia in company with one GIBBS, and attorney LEO GALLAGHER joined them or at least joined LINDER in Europe and toured several countries of Europe with LINDER. He stated that on LINDER'S return to the United States he delivered a series of lectures on the advantages of the Soviet union and the justice of Communism. (U) (W)

Source further stated that LINDER was the chairman of the Saturday Discussion Club, a Communist propaganda forum which holds meetings in Clifton's Cafeteria on Olive Street in Los Angeles, at the same time that he, LINDER, was employed on the Adult Educational Project of the Works Projects Administration. (U) (W)

Source 3-T stated that LINDER taught sociology and economics at the Belmont, Fairfax, and Hollywood high schools in Los Angeles, as well as at several so-called discussion clubs and open forums and various women's clubs.

COMMUNIST INFILTRATION AND COMMUNIST CONTROL IN THE SO-CALLED CULTURAL, POLITICAL, PROPAGANDA AND FRONT ORGANIZATIONS IN THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY IN HOLLYWOOD

The first section of this report dealt with the infiltration of Communists and Communist influence and control into the labor unions and guilds in the motion picture industry in Hollywood, California.

This, the second section of this report, deals with the control and attempted control by the Communist Party of the U.S.A. under general directives from the Communist Party of the Soviet Union over certain groups of directors, writers, actors, actresses and highly paid technicians, the so-called intellectuals employed in the motion picture industry in Hollywood. The purpose of this control is to utilize the motion picture as a powerful instrument of propaganda and cause the production of pictures which will serve the interests of the foreign policy of the Soviet Union throughout the world.

COMMUNIST CULTURAL ACTIVITIES IN HOLLYWOOD

Source 3-O, who was a member of the Communist Party in Hollywood for a number of years and who has been very active in Hollywood activities for many years, has stated that the Communist cultural entry into Hollywood was not a spontaneous movement by certain persons in the industry who were in sympathy with "social causes" and who, living in an artificial world of make-believe wished a vicarious thrill by playing at being the dreaded revolutionary in real life, on the contrary this program of Communist infiltration of the Hollywood motion picture industry with the object of taking over and influencing it in the interests of the Communist world revolution, was planned in 1934 and those plans were laid far afield from the local scene. This is not to say that some of those who later became involved in Communist activities among the cultural groups in the industry were not romantic dabblers in what has become since about 1936 a sort of fad with the intelligentsia of the film world, but that group of Communist Party wheel horses which has been working constantly in the interests of the Communist Party and Communism, is in dead earnest, and when properly understood in the light of its place and functions as part of a gigantic world conspiracy, there can be no denial that it has been extremely successful.

In an attempt to measure the progress of Communist activities and influence in the motion picture industry, it must be done by keeping in mind the role to be played, which is to influence the minds and emotions of the great masses of people of the United States and the world. It must also be remembered that here in the United States alone the motion picture reaches approximately 85,000,000 people each week, that being the average weekly attendance. While there has been an immense program of infiltration into the studio labor unions, as has been shown, it is among the intellectuals, particularly the writers, directors, actors and artists, the so-called cultural field, where most progress has been made and where Communist sympathy and influence is the strongest and most far-reaching; and this is only natural, for, despite all claims and pretensions that Communism as propagated by the world Communist Internationale (Comintern) is a "workers' movement" and meant to free the "toiling masses" from the wage slavery of capitalism and its operations, in reality this is not true, and never was. The Communists, and all radical movements, in fact, are movements led by frustrated and satiated intellectuals who, under the guise of liberating the working classes, seek to set themselves up as a privileged class in a new society of which they will be the directing heads.

The makers of the Russian Revolution in 1917, the model for Communists everywhere, were all intellectuals—they never worked a day in their lives at manual labor. This fact is proven further when we see the Communist leaders of labor unions here in the United States as intellectuals, or striving to be such. The reason for this is that what is called Marxism, Leninism, and Stalinism—a combination of terms used by Communists everywhere—is based on theory, and that theory calls for intensive intellectual concentration. It is only from this basis of reasoning that the Communist activities of the highly paid writers, directors, actors and artists, whose salaries in many cases amount to thousands of dollars a week, can be explained. This attitude is borne out by the statement of LAURA DURT to the State District Attorney in Los Angeles in 1940 when she stated:

> "We attended a housewarming in the home of HELEN GAHAGEN and MELVYN DOUGLAS at which there were a number of screen people present. We complimented Miss GAHAGEN on their home and she said, 'I don't know why we put so much money in it because when revolution comes we will lose it all, and the revolution is bound to come because conditions in this country are so terrible it is inevitable.'"

The initial move of the Communist Internationale to get control over international artists, writers and those in the creative fields of the arts began about the year 1930. The necessity for this action had long been recognized in the Soviet Union as a policy of the state to control the minds of the people. But it was not until 1930 that the international structure, the Communist Internationale (Comintern) was delegated to make this program everywhere throughout the world. It was in this year that the international union of revolutionary writers, which has had such tremendous influence on writers in the United States, held a congress in Kharkov, Russia. The effects of this congress, attended by delegates from the United States, are apparent right now in Hollywood. Many of the writers now employed in the Hollywood motion picture industry were schooled in the organization which sprang from this congress, and those writers who were so schooled are still carrying on for the Communist Party as vigorously as ever.]

[About this same time, that is in 1930, another organization was set up in the Soviet Union. It was called the International Union of Revolutionary Theatre. The headquarters were in Moscow. It likewise was the parent of a multitude of sub-organizations in the United States called "Workers' Theaters", "Theater Groups", "Little Theater", and others. All of these projects were under the firm control of the Communist Party.]

The president of this international union of revolutionary theatre was HEINRICH DILLENT, theater director in Russia. Others of influence were:

PEARL ATTACHEVA
ANATOLI GELEBOR
SERGEI EISENSTEIN
ERWIN PISCATOR
SERGI TRETYAKOV
CHAN ITIAN
JAY LEYDA

All of the above are Russians and are internationally known in theatrical circles as being authorities on theatre and theatre business. The plans of this group were to set up in the United States schools of the theater patterned after those of MEYERHOLD and STANISLAVSKY, Russian authorities on the use of the theater as a weapon for revolutionary propaganda. Such were the plans laid down in Moscow, Russia to be sponsored by the Communist Party in the United States.

Shortly after this International Union of Revolutionary Theatres was set up in Russia, there sprang up in the United States in all the major cities a multitude of so-called "theater groups". There were such organizations as:

"Theater of Action"
"ARTEF"
"Theater Collective"
"Chicago Group Theater"
"New Theater Players of Hollywood"
"Negro People Theaters of the South"
"Rebel Players"

All of the above groups were under Communist Party control and followed the pattern of the "Revolutionary Theater" as above stated. There were also set up at the same time the following:

"Film and Photo League"
"Workers Dance League"

These two latter organizations at their inception were separated from the theater groups but they also were Communist inspired and controlled.

In April, 1932 the Communist leaders in New York called a national theater conference. It was composed of delegates from all of the aforementioned groups. At this conference there was created what was called the LEAGUE OF WORKERS THEATER. This league brought together all groups into one centrally controlled organization and was known as the American section of the International Union of Revolutionary Theatre. It published a magazine called "The Workers' Theater".

In 1934 the name of the League of Workers' Theater was changed to the NEW THEATER LEAGUE and the magazine was re-named "New Theater". The structure and Communist control remained. It was the same set up under a new name.

Previous to this change in names there had been very little attention paid to the Hollywood motion picture industry but now that sound was introduced and the talking motion picture was firmly established which was changing the technique of the motion picture to one more adaptable for propaganda purposes, the Communist Party began an intensive campaign to penetrate the industry.

The consolidation of all of these theater groups into one organization with its headquarters in New York made it possible to direct all activities more efficiently. This supervision of all of these group theater activities which were in effect schools for writer, actors, directors, artists, etc., many of whom later were employed in Hollywood was successful and as a result the initial infiltration in Hollywood was mainly from this source.

JAMES CAGNEY, actor; a member of the American Peace Mobilization, and a fellow traveller who follows the Communist Party line.

LIONEL STANDER, actor; member of the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, a member of the League for Peace and Democracy, and a member of the Communist Party.

ART SMITH, a follower of the Communist Party line; now in Mexico City.

JEAN MUIR, actress; member of the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, and follower of the Communist Party line.

ROUBEN MAMOULIAN, director; member of the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League and other fronts and a fellow traveller.

The above described activity of the Communist Party operating through the New Theater League and its offshoots is by no means the extent of its activity in the Hollywood cultural section. It will be seen in reports on separate organizations heretofore made and hereinafter given, that the persons mentioned in connection with the New Theater League appear in each and every one of the numerous front organizations and Communist controlled labor unions and groups sponsored by the cultural groups and labor unions. Instead of being a group here and a group there operating separately, it is an interlocking system with tentacles in every organization, political, cultural, front, or labor unions, all activities of which stem from the spearhead, the Communist Party.

The method of operation, the tactics for infiltration, and the general procedure as described above are basically the same in all of the work of the Communist Party, whether it be in Hollywood, labor unions, front organizations, local, state or national government, or social groups. The general line is laid down in Moscow, the national groups carry it out through the network where it eventually takes effect in every section of the world. The changes in the party line are reflected in the United States nationally and locally with an incredible efficiency.

As an example of this which we have seen the elimination of the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, the program of which was one of opposition to Naziism, and support of the democratic processes, and the almost immediate substitution of the Hollywood League for Democratic Action, the program of which was just the reverse. This change from one organization to another was determined by the foreign policy of the Soviet Union which changed with the consummation of the STALIN-HITLER pact, August 23, 1939. It will also be noted from separate reports hereinafter that the same officials of the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League were the same as they were for the Hollywood League for Democratic Action.

The Hollywood motion picture industry is and has been, as it will be seen, one of the outstanding barometers of change in the Communist Party line.

Source 3-V, who is familiar with the Communist build-up in Hollywood has stated that with the setting up of the NEW THEATRE LEAGUE in 1934, and the publication of its official magazine, the "New Theatre", and the subsequent creation of the Hollywood Chapter of the LEAGUE OF AMERICAN WRITERS in the spring of 1935, the real penetration of the Hollywood motion picture industry by the communist party began.

The publication of a series of sensational articles dealing with certain prominent personages in and out of the picture industry in this magazine, "New Theatre", drew the attention of all Hollywood intellectuals to Communist methods and ideology. The most sensational of these articles was one , "The Sacred Cow of Hollywood". This was a vicious, unwarranted and almost obscene attack on LOUELLA PARSONS, a Hollywood correspondent and columnist. In the article she was painted as a servile hireling of Mr. WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST who was then, and still is, the bogey man of the American Communists. This article was published in the August, 1935, number of the "New Theater". So sensational was the article that in some cases copies of the magazine sold for as much as five dollars. The author of the article which was signed "JOEL FAITH" was reported to be one CHARLES (CHUCK) DAGGETT, then a reporter on a theatrical trade paper, "Variety".

Some few months previously the first American Writers Congress was held in New York City, April 1935. Out of this congress came the Hollywood Chapter of the League of American Writers. At this first congress EARL BROWDER, MICHAEL GOLD and other top Communist functionaries were in attendance and practically guided the proceedings. The foregoing events were the initial stimuli that brought about the rush of so many of the Hollywood intelligentsia to join the ranks of the revolution, as interpreted by the Communist Party at that time. [As part of the Communist Party program, and under the auspices of the New Theatre League, there was set up in Hollywood an organization called "CONTEMPORARY THEATRE, INCORPORATED".] The headquarters were located at 2905 Sunset Boulevard. (u)

[The aims and purposes of CONTEMPORARY THEATRE, INCORPORATED] were officially stated as follows in a prospectus dated March 8, 1936:

> "The Contemporary Theatre is building the New Theatre in Los Angeles—a theatre with a progressive, artistic and social outlook. It is a non-profit cooperative enterprise of playwrights, actors, technicians and audience. We are [devoted to the production of the best available plays dealing with the struggles and conflicts of our times.]

"We believe that vital drama and vital theatre must meet squarely the ideas and forces that determine human existence.

"The vigorous theatre of the past interpreted man's struggle against fate, the disasters of nature; his efforts to break through restricting moral codes. The stage interpreted these forces and involved its audience in the struggle to conquer them.

"Today the theatre faces the tumultuous drama of a whole society struggling against the chaos of the world. Today a vigorous theatre must dramatize the deep-going conflicts of our times, the economic, emotional and cultural problems that confront the majority of the people.

"The Contemporary Theatre is dedicated to such a purpose. Its plays will speak directly to this majority whose lives are usually ignored or caricatured on the stage.

"We believe that the powerful sweep of the NEW THEATRE movement which is profoundly rooted in the lives and struggles of all those who work for wages, carries along with it the seed of history in the making which is indeed of momentous interest to every theatre worker and every theatre-goer. Audiences demand rich, mature and indigenous plays of American life, and the Contemporary Theatre in its work intends to give these to them."

While the foregoing program announced publicly, taken at its face value is rather innocuous and mild, the same prospectus from which it was taken recommended such plays as:

"PEACE ON EARTH", by GEORGE SKLAR and ALBERT MALTZ, which had a run of five weeks in Los Angeles. This play is described as a powerful "anti-war drama". It was definitely revolutionary in content and followed the Communist Party line at that time.

"SAILORS OF CATTARO", by FREDERICK WOLF. This play also was revolutionary and in one scene portrayed an actual uprising.

"Waiting for Lefty", "Awake and Sing", "Paradise Lost", and "Until the Day We Die", all by CLIFFORD ODETS. All four of these plays are in the same category, that of following the Communist Party line. They speak for themselves.

GEORGE SKLAR, ALBERT MALTZ and CLIFFORD ODETS are all members of and active in the League of American Writers and have followed the Communist Party line for many years. SKLAR and MALTZ signed the call for the Fourth Writers Congress, which was an endorsement of the American Peace Mobilization. FREDERICK WOLF is a foreign revolutionary writer, an Austrian, and known internationally as a supporter of Communist causes.

The Hollywood sponsors of CONTEMPORARY THEATRE, INCORPORATED were:

DOROTHY PARKER - Writer and Member of the League of American Writers, long a fellow traveller

HERMAN SHUMLIN - Now a Hollywood Director. Formerly a Broadway producer. He has long been a close follower of the Communist Party and its political line; was endorser of the American Peace Mobilization.

HERBERT BIBERMAN-A Hollywood screen director, long identified with the Communist movement; was West Coast Director of the American Peace Mobilization, and was picketing the White House almost at the time HITLER attacked Russia. He is a Communist.

JOHN FORD - Hollywood director. Identified as member of the Communist Party in Burt testimony, D.A. 1940. Follows the Communist Party line and sponsors front organizations.

DUDLEY NICHOLS- Member of the League of American Writers, signer of the Fourth Call of the Writers Congress, which was an endorsement of the American Peace Mobilization. He has been long a fellow traveller.

KING VIDOR - Hollywood director and fellow traveller.

SAM SPEWACK - Hollywood writer and fellow traveller.

GILMOR BROWN - Director of Pasadena Little Theatre.

CONFIDENTIAL

EMANUEL EISENBERG - Chairman of Contemporary Theatre, Incorporated. He is listed as a short story writer and reviewer for various magazines, one of which was "New Theater". EISENBERG is not reported to have been connected with the Hollywood Motion Picture Industry at that time, but came into the locality from New York.

Other Hollywood motion picture people active in the affairs of the organization were:

DONALD OGDEN STEWART- Writer; member of the League of American Writers and a Communist.

LIONEL STANDER - Actor and a Communist.

FREDERIC MARCH - Actor and a Communist.

FLORENCE ELDRIDGE - Actress and a Communist Party line follower.

JOHN CROMWELL - Director and a Communist Party line follower.

JAMES CAGNEY - Actor and a Communist Party line follower.

LEWIS MILESTONE - Director and a Communist.

JOHN HOWARD LAWSON- Writer and a member of the League of American Writers; also a Communist.

CLIFFORD ODETS - Writer; member of League of American Writers and a Communist.

ARTHUR KOBER - Writer; member of League of American Writers, and a Communist Party line follower.

IRWIN SHAW - Writer; member of League of American Writers and a Communist Party line follower.

FRANK TUTTLE - Director and a Communist.

CONFIDENTIAL

JEAN MUIR - Actress and a Communist Party line follower

HERBERT KLINE - Director and a Communist Party line follower.

All of the above are reported to have attended a meeting of the Contemporary Theatre, held at the Hollywood Women's Club, Hollywood, California, March 29, 1936, the minutes of which meeting is reported in full in "New Theatre" magazine for May, 1936, page 5. This report contains speeches made by various individuals and reveals fully the program and purposes of Contemporary Theatre, Incorporated.

Contemporary Theatre, Incorporated, had comparatively a short life. This was not because of lack of serious intent or concentration on the idea, but rather because it was discovered that a simpler and easier way to get Communist propaganda plays before the public was to utilize the W.P.A. Federal Theatre Project for the purpose. The Communist Party had already, at this time, succeeded in penetrating the Federal Theatre Project to a serious extent and consequently here was an opportunity to present party line plays under the auspices and at the expense of the United States Government.

Besides, HALLIE FLANAGAN, who had been much interested in the NEW THEATRE LEAGUE previously, and who had written articles for its magazine, "New Theatre", was head of the project. Miss FLANAGAN had made several trips to Russia; once in 1926 when, on her return to the United States, she wrote in glowing terms of the value of the Russian Theatre Technique, in the book "Shifting Scenes" which was supposed to be a survey of the art of the theater in all European countries, but in which the greater part of the book dealt with the Russian theatre. She only spoke in glowing terms of the theatre but went into ecstasies over the Russian revolution and the way of life in that country at that time. Again in 1931 she made a trip to Russia to attend the Russian Theatre Festival.

As a consequence of the Communist Party tactic of concentrating on the Federal Theatre Project, Contemporary Theatre, Incorporated of Hollywood gradually passed out from lack of nourishment—the usual method of liquidating a front organization when it is no longer needed.

But the utilization of the Federal Theatre Project by the Communists for propaganda plays eventually brought about the death of the Project. An investigation by the Dies Committee brought to light Communist control of the project in certain localities, particularly New York.

CONFIDENTIAL

At a series of hearings before this committee in the fall of 1938, and at a later hearing before a sub-committee of the House Committee on Appropriations (Chairman CLIFTON A. WOODRUM) in the spring of 1939, before which both committees Miss FLANAGAN appeared and denied any Communist influence on the Project, evidence of a conclusive nature was brought out by witnesses that the contrary was true.

Miss FLANAGAN in 1940 wrote another book, "Arena", which dealt with the history and finally the liquidation of the Project by an Act of Congress on June 30, 1939.

As a result of these hearings, and for the reason that Communist influence over the Project was apparent, the W.P.A. Federal Theatre Project was abolished by Act of Congress on June 30, 1939. [Following this elimination of the Federal Theatre Project from the Work Projects Administration, the same Hollywood group which was instrumental in creating Contemporary Theatre, Incorporated, now reverted in the fall of 1939 to the previous program of setting up their own "theatre groups". This time it was called the HOLLYWOOD THEATRE ALLIANCE.]

[Source 3-W has stated] that as part of the general campaign of the Communist Party to penetrate and influence the Hollywood scene, and to use Hollywood and its prestige as a base of operations, there was set up in April, 1939, a Communist "front" organization [called the HOLLYWOOD THEATRE ALLIANCE.

[This organization followed the usual formula of a Communist front.] In its appeal to the public for support it pursued the usual policy of couching its aims and purposes in cloudy and misleading statements, of which the following, taken from the official program, are examples:

"The world no longer eyes Hollywood as the home of movies and symphonies under the stars. On the one hand it sees the greatest concentration of literary and artistic talent, and on the other, progressive, spirited people bending their energy toward defeating bigotry and upholding the best in American tradition. Now these two groups join hands in an enterprise inevitably determined by their outlook and experience—a democratic theatre."

Again:

"A democratic theatre is a community function. To permit it to be usurped for private profit and self-exploitation is to acquiesce to a commerical dictatorship. And to believe the theatre a reflection of the times, yet knowingly to support cowardly, stupid drama is to pretend the times were all folly and no aspiration."

It was on such vague generalized appeal that the Hollywood Theatre Alliance was set up in April 1939. The pact between STALIN and HITLER had not yet been consummated and, therefore, this Communist "front" followed the line of the party at this time, which was support of the "popular front" and "collective security" for the defeat of Naziism and Fascism.

[Within a few months after the Hollywood Theatre Alliance was created the pact between STALIN and HITLER was announced, August 23, 1939. The effect on the organization was immediately apparent. From a position of support for democracy and the "popular front" the organization changed to one of isolation, opposition to lend-lease, opposition to the Selective Service Act, in fact complete support of the Communist Party line which changed suddenly with the alliance between STALIN and HITLER.]

As a consequence [the first show, which was in the form of a "Revue", that was produced by the Hollywood Theatre Alliance and which was titled "Meet the People", followed the Communist Party line completely. All through the show was sprinkled Communist propaganda. There were sneers for our preparations for national defense, cleverly satirized propaganda aimed at preventing aid to Great Britain, and in a general sense was potent propaganda upholding the position of the Communist Party and its attitude toward the war effort at that time.]

The show was a huge success. A road company was organized and toured the country. Results were pointed to by Communists as an example of propaganda by way of the theatre.

After this play had its run, another one was produced. It was called "Zero Hour". The title had reference to the imminence of war and all its evil effects and in content-slyly suggested to workers to resist, etc. This play was even more vicious than its predecessor.

At the time "Zero Hour" was running, June, 1941, the strike at the North American Aviation Plant in Inglewood, California was called. This Hollywood Theatre Alliance show and the entire cast, supported by the alliance itself, came out in open support of this strike, a strike of which President ROOSEVELT had this to say:

"Besides, the responsible leaders of labor in the United States all realized that this was not a bona fide labor dispute, but a form of alien sabotage, inspired and directed by Communist forces, interested not in the advancement of labor, but in the defeat and overthrow of the United States."

The show gave special performances for the strikers, raised money and did everything possible to support the Communist position regarding that affair.

This show "Zero Hour" was running when HITLER invaded Russia, on June 22, 1941. Immediately a change took place in the attitude of the Hollywood Theatre Alliance. "Zero Hour" soon came to a close. Later another show was produced called, "They Can't Get You Down".

Now we see the Hollywood Theatre Alliance changing its attitude. This latter show was in no way similar to those which preceded it. From a position of isolation, etc., it became very patriotic just as the Communist Party had done when Russia was attacked. It subscribed to our war efforts, in toto.

In its every act and in the presentations of its shows the Hollywood Theatre Alliance subscribed to and followed the Communist Party line explicitly.

The following list of names, from sponsors to writers and directors and all the way down is indicative of the Communist coloring of the entire project:

The following members of the League of American Writers, each one of whom has been identified as having been involved in Communist activities for years, were sponsors of the Hollywood Theatre Alliance:

JOHN HOWARD LAWSON
DONALD OGDEN STEWART
LILLIAN HELLMAN
DOROTHY PARKER
GILBERT GABRIEL (Member of League of American Writers & Writers in Exile)
ARTHUR KOBER
DASHIELL HAMMETT (Member of League of American Writers; now in Signal Corps of the United States)

Other sponsors were:

WILL ROGERS, JR. - recently elected to the Congress of the United States from California; a Communist Party line follower.

121

CONFIDENTIAL

ELLIS E. PATTERSON- Then Lieutenant Governor of the State of California; a Communist Party line follower.

J. EDWARD BROMBERG- Actor; member of the Communist Party.

GEORGE CUKOR - Director

DOROTHY ARZNER - Motion picture director.

HELEN GAHAGEN - Democratic National Committeemen.

IRA GERSHWIN - Musician

IRVING PICHEL - Director; fellow traveller

CARSIN KANIN - Director; fellow traveller.

BORIS AARONSON

BYRON SCOTT - former Congressman from California (deceased)

SIGMUND ROMBERG - Hollywood Executive.

Mrs. CHELENE IVERSON- Local political figure; Communist Party line follower

Mrs. EDWARD G. ROBINSON- wife of actor of that name.

All of the above sponsors have been identified with activity in other front organizations inspired by the Communist Party.

It was stated officially by the Hollywood Theatre Alliance in April, 1939 that the writers who would be responsible for forthcoming plays were:

JOHN HOWARD LAWSON- Communist Party member.

RALPH BLOCK - Communist Party line follower.

JULIUS EPSTEIN - League of American Writers and Communist Party line follower

PHILLIP EPSTEIN - League of American Writers, Communist Party line follower

FRANCIS FARAGOH - Fellow traveller; Hollywood Anti-Nazi League member, and member of the League for Democratic Action

EDWIN JUSTIN MAYER- Member of Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, Hollywood League for Democratic Action, League of American Writers, and American Peace Mobilization.

ROBERT ROSSEN - Member of League of American Writers, Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, League for Democratic Action, American Peace Mobilization, and Fourth Call.

ABEN KANDEL - Follower of Communist Party line.

MILT GROSS - Member of League of American Writers and Hollywood Anti-Nazi League.

EDWARD ELLISCU - Member of League of American Writers, Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, American Peace Mobilization, League of Democratic Action, and Fourth Call.

All of the above are members of the League of American Writers, teach in the Hollywood Writers School and have been identified as followers of the Communist Party line in other front organizations.

All three plays, "Meet the People", "Zero Hour", and "They Can't Get You Down", were written by:

HENRY MYERS
JAY GORNEY
EDWARD ELLISCU

All three of the above are members of the League of American Writers, teach in the Hollywood Writers School and are way out in front in Communist activities in the Hollywood section.

"Zero Hour" was directed by HERBERT BIBERMAN, a motion picture director, local chairman of the American Peace Mobilization and a leading Communist in Southern California.

Others who contributed to the "artistic" efforts of the Hollywood Theatre Alliance are:

DANNY DARE - who staged "Meet the People."
MORTIMER OFFNER
IRVING WHITE
BERNARD VORHAUS - Member of Hollywood Anti-Nazi League.
LUCIEN PRIVAL - Actor, member of League of American Writers, and Communist Party.

One scene in "Meet the People" was written by MIKE QUIN, columnist of the Daily, "Peoples World", the official Communist publication on the Pacific Coast.

[At the present time the Hollywood Theatre Alliance is inactive. Most of the writers and intellectuals responsible for the organization have either become active in the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, or other front groups who are now, since Russia was attacked, very patriotic.]

The Hollywood Theatre Alliance was one of the usual Communist organizations set up to take over Hollywood and at the same time influence people toward Communism and the Soviet Union.

The pattern followed in forming and conducting this group was and is the same as is used in all other Communist fronts.

[During the active period of the alliance, for the duration of the STALIN-HITLER pact, August, 1939 to June, 1941, it was extraordinarily successful.]

HOLLYWOOD ANTI-NAZI LEAGUE
(Communist front organization)

[Source 3-X has stated that this organization was one of the most outstanding in the series of Communist Front organizations set up by the Communist Party in Hollywood.]

During the period of the "Popular Front", when the foreign policy of the Soviet Union demanded that Communist Parties everywhere pretend to support democracy and work to bring about "collective security" as a bulwark against Naziism and fascism, the Hollywood Communists created the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League.

The purpose of this organization was ostensibly to "defend American democratic rights against Nazi influences". While outwardly this was the avowed purpose, secretly it was set up to build up the influence of the Communist cause and create sympathy and give aid to the policies of Soviet Russia. All propaganda put out, and meetings held, which were open to the public, were tied in with the interests of the Communist Party and Soviet Russia.

[It appealed to the large Jewish population in Southern California on the basis of fighting Hitlerism and drew great financial support from the producers of motion pictures on that program.]

It was one of the most successful Communist fronts ever created in the Hollywood area. Its membership at the peak of its influence was approximately four thousand. Its influence spread to many times that number.

The original founders of the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League are the following, and these names all betray the Communist tie-up:

DONALD OGDEN STEWART - Writer, Member of the League of American Writers, and Communist Party.

DOROTHY PARKER - Writer; Member of the League of American Writers and the Communist Party.

ALAN CAMPBELL - Writer; member of the League of American Writers and the Communist Party.

GLORIA STUART - Actress; follow traveller.

EDWIN JUSTUS MAYER - Writer; member of the League of American Writers.

HERBERT BIBERMAN - Director; member of the American Peace Mobilization.

FREDERIC MARCH - Actor; Communist Party member.

FLORENCE ELDRIDGE - Actress; wife of FREDERIC MARCH; member of Communist Party.

VIOLA BROTHERS SHORE - Writer; member of League of American Writers.

GALE SONDERGAARD - Actress; wife of HERBERT BIBERMAN

MOSS HART - Writer; member of League of American Writers.

MARIAN SPITZER - Writer; member of League of American Writers.

BESS MEREDITH - Writer; member of League of American Writers

Mrs. LYNN ROOT - Writer; wife of WELLS ROOT, fellow traveller.

ERIN O'BRIEN MOORE - Actor.

CHARLES BRACKETT - Writer; member of the League of American Writers.

Ten of the above persons are members of the League of American Writers. They are: STEWART, PARKER, CAMPBELL, MAYER, BIBERMAN, SHORE, SPITZER, MEREDITH and BRACKETT. (The League of American Writers is the foremost Communist front organization in the Hollywood "cultural" division and the feeder for all Communist activities in the top structure of the motion picture industry)

GLORIA STUART, FREDERIC MARCH, FLORENCE ELDRIDGE (MARCH'S wife), GALE SONDERGAARD (BIBERMAN'S wife) and ERIN O'BRIEN MOORE are screen actors and actresses who have been identified with Communist activities in other organizations in Hollywood.

The above group set up the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League in the summer of 1936.

When the League took solid form and reached its peak of activity, 1938-39, the officers were:

DONALD OGDEN STEWART - Chairman
MARIAN SPITZER - Vice-Chairman
ALAN CAMPBELL - Secretary
BERN LEARNARD - Treasurer

The sponsors of the organization were:

HERBERT BIBERMAN - Director; member of the American Peace Mobilization; member of the Communist Party.

Mrs. SIDNEY BUCHMAN - Wife of SIDNEY BUCHMAN, League of American Writers.

EDDIE CANTOR - Actor.

FLORENCE ELDRIDGE - Actress; wife of FREDERIC MARCH.

126

FRANCIS EDWARDS FARAGOH - Writer; member of the League of American Writers; a fellow traveller.

OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN, II- Sub-Producer.

RUPERT HUGHES - Writer; member of the League of American Writers.

CHARLES J. KATZ - Attorney; member of the Communist Party (d)(u)

Judge ROBERT W. KENNY- Attorney General of California; fellow traveller.

H. S. KRAFT - Writer; member of the League of American Writers; member of the Communist Party.

RICHARD LERT

ERNST LUBITSCH - Director.

FREDERIC MARCH - Actor; member of the Communist Party (d)(u)

Dr. RUDOLPH MARX

EDWIN JUSTUS MAYER - Writer; member of the League of American Writers; fellow traveller.

RAY MAYER

ELIZABETH MERRELL

LEWIS MILESTONE - Director; fellow traveller

PAUL MUNI - Actor; fellow traveller

DUDLEY NICHOLS - Writer; member of the League of American Writers; fellow traveller.

Judge ISAAC PACHT - Sponsor of front organizations.

Mrs. CHARLES PAGE - Wife of CHARLES PAGE, Communist Party member.

DOROTHY PARKER - Writer; member of the League of American Writers; fellow traveller.

IRVING PICHEL - Director; fellow traveller;

FRANK SCULLY - Writer; fellow traveller.

VIOLA BROTHERS SHORE - Writer; fellow traveller.

SYLVIA SIDNEY - Actress.

GLORIA STUART - Actress; fellow traveller.

FRANK TUTTLE - Director; member of the Communist Party. (4)

Of the foregoing list of sponsors there are several mentioned who could properly be classified as innocents, particularly EDDIE CANTOR and RUPERT HUGHES, and possibly ELIZABETH BERGELL and RICHARD BERT. All the rest have been identified more or less with other organizations under Communist domination.

The Hollywood Anti-Nazi League grew tremendously in numbers, support and influence until August, 1939, when the pact between STALIN and HITLER was made. During this period the League cooperated with every other Communist front group in the Hollywood section. According to its official publication, "Hollywood Now", it supported the following:

League of Women Shoppers
National Committee of Spanish Speaking People.
League for Public Medicine.
California Youth Legislature.
Radio Programs of "People's World", ED ROBBIN ("People's World" is the official Communist publication on the West Coast)
League of American Writers
Youth Commission of Motion Picture Democratic Committee.
Associated Film Audiences
American League for Peace and Democracy.
National Negro Congress
German-American League for Culture.
Motion Picture Artists Committee, and many others.

All the foregoing are Communist front organizations.

The official program of the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League from its inception up to the announcement of the STALIN-HITLER Pact was as follows:

128

"To fight Fascism at home and abroad.

"To give support to the struggle against International

Fascism wherever it strikes—in Germany, Italy, Spain, Austria, China, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, South America.

"To stand firmly behind the militant peace policy of President ROOSEVELT—the policy of collective security for all democratic nations, of "quarantining the aggressors".

"To expose the spies, the Bunds, the Nazi Military 'summer camps', the Brown Houses in our cities, the poisonous propaganda of obscene circulars, the anti-Semitic, anti-Catholic, anti-Labor, anti-Negro campaigns.

"To oppose the destructive anti-American activities of such racketeering organizations as the Silver Shirts, the White Guard, the KKK, the Black Legion, the Crusaders, Friends of New Germany and other Berlin-financed enemies of our country.

"To join with other progressive Americans in one united front against Fascist attacks on our democratic institutions."

The foregoing publicly announced official program of the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League was right in line with the Communist Party line of the Popular Front period.

With the announcement of the alliance between STALIN and HITLER on August 23, 1939, and the change in the Communist Party line accordingly, the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League changed its program likewise.

From a position of support to President ROOSEVELT in his sympathies for England and the democratic countries, the League began to yell that it was an "imperialist" war; that the United States should keep out; that lend-lease aid to England meant war for us; that the "Yanks are not Coming."

By September 22, 1939, just thirty days after the STALIN-HITLER pact, the League issued a statement in "Hollywood Now", the official organ of the League of American Writers, dated September 22, 1939, which is as follows:

58471

"A PROGRAM FOR PEACE

"With England and France fighting Germany, where does the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League fit in?

"The League will and must carry on its fight against Nazism more vigorously than ever before in the United States and abroad. Does the war now conducted by CHAMBERLAIN and DALADIER offer the possibility of the destruction of Nazism? . . . NO . . . The League affirms positively that the United States should in no way become involved in the war..."

And on October 13, 1939, "Hollywood Now", stated:

"The League faces the grave responsibility of doing its share to keep America out of war and to help to unify the American people in their demand for peace."

On November 17, 1939, "Hollywood Now", stated:

"The League will undertake an extensive educational program. . . and there will be no compromise with the enemies of the people . . . KEEP AMERICA NEUTRAL."

Within a period of a few months the League had completely reversed its position, as had the Communist Party in the United States. Gradually it dropped its fight against Naziism and at the time of the dissolution of the League it had forgotten its antagonism to the aggressors and was concentrating all its fire on "conditions" within the United States and confusing every issue possible where that issue was one of national defense and aid to the democracies.

Due to this reversal in program a large part of its following deserted, leaving the Communist core with its following of fellow travellers and sympathizers in full charge. But there was disruption within the ranks. This brought about a need for a new set of officers and a new Board of Directors.

In September, shortly after the announcement of the pact, a new slate of officers was installed. This list of names is of extreme interest, as it indicates those who were following the Communist Party line wherever it should lead.

DONALD OGDEN STEWART - Chairman; a writer.

FRANK TUTTLE - Vice-Chairman; a director.

DUDLEY NICHOLS – Secretary; writer; member of Communist Party

BERN BERNARD – Treasurer; fellow traveller.

Executive Board:

MILTON MERLIN – Writer; member of the League of American Writers

EDWARD CHODOROV – Writer; member of the League of American Writers.

Prof. NORMAN T. BYRNE – Professor; member of the Communist Party.

MARIAN SPITZER – Writer; member of the League of American Writers.

Mrs. J. EDWARD BROMBERG – Wife of J. E. BROMBERG, actor; member of the Communist Party.

Dr. MARVIN HARRIS

CHARLES J. KATZ – Attorney; member of the Communist Party

Mrs. BEATRICE BUCHMAN – Wife of SIDNEY BUCHMAN; member of the League of American Writers.

MAXWELL SHANE – Writer; fellow traveller.

DONALD ROSE

HERBERT BIBERMAN – Director; member of the American Peace Mobilization

FRANCIS EDWARDS FARAGOH – Writer; member of the League of American Writers; fellow traveller

Mrs. CHARLES PAGE – Wife of CHARLES PAGE; member of the Communist Party

H. S. KRAFT – Writer; member of the League of American Writers; fellow traveller.

JAY GORNEY – Writer; member of the League of American Writers and American Peace Mobilization; and a fellow traveller.

FRANK SCULLY – Writer; fellow traveller.

Mrs. JEROME SACHHEIM – Writer; member of the League of American Writers; fellow traveller.

However in spite of this formality of an election of new officers, the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League had outlived its usefulness to the Communist Party. Like many other Communist fronts of the Popular Front period, it had to be "liquidated". It dragged on a few months. On December 8th it was decided that a new name should be given to the League. It should become the Hollywood League for Democratic Action.

The League struggled feebly for a month or so after December 15th when a new group met to form a committee to protect civil liberties, and about February 1st, 1940 the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League quietly passed away and was no more.

This pattern of the birth, life and death of a Communist front, when thoroughly understood, will explain much of the confusion that apparently exists in the minds of those who try to follow the whys and wherefores of Communist tactics in the United States.

HOLLYWOOD LEAGUE FOR DEMOCRATIC ACTION
(Communist front organization)

Source 3-Y has stated (52(u)) that in anticipation of the demise of the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, a number of persons met at the home of Mrs. FINLEY PETER DUNNE, mother of PHILLIP DUNNE of the League of American Writers, about the first week in December, 1939. The purpose of this meeting was to set up an organization to succeed the Anti-Nazi League. Those present at the meeting were:

DALTON TRUMBO – Writer; member of the League of American Writers; member of the Communist Party. (41(u))

FRANK TUTTLE – Director; member of the Communist Party. (41(u))

DOROTHY PARKER – Writer; member of the League of American Writers; fellow traveller.

JOHN WEXLEY – Writer; member of the League of American Writers; fellow traveller

MELVYN DOUGLAS – Actor; fellow traveller

CONFIDENTIAL

GALE SONDERGAARD (wife of HERBERT BIBERMAN) - actress; member of the Communist Party

ALAN CAMPBELL - Writer; member of the League of American Writers; fellow traveller.

IRVING REIS - Writer; member of the League of American Writers; fellow traveller.

M. L. RIVER - Writer; member of the League of American Writers; fellow traveller.

MEYER LEVIN - Writer; member of the League of American Writers; fellow traveller.

HARRY JURNITZ - Writer; member of the League of American Writers; fellow traveller.

JOHN GARFIELD - Actor; fellow traveller.

JOHN CROMWELL - Director; fellow traveller.

LOUIS BROMFIELD - Actor; member of the Communist Party. (f)(w)

GARSIN KANIN - Director; fellow traveller.

CYRIL HUME

J. WALTER RUBEN - Producer; fellow traveller (deceased)

HENRY KOSTER - Writer; member of the League of American Writers; fellow traveller.

JAMES GLEASON - Actor; fellow traveller.

LUCILLE GLEASON - Actress; fellow traveller.

WELLS ROOT - Writer; fellow traveller.

Of the above ten persons, TRUMBO, PARKER, WEXLEY, SACHHEIM, CAMPBELL, REIS, RIVER, LEVIN, JURNITZ and BROMFIELD are members of and active in the League of American Writers, the Communist "feeder" organization of cultural Hollywood.

133

TUTTLE, CROMWELL, KANIN, RUBEN (deceased) are motion picture directors.

DOUGLAS, SONDERGAARD, GARFIELD, GLEASON are screen actors and actresses.

As a result of the deliberations of this august body a new organization, the HOLLYWOOD COMMITTEE TO PROTECT CIVIL LIBERTIES, was born. However, the formation of the Hollywood Committee to Protect Civil Liberties by the group above mentioned was somewhat superflous because at about the same time the executive board of the expiring Hollywood Anti-Nazi League met and decided to give it a new title. This was done and on December 8, 1939, the official publication of the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League announced that thereafter the League would be known as the HOLLYWOOD LEAGUE FOR DEMOCRATIC ACTION.

And thus a new Communist front was born merely by the change of a name. The same officers and executive board served for the new organization, and it went to work to do everything it could to prevent aid to democracy and advocated peace on HITLER'S terms.

The officers were:

DONALD OGDEN STEWART - Chairman—writer and Communist Party member.

FRANK TUTTLE - Vice-Chairman—Director; Communist Party member

DUDLEY NICHOLS - Secretary—Writer; member of the League of American Writers; and a fellow traveller.

BERN BERNARD - Treasurer—fellow traveller.

Executive Board:

HERBERT BIBERMAN - Director; member of the American Peace Mobilization and a Communist Party member.

EDWARD CHODOROV - Writer; member of the League of American Writers; fellow traveller.

Prof. NORMAN T. BYRNE- Professor; fellow traveller.

Mrs. J. EDWARD BROMBERG-Wife of J. EDWARD BROMBERG, member of the Communist Party.

FRANCIS EDWARDS FARAGOH-Writer; member of the League of American Writers; a fellow traveller.

H. F. KRAFT - Writer; member of the League of American Writers; a fellow traveller.

Mrs. JEROME SACKHEIM - Writer; member of the League of American Writers; fellow traveller.

MILTON MERLIN - Writer; member of the League of American Writers; fellow traveller.

MARIAN SPITZER - Writer; member of the League of American Writers; and a fellow traveller.

Mrs. CHARLES PAGE - Wife of CHARLES PAGE, Communist Party member

JAY GORNEY - Writer; member of the League of American Writers and American Peace Mobilization.

FRANK SCULLY - Writer; and a fellow traveller.

Mrs. BEATRICE BUCHMAN - Wife of SIDNEY BUCHMAN, Producer.

IRA RATNER -

MAXWELL SHANE - Writer; member of the League of American Writers; a fellow traveller.

CHARLES J. KATZ - Attorney; member of the Communist Party.

Others active in the organization were:

MICHAEL ELKINS - Communist Party line follower; investigator for the Anti-Nazi League.

MARY McCALL, JR. - Fellow traveller; member of the League of American Writers; and president of the Screen Writers Guild of Hollywood.

HERBERT K. SORRELL - Business representative of Studio Painters Local 644; member of the Communist Party.

GORDON KAHN - Writer; member of the League of American Writers; and a fellow traveller.

JO SWERLING - Writer; member of the League of American Writers; and a fellow traveller.

GENE SACKHEIM	- Writer; member of the League of American Writers; a fellow traveller
MILT GROSS	- Writer; member of the League of American Writers.
IRVING REIS	- Writer; member of the League of American Writers; and a fellow traveller.
MICHAEL BLANKFORT	- Writer; member of the League of American Writers; and a member of the Communist Party.
J. WALTER RUBEN	- Motion picture director; producer; fellow traveller (now deceased)
Mrs. KATE CUMMINGS	- Wife of Producer.
Mrs. H. S. KRAFT	- Wife of H. S. KRAFT; member of the League of American Writers; a fellow traveller.
Prof. FRANK DAVIS	- Professor at the University of California at Los Angeles; a fellow traveller.
DOROTHY PARKER	- Screen writer and member of the League of American Writers; a fellow traveller
DAVID KERWIN	- Screen and stage actor; a fellow traveller

There are many others in addition to the above list, all of whom have been identified with Communist and Communist front activities in Hollywood.

The program of the Hollywood League for Democratic Action was just the reverse of that of the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, although the same people were in control in both organizations. But the Communist Party line had changed and they, being good Communists, fellow travellers and sympathizers changed also.

Meetings were held, radio programs given and literature spread which opposed every feature of national defense, aid to England, the lend-lease act, the Selective Service Act and in general the foreign policy of the President of the United States.

CONFIDENTIAL

It was the Communist formula in every detail. But the active life of the Hollywood League for Democratic Action was of comparatively short duration. By the fall of 1940 it had become practically lifeless.

This was not because the comrades had changed their viewpoint, or that they were becoming discouraged--it was because another organization had come into existence on a national scale. This latter organization was broader and more all-inclusive and gradually the Hollywood League for Democratic Action was absorbed.

This organization was called the AMERICAN PEACE MOBILIZATION.

HOLLYWOOD PEACE FORUM

(S)(U)

[Source 3-Z has stated] that as the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League was gradually being put to death, the Communists operating within that group were busily setting up other organizations to take its place which would carry out the changed line of the party.

In January of 1940 there came into being the HOLLYWOOD PEACE FORUM. As its name indicates this group was pledged to preserve peace. It yelled loudly and often that we should stay out of the war. It opposed aid to England, national defense, conscription and right down the line in carrying out the program of the Communist Party. It was strictly for peace--- on HITLER'S terms. It conducted forums, radio broadcasts, issued pamphlets and leaflets and unceasingly put out propaganda for the Communist position.

Its chief spokesman was Professor NORMAN T. BYRNE of Los Angeles City College, long identified with every form of Communist activity in Southern California. He was chairman of these forums held in every available hall and meeting place in the locality--at the Hollywood Women's Club, First Unitarian Church in Los Angeles, Embassy Auditorium, Los Angeles, Knickerbocker Hotel in Hollywood, Wilshire Ebell Club, and many others.

The sense of all meetings, forums, radio broadcasts, etc., of the Hollywood Peace Forum was defense of the Soviet Union for its pact with HITLER, attacks on Finland for its resistance to Russia's aggression, condemnation of the war as imperialism in action and advocating the immediate appeasement of Nazi Germany.

The officers of the Hollywood Peace Forum, all of whom just a few months before were members of the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League and who were then supporting President ROOSEVELT and democracy, were:

CONFIDENTIAL

HERBERT BIBERMAN - Chairman
JOHN WEXLEY - Vice-Chairman
GUY ENDORE - Secretary-Treasurer
GENE SACKHEIM - Executive Secretary

All the above have been leading Communists in the Hollywood section.

BIBERMAN is a motion picture director and writer.

WEXLEY, ENDORE and SACKHEIM are members of the League of American Writers.

Others active in the Forum were SAM ORNITZ, member of the League of American Writers and a Communist, FRANK SCULLY, a fellow traveller and Hollywood Writer, Reverend FRANK M. TOOTHAKER of the First Methodist Church, Compton, California, Reverend PETER M. SAMSON, Minister First Unitarian Church, Los Angeles, Professor FRANK DAVIS of the University of Southern California at Los Angeles, SADIE ORNITZ, wife of SAM ORNITZ, EDWARD BIBERMAN, brother of HERBERT BIBERMAN, HUGH WILKINS, and many others previously with the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League.

The Hollywood Peace Forum remained in existence about six months. Another organization was coming into existence which took its place. This front was called the HOLLYWOOD LEAGUE FOR DEMOCRATIC ACTION.

AMERICAN PEACE MOBILIZATION
(Communist Front Organization)

[Source 4-A has shown] that the American Peace Mobilization was the successor to the American League for Peace and Democracy in the same manner as the Hollywood League for Democratic Action took the place of the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League--and for the same basic reason, the change in the Communist Party line.

After the pact between STALIN and HITLER in August, 1939 it was necessary for the Communist Internationale to revamp its entire structure in the United States. From a position of support for democratic processes in the interest of bringing about a program of "collective security" (which it never really meant, by the way, and which was only used as a threat by STALIN to force HITLER into signing the subsequent pact) the Communist apparatus in the United States must now reverse itself and render all aid possible to HITLER, he now being on the best of terms with STALIN---they were virtual allies.

All Communist front organizations were now to work for peace. They were to oppose entry of the United States into the war on the side of England and France, and were to oppose aid to those countries, oppose the Lend-Lease Act, national defense, the Selective Service Act, and in general obstruct any internal policy of the United States that would, however remotely, be of benefit to the democratic nations fighting HITLER.

The American Peace Mobilization was destined to become the most potent arm of the Communist Internationale——and that means STALIN—working in the interest of the STALIN-HITLER pact.

The organization as such officially came into being at a national gathering held in Chicago, Illinois August 30 to September 2, 1940. This meeting was called by what was known as the "Emergency Peace Mobilization". At this time the name was changed to the AMERICAN PEACE MOBILIZATION and it continued to function under that title until the break between STALIN and HITLER in June, 1941 when Russia was invaded.

Previous to the official setting up of the American Peace Mobilization in September, 1940, and beginning with the dissolution of the Hollywood anti-Nazi League in December of 1939, and the official "liquidation" of the American League for Peace and Democracy on February 1, 1940, groups were hastily formed everywhere to carry out the policy of the Communist Party.

In Hollywood there was the Hollywood Peace Forum, Hollywood League for Democratic Action, Hollywood Peace Council, Hollywood Peace Crusade, etc. All of these groups were largely "paper" organizations functioning as a stop-gap until all could be knit into one national organization, and that was the AMERICAN PEACE MOBILIZATION.

It will be noticed that the names of the officers and those most active in all these groups locally in Hollywood are essentially the same. For example, HERBERT BIBERMAN, DONALD OGDEN STEWART, FRANK TUTTLE, etc., appear in every front.

In addition to the so-called "peace" groups above which laid the foundation for the establishment later of the Los Angeles Division of the Mobilization, the following were affiliated with the organization in Hollywood:

League of American Writers, Hollywood Chapter.

Motion Picture Democratic Committee.

Hollywood Theatre Alliance.

League of Woman Shoppers.

Committee to Aid Agricultural Workers.

139

National Negro Congress.

California Youth Legislature.

Hollywood Post, Veterans Division, Labor's Non-partisan League

The national officers of the American Peace Mobilization elected in September, 1940, were:

Rev. JOHN B. THOMPSON, Chairman
THEODORE DREISER, Vice-Chairman
VITO MARCANTONIO, Vice-Chairman
JACK McMICHAEL, Vice-Chairman
REID ROBINSON, Vice-Chairman
KATHERINE TERRILL, Vice-Chairman
FREDERICK FIELD, Executive Secretary.
MARIAN BRIGGS, Administrative Secretary

Of the above, THEODORE DREISER, as a member of the League of American Writers and more or less identified with Hollywood is representative of its culture.

The officers of the local division of the Mobilization are as follows:

HERBERT BIBERMAN, Chairman, member of the American Peace Mobilization in Los Angeles, motion picture director, and Communist Party member.
TOM CULLEN, local correspondent of the "People's World", official Communist publication on the West Coast, Executive Secretary; Communist Party member.

Executive Board: -

JOHN SHAPP, of the League for Peace and Democracy; Communist Party member.
RICHARD OTTO, Motion Picture Democratic Committee; fellow traveller.
SAM HOUSTON ALLEN, politican; Communist Party member.
Rev. HERBERT L. HERBERTS.
Rev. CARL ALLEN; fellow traveller
EVELYN VINTON
DON R. HEALY, member of Labor's Non-Partisan League; Communist Party member ELIZABETH SASULY

140

WILLIAM DOHAN, fellow traveller.
ROSENDA RIVERA, Communist Party member.
HOWARD ROSE, member of the Young Communists League.

Hollywood figures most active as chairmen at meetings, speakers and directors of propaganda were:

Prof. NORMAN T. BYRNE, Communist Party member.
SAM ORNITZ, Communist Party member, a writer, and member of the League of American Writers.
JOHN HOWARD LAWSON, writer, Member of the Communist Party and League of American Writers.
DONALD OGDEN STEWART, delegate to Chicago convention; a writer, member of the League of American Writers and the Communist Party.
MAURICE MURPHY, League of American Writers and Motion Picture Democratic Committee member; a writer who is member of the League of American Writers and the Communist Party.
DALTON TRUMBO, Member of the League of American Writers and the Communist Party.
MICHAEL BLANKFORT, member of the League of American Writers and the Communist Party.
FRANK TUTTLE, motion picture director; Communist Party member.
CHARLES J. KATZ, Attorney for Communists and Communist Party member.
SADIE ORNITZ, member of the Communist Party.
JOHN HOWARD LAWSON, member of the League of American Writers and the Communist Party.
MARC BLITZSTEIN, Hollywood composer, member of League of American Writers, and a fellow traveller.
ALBERT MALTZ, President, League of American Writers, Hollywood Chapter; fellow traveller.
LUCILLE MARINER, member of League of Women Shoppers; a fellow traveller.
GUY ENDORE, member of League of American Writers and Communist Party.
Dr. HERBERT ALEXANDER, Professor of Sociology, Los Angeles City College; a fellow traveller.

In addition to the above, individual members of all Hollywood Communist front groups were supporting the American Peace Mobilization.

Mass meetings were held at the Shrine Auditorium, Embassy Auditorium, Philharmonic Auditorium, in Los Angeles, to carry the message of "Peace" to the people.

CONFIDENTIAL 141

At the same time as these meetings were being held the Mobilization was officially supporting every strike where that strike would hamper defense efforts. It officially, and directly, by sending its members to the picket lines, injected itself into the North American Aviation strike in Inglewood, California, Vultee Aircraft Company, Downey, California, the Columbia Recording Company strike in Hollywood, the Cannon Electrical Company strike in Los Angeles, and many others. It was working feverishly in all directions to carry out the line of the Communist Party at that time.

An example of the type of propaganda carried on by the American Peace Mobilization under the auspices of Communists in Hollywood is the meeting held at the Shrine Auditorium in Los Angeles, on February 24, 1941, the advance publicity on which stated as follows:

"DEFEAT H.R.1776 (Lend-Lease Bill) WITH THE SPIRIT OF 1776!

5. Join the A.P.M.

"The New Deal's Triple A. foreign policy, as embraced by the Lend-Lease Bill, is to plow under every fourth American boy." Sen. BURTON K. WHEELER."

The tenor of the foregoing is that of all activities of the American Peace Mobilization, the local spearhead of which in the Southern California section, was Hollywood Communist influences.

CONFIDENTIAL

142

The American Peace Mobilization nationally and the Hollywood Division locally continued to function along these lines up until June 22, 1941. Right up until that date HERBERT BIBERMAN and his following, and that means the entire Hollywood Communist faction, were screaming for peace and chanting the slogan "The Yanks are Not Coming."

In fact right up to the day Mr. BIBERMAN was picketing the White House for "Peace", and showing what Hollywood could do to help prevent aid to democracy.

Then came the blow! HITLER smashed across the borders of Russia.

Again the Communist Party of the United States was taken unawares.

The American Peace Mobilization was left way out on the proverbial limb.

Within a few weeks the name of the American Peace Mobilization was changed to the AMERICAN PEOPLES MOBILIZATION.

Meetings were immediately called by the American Peoples Mobilization. Professor NORMAN T. BYRNE, HERBERT BIBERMAN, DONALD OGDEN STEWART, JOHN HOWARD LAWSON, SAM ORNITZ, GUY ENDORE and followers began screaming for war. "Smash HITLER", "All Aid to the SOVIET UNION and England," "This Is a Peoples' War", etc.

The Communist Party line had changed again!

The American Peoples Mobilization continued on for some few months, but like all Communist front organizations which can no longer serve the party, it was allowed to peacefully pass away.

(Communist front organization)

Source 4-B has stated that during the period from the Seventh Congress of the Communist Internationale held in Moscow, Russia, in July and August of 1935 when GEORGE DIMITROV, head of the Communist Internationale, made the famous "Trojan Horse" speech and August 23, 1939 when the pact between STALIN and HITLER was consummated, and which is known as the "popular front" period, the Communist Party created hundreds of "front" organizations in all countries.

CONFIDENTIAL

The purpose of these organizations was to draw together on as broad a base as possible all forces to influence them to support the foreign policy of the Soviet Union which, at time, was a pretended desire for an alliance with the democratic countires to oppose Naziism and Fascism. This was called the "collective security" proposal.

Communists were, during this period, instructed to drop all revolutionary activity and pose as good democrats, or liberals, and take part in all established governmental affairs, local, state and national, wherever they should be.

In the United States they were instructed to register for voting purposes as members of the Democratic Party and carry on their activities there. They were to assume the "liberal" position and work to get themselves, fellow travellers and sympathizers, also pretending to be good democrats, into key positions in political circles. They could then use their positions and influence to create sympathy and gain support for the policies of Soviet Russia.

In line with this policy and, as usual, obeying orders implicitly, the Communists in the Hollywood motion picture industry and its periphery began setting up various front organizations.

One of the most important of these groups was the MOTION PICTURE DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE. This organization was created in the early fall of 1938. At this time California had already shown tendencies to turn to the left and the time was ideal for the Communist Party to step in and steer the political forces in the direction they desired. The state was having a gubernatorial election and it was into this election the party threw all its forces.

The success of the Motion Picture Democratic Committee was phenomenal. It drew to it on a platform of democratic reform and mildly liberal slogans a large following in the Hollywood section. It acquired among its membership many famous personages in the picture industry, the majority of whom, however, were not aware that the organization was completely under control of the Communist Party.

Thousands of people were influenced by this committee which had access to publicity channels ordinarily denied to legitimate political groups of this character. The big names on its lists were attractive to the voters and it was one of the main factors in the local and state elections of the year 1938. Almost all candidates it supported were elected and the governor-elect stated later that it was Hollywood influence and this organization which elected him to office.

But at the same time the organization was seemingly taking part in a truly democratic elective process, the Communists within its ranks were spreading their propaganda in all directions. They succeeded in tying the organization in with the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, Conference of Motion Picture Arts and Crafts, Labor's Non-Partisan League, Workers Alliance, United Spanish Relief, and were supporting every front organization and Communist controlled labor union in the Los Angeles section. All front organizations just above mentioned are Communist inspired.

This should not be the least surprising, as the individuals controlling the Motion Picture Democratic Committee were the same ones controlling the other groups.

The organization as a body were enthusiastic in support of President ROOSEVELT and the democratic administration. Neither the President nor Governor OLSON and his state administration could do wrong. It held political rallies all over Southern California. It was all-out for democracy and the Constitution of the United States—it loathed Naziism and Fascism.

The world was bright and the Motion Picture Democratic Committee was enjoying an influence and prestige that brought smiles to the faces of the most case hardened comrades.

But on August 23, 1939, the bubble burst. The pact between STALIN and HITLER was announced and the Hollywood Motion Picture Democratic Committee found itself way out on a limb.

Within thirty days instructions came down from Moscow that the party line had changed. The organization must change with it. It was a bitter pill, but the comrades were loyal and they obeyed.

Within a very short time the Motion Picture Democratic Committee was calling President ROOSEVELT a "war monger"; he was dragging the United States into an imperialist war; we should mind our own business, etc. Governor OLSON too had become almost overnight a war monger, had deserted the poor, was cutting relief and in general was just driving the people to desperation with his anti-social tactics.

By the spring of 1940 the Motion Picture Democratic Committee was working hand in hand with the American Peace Crusade, afterward the American Peace Mobilization. It was mailing out thousands of "peace" pleas and insisting that "The Yanks Are Not Coming." It sponsored and took part in Communist "peace" meetings all over Southern California. An example of the position of the Hollywood Democratic Committee's in this respect is the following excerpt from one of their bulletins:

CONFIDENTIAL

"AMERICA DECLARES PEACE" OLYMPIC STADIUM

RALLY OF SATURDAY, APRIL 6TH

"The L.A. Council of the Committee for Industrial Organization, the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, and the California Youth Legislature—each of these bodies representing thousands of Southern Californians, requested of the Hollywood Peace Council that they be allowed to co-sponsor the rally, purpose and plans of which are heartily endorsed by their memberships. The eight Hollywood organizations welcomed the joint sponsorship. The speakers' bureau set up by the M.P.D.C. to publicize the rally at meetings of all sorts—has lined up 75 speaking engagements to date... A knockout script written by MICHAEL BLANKFORT, JEROME CHODOROV, JOSEPH FIELDS, PAUL TRIVERS, CARL DREHER, CYRIL KRAMER, was okayed with hurrahs by the Council this week... The staging of the production is in the capable hands of SHEPARD TRAUBE. The original printing order for "The Yanks Call", newspaper announcement of the meeting, was 50,000 copies. These were gone in a couple of days, and a duplicate order for another 50,000 had to be filled... Ten thousand tickets have been distributed and the remaining two thousand are going fast—so call the M.P.D.C. office (Gr. 5136) immediately for blocks of 10¢, 25¢ and 40¢ tickets..."

M.P.D.C. NEWSLETTER, 3/26/40.

(The individuals named above, BLANKFORT, CHODOROV, etc., are all members of the League of American Writers, the most important Communist front group in Hollywood)

While the Motion Picture Democratic Committee was cooperating with other groups, as above, it was carrying on its own party line procedure, as follows:

"PEACE PETITIONS

250 of these were mailed to 250 M.P.D.C. members along with the last newsletter. If you received one, get as many signatures as you can and mail it back to this office as soon as you can—because time is the essence of this demand to our representatives."

140

MELVYN DOUGLAS, the well known screen actor, and First Vice-Chairman of the Motion Picture Democratic Committee and who had been active in almost every Communist front organization in Hollywood previously, revolted at this procedure. After Russia's attack on Finland, he introduced a resolution before the committee condemning Soviet Russia for this attack.

CONFIDEN

He was overwhelmingly defeated. He resigned from the Committee in February, 1940.

The following were the officers of the organization in 1939-40. All have been long identified with Communist and Communist front activities in the motion picture field:

PHILLIP DUNNE. Chairman; member of the League of American Writers, and a member of the Communist Party. He is now with the Writers War Board, New York City, the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League and the League for Industrial Democracy.

MELVYN DOUGLAS. First Vice-Chairman; active in Communist front organizations; a fellow traveller and formerly Communist Party line follower.

MIRIAM HOPKINS. Second Vice-Chairman. She is a screen actress and fellow traveller.

JOHN FORD. Third Vice-Chairman. Motion picture director, and long a fellow traveller.

MAURICE MURPHY. Formerly executive secretary of the League of American Writers. He is a member of the League of American Writers and one of the leading Communists in the Hollywood section.

GORDON RIGBY. Treasurer. He is a member of the League of American Writers and a member of the Communist Party. He is now in the Army.

Although the Motion Picture Democratic Committee managed to survive the STALIN-HITLER pact, it finally, late in 1940 became inactive as have many other Communists fronts which could not negotiate the hairpin turns of the Communist International.

HOLLYWOOD DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE
(Communist front organization)

Source 4-B has stated that this organization is to all intents and purposes a revival of the Motion Picture Democratic Committee, a Communist Party front organization that went out of existence shortly after the HITLER-STALIN pact was signed on August 23, 1939. This latter organization and the reasons for its liquidation are dealt with under section 1 of this report.

The Hollywood Democratic Committee is being set up at the present time to operate in the political field and this purpose was stated in a call issued for its first meeting which was held at the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel in Hollywood on January 14, 1943.

This initial meeting was for the purpose of "forming an association of voters in the motion picture community which will support victory legislation and victory candidates." This meeting was primarily an organizational one; as there have been no further open meetings, it can be said that the Hollywood Democratic Committee is still in the process of formation.

The call for this initial meeting was signed by:

WALTER ABEL
MARC CONNELLY
WALTER HUSTON

The speakers for this organization were listed as the following:

MARY McCALL, JR.
WALTER HUSTON
MARGARET BENNETT
ROBERT W. KENNY (Attorney General of the State of California)
RUSSELL GLEASON, chairman

Of the foregoing the following have been identified as cooperating with and active in other Communist fronts in Hollywood:

MARY McCALL, JR. is President of the Screen Writers Guild, the bargaining agency for the Hollywood Screen Writers. She has been active and is still active in Communist front organizations such as the Hollywood Writers Mobilization for Defense, Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, Hollywood League for Democratic Action, Motion Picture Democratic Committee, and she is a fellow traveller.

MARC CONNELLY is a screen writer. He is also a member of the League of American Writers and is active in the Hollywood Writers Mobilization for Defense. He is the chairman of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization Committee for Interchange of cultural Material with Writers in the Soviet Union. He is a fellow traveller.

WALTER HUSTON is a screen actor. He is not identified specifically with membership in the Communist front organizations, but is sympathetic toward Soviet Russia and its form of government. This information has been obtained from press releases regarding his parts in pictures from time to time.

MARGARET BENNETT is a member of the Screen Office Employees Guild, a studio labor union affiliated with the Conference of Studio Unions, a Communist front controlled group under the leadership of HERBERT K. SORRELL. Miss BENNETT follows the Communist Party line in all her union activities.

ROBERT W. KENNY was formerly state senator of California. He was elected Attorney General of the state of California during the last November election. It can be stated here that Mr. KENNY is a fellow traveller. He has consorted with known Communist groups. He has supported protests against the deportation proceedings of HARRY BRIDGES. He was also connected with the SCHNEIDERMAN-DORSEY Defense Committee. He is a close associate of Attorney LEO GALLAGHER, a known Communist in Southern California who handles most of the Communist Party's legal business. Mr. KENNY is President of the National Lawyer's Guild, a Communist controlled organization.

RUSSELL GLEASON is the son of JAMES and LUCILLE GLEASON, both of whom have been involved in Communist front activity in Hollywood. Mr. GLEASON is looked upon as an active sympathizer with Communist causes.

At the initial meeting of this group on January 14, 1943 the following well known Communists of long standing attended and participated in discussions from the floor:

J. K. (SPIKE) WALLACE, business representative of Musicians Local No. 47.

HERBERT K. SORRELL, business representative of the Studio Painters Local 644 and President of the Conference of Studio Unions.

JOHN HOWARD LAWSON, member of the League of American Writers, American Peace Mobilization and a teacher in the Writers School, and has been active in many other front organizations.

ED M. GILBERT, business representative of the Screen Office Employees Guild.

A more complete record of the Communist activities of all of these parties appears heretofore in this report.

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

In addition to the above the following well known fellow travellers and party line followers were in attendance or mentioned by the Chairman as supporters of this organization.

SIDNEY BUCHMAN, a writer. He is a member of the League of American Writers. He supported the American Peace Mobilization and is a teacher in the Writers School.

SHERIDAN GIBNEY is a writer and a member of the League of American Writers. He supported the American Peace Mobilization and is a writer in the Writers School. He also engages in other Communist front organizations and activities.

HAROLD SMITH is business representative of Local 695 of the I.A.T.S.E. He is a fellow traveller.

SHEPARD TRAUBE is a writer and member of the League of American Writers. He is active in the Motion Picture Democratic Committee and was active in the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, the Hollywood League of Democratic Action, and was a member of the American Peace Mobilization.

WILLIAM (BILL) MORRIS, JR. is the owner of the Morris Booking Agency in Hollywood. He is a fellow traveller who provides strong support financially to front organizations and is an ardent follower of the Communist Party line.

As stated, the Hollywood Democratic Committee is now in the process of formation and it is believed that it will very shortly emerge as a fixed organization. Up to the present time it has followed the usual pattern of a Communist front organization.

MOTION PICTURE ARTISTS COMMITTEE
(Communist Front Organization)

Source 4-C has informed that the Motion Picture Artists Committee was a group set up to work in conjunction with a larger national organization, the North American Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy. This latter Committee was the outgrowth of a series of previously created "Spanish Aid" groups, all under the control of the Communist Party. They were all set up for the purpose of aiding the Communist program in Spain during the civil war in that country.

The original organization set up by the Communist Party in 1936 was called the Medical Bureau to Aid Spanish Democracy. Shortly thereafter the North American Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy was formed. In 1938 the two were merged and called the Medical Bureau and North American Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy. Meanwhile there was the American Friends of Spanish Democracy. Later this group joined the larger one. After the Spanish civil war came to an end in April, 1939 a new organization was set up. It was called the Spanish Refugee Relief Campaign. In March 1940 there was dissension within the group, some of the members objecting to Communist domination. The Communists retained control, however, and renamed it temporarily the Emergency Conference to Save Spanish Refugees. In 1941 it was renamed North American Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy, after absorbing another group which had sprung up overnight called Dorothy Parker's Spanish Children's Relief Fund. Out of that muddled up ancestry came the Motion Picture Artists Committee.

The purposes of all the above organizations were identical, all being Communist controlled. Those purposes were the collection of funds and recruiting of young men to join the Abraham Lincoln Brigade to fight with the Loyalists in Spain. Hundreds of thousands of dollars were collected and never accounted for, and thousands of young Americans were induced to go to Spain for the glory of the Communist cause.

The officers of the Motion Picture Artists Committee were the same as those we find in many other fronts. All were members of the League of American Writers.

One of the projects sponsored by these Spanish Aid Committees was the Rescue Ship Mission. This was the proposed fitting out of a ship which was to sail from the United States and rescue Loyalist refugees interned in Southern France. It was proposed to raise $300,000 to fit out the ship, which was to be called the "Lovcen". Funds for this venture were still being collected as late as August 1941. It may be stated that the ship never sailed and no accounting was made of the funds collected.

Many innocents were inveigled in this venture. HELEN KELLER, HAROLD REIGELMAN and others resigned when they discovered it was a Communist front. Meetings were held, and money raised in Hollywood, under the direction of LION FEUCHTWANGER and SIDNEY BUCHMAN. All the Hollywood Communist intellectuals supported the drive.

Among the sponsors in Hollywood were:

LION FEUCHTWANGER, writer, propagandist, refugee, Communist Party line follower.

SIDNEY BUCHMAN, writer, member of the League of American Writers.

MARC BLITZSTEIN, writer, member of the League of American Writers.

DOROTHY PARKER, writer, member of the League of American Writers.

HOLLYWOOD COMMITTEE FOR WRITERS IN EXILE

[Source 4-D (a)(4) has reported that while this committee was a local organization and apparently confined its activities to the Hollywood section, raising money and spreading propaganda for its purposes, it had its origin in, and cooperated with the various "Spanish Aid" committees set up by the Communist Party during the period of the Spanish civil war.

At that time many Communist writers, artists, journalists and professionals had gone to Spain to support the Communist activities among the loyalist forces. They came from many countries. At the same time there were many intellectuals within Spain who leaned toward the Communist cause. It was in the middle of that period that the writers, artists and intellectuals had become imbued with social concepts of LENIN and STALIN. The world was all out of joint and it was up to them to fix it up and the place to start was Spain.

LUIS ARIQUISTAN, a Spanish writer had this to say about the situation:

"I am speaking now of the so-called Communist sympathizers, the fellow travellers who were so active in giving the Spanish Communists the power and influence they already had...They were astonishingly numerous among our bourgeoisie where they formed large and influential groups. Writers, journalists, artists and professionals...

CONFIDENTIAL

"I am mentioning the unhappy part this group played in Spain because I happen to know the great influence similar groups are exerting in France, England and the U.S.A. One of the reasons why I am giving this resume of Spanish experiences is to teach them a lesson.

New Leader, 6-3-39.

After the Spanish civil war ended in April, 1939, many of these Communists and fellow travellers were caught and interned in camps. Others escaped into France and North Africa and interned there. Some escaped and got back to the countries from which they came. Later other writers and artists escaped from Germany and occupied France and became stranded in neutral countries in Europe, especially Portugal. Others are still in concentration camps in Germany and occupied France.

It was to aid these exiled writers, artists and professional people that the Hollywood Committee for Writers in Exile was allegedly created. The purpose was to raise funds for their relief wherever needed and plans were made to get them into the United States eventually.

All of this would be most laudable if it were not that the committee was interested only in those refugees who were Communists, fellow travellers and sympathizers with the cause of communism. So true is this that the Communist Party, of which the Hollywood Committee for Writers in Exile is a front, advocated the deportation back to Spain, France or Germany of those writers and artists who did not agree with its domination of the intellectuals of those countries.

An example of this discrimination is the attempt of the Communist Party to force the Government of Mexico to deport three writers, VICTOR SERGE, JULIAN GORKIN and MARCEAU PIVERT. These men had escaped from Spain and France and were in Mexico City. But because they objected to Communist domination of the Spanish Loyalist forces in the civil war and opposed the Communist Party in principle, the Hollywood Committee for Writers in Exile would under no circumstances, aid these refugees. The main purpose of the Hollywood Committee for Writers in Exile was stated by GARSIN KANIN, fellow member of the motion picture director in Hollywood, at a meeting of this committee held at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel on November 26, 1940 to an audience of writers, directors, actors and writers, as follows:

"Hollywood today could use the brains that HITLER has in concentration camps. There are not enough brains in Hollywood to produce the 500 stories annually needed by the film

Five thousand dollars was collected at this meeting.

JOINT ANTI-FASCIST REFUGEE COMMITTEE
(Communist front organization)

X(U)

Source 4-E has reported that this Communist inspired and controlled organization is an outgrowth of various Communist front organizations that were set up during the Spanish civil war period when the Soviet Union and the Communist Party were engaged in capturing the Loyalist cause in Spain. There had come into existence in the United States at that time the following organizations:

MEDICAL BUREAU TO AID SPANISH DEMOCRACY
NORTH AMERICAN COMMITTEE TO AID SPANISH DEMOCRACY
MEDICAL BUREAU AND NORTH AMERICAN COMMITTEE TO AID SPANISH DEMOCRACY
SPANISH REFUGEE RELIEF CAMPAIGN
EMERGENCY CONFERENCE TO SAVE SPANISH REFUGEES SPANISH CHILDREN'S RELIEF FUND
SPANISH REFUGEE SHIP MISSION
FRIENDS OF THE ABRAHAM LINCOLN BRIGADE
HOLLYWOOD COMMITTEE FOR WRITERS IN EXILE
UNITED AMERICAN SPANISH AID COMMITTEE

The foregoing organizations were set up under the direction of the Communist Party, and at one time or another, all functioned in the United States.

When Russia entered the war on the side of the United Nations, the Spanish Civil War episode was relegated to past history, as all efforts of the Communists in the United States must now be devoted to winning the war for Russia's sake.

CONFIDENTIAL

CONFIDENTIAL

As a result of this situation all these organizations, and their remnants have now been incorporated into one group, the JOINT ANTI-FASCIST REFUGEE COMMITTEE. It is national in scope; and has an office and branch in Hollywood, California. The purpose of the organization, as stated by the Secretary of the Hollywood branch, HELEN M. FISCHER, is to raise funds and give all aid possible in every way to those Spanish, German and French refugees now interned in concentration camps in Europe; and wherever and whenever possible bring them to the United States, or the Americas.

[This organization being completely Communist dominated, is interested only in those refugees whose political opinions coincide with those who are in control of this committee.]

At the present time the headquarters of the committee are located at 8505 Sunset Boulevard, Hollywood. The offices are sumptously equipped and the committee apparently is well equipped financially.

[A check of the personnel and those in charge and active in the organization shows the same names and control that had been observed in all the other Hollywood Communist front organizations.] They are the following:

PHILLIP MERIVALE, Honorary Chairman. Mr. MERIVALE is described as an English actor now appearing in motion pictures. Mr. MERIVALE is a fellow traveller, having been active in the New Theatre League, and various cultural organizations in Hollywood over a period of years—a fellow traveller.

Mrs. EDWARD CHODOROV, Chairman. This is the wife of EDWARD CHODOROV, a member of the League of American Writers, and a close fellow traveller with the Communist Party. He has followed the line from the Popular Front period, into the Fifth, or Pact Period, when he was connected with the American Peace Mobilization. She has done likewise.

HELEN M. FISCHER, Secretary. Miss FISCHER is a newcomer, having just suddenly "appeared". She has not been shown heretofore in the Hollywood section.

Miss FISCHER stated that the organization has no board of directors or executive board, but does have a "working committee". The "Working Committee" is composed of the following parties:

Mrs. SIDNEY BUCHMAN, wife of SIDNEY BUCHMAN, League of American Writers, and a staunch fellow traveller.

GEORGE WILLNER, theatrical booking agent, formerly Western Repressntative of "New Masses".

DOROTHY COMMINGORE, screen actress, fellow traveller, wife of RICHARD COLLINS of the League of American Writers.

JOERNEY RIVER, wife of W. L. RIVER of the League of American Writers, American Peace Mobilization, and fellow traveller.

ANNA REVERE - no record.

MARIAN SPITZER, League of American Writers, American Peace Mobilization, and a long record of fellow traveller.

TAMARA GEVA, formerly of the New Theatre League and other front organizations; a fellow traveller.

Miss FISCHER stated that the organization had no list of members; that the organization was the committee which called meetings, collected funds and attended to all business of the organization. She gave the following as the sponsors of the organization.

WALTER HUSTON - Screen actor, and fellow traveller.
OLIVIA DeHAVILLAND - Screen actress.
JULIEN DUVIVIER - French motion picture director, now employed in Hollywood.
HEINRICH MANN - German refugee writer, now in Hollywood.
LION FEUCHTWANGER - German refugee writer, a fellow traveller fanatically devoted to Communism and the Soviet Union. Author of "Moscow 1937".
DAME MAY WHITTY - elderly screen actress.
WILLIAM MORRIS, JR., theatrical booking agent in Hollywood and a close fellow traveller
Mrs. ANN LEHR - Connected with Hollywood charitable organizations.

That the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee is another Communist front organization there can be no doubt.

LEAGUE OF AMERICAN WRITERS, HOLLYWOOD CHAPTER
(Communist Front Organization)

[Source 4-G has reported (V(u)) that the League of American Writers, since its formation in April, 1935 in New York City, has been and still is one of the most influential and far-reaching Communist front organizations ever set up in this country. Because of the fact that it has succeeded in drawing into its ranks many writers of national and international reputation, it has been able to exercise, by using organized pressure and the full strength of the Communist machine on books, magazines, periodicals and the press, an influence of serious proportions. As a propaganda instrument of the Communist Party it has rendered and is rendering outstanding service to the foreign policy of the Soviet Union.

[The Hollywood Chapter of the League of American Writers is particularly of extreme importance because, operating through its members who are firmly intrenched in the motion picture industry, it can and does exercise a most insidious influence over the type of picture produced. At the present time an examination will show that in almost every case where a picture is being made dealing with the war situation as it affects the Soviet Union, the writer or writers, and in many cases directors, are persons who have been identified as members of the League of American Writers, or as having been involved in other Communist front activities in the Hollywood section.] This is extremely important inasmuch as the motion picture is now considered necessary to national defense.

[The parentage and control of the League of American Writers by the Communist Party cannot be doubted. It is a matter of record. In November, 1930 a Congress of so-called "revolutionary writers" was held in Kharkov, Russia. At this congress a program was laid down for an International Union of Revolutionary Writers which was to operate in all countries outside the borders of the Soviet Union. The basic purpose of this Union was to organize intellectuals, particularly writers, in all countries, indoctrinate them with the philosophy of Marxian Communism and then create cultural organizations for the defense of the Soviet Union. These organizations would work in cooperation with the various sections of the Communist Internationale (Comintern) throughout the world.] (V(u))

The delegates from the United States who attended the Kharkov Congress, one of whom was MICHAEL GOLD and who was one of those chiefly instrumental in organizing the League of American Writers, made a report, and this report is published in "New Masses" for February, 1931. (V(u))

Meanwhile [there had already been set up in the larger cities of the United States groups of writers, artists and intellectuals called "John Reed Clubs". (Hollywood had its John Reed Club from 1932 to (1935).. But as these John Reed Clubs were more in the nature of groups inspired by local Communist influences, they did not serve the aims of the

Communist Party in a sufficiently disciplined manner. In January, 1935 a Congress of John Reed Clubs was held in New York City. At this congress which was composed of delegates from the clubs wherever located, a decision was made to call a Congress of American Writers to work out a plan for more efficient cooperation. The call was issued for April 1935, the Congress to be held in New York City.] On April 24 to 27, 1935 at the New School for Social Research, the congress was held. [It was called FIRST AMERICAN WRITERS CONGRESS.]

[One result of this congress was the formation of the League of American Writers, and at the same time it elected what was called a National Council. This National Council then affiliated with the International Union of Revolutionary Writers before mentioned which had its headquarters in Moscow, Russia. Thus, through the action of its National Council, the League of American Writers became an affiliate of this international revolutionary organization which has always been under the control of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union.] The members of the National Council were the following:

MICHAEL BLANKFORT	SIDNEY HOWARD
VAN WYCK BROOKS	MOISSHE NADIR
HARRY CARLISLE	CLIFFORD ODETS
EUGENE CLAY	JOSEPH OPATOSHU
MERLE COLBY	REBECCA PITTS

At the conclusion of the Congress and for some time thereafter the League of American Writers operated as a national organization. The Hollywood Chapter had not yet been formed. The result of a call issued by HARRY CARLISLE, one of the National Council of the League of American Writers and a member of the Communist Party, was a nation wide meeting of the Western Writers Congress in San Francisco, California, on November 13, 1936. This Congress was under the firm control of the Communist Party as had been the First American Writers Congress. VICTOR J. JEROME, a ranking functionary in the Communist Party in New York was sent out to guide the proceedings and address this Western Writers Congress. HARRY BRIDGES was also one of the principal speakers. In addition to the above, other well known Communists who assisted in maintaining Communist Party control over the congress were the following:

This group continued to function under the name of the Western Writers Congress until October, 1937 when the membership voted to go over in a body and join the League of American Writers national organization. After this action was taken the next step was the formation of the Hollywood Chapter of the League of American Writers. The purpose in forming this group was to take in those writers who were employed in the motion picture industry in order to concentrate more efficiently on the production of motion pictures. Headquarters were set up in Hollywood and the organization has functioned steadily since its formation.

The officers of the Hollywood Chapter are:

ALBERT MALTZ - President

The Hollywood Chapter of the League of American Writers has as an organization followed the Communist Party line ever since it was first established.

During the Popular Front period it supported all other organizations which followed the party line. It has protested officially the deportation proceedings against HARRY BRIDGES. It was officially affiliated with the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League and the Motion Picture Democratic Committee. It has sponsored mass meetings of protest against the Dies Committee.

Previous to the signing of the pact between STALIN and HITLER, it was all out for defeat of Fascism and Naziism. It published those principles to the world through the issuance of leaflets, articles and its own publication "Black and White".

When the pact between STALIN and HITLER was signed it completely reversed its official position and condemned the war as imperialist; opposed aid to Britain; opposed the selective service act; demanded isolation for the United States. And during that period of the Pact it officially endorsed the AMERICAN PEACE MOBILIZATION.

After HITLER invaded Russia the organization officially issued a proclamation, which appears in its official publication the "Clipper" for August, 1941, and demanded that the United States give all aid to Britain and her allies; went all out for the defeat of HITLER; Britain ceased to be an imperialist nation.

Reference is here made to the issue of the "Clipper" for May, 1941 in which an article appeared under the headline "In the Defense of Culture", which was the "Call of the Fourth Congress of the League of American Writers".

In substance it stated that the call was being made for the purpose of gathering together to reaffirm the aims of the three previous congresses of 1935, 1937 and 1939. It stated, "We proclaimed our unalterable conviction that reaction and its wars are the greatest enemies of a free and flourishing culture." It further stated "In 1941 the values by which we have lived are facing unprecedented attack. Half of the world is at war and the other half is endangered by attempts to draw it into war. We had warned of the consequences of "non-intervention" in Spain, of aid to the aggressor in China, of appeasement at Munich. Today these consequences are tragically apparent. We have warned that America must be defended not by involvement in this war, or by steps towards dictatorship, or by pursuing a course of imperialist expansion, but by preserving peace and expanding democracy on the economic, political and cultural levels. Today we must ask whether the present policy of the administration and the program of big business are not leading us toward war and Fascism in the name of resistance to war and fascism. . . . We know that our existence as free writers, spokesmen of a free people depends on out continued loyalty to the principles which govern the work of the League of American Writers. We therefore call our fellow writers and our associates in the related crafts to the Fourth Biennial Congress to consider the following questions.

> "How best as writers can we resist the drive toward the war and reaction which threatens our democratic culture?

CONFIDEN...

"What can we do to extend further help to persecuted writers of other lands?

"What can we do to restore the WPA cultural projects and to transform them into permanent Peoples Art Projects vital to the nation's strength?

"What new technical developments in the various forms of writing need to be analyzed and evaluated?

"What measures can we take to combat and surmount the growing restrictions on our work as honest craftsmen?

"How can we contribute to a genuine cultural interchange between the people of the Americas?

"How can we enrich America's imperishable democratic literature and extend its audience?"

It might well be stated that the policy of this organization in May, 1941 (while the HITLER-STALIN pact was in effect) was against America's entrance into the war and against preparations for defense.

There are 123 names appearing as signers of this call to the Fourth Congress. Nearly all of them are known in Hollywood and many are in Hollywood at the present time.

This congress was known as the "American Writers Congress" and was held in New York City June 6 to 8, 1941. The article stated "for information apply to FRANKLIN FOLSOM, National Executive Secretary, League of American Writers, Inc., 381 Fourth Avenue, New York City."

Attached hereto and marked Exhibit No. 3 - Page 1, is a photographic copy of this call to the Fourth Congress.

Reference is also being made to an article appearing in the August, 1941 issue of the "Clipper" on Page 3, the editorial page, under the heading, "A Communication to All Writers From the League of American Writers". The substance of this editorial appearing in the official organ of the League of American Writers, is that the league has urged that the welfare of the American people requires participation in every genuine anti-Fascist struggle; that when there was still peace in the world the league fought to maintain it, "but now the alliance between Great Britain and the Soviet Union provides the people of all countries with an unprecedented opportunity to rid the world of Hitlerism and a world free of Fascism is essential to the democratic institutions and culture of the United States.

CONFIDENTIAL

Therefore the League advocates all immediate and necessary measures in support of Great Britain and the Soviet Union to insure the military defeat of the fascist aggressors. We believe such support has now become vital to the welfare and security of our country. We look forward to the release of our colleagues from the concentration camps of Europe, the return of exiled writers to their native lands, and the extirpation of the gravest threat to our existence as free writers. . . . The fight against fascism cannot and must not be conducted at the expense of civil liberties, trade unions rights, academic freedom, and living standards in the United States. . . . The League will continue with renewed vigor its opposition to censorship and its efforts to provide more extensive outlets for anti-fascist literature. The League supports the full rights of labor, including the right to strike. It is unalterably opposed to anti-Semitism and discrimination against Negroes and the foreign-born."

A photographic copy of this article is being attached to this report and is marked Exhibit No. 3, Page 2.

It should be remembered in this connection that HITLER attacked STALIN on June 22, 1941 and the League of American Writers was following the Communist Party line in May 1941 and it was also following the Communist Party line in August, 1941, although a complete "about face" had taken place in the Communist Party line.

[The entire record of the League of American Writers as a national organization, and the Hollywood Chapter as a local organization, from the beginning conclusively shows that the Communist Party completely dominates and controls both groups.]

HOLLYWOOD SCHOOL FOR WRITERS
(Communist Party front organization)

Source H has reported that the so-called [School for Writers is a device by the Hollywood Chapter of the League of American Writers to be used as a "transmission belt" whereby budding writers and those whose ambitic to become writers are developed along the political lines followed by the Le of American Writers and conditioned for eventual membership in the League ar the Communist Party.]

Attracted by the huge salaries paid by the motion pictur industry and the glamour attached, many persons will adopt any means to gain access to that favored institution. Taking advantage of this situtation, this writers ["School" was established in October, 1939 by the Hollywood Chapter the League.]

There is no doubt of the control over the school by the League of American Writers as it is plainly stated in the 1942 Prospectus of the school that:

> "The Hollywood School for Writers is a non-profit organization founded by the LEAGUE OF AMERICAN WRITERS. Distinguished instructors or guest lecturers, many of whom are members of the League, volunteer their services in the interests of the School and its students."
> (Introductory Note - 1942 Prospectus)

In all printed matter the School uses the slogan:

"WORDS ARE YOUR WEAPON—YOU MUST LEARN TO USE THEM."

This is a quotation from a book written by DONALD OGDEN STEWART titled "Fighting Words."

At the present time the School is located at 1204 North Vista Street, Hollywood, California, which is also the headquarters of the Hollywood Chapter of the League of American Writers.

The courses taught are as follows:

Screen writing
Short story
Playwriting
Non-fiction writing
Radio
Novel
History of American literature
News reporting
Labor journalism

A careful check on all instructors and lecturers who have appeared before classes in the last two years shows that there has not been one who has not been identified either as a Communist Party member or close fellow traveller. Each and everyone of them has followed the Communist Party line from the Popular Front period into the Period of the Pact when he or she supported the American Peace Mobilization and other isolationist organizations. Each and everyone of these instructors and lecturers have now followed the Communist Party line into the Post-Pact Period and are seemingly super zealous patriots all out for full prosecution of the war.

All the above named parties are writers. In addition to these writers certain Hollywood directors have appeared before the classes instructing and lecturing on the technique of the director in motion pictures.

These directors are:

FRANK TUTTLE - a member of the Communist Party (U)
IRVING PICHEL- long a close fellow traveller
LASZLO BENEDEK, reported to be a "European" director
JULES DASSIN - " " " " " "
FRED ZINNEMAN- " " " " " "

That the Hollywood Writers School is in reality a "School for Communism" there can be little doubt.

HOLLYWOOD WRITERS MOBILIZATION FOR DEFENSE
(Communist front organization)

Source I (U) has stated that the Communist Party line changed with the invasion of Russia by HITLER on June 22, 1941, and it became necessary for the party to dissolve such organizations as the Hollywood Peace Forum, Hollywood League for Democratic Action, American Peace Mobilization, Motion Picture Democratic Committee, and other groups which had been opposing the entry of the United States into the war. By February of 1942 all of these had been "liquidated" and the Communist Party declared for full participation in the war. The Hollywood section of the party fell in line and as soon as the apparatus could be turned around to face in the opposite direction, new organizations as "fronts" were set up. The first of these was the Hollywood Writers Mobilization for Defense. On the surface it was just a group of patriotic Hollywood screen writers falling in line for the defense of their country. In reality it was the same old League of American Writers in a new makeup. To make it look more legitimate and remove as much of the past isolationist record of the League of American Writers as possible, it drew in as sponsors the following labor groups in the Hollywood section:

SCREEN WRITERS GUILD
RADIO WRITERS GUILD
SCREEN PUBLICISTS GUILD
SCREEN READERS GUILD
SCREEN CARTOONISTS GUILD
INDEPENDENT PUBLICISTS GUILD
AMERICAN NEWSPAPER GUILD

While these sponsors seemed to give the Mobilization support in the labor field, each one of the foregoing labor groups was under the domination of the Communist Party, and has followed the Communist Party line for several years. In carrying out its program which was apparently all out prosecution of the war in the cultural field, the Writers Mobilization called a series of mass meetings at the Filmarte Theatre in Hollywood in the summer of 1942. The principal speakers at these meetings were:

NELSON POYNTER, Hollywood representative for Government films, who spoke in his official position.

CONFIDENTIAL

DONALD OGDEN STEWART
ROBERT ROSSEN
FRANK TUTTLE
MARY McCALL, JR.

All of the four last mentioned are members of the League of American Writers and follow the Communist Party line unerringly. In addition to meetings, the Mobilization arranged for several radio broadcasts, and issued an official publication called "Communique".

The chairman of the Mobilization was ROBERT ROSSEN. Mr. ROSSEN is to all intents and purposes, a Communist. He has followed the line of the party faithfully for years. He is a member of the League of American Writers, a teacher in the Hollywood Writers School, supported the American Peace Mobilization, signed the call for the Fourth Congress of the League of American Writers, and has been sponsor and active in other Communist fronts of many kinds.

Others prominent in the Writers Mobilization for Defense were the following:

DONALD OGDEN STEWART
GUY ENDORE
ARCH OBOLER
W. L. RIVER
EDWIN JUSTUS MAYER
EDWARD ELISCU
HECTOR CHEVIGNY
GORDON KAHN
ARTHUR KOBER
H. S. (HY) KRAFT
VERA CASPARY
LEO MITTLER ALLAN SCOTT
JERRY CHODOROV
JULIUS EPSTEIN
PHILLIP EPSTEIN
MICHAEL BLANKFORT
BARRY TRIVERS
PAUL TRIVERS
MARIAN SPITZER
MILTON MERLIN
IRVING REIS
ROBERT LEES
FRED RINALDO
JOHN BRIGHT

All of the above are the same old names that are found in previous Hollywood Communist fronts. All have for years been followers of the Communist Party line.

Early in February of 1942, the Mobilization issued its publication "COMMUNIQUE". This publication was indicative of the position of the Mobilization and conformed to the new Communist Party line.

The Editorial Board was composed of the following:

MILTON MERLIN, Editor
MICHAEL KANIN
RING LARDNER, JR.
IAN McLELLAN HUNTER
JAY DRATLER
JACK STANLEY
EVELYN HUMPHREYS
ASA BORDAGES
GORDON KAHN
BILL BLOWITZ
JOHN McLEISH, Art editor.

Of the above, MERLIN, KANIN, LARDNER, BORDAGES, KAHN and McLEISH are members of the League of American Writers, and staunch followers of the Communist Party line. In content this paper "Communique" followed the Communist Party line. However, it was done very cautiously, and mostly by implication. It advocated the opening of a second front. It was in favor of immediate independence for India. The negro question was handled in accordance with the party line. It recommended books and pamphlets favoring the Communist position in Russia and internationally. "Soviet Power" was highly endorsed and recommended, which book was written by the Dean of Canterbury. Pamphlets by ALVA BESSIE, a noted American Communist, were distributed. It quoted from "In Fact", an American Communist publication. It advocated an alliance with an organization in Moscow, Russia called "Voks" whereby cultural material could be exchanged between the two groups. It announced the formation of a committee to work to bring about this alliance. The committee members were the following:

HENRY MYERS
ARCH OBOLER
JOSEPH MISCHEL
W. L. RIVER
EDWIN JUSTUS MAYER
ARTHUR SCHWARTZ
GEORGE THOMAS, Jr.
ALICE HUNTER

(August 22, 1942 number)

The Hollywood Writers Mobilization is another of the interlocking group of Hollywood Communist front organizations, set up by the party to carry out its program. At the present time the organizations seems to be inactive. A check has shown that many of these active in the organization have gone into various government agencies as writers, public relations men, etc. The official publication "Communique" has not been issued since about September, 1942.

HOLLYWOOD CANTEEN

[Source 4-J has reported (U) that the Hollywood Canteen is a project set up and operated by the various labor unions and guilds connected with the motion picture industry in Hollywood. As the name implies, and as stated in its literature, the purpose of the Canteen is to furnish entertainment and recreation for men now serving in the armed forces of the United Nations. The organization is incorporated under the laws of the State of California, as a non-profit corporation.]

The incorporaters are:

FLORINE BALE - Business representative of the American Guild of Variety Artists, a labor union, A.F. of L.

FLORENCE C. CADREZ - A member of the Musicians Union, Local 47.

BETTE DAVIS - Screen actress, member of the Screen Actors Guild.

CARROLL HOLLISTER - A member of the Musicians Local 47, who came from New York City about nine months ago.

MERVYN LeROY - Motion picture producer now with Warner Brothers.

JEAN LEWIN - A member of the Screen Office Employees Guild.

JOHN RAYMOND

STANLEY RUBIN

PEPE RUIZ - Member of Screen Cartoonists Guild.

CAMERON SHIPP, screen writer, member of League of American Writers

J. K. (SPIKE) WALLACE - Business representative of Musicians Local 47.

[The movement to establish this Canteen began in August, 1942, and was the proposal of a group within Musicians Local 47,] composed of the following:

175

J. K. WALLACE
CARROLL HOLLISTER
SAM ALBERTS
MANUEL COMPINSKY
ALEX COMPINSKY
SARAH COMPINSKY
JOSEPH ACHRON
DON CHRISTLIEB
SOL KAPLAN
FLORENCE CADREZ
BARON MOREHEAD
ELMER FAIN

[Of the foregoing the first three, WALLACE, HOLLISTER and ALBERTS are Communists and WALLACE and ALBERTS have been identified with Communist activities in the Los Angeles section.] HOLLISTER came to Los Angeles from New York about April, 1942. The other persons named are members of the Musicians Union, Local 47, and have not been identified with Communist or Communist front activities.

Other unions officially represented on the "operating committee" when the Canteen was first established were:

Local 47, Musicians, American Federation of Musicians
Local 767 " " " " "
American Guild of Variety Artists
Screen Cartoonists Guild
Screen Office Employees Guild
Screen Set Designers Guild
Screen Writers Guild
Screen Directors Guild

[With the exception of the American Guild of Variety Artists, all the foregoing groups are under Communist influence.]

Other groups cooperating, but not yet officially affiliated with the Canteen were:

Laboratory Technicians, Local 683, I.A.T.S.E.
Studio Painters, Local 644
Screen Publicists Guild
Mobile Theatre

All the foregoing are Communist dominated groups.

At the present time the complete list of sponsors for the Hollywood Canteen is:

Actors Equity Association
Affiliated Property Craftsmen, I.A.T.S.E. Local 44
American Federation of Musicians, Local 47
American federation of Musicians, Local 767
American Federation of Radio Artists
American Guild of Musical Artists
American Guild of Variety Artists
Actors Managers Guild
Association of Motion Picture Costumers, IATSE Local 705
Association of Motion Picture Producers
Federated Amusement and Allied Crafts
Film Technicians, IATSE, Local 683
Independent Publicists
International Photographers, IATSE, Local 659
International Sound Technicians, IATSE, Local 695
Makeup Artists, IATSE, Local 706
Motion Picture Hair Stylists, IATSE, Local 706
Motion Picture Illustrators
Motion Picture Set Electricians, IATSE, Local 728
Motion Picture Studio Grips, IATSE, Local 80
Motion Picture Studio Projectionists, IATSE, Local 165
Motion Picture Painters, Local 644
Radio Writers Guild
Screen Cartoonists Guild
Screen Directors Guild
Screen Office Employees Guild
Screen Publicists Guild
Screen Readers Guild
Screen Set Designers Guild
Screen Writers Guild
Society of Motion Picture Art Directors
Society of Motion Picture Film Editors
Society of Motion Picture Interior Decorators
Songwriters Protective Association
Studio Carpenters, Local 946
Studio Electrical Workers, Local 40
Studio of Laborers and Utility Workers, IATSE, Local 727
Studio Miscellaneous Employees, Local 1104
Studio Transportation Drivers, Local 399
Studio Utility Employees, Local 724

The officers of the Canteen are:

BETTE DAVIS - President
CARROLL HOLLISTER - Vice-President
JOHN GARFIELD - Vice-President
J. K. WALLACE - Vice-President
JEAN LEWIN, Secretary and Assistant Treasurer
ALFRED C. YBARRA - Treasurer

Of the above [HOLLISTER, GARFIELD and WALLACE] have engaged in Communist activities over a period of years.

The Board of Directors of the Canteen are:

NEDRA STAFFORD	JOHN BOYLAN
A. C. MONENARO	PEPE RUIZ
FLORINE BALE	MEDEA CONTINI
GEORGE FIFIELD	CAMERON SHIPP
PAUL JAFFEE	GERALD DAVIDSON
NELLIE MARIE MANLEY	JOHN RAYMOND
MASON W. MORRIS	HANS PETERS
LESLIE THOMAS	LINDSAY THOMPSON
CARL HEAD	L. C. DAVIS
A. J. MORAN	AL BOYER
JAMES BRIGHAM

[Of the foregoing, PAUL JAFFEE, LESLIE THOMAS, CARL HEAD, and JOHN BOYLAN have been identified with Communist front, and union Communist activities.]

In addition to the Board of Directors the organization has an Executive Committee composed of the following:

CATHERINE BALDWIN
BILLIE BURKE
FLORENCE C. CADREZ
LESTER COLE
MERVYN LeROY
MACK MILLAR
GEORGE RAMSAY
CASEY ROBERTS
WILLIAM H. SILOW
JULES STEIN
JOHN TeGROEN

[Of the above LESTER COLE has been outstanding in Communist activities in Hollywood. He is a member of the League of American Writers, American Peace Mobilization, Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, signer of the call for the Fourth Writers Congress, Hollywood Peace Forum, etc.

[There is very little doubt that the inspiration for the creation of the Hollywood Canteen originated in Communist circles. The initial meeting called by the original sponsors was held in the home of SAM ALBERTS, a member of Musicians Local #47 and a known Communist, on August 14, 1942. There is no doubt that those of that faith active in the work of the project have much to say about how it shall be conducted. But owing to the fact that so many organizations and persons not sympathetic to the Communist cause are also interested in the work of the Canteen, there has not been any definite attempt at propaganda, or other Communist activities.]

The fact that thousands of soldiers and sailors pass through the headquarters of the Canteen weekly make it difficult to detect possible attempts of infiltration.

PUBLICATIONS IN HOLLYWOOD WHICH HAVE HAD A BEARING ON COMMUNIST ACTIVITIES IN THE MOTION PICTURE BUSINESS IN HOLLYWOOD

[Source K has given] the following estimate of the influence of official organs and other papers in Hollywood on the motion picture business and the infiltration of Communists into the motion picture business.

Hollywood Reporter

The Hollywood Reporter is a daily trade publication which has been in existence approximately twenty years. The editor and publisher of this paper is W. R. WILKERSON. This paper has always opposed Communist activity in the motion picture industry and is fully aware of Communist penetration. It has many times published editorials and articles to this effect.

Daily Variety

The Daily Variety is a trade publication which has been in existence in Hollywood for approximately eighteen years. The general manager is ARTHUR UNGER. He is in no sense a Communist or a Communist sympathizer. However, other member of this staff of reporters on this paper, RALPH RODDY who is assigned to labor activities is a fellow traveller and always slants his news in favor of those Communist labor unions and guilds that are under the leadership of HERBERT K. SORRELL.

CONFIDENTIAL

Flashes

The monthly publication "Flashes" is the official organ of Laboratory Technicians Local No. 683, I.A.T.S.E. It has been in existence since 1933. From the beginning up until 1940 it was not in any sense sympathetic to the Communist cause. In that year the Communist elements in the union secured control and the paper since that time has reflected the Communist Party line completely. The editor is RUSSELL McKNIGHT, a staunch fellow traveller and perhaps a member of the Communist Party. Before Soviet Russia was attacked by HITLER on June 22, 1941 the editorial policy of this paper was opposed to aid to Britain, etc., but immediately after the Soviet Union was attacked it came out for "all out prosecution of the war, aid to Britain, Russia and China."

Black and White

This publication "Black and White" was originally a creation of the Young Communists League and was issued at irregular intervals during 1939 and 1940, during the Fourth or Popular Front period of the Communist Party line. The first editor of the paper was WILBUR NEEDHAM of Santa Monica, California who has been engaged in Communist cultural activities for several years. JULES KIEVETS who was exposed by the Tenney Investigating Committee as a Communist succeeded NEEDHAM as the editor of the paper shortly before it ceased publication early in 1940 with the change of the Communist Party line. It was reported that WILL ROGERS, JR., now congressman for Beverly Hills, California, and whose name as "BILL ROGERS" appeared on the masthead as an associate editor, originally financed the paper.

Clipper

The Clipper was the official publication of the Hollywood chapter of the League of American Writers and was the successor to "Black and White" and so stated on the masthead of the first two issues. It had its existence during the Fifth Period of the Communist Party line which was that period when STALIN and HITLER were friends. This paper's policy was one of isolation, opposition to the war, which corresponded to the Communist Party line at that time. After the attack of STALIN by HITLER on June 22, 1941, the paper within a period of a few months went out of existence. Its editorial board were well known Communists and fellow travellers.

The Communique

The publication "Communique" has not been issued regularly. It has been the official organ of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization for Defense which was originally inspired by the League of American Writers. It made its first appearance early in February, 1942. The last issue was dated September 26, 1942. The second and third issues of this paper were mailed under official Government frank and bore a statement that it was "in cooperation with the O.E.M.". Later issues did not bear the Government frank. This paper reflected the Communist Party line in detail. The editor has been MILTON MERLIN, a member of the League of American Writers.

Hollywood Now

The publication "Hollywood Now" was the official weekly organ of the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League. It came into existence on February 17, 1938. The last number was issued February 2, 1940. This paper was in existence during the Fourth or Popular Front period and followed strictly the Communist Party line at that time; but the signing of the STALIN-HITLER pact on August 23, 1939 sealed the death of this publication. It could not negotiate the sharp turn in the Communist Party line, from one of anti-Hitlerism to one of Anti-Britain and democracy. After six months of trying to explain and justify the STALIN-HITLER pact it quietly passed out of existence with the February 2, 1940 issue.

The masthead of this paper showed the names of the following persons who were responsible for its publication:

DONALD OGDEN STEWART
DUDLEY NICHOLS
BERN BERNARD, treasurer

Professor NORMAN T. BYRNE, a teacher in the Los Angeles City College was one of the main contributors to the paper and had an article in every issue. He was one of the Communist front leaders in Southern California, speaking before forums, women's clubs, social organizations, labor unions, the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, the Hollywood League for Democratic Action, the League for Peace and Democracy, and the American Peace Mobilization. BYRNE has also written pamphlets interpreting the Communist Party line and one of the most ardent supporters of Communism in Southern California. He is reported as being in the armed forces at the present time.

Hollywood Tribune

The Hollywood Tribune was a Communist publication which was another Hollywood casualty of the STALIN-HITLER pact. It was issued by the "Columbia Publishing Corporation", 6715 Hollywood Boulevard, Hollywood, California. It first came into existence in April 1939. This was during the Fifth or Popular Front period.

The publication was a weekly and was meant to be for general circulation. It appealed to the sensational and dealt mainly with the motion picture industry and cultural affairs. It was strictly a Communist controlled publication and reflected the Communist Party line perhaps more outspokenly than any other publication in the section. The editor of the paper was E. A. DUPONT, now a motion picture director. Its contributors were the usual Communist figures in Hollywood, such as Professor NORMAN T. BYRNE, HAROLD SALEMSON, ELLA MAY WINTER, MAYER LEVIN, DONALD OGDEN STEWART, CAREY McWILLIAMS, WILBUR NEEDHAM, editor of "Black and White", and others. It was in fact another publication of the League of American Writers appearing from behind another screen.

SUMMARY OF COMMUNIST ACTIVITIES IN THE FRONT ORGANIZATIONS IN THE MOTION PICTURE BUSINESS

Source 4-L has summed up the activities of the Communists in Hollywood insofar as its activities relate to the motion picture business as follows:

There have been six periods of change in the Communist Party line in the United States since the formation of the Communist Internationale (Comintern) in Moscow, Russia in March, 1919. These changes were in every case determined by the foreign policy of the Soviet Union at the time.

The Communist Internationale, also called the Third Internationale, of which the Communist Party of the United States is a section, is the agency set up by the Communist Party of the Soviet Union to operate in all countries of the world outside of Russia to interpret and work in the interest of the Soviet Government.

Those periods are:

FIRST PERIOD: From 1919 to 1921, Russian Revolutionary period.

SECOND PERIOD: From 1921 to 1928, Revolutionary and boring from within period.

THIRD PERIOD: From 1928 to August 1935 was the Trade Unic Unity League period; still revolutionary and in favor of Communist controllec labor organizations. This period ended with the Seventh World Congress of th Internationale which was held in Moscow in August 1935.

FOURTH PERIOD: From August 1935 to August 23, 1939 when the pact between STALIN and HITLER was entered into. This period is known as the Popular Front or Trojan Horse period, and is referred to as such in this report.

FIFTH PERIOD: From August 23, 1939 to June 22, 1941 when HITLER attacked STALIN and began the invasion of Russia. This period has been referred to as the PERIOD OF THE PACT.

SIXTH PERIOD: From June 22, 1941 down to the present time. This has been called the POST-PACT period.

Inasmuch as references have been made to changes in the Communist Party line, and those periods of change have been referred to as the POPULAR FRONT period, and the period of the STALIN-HITLER PACT, etc., and inasmuch as certain individuals have been cited as belonging to concurrent organizations such as the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, the American Peace Mobilization, etc., it will perhaps make clearer the meanings of those changes and the significance of membership in those organizations if the same are set down in glossary form.

For the purposes of this report we are not concerned with the First, Second and Third periods, as Hollywood during those periods had not been penetrated by the Communists.

By keeping in mind the Fourth, Fifth and Sixth periods of the Communist Party line, their relation to the foreign policy of the Soviet Union and the nature of the front organizations set up during those periods, the Communist affiliations and activities of those persons mentioned in this report who adhered strictly to those changes and organizations are plainly apparent.

FOURTH (POPULAR FRONT) PERIOD: In August 1935, in Moscow, Russia, the Seventh World Congress of the Communist Third Internationale (Comintern) was held. At this Congress a new line for all branches of the Communist Party throughout the world was laid down by GEORGI DIMITROFF, the supreme head of the Comintern.

The new line called a halt to all agitation for the overthrow of capitalism by revolutionary methods, and substituted therefor what was called the POPULAR FRONT tactic. This meant that Communists everywhere were to cease work as revolutionists, and pose as staunch defenders of democracy, civil rights and constitutional liberties and thus endeavor to influence their respective governments to bring about what was called a system of COLLECTIVE SECURITY. This meant that Communists must take part in all national governments and endeavor to influence those governments to form an alliance with the Soviet Union to stop the rise of Hitlerism in Europe. As a consequence of this policy the Communist Party in the United States at that time supported the ROOSEVELT Administration and the New Deal, although previously and before August 1935 when the new line was laid down in Moscow, it had condemned them as being fascist in nature. They also at this time worked arduously in pretended support of democratic processes and had a measure of success in penetrating governmental and administrative offices. This was only a tactic applicable at the time in the interest of the foreign policy of the Soviet Union. The Communist Party did not surrender its previous revolutionary theory of the overthrow of capitalism; it only put it aside for the time being. This was stated clearly by EARL BROWDER on his return from this Seventh World Congress when he made his report to the November Plenum of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the United States, quoted at Pages 91 and 92 in this report. (U)

FIFTH PERIOD (PERIOD OF THE PACT): During this period which began with the signing of the pact between STALIN and HITLER on August 23, 1939, by which pact they became virtual allies, and which came to an end with HITLER'S attack on the Soviet Union on June 22, 1941, the Communist parties everywhere completely reversed their previous position. From a program of support for democracy and advocacy of COLLECTIVE SECURITY, the Communist Party charged that the democracies were responsible for the war which they termed strictly an imperialist one. They demanded a negotiated peace with HITLER, opposed America's entrance into the war, opposed the lend-lease act, opposed the Selective Service Act, and in every way possible gave aid and comfort to HITLER and Fascism. This policy was the reflection of the foreign policy of the Soviet Union which at that time under the terms of the pact was the support of HITLER as against the interests of England and France. The main task of the Communist Party in the United States during that period was to prevent the United States aiding England in the struggle and to so interfere with the preparation for national defense that it could not enter the war as an ally of Britain.

SIXTH PERIOD (POST-PACT PERIOD): This period began with the attack on Soviet Russia by HITLER on June 22, 1941 and is still in effect. This attack on Soviet Russia demanded that the Communist Party again do an about face. From a program of isolation and peace for the United States they began shouting that the United States must enter the war and within ninety days were demanding a SECOND FRONT against HITLER. This demand for a second front was launched as early as September, 1941 in the Communist Party press, three months before the Pearl Harbor attack, at which time the United States officially entered the war.

This position was determined by the foreign policy of the Soviet Union which had overnight become the ally of the democracies, and not by the interests of the United States which they now so vehemently profess to defend.

Thus we find the Communists in the present period right back where they were during the POPULAR FRONT period.

We again find the Communists laying aside their revolutionary aims temporarily, supporting democracy to the fullest, going all out to defeat HITLER and for the time being, at least, withholding all criticism of capitalist "bourgeois democracy".

COMMUNIST FRONT ORGANIZATIONS IN HOLLYWOOD DURING FOURTH PERIOD

AMERICAN LEAGUE FOR PEACE AND DEMOCRACY

HOLLYWOOD ANTI-NAZI LEAGUE

NEW THEATRE LEAGUE

CONTEMPORARY THEATRE, INC.

THEATRE ARTS COMMITTEE

MOTION PICTURE DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE

All the foregoing organizations, under control and directed in the interests of the Communist Party line, were dissolved when the STALIN-HITLER pact was signed and the FIFTH PERIOD was ushered in.

COMMUNIST FRONT ORGANIZATIONS IN HOLLYWOOD DURING FIFTH PERIOD

HOLLYWOOD PEACE FORUM

HOLLYWOOD PEACE COUNCIL

HOLLYWOOD THEATRE ALLIANCE

All the foregoing organizations came into existence shortly after the STALIN-HITLER pact was signed. They all followed the Communist Party line of the PERIOD OF THE PACT, and were propaganda organizations for the Communist Party line which was isolation, opposition to aid to the allies, opposition to the Selective Service Act; in short they were working against the allies and aiding the Axis powers.

They were all dissolved when HITLER attacked the Soviet Union, which ushered in the next period, the SIXTH PERIOD.

COMMUNIST FRONT ORGANIZATIONS IN HOLLYWOOD DURING THE SIXTH PERIOD
(The present period)

HOLLYWOOD CANTEEN

COMMITTEE FOR THE CARE OF CHILDREN IN WARTIME

HOLLYWOOD DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE (Now in the process of formation)

The foregoing organizations have been created since Russia became an ally of the United Nations, and are for all out prosecution of the war and seemingly ultra-patriotic.

OTHER COMMUNIST FRONT CULTURAL ORGANIZATIONS IN HOLLYWOOD WHICH HAVE BEEN CONSTANT DURING ALL THREE PERIODS AND WHICH HAVE CLEARLY REFLECTED THE VARIOUS CHANGES IN THE PARTY LINE

LEAGUE OF AMERICAN WRITERS, HOLLYWOOD CHAPTER

HOLLYWOOD COMMITTEE FOR WRITERS IN EXILE

JOINT ANTI-FASCIST REFUGEE COMMITTEE (Formerly United Spanish Aid Committee)

LETTER OF 150

This "Letter of 150" was a signed and published document in defense of the mass "purges" in the Soviet Union.

The significance of a signature to this letter is that the signer was defending the position of STALIN as opposed to that of LEON TROTSKY in a highly involved political dispute. It is conclusive evidence that the signer was involved in inner Communist Party political differences.

The original committee that solicited the signatures for this letter were ROBERT COATES, one of the original members of the League of American Writers; MALCOLM COWLEY, League of American Writers; STEWART DAVIS, League of American Writers; MARK BLITZSTEIN, member of the League of American Writers; and PAUL STRAND, member of the League of American Writers.

This "Letter of 400" also was a signed and published document. In the spring of 1939 a group of liberals and intellectuals who opposed Communist domination of American Arts and Culture issued a statement of their views, claiming that there was no basic difference between Communism, Naziism, and Fascism; that eventually STALIN and HITLER would come to terms.

To answer these charges the "Letter of 400" was gotten up by the Communist Party. This letter denied vehemently all allegations and ridiculed the charge that STALIN and HITLER ever could make an agreement. This "Letter of 400" was published just nine days before STALIN signed the pact with HITLER, which made the Communists and fellow travellers who signed the document look rather foolish.

The original committee that set up this "Letter of 400" were the following:

Professor DOROTHY BREWSTER, Columbia University

DASHIELL HAMMETT, a writer and at the present time the President of the League of American Writers

SIGNIFICANCE OF MEMBERSHIP IN A COMMUNIST FRONT ORGANIZATION

Membership in a Communist front organization during the FOURTH PERIOD is not, of itself, proof that he or she is a Communist, or even a fellow traveller. Thousands of "innocents" were drawn into those organizations who were unaware of Communist control or party-line procedure.

BUT, if we find an individual who was a member of, or active in, a Communist front organization of the FIFTH PERIOD, then that is conclusive proof that he or she is either a Communist Party member or a close fellow traveller with the Party. This would mean that that person is willing to follow the party line of the Communist Party, even though it leads to a defense of Naziism or Facsism, should the foreign policy of the Soviet Union demand it.

AGAIN, if we find an individual who was a member of, or active in a Communist front organization of the FIFTH PERIOD, such as the American Peace Mobilization, etc., and that individual has now become a member of a front organization of the SIXTH PERIOD and takes a stand for all out prosecution of the war, etc., it is conclusive evidence that that person's present position was determined by the change in the Communist Party line when HITLER turned and attacked Soviet Russia. It is conclusive evidence that that person's interests lie not with the United States and democracy, but with the interests of Soviet Union and Communism. In spirit such a person is just as much a Communist as EARL BROWDER himself.

FELLOW TRAVELLER

This term was coined by NICOLAI LENIN, the father of the Russian Revolution. It first appears in his book "Socialism and War", written and published in August, 1915.

Speaking of certain socialists and sympathizers, whom he described as "vacillating elements" he said: "These elements can be our fellow travellers. It is necessary to get closer to them with the aim of fighting social-chauvinists. But we must remember that they are only fellow travellers; that as far as the main and fundamental problems are concerned. . . . those same elements will go, not with us, but against us. . . ."

But there was once when the great genius was wrong. The fellow traveller has become the most valuable instrument of all to the Communist Party. Not being technically a member of the Communist Party and able at all times to deny membership, he is free to carry the party line in a much more forceful manner than most party members who are always conscious of their party membership books.

Further, the fellow traveller not being a part of the inner circle where vicious intrigue and jockeying for personal power disillusions so many, he becomes a fanatical idealist willing to carry the party line to any extreme.

Knowing this, the Communist Party leaders, discourage this fanatically loyal fellow traveller from becoming a party member. He is many times more valuable on the outside in carrying the message.

TRANSMISSION BELT

When EARL BROWDER appeared before the Dies Committee in 1940 he used this term. He stated a Communist front organization was in the nature of a "transmission belt" between the masses and the Communist Party. He described it as a means whereby an individual might eventually become a member of the Communist Party through membership in one front organization after another, each one taking him step by step to party membership.

UNDEVELOPED LEAD

THE LOS ANGELES FIELD DIVISION:

At Los Angeles, California

Will continue this investigation and will compile information showing the Communist Party connections of many of the most influential personages in the motion picture business in Hollywood. This compilation of information will set forth the numerous activities of such individuals in the Communist front organizations which indicate that the Communist Party line has been followed faithfully and ardently. Attention will also be called to a large number of books, pamphlets, scenarios, plays, newsreels, speeches, letters and other material which indicate the enormous effort that has been made and is now being made by the Communist Party to get complete control of the motion picture business and use it for propaganda purposes.

There is submitted herewith the running memorandum concerning Communist infiltration of the motion picture industry which has been brought up to date as of May 24, 1947. The material discussed is divided into separate sections as follows:

I Communist Infiltration of Labor Groups
II Communist Infiltration of Intellectual Groups
III Communist Party Members in Hollywood
IV Communist Influence in Current Motion Pictures
V Soviet Activities in Hollywood
VI Communist Infiltration of RKO Studios
VII Investigation of Communist Activity in the Motion Picture Industry by the Committee on Un-American Activities, House of Representatives
VIII Miscellaneous

The new material added to bring this running memorandum up to date may be found in the following sections:

Section I, page 71
Section II, pages 119 through 121
Section VII, pages 15 through 24
Section VIII, pages 2 through 9

Of the new material added, probably the most significant will be found in Section VII which pertains to the activities of the Un-American Activities Committee during their recent visit to the movie colony in Hollywood at which time various representatives of the motion picture industry appeared as witnesses. Also of interest is the interview had by the Los Angeles Office with screen actress [redacted] During this interview, [redacted] offered her services as a source of information concerning Communist activities in Hollywood and explained her connections with Communist front groups as being due to her curiosity and interest in finding out about these various groups as well as the individuals connected with them.

These activities are being closely followed and all new information received in this regard will be incorporated into the running memorandum once each quarter, in order that you may be currently advised with respect to this situation.

COMMUNIST INFILTRATION OF THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

INTRODUCTORY BACKGROUND

The majority of the information concerning Communist infiltration of the motion picture industry has been supplied by [redacted] who is Los Angeles Confidential Informant [redacted] This informant has been associated with the motion picture industry for many years. He is a member of several labor organizations which are active in the industry and is thoroughly familiar with the background of the labor organizations in that field. He was a member of the Communist Party for [redacted] The informant is quite familiar with the Communist key figures in the Hollywood area and is able to obtain information concerning Communist activities in this industry.

This source has advised that prior to 1933 the Communist international with headquarters in Moscow, Russia, had not realized the possibilities of the motion picture as a propaganda medium. About this time the talking picture was perfected and the Soviet Union with its world-wide staff of propagandists seized the lead in adapting the motion picture for propaganda purposes throughout the world. Delegations of Russians came to Hollywood to study the American cinema.

In 1935 a "directive" was issued by the top structure of the Communist Party in the United States that there must be an intensive concentration on Hollywood and the motion picture industry. The directive stated that Communists must try to capture the labor unions, for if this could be done, they could exert much influence in the nature and type of pictures produced and thus help the Soviet cause. This directive also emphasized that at the same time work must be done among the cultural groups, writers, artists, actors, actresses, and others to enlist their assistance toward the Communist cause. The direct and indirect influence of the Communist Party of the United States on the motion picture industry in Hollywood and on all those subsidiary interests connected with that industry has been one of steady development over a period of the past ten years. During this time the motion picture industry has been considered by the Communist Party as the principal medium of propaganda for the Communist Party ideas. Consequently, the Communist Party concentrated on a program of penetration of the industry by its members. This concentration on Hollywood has been most intense.

It has been reported that as a part of the program to penetrate the motion picture industry, the Communist Party considered the importation of known Communists and persons subject to Communist influence as of great significance. A large percentage of such individuals brought into Hollywood from 1935 to 1944 and given employment are refugees who came from European countries following the rise of Nazism in Europe. They have been put in responsible positions, mostly in the fields of writing and directing, and the majority of them are reported since arriving to have shown sympathy with the Communist [redacted] and to associate with individuals who are known to be Communists. As a result of this situation, it is reported that Hollywood is being Europeanized to a startling extent.

Since the entry of the United States into the war and the cooperation of the motion picture industry with governmental agencies for propaganda purposes, Communist penetration has been extremely effective. There have been two lines of attack. One was to seek control over the workers in the studios using the trade unions as the base, the other was to seek control over the so-called intellectual and creative fields and thus determine the type of propaganda to be injected into the motion picture. [redacted]

For the purpose of this memorandum, the material discussed will be divided as follows:

I. Communist Infiltration of Labor Groups.
II. Communist Infiltration of Intellectual Groups.
III. Communist Party Membership in Hollywood.
IV. Communist Influence in Current Motion Pictures.
V. Soviet Activity in Hollywood.
VI. Communist Infiltration of R.K.O. Studios

In connection with items I and II, this memorandum will set forth some historical and background detail which it is believed will be of assistance in understanding the current situation.

As of June, 1944 a survey made of Communist members in various fields of activity in the motion picture industry indicates the following data concerning members of the Communist Party or Communist front groups in the industry:

Directors and Producers — Among this group there are nine known Communist Party members and fifteen members of one or more Communist Party front groups. Herbert Biberman, a director, is probably the outstanding Communist Party member in this field. Lewis Milestone, director of "North Star" and "Mission to Moscow," although not definitely known to be a Communist Party member, is Russian born and has been active in numerous Communist Party front groups for the past ten years. [redacted]

Writers — There are 56 known Communist Party members among the writers employed at the various motion picture studios. The outstanding figure in the writers group is John Howard Lawson, a known Communist Party member, who has great influence in the Hollywood field. [redacted]

Actors — Five actors and actresses are reported to be known members of the Communist Party in Hollywood. Twenty-four others are members of Communist Party front groups. Among the known Communist Party members, Gale Sondergaard, Lionel Stander and Lucille Ball are the most prominent. Those belonging to Communist Party front groups include James Cagney, Ida Lupino, Franchot Tone, Walter Huston and John Garfield. [redacted]

Labor — Twelve prominent labor leaders in various Hollywood unions have been identified as members of the Communist Party. It is known that a number of the "rank and file" members of the various Hollywood unions are also members of the Communist Party. Herbert K. Sorrell, known Communist Party member, is the leading labor figure in the motion picture industry. As head of the Conference of Studio Unions, he is the chief liaison man between labor and the Motion Picture Producers Association. [redacted]

Miscellaneous — In a group of miscellaneous individuals who are associated in varying capacities with the motion picture industry a survey disclosed there are 21 known members of the Communist Party. This group includes lawyers, technicians, readers and persons in the publicity field. In this group it should be noted that Donald Key King, Publicity Director for the Warner Brothers Studio, has been identified as a member of Branch K, Northwest Section, Los Angeles County Communist Party. [redacted]

April 27, 1944

I. COMMUNIST INFILTRATION OF LABOR GROUPS

Information has been received that approximately in 1934 the Communist Party realizing the propaganda possibilities in the motion picture field decided to move into the motion picture industry. In the spring of 1935 direct orders are reported to have come down in mimeographed form from the top structure of the Communist Party to all units in the Los Angeles section that there must be an intense concentration on Hollywood and the motion picture industry. This directive is said to have emphasized the fact that the Communists must try to capture the labor unions and pointed out that if this could be done the unions could be of much service in influencing the type of pictures produced and thus serve the Soviet cause.

In the early days of the motion picture industry, that is from approximately 1910 to 1930, there was no consistency in the labor organizational setup. The principal active labor organization was the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees (IATSE). This was an autonomous group of local labor unions identified with the American Federation of Labor. The IATSE jurisdiction was recognized as the only union organization in Hollywood for some years. However, on two occasions in 1921 and 1933, respectively, strikes were called by this organization which were completely unsuccessful. In each case the strike was the result of a jurisdictional dispute and was broken as a result of members of outside unions entering the field as strike breakers. As a result of the unsuccessful strikes, a very chaotic condition existed in the labor field at Hollywood in approximately 1933 and many of the workers had lost confidence in the A.F. of L. As a result, the Communist Party had little difficulty in moving into the unorganized field with the Motion Picture Workers Industrial Union, created in January 1934.

Motion Picture Workers Industrial Union, MPWIU

The Motion Picture Workers Industrial Union was an independent group completely under the control of the Communist elements and taking orders from the local functionary of the Communist Party. It will be recalled that this was in accord with the Communist Party line at that period which advocated the creation of separate unions by the Communist Party. Most of these separate unions were affiliated with the Trade Union Unity League, which, in turn, was a branch of the International of Red Labor Unions, with headquarters in Moscow. However, the MPWIU was not affiliated with the Trade Union Unity League, although it was under the control and domination of the Communist Party. Demands were made on the organizer of this union by the section secretary of the Communist Party and the Communist Party organizer in Southern California to force the union to affiliate with the TUUL. However, it declined to do so, chiefly because of the position taken by the union organizer, H. G. Wolfe. It continued to function as an independent union.

Numerous Communist Party members, according to Confidential Informant [redacted] were active in the affairs of this union, chiefly among whom were Helmer Bergman, Don [redacted] Rudolph Kohl, Boris Goldblatt and Sam Goldblatt.

In the short time between the creation of this Union in January, 1934, and April, 1935, it had taken in a large number of members and was well on the way to becoming the leading union in Hollywood. However, in April, 1935, instructions were sent out by the Central Committee of the Communist Party that the Party line had changed and that all independent unions were to be liquidated and their members sent into the A.F. of L. unions with the object of capturing the A.F. of L. This policy was followed by the MPWIU. A short time after the change in Party line the Communists in the Union began to desert and go over into the various A.F. of L. locals. At this time these A.F. of L. locals were mere shells which in many cases existed in name only. As a result of the Communist Party directive, the MPWIU gradually went out of existence and in February, 1936 it was officially dissolved.

At about this time the CIO was being organized by John L. Lewis. Several attempts are reported to have been made on the part of Lewis and other CIO figures to organize in the motion picture field. However, they have never been successful and at the present time there are no CIO unions in the motion picture industry. There are approximately 39 labor organizations of various sorts in the industry. Some of these are affiliated with the A.F. of L. and the balance are independent unions. [redacted]

Conference of Studio Unions

Herbert K. Sorrell, president of the Studio Painters Local 644 of the International Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paper Hangers of America, A.F. of L, soon became the leader of the newly activized A.F. of L. unions. Sorrell has been identified as a former member of the Communist Party in Hollywood, California. He soon became the leader of the Communist factions in the Hollywood unions. Sorrell developed favorable relations with Pat Casey, labor representative for the Motion Picture Producers Association. Casey is an $80,000 per year executive employed by the MPPA to handle labor relations. He is definitely not a Communist, but apparently finds it easy to do business with Sorrell. As a result, Sorrell has become probably the leading figure in the Hollywood labor movement.

After Sorrell had developed the leaders of a number of locals, which had strong Communist factions in them, his next move was to set up an organization which would tie all the locals into one body under his domination. This body was known as the Conference of Studio Unions.

The Conference of Studio Unions is a small compact group of delegates or representatives of a bloc of labor unions in the Hollywood motion picture industry, which has been taken over and is now under control of the Communist Party operating through its members in those unions which have captured key positions. In reality the Conference of Studio Unions is the organization set up to act as the control and steering committee to coordinate and direct Communist activities looking toward taking over all studio workers and their unions into the Communist Party orbit. The following six locals are affiliated with the Conference of Studio Unions:

Studio Painters Local 644 of the International Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paper Hangers of America.

Laboratory Technicians Local 683 of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees.

Screen Office Employees Guild, an affiliate of Studio Painters Local 644 above.

Studio Machinists Local 1185 of the International Association of Machinists, A.F. of L.

The membership of the above groups is approximately 8,000. The Conference of Studio Unions is governed by a president, chairman, vice chairman and secretary-treasurer. Each union body affiliated is represented by not more than three delegates, one of whom must be the business representative. Herbert K. Sorrell is President. Norval D. Crutcher, a former member of the Communist Party, is Chairman. D. T. Wayne, Vice Chairman and Russell L. McKnight, Secretary-Treasurer, are not known to be Communist Party members, but are reported to be connected with numerous Communist front organizations and to give every indication of being dominated and controlled by the Communist Party.

Due to the importance of the unions affiliated with the Conference of Studio Unions, brief descriptive data concerning each is being set forth below.

Studio Painters Local 644

This union is made up chiefly of painters who were members of the Communist dominated MPWIU and who, on direct orders of the Communist Party, deserted that union in 1935 to take over Local 644 of the A.F. of L. Herbert K. Sorrell is president of this union.

Laboratory Technicians Local 683

This union is affiliated with the IATSE. It has jurisdiction and control of a narrow but very important field, that of the employees who handle developing and processing of film. It has been said to be the contention of the Communist Party that if it could control the workers in this Department, [redacted]dustry would be at their mercy. This union is reported to have consistently followed the Communist Party line and to have passed resolutions in accordance with the Communist Party program. Russell L. McKnight, mentioned above, is president of the union. Norval Crutcher, also mentioned above as a former Communist Party member, is secretary-treasurer.

Screen Office Employees Guild

This union was originally organized as an independent union in about 1937. After being in existence some three or four years, it came under the influence of Sorrell and in 1941 it was issued a charter by Local 644, A.F. of L. Studio Painters. It has jurisdiction over all clerical workers and secretaries in the Hollywood studios, although the A.F. of L. has a regularly established Office Workers Union in the Los Angeles area where these workers rightfully belong. It is said that the reason for the affiliation of this "white collar" group with the A.F. of L. Painters is the preference of its Communist leadership for Sorrell over affiliation with regular A.F. of L. office workers unions.

As of November, 1943, it was reported that the SOEG was preparing a drive to organize the motion picture industry 100 per cent prior to the establishment by the A.F. of L. of an international union for white collar workers. It was reported that a special organizer, Min Selvin, a known Communist Party member, would work in close cooperation with Glen Pratt, business representative, in this organizational campaign.

Confidential informants have advised that the Communist Party took a great interest in this campaign and that a number of known Communist Party members were engaged in assisting it. From the information reported, it appears that the Communist Party will endeavor to gain control of any proposed A.F. of L. union local for white collar employees. [redacted]

Screen Cartoonists Guild Local 852

This guild has jurisdiction over cartoonists, sketch artists and animators engaged in making animated cartoons in the motion picture industry. It was originally organized as an independent group, but came under the influence of Sorrell and in 1941 was issued a charter by Local 644 of the Studio Painters and is therefore now affiliated with the A.F. of L. It is reported that this guild as a body has consistently followed the Communist Party line and has passed parallel resolutions to those of the other unions affiliated with the Conference of Studio Unions.

Screen Set Designers Guild

This union has jurisdiction over set designers, draftsmen and illustrators who until approximately 1939 had been unorganized. In the fall of 1941 the guild became affiliated with Painters Union Local 644 and thus came under the influence of Sorrell. The officers of this guild are not [redacted] to be Communist Party members, although a member of the Executive Board is so identified. The union is reported to have followed consistently the Communist Party line.

Studio Machinists Local 1185

The members of this union are highly skilled mechanics engaged mostly in building and servicing motion picture cameras and other high precision work of similar character. This union came into existence as a direct result of the break-up of the MPWIU. It is reported to have taken in the entire crew of machinists then engaged in the experimental plant of Technicolor Corporation. The union is represented in the Conference of Studio Unions by T. D. Wayne, who is said to be under the complete domination of the Communist Party and of Herbert K. Sorrell.

Hollywood Guild Council

The guilds making up the Hollywood Guild Council are the bargaining agencies for what are known as the "cultural groups, writers, artists, directors, readers and publicists." These guilds, although not affiliated with the A.F. of L. or any other labor group, are the bargaining agencies for their members. It should be noted that as in the case of writers, directors and art directors, the matter of salaries is an individual matter. These guilds in their bargaining negotiations deal with such matters as working conditions, screen credits, etc. It is reported that the Communist element had not been successful in their efforts to function within the IATSE. They, therefore, are reported to have set up another organization outside the A.F. of L. and thus created the Hollywood Guild Council. The following so-called "cultural groups" are affiliated with the Hollywood Guild Council:

Screen Writers Guild
Screen Directors Guild
Screen Publicists Guild
Screen Readers Guild
Screen Actors Guild

At the outset the Screen Office Employees Guild and the Screen Cartoonists Guild were also affiliated with this Council, but they later withdrew to affiliate with the Conference of Studio Unions.

The reported purpose of the Hollywood Guild Council was to afford a base of operations to carry on Communist propaganda and keep alive the attempt to penetrate the other unions. The Communists reportedly have attempted to draw into the Council many of the A.F. of L. locals, but have

[redacted] successful. Their activities are said to have been confined to these various guilds, which have always been more or less subject to Communist infiltration. [redacted]

Screen Writers Guild

The leading group in the Hollywood Guild Council and the one which is said to have practically controlled this organization, was the Screen Writers Guild. It was organized in 1934 as the first union group in the cultural field and is said to have come under Communist domination almost at the outset. It was organized by a group of writers who were the members of the John Reed Club of Hollywood, a Communist front organization that later became the Hollywood chapter of the League of American Writers. Prominent among the group of original organizers were the following: Howard Lawson, Samuel Ornitz, Dudley Nichols, Guy Endore and Harry Carlisle. All of these persons according to Confidential Informant [redacted] have long records of Communist activity.

This guild has been Communist dominated from its inception and has included many known members of the Communist Party. At its election in November, 1943, the vice president, treasurer and eight members of its Executive Board were definitely identified as Communist Party members by informants. A number of other officers and members, although not definitely identified as Communist Party members, are said to be under the influence of the Communist Party. [redacted]

Screen Directors Guild

This guild was organized in February, 1936, for the purpose as stated at that time to bring the directors of motion pictures in the line with other labor unions in the industry. The organizing is said to have been done by a small group of motion picture directors who professed the "progressive position" and who maintained in a broad sense that the motion picture should carry a social or political message rather than being what they claimed it was at the time, merely an "escape mechanism" for the masses. The Screen Directors Guild is in no sense strictly a bargaining labor union. Its principal reason for existence is said to be ideological in that it will assist in the production of motion pictures sympathetic to the cause of Communism and the political economy of Russia. Among those composing the original small group were King Vidor, Lewis Milestone, Frank Tuttle, Frank Borsage, Howard Hawks, Ruben Mamoulian and Gregory LaCava. Its present officers are not known to be members of the Communist Party, but it includes in its membership individuals such as Frank Tuttle, Jay Leyda, Herbert Biberman, Herbert Kline, who are reported to be Communist Party members, and others such as Orson Welles, Herman Shumlin, Lewis Milestone, Joris Ivens and Dudley Nichols, who have been active in the affairs of numerous Communist Party front organizations such as the American Peace Mobilization, the Harry Bridges Defense Committee, and similar organizations. [redacted]

Screen Publicists Guild

This guild is composed of individuals engaged in motion picture publicity work. Although its officers have not been identified with the Communist Party, the organization as a body is reported to have affiliated [redacted] with Communist inspired groups, including Labor's Unity for Victory Committee, Hollywood Writers Mobilization for Defense, League of American Writers and the Hollywood Canteen. [redacted]

Screen Readers Guild

This guild is not strictly a labor group since it is composed of individuals employed at various studios whose duties are to read books, magazines and published material and make synopses from which stories or scenes may be adapted to the motion pictures. It is said that the readers consider themselves potential writers and that their ambitions lie in that direction. This union is reported to be influenced to a large extent and dominated by the Screen Writers Guild. [redacted]

Screen Actors Guild

This guild has included a number of prominent actors in the Hollywood area. A number of the individuals have supported and taken part in Communist front organizations according to Confidential Informant [redacted] including Helen Gahagan (Helen Gahagan Douglas), Frances Farmer, John Garfield (correct name Jake Garfinkel), Gale Sondergaard, Lionel Stander and Frederic March. Current officers for the year 1944 include James Cagney, President; George Murphy, Vice President, and a number of other well known actors. John Garfield, Lionel Stander, Frederic March, and James Cagney have been identified by [redacted] as former members of the Communist Party. Gale Sondergaard through a highly confidential technique employed by agents of the Los Angeles Field Division has been identified as a member of the Communist Party. [redacted]

Miscellaneous A. F. of L. Local Unions

Information has been received that there are a number of other local A. F. of L. unions and IATSE unions engaged in the labor field in Hollywood. However, it is reported that there is no great Communist infiltration of these groups and they may be divided roughly into two categories, namely, that in which there are a number of Communist Party members and in which the locals are to a certain extent subject to Communist infiltration, and second, that in which there are a number of anti-Communists and in which the Communist influence is at a minimum.

In February, 1944, information was received that a number of the independent unions have embarked on a Communist inspired campaign to enter the A. F. of L. for the purpose of throwing their weight and influence toward attaining Communist control of the A. F. of L. structure in Southern California. Among the unions which are occasionally subject to Communist control, is the American Federation of Musicians Local 47, whose president is J. K. (Spike) Wallace, who is reportedly dominated by the Communist Party. [redacted]

Motion Picture Labor Committee
for Political Action

In September, 1943, a Motion Picture Labor Committee for Political Action was set up in line with the current movement toward the formation of a political arm by labor groups. This group reportedly was organized by individuals from unions associated with the Conference of Studio Unions and it appears to be strongly Communist dominated. It is said that while the organization operates in the name of the A.F. of L., in reality the Hollywood unit is under the control of the Communist forces. This is said to be consistent with the current nationwide program of the Communist Party to take part in political organizations and place in office those persons who are favorable to the Communist position. The organization is affiliated with such reported Communist front groups as the Peoples Educational Center, the Fifteenth Congressional District Legislative Council, the League of American Writers and the Hollywood Writers School.

Conference of Studio Unions

With the past six months, four additional unions have joined this organization. They are the following:

Building Service Employees, Local 99

This union is headed by George Bradley who is reported to be a member and sponsor of many Communist front groups.

Special Officers and Guards, Local 193

This union is headed by one Ted Carp who has not heretofore been reported as engaged in Communist activities.

Screen Publicist's Guild

This union has heretofore been independent but it was recently granted an A. F. of L. charter by which it became affiliated with Local 644 of the Motion Picture Painters League. This guild has long been under the complete control of the Communist Party. Its representative to the Conference of Studio Unions is Ted Taylor, a reporter for the People's World, Pacific Coast Communist publication and said to be an ardent Communist.

41

Screen Analyst's Guild (Formerly, Screen Readers Guild)

This union was also formerly an independent union but has recently been chartered by the A. F. of L. through the Painters Union. The members of this union are readers of material which may eventually be used in motion pictures. The analyst is in a position to recommend ideas, sequences and scenes which, if the analyst is Communisticly inclined, may contain Communist propaganda.

It is reported that the influence of the C. S. U. is growing daily and that it recently has been recognized by the Motion Picture Producers Association as a separate bargaining agency. Herbert K. Sorrell continues to be the leading figure in the C. S. U. He was a former Communist Party member. Sorrell continues to be friendly with Pat Casey, labor liaison man for the Motion Picture Producers Association. It is reported that the C. S. U. supports all Communist front activities in Hollywood.

Motion Picture Labor Committee for Political Action

This committee is presently working in conjunction with the United A. F. of L. Political Action Committee which takes in all sections of the Southern California area. The purposes of the Motion Picture Labor Committee are said to be identical with those of the Hollywood Democratic Committee, a Communist front organization. Fifteen labor unions are presently affiliated with the Motion Picture Labor Committee for Political Action. Not all those of the affiliated labor unions are Communist controlled; however, eight of the fifteen unions are said to be under the domination of Communist elements. It is reported that the Motion Picture Labor Committee for Political Action, as of May, 1944 was following the Communist Party line.

As of June, 1944 it was reported that the Motion Picture Labor Committee for Political Action had joined with a number of Communist front organizations, including the Hollywood Democratic Committee, to assist in local primary elections. These elections resulted in the defeat of Congressman John M. Costello, a member of the Dies Committee, and the nomination of Helen Gahagan Douglas, wife of actor Melvin Douglas, in the 14th Congressional District. Mrs. Douglas and her husband have been associated with numerous Communist front organizations.

[redacted] of L. Votes to Oust Reds and Fascists

The Los Angeles Herald on July 11, 1944, carried an article which stated that by a four to one vote delegates of the Central Labor Council, A. F. of L. had approved a constitutional amendment through which Communists and Fascists will be barred from membership in that organization. The article stated that William Green, national head of the A. F. of L., asked for the amendment when he rejected a proposed new constitution for the Council last year on the ground it failed to prohibit membership of "radicals." The vote was 153 to 44 in favor of the amendment, but approval came only after a floor fight in which some members objected to the use of the names of Communists or Fascists on the ground that it would cause loss of some members.

Possible Labor War in Hollywood

As of July, 1944, confidential informants have advised that there is a possibility of a labor split among the Hollywood unions. This situation arose out of the dispute between the Motion Picture Alliance for the Preservation of American Ideals (MPA), an anti-Communist group of labor unions, and the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions, which includes a number of Communist-dominated labor groups. The latter organization undertook to combat the charges of Communism levelled at the motion picture industry by the MPA. Further information concerning both organizations is set out in Section II of this memorandum. As a result of the dispute informants have reported that at least one jurisdictional dispute has arisen between a union of the anti-Communist group and a union of the alleged Communist group. This occurred when Studio Carpenters' Local #946 objected to certain activities of the Studio Grips, Local 80, IATSE, at the 20th Century Fox Studios. Reportedly Herbert K. Sorrell, President of the Conference of Studio Unions and a known Communist Party member, is guiding and directing James Skelton, business representative of the Studio Carpenters' Union, in this dispute. Informants report that as of July, 1944, it is the opinion of many labor leaders in Hollywood that this will be the beginning of a labor war in the motion picture industry. [redacted]

United A. F. of L. Committee for Political Action

In August, 1944, a reported split occurred in the above Committee over the indorsement of certain political candidates. The Committee, over the strenuous objection of certain Communist members within it, withdrew indorsement of Ned Healy, candidate for Congress in the 13th Congressional District and Hal Styles who defeated John M. Costello for the Democratic nomination in the 15th Congressional District. These actions caused a violent internal conflict within the A. F. of L. ranks. The local teamster unions led the fight against the Communists. The Hollywood leaders of the Motion Picture Labor Committee for Political Action led the Communist forces. Among the individuals identified as Communists by informant [redacted] in the latter group were Herbert K. Sorrell, Norval D. Crutcher and William Pomerance.

In August, 1944, it was learned that the Communists continued to lead the fight against withdrawal of endorsements of Styles and Healy by the United A. F. of L. Political Action Committee. According to informants, the only power of the A. F. of L. Committee is that of recommendation. Its action must be endorsed by 2/3 of all local bodies affiliated with it. The Communists reportedly used their influence with these affiliated bodies and prevented the top committee's recommendation from being adopted. The principal arena of the fight was the Central Labor Council of Los Angeles and the Communists, having secured control of this body, prevented adoption of the United Committee's recommendation. The Communists in control of the Motion Picture Labor Committee for Political Action led the fight and finally won it for the Communist element. For this reason the endorsement of Styles and Healy was not withdrawn. [redacted]

Screen Writers' Guild

In August, 1944, it was learned through the "Daily Variety," trade paper of the motion picture industry, that Mary McCall, Jr., President of the Screen Writers' Guild, had resigned. She was succeeded by Lester Cole, who had previously served as Vice President. Cole will serve as President until the annual election of the Guild in November, 1944.

Lester Cole, alias Lester Cohn, is a free lance writer employed at Columbia Studios. He is a Communist and is presently assigned to Group A-1 (Writers), Northwest Section, Communist Political Association card number 46805 for 1944. He has a long record of Communist and Communist front activities and is very active in the League of American Writers, the Hollywood Writers' Mobilization, the Hollywood Council of Guilds and Unions, and the Hollywood Democratic Committee, all of which are recognized Communist front groups.

Conference of Studio Unions

During October, 1944, this bloc of ten unions was engaged in a strike situation in the motion picture industry. A jurisdictional dispute arose between the Associated Propertymen, Local 44, I.A.T.S.E., and Screen Set Designers, Local 1421, A. F. of L. At first the set designers were supported by other unions in the Conference, principally the Moving Picture Painters, Local 644, and the Studio Machinists, Local 1185.

Lined up on one side in the dispute is the Communist group, [redacted] the Conference of Studio Unions, and on the other, the anti-Communist unions. As originally reported, the dispute was to have been used by the Communist forces in an attempt to take over the membership of the opposition. Herbert K. Sorrell, who has been identified as a former member of the Communist Party, has been in charge of the affairs of the Communist bloc and Richard Walsh, International President of the I.A.T.S.E. of New York City, and Hollywood, represents the opposition.

Walsh is said to have forced the Laboratory Technicians, Local 683, I.A.T.S.E., to withdraw from the Conference of Studio Unions. This union local is described as being thoroughly controlled by Communists, but in order to save the local's charter it was agreed upon that the local would withdraw from the Conference. This action was taken, However, it is said that this has in no way changed any of the Communist control of the union.

As indicated above, one of the purposes of the Conference has been to attempt to take over anti-Communist unions in the motion picture studio. The following six unions are involved: 1. Studio Grips, Number 80, I.A.T.S.E., A. F. of L. 2. Associated Propertymen, Number 44, I.A.T.S.E., A. F. of L. 3. Studio Laborers, Number 727, I.A.T.S.E., A. F.of L. 4. Studio Electricians, Number 728, I.A.T.S.E., A. F. of L. 5. Studio Utility Workers, Number 724, A. F. of L. 6. Studio Plasterers, Number 759, A. F. of L.

To counteract the attempt of the Conference, a meeting was held on Friday, October 27, 1944, sponsored by some seven unions of the motion picture industry, at which time it was decided to form a counter-organization to combat the inroads of the Communist elements and their attempt, through the Conference of Studio Unions, to take over the remainder of those unions, not yet controlled by Communist influences.

The president of the new group is Carl Cooper, West Coast representative of the I.A.T.S.E.; the secretary is Joseph P. Touhy, president and business representative of the Studio Drivers (Teamsters), Local 399, Hollywood. The organization has not, as yet, been given a name or title, although several meetings have been held since the initial one. Furthermore, it is said the new group's activity has been delayed to some extent by virtue of the election campaigns. It is said that the formation of this organization was the result of a visit of Richard Walsh, International President of the I.A.T.S.E. to Hollywood. Walsh is related to have warned some of the local unions in the motion picture industry that Herbert K. Sorrell was going to "gobble them all up if they didn't get busy." Sorrell, in combination with the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions, is said to be now in control of 22,000 of the 30,000 studio workers. [redacted]

Motion Picture Labor Committee for Political Action

During the first part of October, 1944, it was reported that this organization composed of Hollywood Studio A. F. of L. union locals, became completely Communist controlled. At the beginning there were several non-Communist unions belonging to the Committee, but these unions, seeing the predominance of Communists and their influence, dropped out of the Committee, leaving it in Communist hands. This Political Action Committee was affiliated with the United A. F. of L. Political Action Committee. It also cooperated wholeheartedly with the CIO Political Action Committee and also was affiliated with the Hollywood Democratic Committee. Its work centered primarily in the union. After the elections it is said there was some discussion among its functionaries as to whether the Committee should be kept intact. If it is kept in a permanent status undoubtedly it will assume a different type of work.

Screen Cartoonists Guild

This organization was formed in the early part of 1939 and in the spring of 1941. It secured a sub-charter of affiliation with the Moving Picture Painters' Local Number 644, A. F. of L. It has approximately 1,000 members and is composed of cartoonists, screen artists and animators engaged in the making of animated cartoons in the motion picture industry. Since July, 1941, the Guild has followed the Communist program and has been affiliated with a number of Communist front groups, including the Conference of Studio Unions, the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, the Sleepy Lagoon Defense Committee, the People's Educational Center, the Hollywood Democratic Committee, the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions, and the 15th District Congressional Committee. Three of the organizers of the subject Guild are known Communists, and the business representatives, William Pomerance, who represents the Guild politically, is described as one of the leading Communists in the movie industry. Three of the five delegates to the Los Angeles Central Labor Council of this Guild are Communist Political Association members and formerly members of the Communist Party.

Screen Writers Guild

The Daily Worker for November 22, 1944, carried an article concerning the election of new officers in the Screen Writers Guild. The following people were elected to official capacities:

Emmet Lavery - President
James Hilton - 1st Vice President
Hugo Butler - 2nd Vice President

Screen Writers Guild [redacted]

The Daily Worker for November 22, 1944, carried an article concerning the election of new officers in the Screen Writers Guild. The following people were elected to official capacities:

Emmet Lavery - President
James Hilton - 1st Vice President
Hugo Butler - 2nd Vice President

Ring Lardner, Jr. - 3rd Vice President
Howard Estabrook - Secretary
Michael Kanin - Treasurer

Board of Directors

Dalton Trumbo
Marc Connelly
Elmer Rice
Talbot Jennings
Sheridan Gibney
Albert Hackett
Frances Goodrich
John Howard Lawson
Oliver H. P. Garrett
Gordon Kahn
Richard Collins
Betty Reinhardt
Jo Swerling
Harold Buckman
Arthur Kober

Among the above are numerous names linked previously with the Communist movement in varying capacities. The following is a brief description of the connections of each of those persons reported to have Communist affiliations:

Emmet Lavery is also Chairman of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, a Communist front.

James Hilton is affiliated with the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

Howard Estabrook is presently Secretary of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

Michael Kanin is a reported Communist sympathizer.

Dalton Trumbo is a known Communist.

Marc Connelly is a member of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, and according to a reliable informant has engaged in Communist activities.

Talbot Jennings is a reported Communist sympathizer.

Sheridan Gibney was a member of the League of American Writers, a Communist front.

Albert Hackett is a member of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

Frances Goodrich is a member of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

John Howard Lawson is a known Communist.

Gordon Kahn is a known Communist.

Richard Collins is a known Communist.

Harold Buchman is a known Communist.

The following, according to the Daily Worker, is the new program of activity of the Screen Writers Guild:

"1. Full employment for screen writers utilizing to the fullest extent the advent of television and the expansion of the educational and commercial film; with special attention to the rapid placement of returning writers discharged after service with the armed forces or in government bureaus.

"2. Construction of a Guild Center building, housing employe groups in the industry, with meeting halls, projection rooms, auditorium, library, etc. (together with other guilds and unions in the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions).

"3. Establishment of a foreign employment exchange for the purpose of supplying trained writers and film workers of all categories to motion picture producers in other countries; establishment of foreign language classes."

(Daily Worker, 11-22-44, p.11)

Conference of Studio Unions

During November, 1944, this Communist dominated group under the leadership of Herbert K. Sorrell continued to be involved in several labor jurisdictional disputes with the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees (I.A.T.S.E.). While these disputes continued to appear purely jurisdictional, in fact, according to informants, they were fomented by Communist elements for the purpose of breaking I.A.T.S.E. Unions. At the present time, the principal controversy is between the Screen Set Directors, an A. F. of L. affiliate of Sorrell's union; the painters, and Local 44 of the Associated Propertymen, I.A.T.S.E. A strike has been threatened unless William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor, gives in to Sorrell who has the backing of his International Union, the International Brotherhood of Painters, Paperhangers and Decorators of America, A. F. of L. The International President of this Union is E. P. Lindelof, who supports Sorrell. Lindelof, according to the informant, has long been aware that Sorrell is a Communist.

Another controversy which has arisen during November, 1944, indirectly involving the Conference of Studio Unions, has the following background:

> The Motion Picture Producers Association, which has been in existence for many years, is composed of representatives from all the major studios in the film industry. A part of the Association is called the "Hays Office of Censorship" which approves or disapproves the content of pictures.
> A rift has developed in the Association. Warner Brothers has announced its withdrawal to take effect within six months - that time being required because the rules of the Association require six months notice of withdrawal. The reasons given by Warner Brothers for severing relations are that the Studio objects to the method of handling labor relations by Pat Casey who comes under the influence of the Hays Office. Also, Warner Brothers objects to the type of Censorship exercised by the Hays Office. The principle involved in this dispute between Warner Brothers and the Hays Office in the matter of censorship is that Warner Brothers objects to the censorship of what it terms "educational" content of the motion picture. In this case what is really meant is "political" content. Another point on which there is disagreement is the matter of labor relations. The Hays Office and the Casey Office have been bargaining with two different groups, the I.A.T.S.E. and the Basic Agreement Crafts, all A. F. of L. Within these two groups there has arisen what is called the Conference of Studio Unions, a Communist controlled group of key crafts under the leadership of Herbert K. Sorrell, a former Communist.

Warner Brothers has announced that it will conduct its labor relations department separate from the Hays and Casey Offices and will recognize for bargaining purposes the Conference of Studio Unions. This will give official recognition for the first time to the Communist leadership in the Hollywood Studio Unions. In this regard the informant has pointed out that Warner Brothers appears to have been consistently veering in the direction of Communist influence for some time.

Screen Actors Guild

The December 21, 1944, issue of the "Worker" carries an article on page eleven which announces that Hollywood extras and bit players voted in a National Labor Relations Board election three to one for affiliation with the Screen Players Union (unaffiliated) over the Screen Actors Guild (A.F.L.). The article states that the extras and bit players were formerly class "B" non-voting members of the Screen Actors Guild. Votes were cast by more than 1,900 of 3,300 eligible actors. The election took place on December 17, 1944.

Previously the "Daily Worker" for September 18, 1944, advised that the Screen Players Union had been actively blaming the Screen Actors Guild for not consummating negotiations for better wages and working conditions. It was reported in this first article that the Screen Players Union had invited 2,500 extras to a mass meeting "to ask them if they wouldn't like to have their present checks of $5.50, $8.25 and $10.50 upped to a minimum of $16.50 with present $16.50 checks raised a couple of bucks more." The September 18, 1944, article in effect criticizes the Screen Players Union. However, the December 21, 1944, article appeared very impartial.

The December 21, 1944, article advised that immediately after the above referred to election George Murphy, president of the Screen Actors Guild, called a meeting of his executive board to consider steps to be taken in defense of what the Guild considers its jurisdiction. It was explained in the article that the only voting members of the Guild have been "A" players, or those with substantial speaking parts.

The "Worker" article said that it appeared unlikely the Screen Actors Guild would challenge the election, although Murphy stated that his Union would "continue to exert exclusive jurisdiction over all acting work in the industry."

It was related that during the pre-election contest the Screen Actors Guild told its "B" members they would lose A.F.L. benefits if the Screen Players Union won, since the president, William Green, A. F. of L., would not permit any A. F. L. union but the Screen Actors Guild to take jurisdiction over the extras. The Screen Players Union reportedly countered with a claim that it had been issued a charter by an A. F. L. international union which it did not name, although it was believed, according to the article, in Hollywood that the international union involved is the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees.

The article in the "Worker" was ended by stating that the Screen Players Union victory culminated a long period of dissatisfaction among non-voting "B" members of the Screen Actors Guild, most of whom felt they were voiceless and desired a change.

Later, the January 4, 1945 issue of the "Daily Worker" carried an article on page 4 to the effect that "B Membership" of the Screen Actors Guild were scheduled to be abolished as of February 1, 1945, as a result of a special meeting of the Board of Directors of the Screen Writers Union, at which time steps were considered following a National Labor Relations Board certification of the new Screen Players Union, as the collective bargaining agent for all extras.

This article stated that heretofore, extras comprised the "B-Non-Voting-Membership" of the Screen Actors Guild, and that henceforth there would be "A" and "A-J" memberships in the Screen Actors Guild - "A" for actors as such, "A-J" for junior actors and bit players. It was also stated that extras who also do bit parts would probably maintain their Screen Actors Guild membership for their bit work, and membership in the Screen Players Union for their extra work.

Conference of Studio Unions

The January 16, 1945 issue of the Daily Worker carries an article on page 5 which is entitled "10 A. F. L. Hollywood Unions Back Campaign for Harry Bridges." This article states that thousands of Hollywood movie studio workers who are members of 10 A. F. of L. affiliates have voted to support Harry Bridges in his fight against deportation. It was reported in the article that acting through the Conference of Studio Unions, the workers wired the Attorney General and the President asking an immediate termination of deportation proceedings, as well as the granting of citizenship to Bridges. Herbert K. Sorrell, A. F. of L. Painter's leader and president of the Conference of Studio Unions, is said to have signed the wire. The article lists the Unions represented in the conference as, Screen Cartoonists Guild, Screen Office Employees Guild, Screen Set Designers, Screen Story Analysts Guild, Screen Publicists Guild, Special Officers and Guards Local 193, Film Technicians, Motion Picture Machinists, Moving Picture Painters and Service Employees Local 278. [redacted]

Information was received in January, 1945, concerning the jurisdictional dispute between this group and the International Association of Theatrical and Stage Employees. It is said that Sorrell has threatened to call a strike of the set dressers to enforce the conference's demands for control of this craft. The dispute is a part of a general program instituted by Communist controlled unions in Hollywood to invade the jurisdiction of the IATSE which is said to be generally opposed to Communist infiltration. Confidential Informant [redacted] states that the Communists are reviving the Browne-Bioff affair by demanding a Senate investigation of the release of these two men from prison, claiming they will again appear in the union affairs in Hollywood. The informant pointed out that this is being done for propaganda purposes. The same source has referred to a series of work stoppages in the studios for a period of several months, ending in January, 1945, which he said are ostensibly caused by jurisdictional disputes between the set dressers and the set designers. The informant pointed out that in reality this has been a process used by Communist controlled unions to maintain the "militancy" of the workers and at the same time work for the sympathy of members of other unions. [redacted]

Radio Writers Guild

The January 24, 1945 issue of the Daily Worker carries an article announcing that this Guild has been organized on a national basis, and that funds for its national budget have been supplied by the Authors League of America. The article announced that objects for 1945 for this organization are:

1. Negotiation of national contracts for radio news and continuity writers working for the national chains.
2. Negotiations for a national minimum basis agreement for all free lance writers.

The new National Secretary is Dorothy Bryant, described as previous secretary of the Radio Writers Guild, Eastern Region and before that executive secretary of the Chorus Equity Association. It was voted that discharged serviceman would be exempt from the standard $10.00 initiation fee. [redacted]

SCREEN WRITERS GUILD

The Screen Writers Guild, an affiliate of the Authors League of America, Inc., was organized in 1933. It is said to be the first union group of the cultural field in the motion picture industry to come under the domination of the Communists and Communist sympathizers. It has approximately 1300 members, of which about 100 are reported to be members of the Communist Party. In addition, a great many of its members are associates of Communists and are alleged to be sympathetic to Communist ideology and have been active in Communist dominated organizations. The Screen Writers Guild has given prestige to the Communist movement in Hollywood and has taken the lead in the organized cultural union groups in following the Communist Party line.

John Howard Lawson, Robert Rossen, Lester Cole, Hugo Butler, Waldo Salt and Ring Lardner, Jr. reportedly are among the leading Communists who have been officials in this guild and who have been most influential in shaping its policies.

Officers of the Screen Writers Guild, Inc.

The June, 1945 issue of "The Screen Writer," a magazine published by the Screen Writers Guild, listed the following individuals as officers of this organization:

President - Emmet Lavery:

According to information in the file of the Los Angeles Office, Lavery is a native born citizen whose home is Poughkeepsie, New York. He is a graduate of the Fordham Law School and is a former instructor of the Catholic University, Washington, D. C. He is comparatively new in the motion picture industry and for the past three years has continually associated with Communists and has been used by them as a front for various organizations. He was formerly connected with the Federal Theater Project in New York City. He claims to be an ardent foe of red-baiting and stated that despite the fact he is not a Communist he has suffered considerably, particularly on the Federal Theater Project, from red-baiting. Although no documentary evidence is contained in the file which would indicate Lavery is a member of the Communist Party, he has been chairman of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization and was also a member of the Executive Board of the Hollywood Democratic Committee, both of which are said to be Communist dominated organizations.

First Vice President - Ring Lardner, Jr.:

Lardner was formerly a member of Branch A-1, Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party. In July of 1945, he was reliably reported to be a member of the Beverly Westwood Cultural Group of the Communist Political Association.

Second Vice President - Frances Goodrich:

She has been active in the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, said to be a Communist dominated organization.

[redacted]

Third Vice President - Gordon Kahn:

He was formerly a member of Branch A-1, Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party. In July of 1945 he was reliably reported to be a member of the Communist Political Association. He is the Managing Editor of "The Screen Writer", a magazine published by the Screen Writers Guild. According to [redacted] a paid informant of the Los Angeles Office, Kahn is active in the Hollywood Writers Mobilization and the Hollywood Democratic Committee, both of which organizations are said to be Communist dominated.

Secretary - Howard Estabrook:

Although there is no documentary evidence of Estabrook's membership in the Communist Party, he has been active in numerous Communist front organizations and was a sponsor of the American Youth for Democracy.

Treasurer - Michael Kanin:

There is no documentary evidence in the Los Angeles Office which would prove that Kanin is a member of the Communist Party. However, he has reportedly been active in a number of Communist front organizations and is known to have contributed $10.00 to the "People's World", reported West Coast Communist news organ, during the fund drive of that publication in 1944.

Executive Committee

The following individuals, who were listed in the June, 1945 issue of "The Screen Writer" as members of the Executive Committee of the Screen Writers Guild, have been reported to be either Communists or Communist sympathizers: Richard Collins; Oliver H. P. Garrett; Sheridan Gibney; John Howard Lawson; Dalton Trumbo; Albert Hackett; Joe Sworling; Harold Buchman; Frank Partos.

Activities

A review of the second report of the Un-American Activities Committee in California, which is the report of the Joint Fact Finding Committee to the 56th California Legislature, published in Sacramento, California, in 1945, revealed the names of the individuals who signed the call to the various American writers congresses of the League of American Writers. Both the American Writers Congress and the League of American Writers are said to have been Communist dominated. The First American Writers Congress was held in New York City in 1935 and the Fourth and last American Writers Congress was held in New York City, in 1941. At the 1941 Congress John Howard Lawson and

Albert Maltz, both members of the Screen Writers Guild, were elected National Vice Presidents of the League of American Writers. It is pertinent to know that the League of American Writers organization was discontinued in the latter part of 1943. During the time it was in operation, however, it was reported to have been completely Communist dominated. It is also of interest to note that a number of the members of the Screen Writers Guild were instructors in the League of American Writers school in Hollywood, California.

Under questioning before the California Legislature Joint Fact Finding Committee, John Howard Lawson and Marc Connelly, both of whom are members of the Screen Writers Guild, admitted that they, together with Robert Rossen, also a member of the Screen Writers Guild, were the real organizers of the Communists in the motion picture industry and stated that they had carried the brunt of the early organizational work.

When Alexander Trachtenberg, National Educational Director of the Communist Party, visited Los Angeles in February, 1943, he held conferences with various Communist writers who were members of the Screen Writers Guild, among whom were John Howard Lawson, Robert Rossen, Albert Maltz and Waldo Salt.

Publications

The Screen Writers Guild has published the Screen Writers Guild Bulletin since at least 1942. This publication is a tabloid sized paper consisting of four to eight pages. It has reported the activities of the Guild, the committee, the election of officers and the screen correspondence of members of the Guild. It also reports much of the activities of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, particularly insofar as it concerns the activities of the Screen Writers Guild. It is pertinent to note the Screen Writers Guild reportedly was very influential in helping to organize the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

In June of 1945 the Guild began the publication of the magazine entitled "The Screen Writer". This magazine is about the size of the "Readers Digest" and is to be published monthly.

There is set out below the names of the individuals who are said to comprise the officers and Editorial Committee of "The Screen Writer":

Editor	Dalton Trumbo
Managing Editor	Gordon Kahn
Editorial Committee	Ring Lardner, Jr.
	Robert Andrews
	Theodore Strauss
	Earl Felton
	Lamar Trotti
	Arnold Manoff
	Frank Partos
	Michael Hogan

Of these, according to the confidential records of Elizabeth Benson, secretary of organization and membership director of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party, Dalton Trumbo, Gordon Kahn, Ring Lardner, Jr. and Arnold Manoff were members of the Communist Political Association as of July, 1945. Of the others, Lamar Trotti received a cultural award from the publication "New Masses" for his work in the motion picture "Wilson." [redacted]re Strauss has been discussed in "The Screen Writer" as a former film reviewer for the "New York Times" before he began to write for the screen. Recently he was observed by Bureau Agents at meetings in the home of Richard Collins, a screen writer and known Communist. Frank Partos, a former secretary of the Screen Writers Guild, has also been an associate of many Communists in the past. No immediate information was available concerning the Communist tendencies of Earl Felton and Michael Hogan.

Known Communists in the Screen Writers Guild

Documentary evidence in the possession of the Los Angeles Office reflects that approximately 100 members of the Screen Writers Guild were members of the Communist Political Association in July of 1945. The documentary evidence mentioned is comprised of reproductions obtained from the confidential records of Elizabeth Benson, secretary of organization and membership director of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party. The members of the Screen Writers Guild, who were listed as members of the Communist Political Association as of July, 1945, are as follows:

Screen Writers Guild Members Connected with OWI OVERSEAS FILM PROGRAM

As of July, 1945, over fifty writers all members of the Screen Writers Guild, have been working on scripts for pictures produced in connection with the OWI Overseas Film Program. The Writers Mobilization has named an editorial board which directs the activity of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization in connection with the OWI Overseas Film Program. Among the editorial board members are the following members of the Screen Writers Guild:

JOHN HOWARD LAWSON
MARC CONNELLY
SIDNEY BUCHMAN
CHARLES BRACKETT
JOHN HOUSEMAN
ROBERT ROSSEN
HOWARD ESTABROOK
HOWARD KOCH
HARRY TUGEND

All of the above-mentioned writers have been described as either Communist Party members, associates of known Communists or members of organizations allegedly controlled by known Communists.

[redacted] In addition to their activities in the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, CMI Overseas Film Program members of the Screen Writers Guild have also been active in the Hollywood Democratic Committee, a political organization which has no official connection with the Democratic Party of California. John Howard Lawson, a Communist Party member, was one of the organizers of the Hollywood Democratic Committee and information has been obtained from a technical surveillance maintained on Lawson that George Pepper, the Executive Secretary of the Hollywood Democratic Committee, confers with Lawson in order to obtain instruction as to the policies and activities of the Committee. On June 6, 1945, this organization changed its name to the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions. Among the members of the Screen Writers Guild elected to the Executive Council of the latter mentioned organization are the following:

MARC CONNELLY
HARRY KURNITZ
JOHN HOWARD LAWSON
JACK MOSS
WILLIAM POMERANCE
JO SWERLING
ORSON WELLES
MORRIS COHN
HOWARD KOCH
EMMET LAVERY
MARY C. McCALL
NAT PERRIN
MARION SPITZER
DALTON TRUMBO

All of the above-named members of the Screen Writers Guild have either been members of the Communist Political Association or have been connected with organizations reportedly dominated by the Communist Party in the past.

SCREEN CARTOONISTS GUILD

[redacted] Los Angeles, California, an informant of the Los Angeles Office, advised that Maurice Howard has continued as business representative for the Screen Cartoonists Guild. The motion picture trade magazine "Variety" in its issue of June 22, 1945, carried a news item to the effect that the following individuals had been elected to the offices in the Screen Cartoonists Guild:

President	Ace Gamer
Vice President	Ray Patin
Treasurer	Cornett Wood
Recording Secretary	Charlotte Adams
Executive Secretary	Cecil Beard
Warden	Roger Daley

Of the above, it should be noted that Charlotte Adams and Cecil Beard were known to the Los Angeles Office as members of the Los Angeles County Communist Political Association as of August 14, 1945. The trustees of this organization were said to be Bolus Jones, Paul Julian and Jack Bailey. Jack Bailey was known to the Los Angeles Office as a member of the Communist Political [redacted]ation as of August 14, 1945.

Information has also been received to the effect that Earl Klein was named editor of "The Animator," which is the official magazine of the Screen Cartoonists Guild. A copy of the July, 1945 issue of "The Animator" was obtained and is being retained in the Los Angeles files. This issue of "The Animator" contained articles which stressed the theme that screen cartoonists work for "peanuts" and described the motion picture producers as being unscrupulous, profit-mad individuals. This issue also carried favorable comments concerning the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions, a Communist controlled organization.

The Conference of Studio Unions

This block of studio unions played the major role in the motion picture strike taken up separately elsewhere in this section. Confidential Informan[redacted]dvised that the strike by the Conference of Studio Unions was not a legitimate labor dispute but rather a strike by a group of Communist dominated locals using the question of jurisdiction over a small group of set dressers as an excuse. The dispute was between the Conference of Studio Unions and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees - AFL. The informant advised that the present dispute was the third attempt in eight years by the Communist element to capture or disrupt the IATSE, which has always opposed Communist infiltration of its ranks. The Communist issue was raised in the strike and the dispute largely revolved about that question rather than around the usual issues of wages, hours or working conditions.

Confidential Informant [redacted] stated that although the strike was generally believed to be the result of Communist activity throughout groups belonging to the Conference of Studio Unions, newspapers reaching the general public smothered this angle of the controversy. The informant attributed this fact to the desire of the moving picture industry to keep the public from knowing that there was any basis for the threatened investigation by the "Rankin Committee" of the Communist influence in Hollywood. Publications of the IATSE, however, stressed this feature of the labor dispute but distribution of such publications reached relatively few people.

The informant stated that Herbert K. Sorrell, head of the Conference of Studio Unions and leader of the strike, who the informant described as a known Communist, called for and received the support of the Communist Party locally and to some extent throughout the United States. Sorrell reportedly had contact with the National Committee of the Communist Party in New York through Louis Weinstock, National Committeeman, and was promised support by the arrangement for picket lines in front of theaters.

STRIKE IN MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY
MARCH 12 TO OCTOBER 29, 1945

Background

The motion picture industry strike, which started on March 12, 1945, was precipitated as the result of a jurisdictional dispute as to whether 77 set designers were to be represented by Local Union 1421, Screen Set Designers, an affiliate of the Conference of Studio Unions, or Local Union 44, an affiliate of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees - AFL. The strike was settled on October 29, 1945. Herbert K. Sorrell, a former Communist, is president of the Conference of Studio Unions and was recognized as the leader of the strike. Richard A. Walsh is president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees - AFL, the union which opposed Sorrell's Conference of Studio Unions in this labor dispute.

This strike was not called in an attempt to gain an increase in wages or better working conditions for the union members but was purely political in character. It was, in fact, an attempt on the part of the Conference of Studio Unions to break the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees Group of AFL Unions, which has always opposed Communist infiltration and domination.

Lack of Communist Activity in Strike Prior to July 28, 1945

No Communist activity favoring this strike was noted from its inception on March 12, 1945 to July 28, 1945. During this period, the Communist Party line was one of collaboration, which was adopted at the time Russia was invaded by Germany in June of 1941. In view of this fact, the Communist Party did not support this strike since the Party line clearly advocated no strikes which would interfere with the prosecution of the war inasmuch as Russia was in need of all possible aid from the United States.

On July 28, 1945, the Communist Political Association reverted to the tenets of the Communist Party of the United States and at that time, William Z. Foster, the new National Chairman of the Communist Party, announced the Party would return to the Marxist-Leninist line of revolutionary action. Since this strike lasted from March 12 to October 29, 1945, a period which bridged the change in furthering this strike after July 28, 1945, is plainly apparent.

Communist Participation in the Strike after July 28, 1945

Immediately after the change in the Party line, the Communist press began to support the strike and the Communist front organizations came out openly in support of the strikers. The Communist Party and its various branches in the localities affected by the strike began to issue leaflets calling on all the workers to man the picket lines. It was plainly visible at that time that the Communist Party and its members were whipping the situation toward the violent stage.

On October 5, 1945, mass picketing began and thousands of persons, ninety per cent of whom had no connection with the film industry, appeared on the picket lines at Warner Brothers Studios in Burbank, California. The strikers concentrated on this particular studio although the same tactics were used on others, particularly Paramount, Columbia and RKO.

As a result of what amounted to mob action, during the first week of October, 1945, several hundred persons who had gathered at the Warner Brothers Studio gates were injured. The violence reached such a pitch that the community around Warner Brothers Studios was closed to both traffic and the public. During the period from October 5 to October 28, 1945, violence and mob action was rampant and the local law enforcement authorities seemed to be helpless or loath to carry out their duty of restoring order by enforcing an injunction which had been issued by the Los Angeles State Superior Court against mob action on the picket lines. At one time, mass arrests were made but this seemed only to increase the violence.

The violence which occurred in connection with this strike was so flagrant and law enforcement so inefficient that an Interim Committee on Law Enforcement of the State Assembly of California began an investigation of the law enforcement authorities for failure to enforce the law. Judging from the attitude and statements made by members of this Interim Committee, they appeared to be amazed at the influence of the Communists on the public officials of Los Angeles City and County and the State of California, who now appear to have been very susceptible to the political pressure the Communist apparatus exerted at that time.

This strike was settled on October 29, 1945, when an agreement was reached between Eric Johnston, film czar, and high AFL Union officials in a conference at Cincinnati, Ohio. Immediately after this settlement, it was reported the strike had been called off under a makeshift settlement and that the Communists were preparing to reopen the fight in the near future. However, as of January 4, 1946, there was no indication that an immediate resumption of this strike would take place in the motion picture industry.

The leading Communist front organizations which took an active part in this strike are as follows:

Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions
International Workers Order
National Lawyers Guild
Southland Jewish Committee
Beverly-Westwood Democratic Committee
Hollywood Women's Council
Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions

Los Angeles County Central Committee of the Democratic Party
Screen Writers Guild
CIO Industrial Union Council of Los Angeles

Since this strike was of extreme importance to the Communist program for greater infiltration and domination of the motion picture labor unions and the resultant influence on the motion picture industry as a whole, the Communist Party in Los Angeles exerted all of its influence in its fight to win this strike.

DEVELOPMENTS AS RESULT OF STRIKE

a confidential informant of the Los Angeles Office, advised that when this strike came to a formal end through the efforts of Eric Johnston, both the Conference of Studio Unions (CSU), which is dominated by the Communist Party and whose spokesman is Herbert K. Sorrell, and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees (IATSE), which is represented in Hollywood by Roy M. Brewer, agreed to abide by the findings of a board of arbitration which had been appointed by the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor. This arbitration board consisted of three men who had no interest in the motion picture industry and who were responsible heads of the AF of L Labor Union Internationals. These men made a report of their findings about January 6, 1946, and when their decision was announced, the IATSE accepted the board's decision but the CSU unions refused to do so. The CSU members staged sitdown strikes and in many other ways interferred with the production of pictures as a result of the board's decision which was considered unfavorable to the CSU unions.

During the latter part of February, 1946, Herbert K. Sorrell, head of the CSU, advised the producers that he would call another strike unless all of his demands were met. It should be noted that the CSU has since the termination of the strike on March 12, 1945, demanded wage raises and an adjustment of hours in addition to the issues previously involved which was an attempt on the part of the CSU to break the IATSE which has always opposed Communist infiltration and domination. (According to confidential informant the real purpose of the CSU is two-fold: first, the union desires to keep the general labor situation agitated in line with the present Communist Party program of creating confusion in the United States and second, to maintain intact the leadership of Herbert K. Sorrell.)

further informed that Sorrell has been exposed by the IATSE as a member of theCommunist Party and added that Sorrell's record of

Communist activity over a period of eight years has been made public along with the general aims of the Communist Party in the Hollywood motion picture [redacted]stry.

In January of 1946, Sorrell was convicted in the Superior Court of Los Angeles County of inciting to riot and defying an injunction against mass picketing and was sentenced to serve sixteen days in jail. He was to begin serving his sentence on January 19, 1946, but as of February 15, 1946, there had been no attempt on the part of local authorities to enforce the sentence. In addition to the jail sentence, Sorrell was fined $1,700. It is not known whether this fine has been paid. It was stated that one of the reasons Sorrell had not been ordered to serve the sentence imposed upon him was the fact that the Communists, masked as "progressives" and "liberals," have a tremendous influence on the courts and law enforcement agencies in Southern California. The most recent information received with regard to this situation was to the effect that after some delay, Sorrell had actually served the sixteen-day jail sentence.

The Central Labor Council of Los Angeles, an AF of L body, is presently preparing to expel Sorrell as a delegate to that Council because of his reported Communist Party membership and his secret maneuverings with the CIO. It is thought that Sorrell would like to see the CIO take jurisdiction over all of the Hollywood studio unions. A complete report which contains photostatic proof of Sorrell's connections with the Communist Movement has been filed with the Los Angeles Central Labor Council. All of this proof is reportedly substantiated by testimony of recognized handwriting experts. Despite this allegation of Communist affiliation on the part of Sorrell, the producers of motion pictures, according to [redacted] have announced that they will deal with Sorrell as the representative of the CSU. [redacted] added that this action of the producers is difficult to understand unless it is due to the influence of certain individuals in the top executive branches who are known to be sympathetic to the Communist cause or at least to be affiliated with Communist front organizations. The leader of this faction is Walter Wanger, one of the major producers in the moving picture industry and an inveterate "Communist-fronter." The following individuals within the Communist-influenced labor unions in Hollywood are most active as leaders in support of Sorrell and the Communist aim of controlling all studio labor according to Wolf:

John Howard Lawson, Screen Writers Guild *
Emmett Lavery, Screen Writers Guild
John Cromwell, Screen Directors Guild
Frank Tuttle, Screen Directors Guild *
Norval Crutcher, Local 683, Laboratory Technicians, IATSE *
Russell L. McKnight, Local 683, Laboratory Technicians, IATSE

John Martin, Local 683, Laboratory Technicians, IATSE
Jacob Sterr, Studio Machinists, Local 1185
[redacted]
Charles Barker, Studio Machinists, Local 1185
Roy Tindall, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, (IBEW) Local 40
Helmer Bergman, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, (IBEW) Local 40 *
William Pomerance, Business Manager, Screen Writers Guild *
Maurice Howard, Business Representative Screen Cartoonists *
Ed Mussa, Set Decorators, Local 1421
Frank Drdlik, Set Decorators, Local 1421 *
Carl Head, Studio Painters, Local 644
Ted Ellsworth, Studio Costumers, Local 705, IATSE
Glenn Pratt, Screen Office Employees Guild
Lillian Hurwitz, Screen Office Employees Guild
Dave Hilberman, Screen Office Employees Guild *
Mike Jeffers, Screen Players Union, Independent Union of Extras
James Skelton, Studio Carpenters, Local 946
George Bradley, Building Service Employees, Local 99 *
Jack Williams, Police Officers and Guards, Local 278 *

The above-named individuals are the leaders of the Communist faction within the Hollywood studio crafts and unions. They are the spokesmen along with Sorrell for the program of the Communist Party. The individuals after whose names an asterisk appears have heretofore been reported as known Communist Party members by sources considered to be reliable by the Los Angeles Office.

Screen Writers Guild, Inc.
(Period January 1, 1946, through March 31, 1946)

According to the January, 1946 issue of "The Screen Writer," which is the official publication of the Screen Writers Guild, there are at present 1,317 members of the SWG, 972 of whom are classified as active members and 345 who are described as associate members. An associate member is a writer who has been elevated to a directorship or a producership position in the motion picture industry. However, of the 972 active members of the SWG, only 366 are presently employed in the eight major studios in the motion picture industry. According to this issue of "The Screen Writer," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer employees 116 screen writers, RKO Studios 27, 20th Century-Fox Studios 44, Columbia 36, Paramount 50, Republic 20, Universal 32 and Warner Brothers 41.

In November of 1945, the SWG held its annual election at which time the following writers were elected to executive positions:

[redacted] President	Emmet Lavery
First Vice President	Lester Cole
Second Vice President	Howard Estabrook
Third Vice President	Oliver Garret
Secretary	Maurice Rapf
Treasurer	Harold Buchman
Executive Board:
Philip Dunne	Gordon Kahn
Mary McCall	Marguerite Roberts
Sheridan Gibney	Howard Koch
Richard Collins	Adele Buffington
Robert Rossen
Alternates to Executive Board:
Frank Partos	John Wexley
Allan Scott	Bud Schulberg
Hugh Herbert	Henry Meyers

All of the above-named individuals with the exception of Adele Buffington, Philip Dunne and Hugh Herbert are alleged Communists or have been identified as having participated in numerous Communist front activities. The Executive Secretary and Business Agent of the SWG, William Pomerance, was recently reappointed. Pomerance, according to [redacted] is a Communist.

[redacted] a member of the SWG who has requested that his name be kept in strictest confidence, advised that for some time there has been a discussion within the Guild regarding the passing of a resolution or an amendment to their constitution which would allow the Guild to make political assessments. According to [redacted] the reason for this was to avoid a recurrence of the difficulty with which the American Federation of Radio Artists was confronted when Cecil B. DeMille refused to pay one dollar which had been accessed to him for political purposes.

According to articles which appeared in the local Los Angeles newspapers on July 17, 1945, the question of political assessments was brought up at a meeting of the SWG but was defeated. When this information later appeared in the "Hollywood Reporter," Emmet Lavery, President of the SWG, wrote a mimeographed letter to each member of the Guild in which he advised that the "Hollywood Reporter" had libeled him and denied that there had ever been any attempt to force a political assessment upon the Guild's members. However, Lavery did state that at a regular meeting of the SWG on July 17, 1945, the membership took a strong stand by forming a committee to join with other guilds and unions in a strong affirmation of "community unity in the face of Gerald L. K. Smith's destructive and disruptive tactics." The members of the Guild also authorized the Executive Board of the SWG to take whatever steps seemed appropriate to them in defending both the Guild and the motion picture industry against the "continued attacks by Congressman Rankin and State Senator Jack B. Tenney, Chairman of the California State Un-American Activities Committee." It was made quite clear at this meeting that the SWG planned to take a definite stand against "vicious red-baiters." According to information obtained from a technical surveillance which is maintained on John Howard Lawson, Lester Cole, a Communist, will be a member of the aforementioned committee. Lester Cole was also appointed as head of a committee set up by the SWG to prepare a re-employment plan for writers who are returning from the armed services.

On February 13, 1946, the "Daily News" carried a news story which quoted Lester Cole as saying that the producers have not been cooperative and that his committee must take additional steps in order to secure the re-employment of veterans.

[redacted] a confidential informant of the Los Angeles Office, stated that this action is an attempt on the part of the Communist element within the SWG to force producers to re-employ Communists who are now returning from the armed forces.

On March 12, 1945, Herbert K. Sorrell called a strike in the motion picture industry because of a jurisdictional dispute between his Conference of Studio Unions and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees Union. Sorrell called this strike without having consulted with Communist leaders and within a few days after it began, the Communists issued an official statement in which they informed that they would not take part in the strike inasmuch as it was adverse to their no-strike pledge. It is interesting to note that the SWG also issued a statement to the effect that there was no justification for the strike. However, following the publication of the Jacques Duclos' article and the subsequent revision of Communist Party policy on July 27, 1945, the Communists in Hollywood issued another official statement of policy in which they advised they would on August 9, 1945, the SWG issued a request which amounted to a demand that the producers negotiate with the CSU in a demand to the War Labor Relations Board that the strike be ended at once. William Pomerance, Executive Secretary of the SWG and an alleged Communist, sent a wire to E. J. Mannix, President of the Motion Picture Producers Association, in which he stated that the producers' position had created serious obstacles to the peaceful settlement of the dispute and called upon them to settle and thus removed the suspicion that the producers were endeavoring to exploit the situation to their advantage.

In the August 21, 1945 issue of "Variety" the Teamsters Union strongly criticized the SWG for having entered into a dispute in which it was in no way concerned. The Teamsters Union called on the SWG to answer the question of why it had abandoned its neutral position. The teamsters added that the blunt fact was that the Hollywood studio strike was not a strike over wages or hours but a jurisidctional dispute in which both the Communists and the SWG had reversed their original positions. [redacted] informed that this action on the part of the SWG clearly represents the Communist domination and infiltration of that organization.

During this period the SWG has continued to publish "The Screen Writer," many articles of which are contributed by members of the Communist Party. In the October, 1945 issue of this publication, there are five lead articles, four of which were written by members of the Communist Party, and the fifth was authorized by a Chinese cameraman, James Wong Howe, who lives with a Caucasian Communist, Sonora Babb. The editor, the managing editor and Ring Lardner, Jr., who is on the editorial committee, are members of the Communist Party and "The Screen Writer" itself is designed by John Hubley, a Communist, according to information obtained from the records of Elizabeth Benson, Section Organizer and Membership Director of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles Communist Party.

(Period January 1, 1946, through March 31, 1946)

The strike in the motion picture studios which was called by the Conference of Studio Unions on March 12, 1945, and which ended on October 29, 1945, has been settled temporarily by a three-man arbitration committee during the period January 1 through March 31, 1946. This arbitration committee was appointed by the Executive Council of the AF of L. The striking employees returned to their jobs but the same basic differences between the Conference of Studio Unions and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees are still in existence despite the decision made by the arbitration committee. According to [redacted] a confidential informant of the Los Angeles Office, it is only a matter of time until the fight between the Conference of Studio Unions and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees will flare up again.

Herbert K. Sorrell, leader of the Conference of Studio Unions and a former Communist, was a member of the Communist Party in 1937 under the name of Herb Stewart. In 1937 he carried Communist Party Membership Book No. 60622.

DEVELOPMENTS IN THE CONFERENCE OF STUDIO UNIONS
APRIL 1, TO JULY 1, 1946

During the month of May, the labor situation within the Hollywood studio unions was comparatively quiet, most probably due to the fact that Herbert K. Sorrell was on trial before the Los Angeles Central Council on the charge of being a Communist. However, on May 29, 1946, the AF of L Central Labor Council directed its affiliated members not to handle material worked on by the members of the nonaffiliated International Association of Machinists. The International Association of Machinists withdrew from the AF of L some ten months ago, as you will recall, as a result of a jurisdictional dispute with the AF of L Carpenters.

The Conference of Studio Unions, lead by Herbert K. Sorrell and heavily infiltrated by Communists, has been placed in a very peculiar position as a result of this dispute. The Conference of Studio Unions is composed of eleven local unions, ten of which are affiliated with the AF of L and the other with the International Association of Machinists.

A spokesman for the International Association of Machinists stated that if members of his union are discharged as a result of the AF of L ultimatum, the eight major Hollywood studios will be picketed. Leaders of the AF of L have ordered the motion picture industry to ignore the picket line of the International Association of Machinists. The Conference of Studio Unions, however, has announced that its 8,000 members will support the International Association of Machinists' picket line, and it appeared at that time as if the major Hollywood studios would again be faced with a major jurisdictional strike.

The International Association of Machinists local, as you recall, is completely dominated by Communists who have pursuaded Communist leaders in the Conference of Studio Unions to back them against the AF of L.

The "Daily People's World", a West Coast Communist publication, on June 22, 1946, carried an article under the caption, "Producers Strike," which stated that it was really the producers who were calling the strike in the motion picture industry and which described it as, "a Producers maneuver, the same kind of maneuver which to date has successfully stalled contracts." However, information developed reflects that the producers are merely the victims of a jurisdictional dispute between the two rival unions.

The Communist Party has issued a number of leaflets addressed to all studio workers calling upon them to unite in order that they may secure higher wages, and additional information reflects that the Communists will fully back any strike which is called in the motion picture industry.

Producers in Hollywood were allowing both rival unions to work, meanwhile filing their petitions with the National Labor Relations Board requesting a proper bargaining agent. This petition to the National Labor Relations Board outlines the claim of the four unions which are now involved in the dispute, namely, the International Association of Machinists, the new charter AF of L Machinists, the International Brotherhood of Teamsters and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees. Each of these unions claims the right to represent machinists in the studios.

On July 1, 1946, Herbert K. Sorrell called a strike, claiming the producers failed to recognize his wage demands. This strike seriously affected the ten major motion picture studios. Sorrell coupled recognition of a non AF of L Machinists union with his wage demands. Although producers state that they have agreed to meet wage demands, they do not recognize the non AF of L Machinists Union and have called upon the National Labor Relations Board to settle the jurisdictional issue.

Additional information developed from confidential paid informant [redacted] stated that the real issue is a jurisdictional dispute between the Conference of Studio Unions and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees. Roy Brewer, international representative of the IATSE, stated to the press on the morning of July 1, that his members would cross the picket lines. According to a release in the "Daily Worker", carrying the date line of July 2, 1946, and bearing the caption "The AF of L Unionists Engage in Bloody Clashes at Two Movie Studios Today," it was indicated that many were bruised, two required hospitalization and two were arrested as the production was generally slowed down. Following this uprising, peace feelers went out from the strikers. This peace bid came from the Conference of Studio Unions, which proposed an interim wage contract with producers and a truce of thirty to sixty days. The IATSE announced a willingness to join this peace movement, and the article continued, the producers had scheduled a meeting to be held later on July 2, 1946.

DEVELOPMENTS IN CONFERENCE OF STUDIO UNIONS
(July 23, 1946 to November 14, 1946)

According to [redacted] Confidential Paid Informant of the Los Angeles Field Division, the Conference of Studio Unions, which he classified as a block of Communist-dominated unions, during August of this year again opened the jurisdictional dispute with the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees (IATSE). [redacted] stated that because of this dispute there may be another strike called in the motion picture industry. He stated that the block of unions has now refused to accept the decision of the arbitrators of the dispute and that they are now demanding that the work allocated to the IATSE be given to the Studio Carpenters Local 946, which is one of the Unions affiliated with the Conference of Studio Unions.

This source states that in all this union activity there is no question of wages or conditions involved as the motion picture producers are now in the process of negotiating with all unions, and contracts will be entered into. Any strike in the studio will be a repetition of the previous strikes led by Sorrell, which, according to this source, were an attempt to gain control of certain known Communist union locals now under the jurisdiction of the IATSE.

"The Los Angeles Examiner" on July 31, 1946, under the head "Film Merger Confirmed" announced that the old Universal Studio and International Pictures, Inc., plus Arthur Rank, Ltd., of London, had amalgamated into one of the most exciting mergers that has happened in Hollywood in many years and the biggest since Twentieth Century Fox took over the old Fox Company. It is stated that the name of the new organization will be Universal - International Production Company.

[redacted] further stated that William Goetz will be President of the new organization; Leo Spitz will be the Chairman of the Board; Nate Blumberg will remain Chairman of the Board of Universal and J. Cheever Cowdin is also to be associated with Universal. Cliff Work is to remain as an executive and Walter Wanger will release his products through this company.

"Variety" for August 15, 1946, under a New York date line stated, "The first meeting in America of the Confederation Internationale des Societes de 'Auteurs et Compositeurs will be held in Washington in October. There are forty-one member nations. ASCAP will play host to the Second Federation. The Confederation is divided into four federations: Dramatic Rights, Reforming Rights, Mechanical Rights and Book Rights. ASCAP's General Manager, John G. Paine, is President of the Second Federation."

According to Confidential Informant [redacted] and [redacted] the Conference of Studio Unions once again called a strike in September in the Hollywood Motion Picture Industry. These sources stated that this strike is merely a continuation of a previous strike called in 1945 which lasted for eight months. They state that the present strike is again purely a matter of jurisdiction between the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, and the Conference of Studio Union, which is dominated by Communist influence, the leader of the latter group being Herbert K. Sorrell, who has long been affiliated with Communist activities in the motion picture industry.

These sources state the primary purpose of this strike is to try and get control of all studio workers for Communist purposes. As a means of clarification, the eleven unions which now compose the Conference of Studio Unions, ten of which are associated with the American Federation of Labor, are being set out below:

Local	Parent Organization
Screen Set Designers Local 1421	Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America
Screen Publicists Guild Local 1489	Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America
Screen Story Analyst Guild Local 1488	Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America
Screen Cartoonists Guild Local 852	Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America
Moving Picture Painters and Scenic Artists, Local 644	Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America
Special Officers and Guards Local 193	Building Service Employees International Union
Building Service Employees Local 278	Building Service Employees International Union

Local	PARENT ORGANIZATION
[redacted]dio Carpenters Local 946	United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America
Studio Electrical Workers Local 40	International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers
Studio Sheet Metal Workers Local 108	Studio Metal Workers International Union
Studio Machinists Local Cinema Lodge 1185	International Association of Machinists

As has been previously indicated, the Conference of Studio Unions is headed by Herbert K. Sorrell. This Conference is an independent organization which was formed several years ago, reportedly by Communists on the theory that if several unions would band together, their bargaining position would be greatly enhanced. The only union which is not affiliated with the AFL within this Conference is Local 1185 of the Studio Machinists. At first the International Association of Machinists spokesmen stated that if members of Local 1185 were discharged from their positions because of the ultimatum issued by the AFL Central Labor Council, that their members would picket these studios. However, as yet, according to the above-mentioned sources, no members of the International Association of Machinists have been discharged and the producers have employed additional machinists who are affiliated with the AFL in order to avoid this jurisdictional dispute.

DEVELOPMENTS IN THE INTERNATIONAL ALLIANCE OF THEATRICAL STAGE EMPLOYEES. (July 23, 1946 through November 8, 1946)

[redacted]os Angeles paid confidential informant, related that the struggle for control of all studio unions revolves around the National Convention of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees held the week of July 22, 1946 in Chicago, Illinois. He states that the Communists in the studio unions operating through the Conference of Studio Unions attempted to defeat the incumbent President, Richard W. Walsh, who has been consistently anti-Communist in union affairs. He stated that the Communists failed to elect their candidate William T. Bennett, of Washington, D. C., who had made a bargain with the Conference of Studio Unions and Herbert K. Sorrell, the Communist leader of that group.

The highlight of this convention, according to [redacted] was the Communist issue which took precedence over all other issues. [redacted]tates that Walsh was elected practically on this issue alone. He stated that Senator Jack B. Tenney head of the Joint Legislative Committee on Subversive Activities in California, flew to Chicago and addressed the Convention on the Communist issue and convinced that body for the most part that all the troubles in the immediate past within the Hollywood Unions were the result of the attempts by the Communist Party to capture those unions. According to this source, the Convention voted powers to Walsh to clean up the Hollywood situation. No action has been reported, as yet, in this direction, however.

The Hollywood Reporter for July 29, 1946, under the heading "Walsh handed Powers, End All Jurisdictional Disputes" stated in part that Walsh was reelected to his third term as president of the IATSE, and announced a determination to settle for all time the jurisdictional disputes in Hollywood and to rid the Alliance of destructive elements that stand in the way of the union. He was given dictatorial powers to achieve this end. The 38th biennial convention at the Stevens Hotel reelected him by a vote of 649 to 426 and granted all effective powers to settle jurisdictional matters that have troubled the Alliance during the last years.

Walsh defeated William Bennett in his second try for the presidency. The enthusiastic endorsement given Walsh by William Green, by Eric Johnson, by Brigadier General Joseph Keenan and others, and also a number of resolutions approving his actions during the Hollywood strike, helped Walsh continue in his job.

The article stated that in granting Walsh full powers, the Convention authorized him to "act as he chooses" in the Hollywood studio situation and "to add, amend or alter any portion of the constitution and by-laws of the Alliance he deems necessary."

It stated, "The delegates acted on a supplementary report from Walsh in which he pleaded for this power and in which he explained that he needed this 'supreme authority' for the purpose of 'not asking but telling' the locals what to do."

It quoted Walsh as stating, "I know this is a drastic move, it gives your incoming president tremendous powers but I need it to protect our jurisdiction and local unions in Hollywood. If we don't win Hollywood we'll lose all. Your president must have this authority."

The article further stated, "After long debates, the convention adopted a resolution dealing Walsh and the Executive Board to act immediately to get rid of Communists, Nazis, Fascists and Ku Klux Klansmen in the union."

The article stated that the convention approved the expulsion of twelve members of Local 44 for failure to cooperate with the Alliance in the jurisdictional disputes during the recent strike in the Hollywood studios.

A banquet was held at the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel on the evening of October 3, 1946. According to [redacted] Tom O'Brien labor member of the British Parliament then in Hollywood studying the problems of labor in motion pictures, stated that the film industry of Great Britain was having much the same trouble with the Communists as the IATSE was having in Hollywood. He went into the subject at length because the same type of labor disputes broke out in the English industry at the same time as those which took place in Hollywood. He stated, "It may be a coincidence, but I doubt it. The Communists are trying to take over the entertainment industry of the world because through it they can exercise great influence. If they can get control of this industry, they will have gone two-thirds of the way."

DEVELOPMENTS AS A RESULT OF MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY STRIKE (July 23, 1946 to November 8, 1946)

Through confidential informants the Los Angeles Office learned that the motion picture industry was faced with a strike on the night of September 12, 1946 as a result of a jurisdictional dispute within the American Federation of Labor over the Studio Carpenters. The International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, which represents most of the employees in the entertainment world, but which is not a member of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, does not represent the Studio Carpenters. An individual known only as Hutchinson, who represents the Carpenters Union, participated a showdown with Walsh of the IATSE. This showdown threatened a complete stoppage of the motion picture studios.

[redacted] advised representatives of our Los Angeles Office that local unions of the motion picture industry during the week of September 18th were holding mass meetings protesting to William Green and other high union executives, against the dispute between Hutchinson, of the Carpenters Union, and Walsh, of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees which threatens to shut down the industry. At that time this source reported that no new motion picture sets were being constructed by the carpenters and when pictures presently in production had filmed all possible scenes using the present sets, production would shut down unless the Executive Board of the AFL reached a decision. At that time it was stated that approximately 60 carpenters would be the cause of some 30,000 people being out of work. George Elmer Adams, of the Burbank, California Police Department, predicted that a strike would occur at any time and that considerable trouble would be experienced when the strike occurred.

During this same period Herbert K. Sorrell, of the Conference of Studio Unions, was charging that producers refused to recognize Studio Carpenters of Local 946, which is a member of the Conference of Studio Unions and that producers favored carpenters within the IATSE. The Screen Writers Guild publicly stated at this time that the dispute was a jurisdictional one within the AFL and that it had been so designated by the AFL. The Guild instructed its members to pass through any picket lines. At this time it was reported that the Communists would vigorously support a strike.

It appeared at this time, according to Roy M. Brewer, International Representative of the IATSE, that the strike would start during the week of September 25, 1946. According to Brewer, members of the IATSE Screen Actors Guild, Screen Extras Guild, Musicians Local, Teamsters Local and all other known Conference of Studio Unions groups in the motion picture industry have been instructed to pass through any picket lines established by the Conference of Studio Unions.

Reliable sources report that Sorrell at this time was unable to lead the 7000 Conference of Studio Union workers out on strike over a jurisdictional issue and, therefore, he was winning his point by ordering Conference of Studio Union members not to work on studio sets, thus forcing the producers to discharge Conference of Studio Union members who, in turn, called this a producers' lockout.

On September 25th the Conference of Studio Unions demanded that the producers rehire 1000 discharged carpenters and painters by 6:00 PM. The producers charged the Conference of Studio Unions was not acting in good faith and that this was merely a jurisdictional dispute. The Conference of Studio Unions planned a mass meeting for the evening of the 25th of September, at which time it appeared inevitable a vote for this strike would be passed. A strike vote was cast by this group and picket lines were set up which resulted in fighting and general disorder. The police forced the Conference of Studio Unions pickets to conform with the Superior Court injunction which limits the number of pickets.

The CSU reportedly was boasting about the fact that the strike had seriously hampered production. The Producers Association, however, stated on October 1, 1946 that production was normal in all major studios. The Selznik Studios, an independent producer, stopped production for the duration of the strike. The Conference of Studio Unions filed conspiracy charges against the ten major studios and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees with the NLRB, charging that major studios and the IATSE have conspired to deny the CSU its rights under the National Labor Relations Act. The AFL Central Labor Council, according to reports, remained neutral on the question. Richard Walsh, the Head of the IATSE, issued an ultimatum to independent producers to discharge the CSU members and to hire IATSE replacements.

It is reported that the Communist-dominated Screen Writers Guild met on October 1, 1946 to determine its strike policy. It is the report of informants that the position taken by this organization will forecast the policy to be followed by the Communists in connection with the strike.

Herbert K. Sorrell, of the CSU, and Richard Walsh, of the IATSE, together with ten representatives from the Sorcen Actors Guild were reported attending the AFL Convention which began on October 7th in Chicago. The jurisdictional dispute between the IATSE and the CSU was, according to informants, to be considered at this convention.

On October 5, 1946 Warner Brothers countered the CSU action against them by entering a million-dollar damage suit against Sorrell and the CSU, charging conspiracy to damage the Warner Brothers property in the 1945 jurisdictional strike. During this period it was reported that U. S. representatives John Wood, Chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee, was in Los Angeles to investigate the extent of Communist influence in the current strike. Newspapers quoted Wood as stating that he will return to Los Angeles in November for further investigation of the Communist activities in connection with labor in the motion picture industry.

During this same period it was reported by reliable sources that if the jurisdictional question was decided against Sorrell at the AFL Convention, Sorrell might attempt to lead his CSU into the CIO. Under the present agreement in effect between the AFL and CIO there is no CIO union operating in the motion picture industry.

Reliable police contacts reported that the producers received a telegram from AFL President William Green on the afternoon of October 8, 1946 stating that the jurisdictional issue would not be settled at the Chicago Convention and that the CSU - IATSE dispute must be settled in Hollywood.

Green has reportedly turned down the plea of the Screen Actors Guild to settle the jurisdictional dispute. Some observers believe that this may mean picketing and violence. Mass picketing was reported at the Columbia Studios in Hollywood on the morning of October 8, 1946.

On October 14, 1946, the police halted mass picketing at the Columbia Studios which was in violation of the Superior Court injunction by arresting and jailing 153 pickets. No violence or disorder, however, was reported in connection with these arrests.

Norval Crutcher, Secretary, Film Technicians Local 683, IATSE affiliate, announced on October 13th that his local would resist CSU picket lines. Members of this local process film and thus are essential to the making of motion pictures.

Roy Brewer, International representative of the IATSE, has charged that Local 683 of IATSE has always closely adhered to the Communist line. Richard Walsh, International Head of the IATSE threatened strong reprisals against the IATSE local. As you will recall, when a similar situation developed in last year's film strike, Walsh took over an IATSE local as a trustee. Indications are that Walsh may do this with the rebellious Local 683. Some observers say the action of Local 683 is a serious obstacle to an early strike settlement.

It was learned that a meeting of prominent Communists was held on the evening of October 12, 1946 at the home of Screen Writer Ring Lardner, Jr., an alleged Communist, where approximately $4,000 was raised to help CSU strikers. Well-informed sources have stated that the Communists are wholeheartedly in support of the current strike.

On October 18, 1946, the International Representatives of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees suspended the powers granted to IATSE Film Technicians Local 683 to conduct its affairs. This action was taken by International Representatives because Local 683 joined the rival CSU picket lines. This strike by Film Technicians seriously hampered production in all National Studios since members of this local must process all film.

However, Roy Brewer again threatened Local 683 that unless the members returned to work immediately, other arrangements would be made to process movie film in New York.

On October 23, 1946, reliable sources reported that the jurisdictional strike in the motion picture industry may soon end due to the fact that both the CSU and the IATSE have agreed to accept the AFL decision to award set erection work to the IATSE.

According to press reports, a joint committee of the IATSE - CSU and the powerful Screen Actors Guild, which was largely responsible for this settlement, met on the afternoon of October 28, 1946 to appoint a permanent arbitrator for jurisdictional controversies in the motion picture industry.

It is interesting to note that the Communists through the Daily Worker have alleged that the million-dollar motion picture industry entered into a conspiracy with corrupt and racketeering leaders of the IATSE to

"Smash Democratic Unionism" in Hollywood. The Communists through the Daily Worker are alleging that Walsh and Brewer of the IATSE are cooperating with the producers over this jurisdictional dispute to becloud the real issue. They allege that the CSU is the only union in the industry which gets tough about wages, hours and working conditions and that whenever action along these lines is instigated by the CSU, the old "jurisdictional bugaboo" is hauled out and brought into the forefront.

The Communists accuse the producers of obtaining injunctions through local judges who are alleging anti-labor, and of also obtaining the aid of police and sheriffs who cooperate with them.

The Communists through the Daily Worker list the following demands of the CSU:

1. Return all employees under CSU jurisdiction to their jobs with status unimpaired.

2. Acceptance by all parties of the AFL Directive in its entirety giving to carpenters the construction of sets or stages which they have done for the past 26 years, as ordered by the AFL Executive Council and AFL President William Green.

3. Immediate completion and signing of all contracts with provisions for adequate machinery for settlement of all controversies, including those over allocation of work.

On November 5, 1946 it was reported that negotiations were continuing to end the Hollywood film strike. However, it was also reported that the question of higher wages was now being brought into the light by the strikers. The Conference of Studio Union affiliates were reported to be demanding a 20% raise for a thirty-hour week before signing contracts to return to work.

Roy Brewer, the International representative of the rival IATSE, charged the Conference of Studio Unions with bad faith and stated that the question of wages was never involved in the jurisdictional strike which was called by Sorrell some six weeks ago. Brewer also charged that Sorrell is now attempting to alter the arbitration proposal previously agreed upon by both the CSU and the IATSE. At the time of this report the Conference of Studio Unions was still picketing all major studios and an unusually large mass demonstration was reported at 20th Century Fox Studios.

On November 13, 1946 it was reported that the leaders of the CSU and the IATSE were conferring with Joseph Kennan, AFL leader who was in Hollywood to consider accepting a position of AFL Labor Czar for the movie industry. However, no indication of an immediate settlement of this jurisdictional strike has been reported.

Sorrell charged at this time that wages and hours are the basic issue between the Conference of Studio Unions and the producers. Meanwhile, the Motion Picture Consumers Local 705, which is affiliated with the IATSE, has rebelled against the international leadership of the IATSE and set November 14th as the deadline upon which they would join IATSE Film Technicians Local 683 in the CSU picket lines.

Local 705 alleges that producers have refused to give them a signed contract covering wages and hours. This move by executive heads of Local 705 is directly contrary to the stand taken by the general membership of this local who at a meeting the previous week voted down a motion to set a definite time limit on negotiations with producers.

On the afternoon of November 13, 1946, CSU leader Sorrell threatened to extend the Conference of Studio Union picket lines to independent producers. It was also reported that 64 writers within the Screen Writers Guild have started a petition to donate $10,000 to Film Technicians Local 683 to "aid their fight against certain undemocratic pressures within the IATSE."

On November 13, 1946 it was reported that five homes of non-strikers, one a shop steward of IATSE Local 44, were bombed in a new wave of violence in the Hollywood film strike. These bombs were described as homemade grenades. Although at least two of the bombs caused extensive damage to the homes, no one was injured. Roy M. Brewer of the IATSE has posted $5,000 reward leading to the arrest and conviction of the vandals.

Richard F. Walsh, President of IATSE, announced that all representatives of IATSE would be withdrawn from the current negotiations with CSU leaders. He stated that his organization would not negotiate with the CSU as long as there is any act of violence against members of his union.

Los Angeles press reports state that Sorrell refused any comment on this recent outbreak of violence. Reliable Los Angeles police contacts advise that an extensive investigation is being conducted but that it has been made unusually difficult because there are a number of so-called "powder men" in Hollywood who are hired by studios to simulate explosions in motion pictures. This source also reports that the Los Angeles police are investigating a gunman who was recently expelled from the IATSE for disclosing information to the rival labor leader Sorrell. Sorrell is combating, according to reliable sources, what appears to be an unauthorized dissension within the ranks of his union to continue the strike.

SCREEN WRITERS GUILD

The Screen Writers Guild opened discussions among its members whether to ban the sale of material to the motion picture industry and adopt the procedure of licensing of all material.

[redacted] a screen writer who requested that his name be kept in strict confidence, has pointed out that this move to license material has two objectives: First, to prevent the studio from re-using or re-issuing a screen story without paying the writer an additional fee and, two, to control the content of the motion picture. This source, who is a screen writer, states that the Communists are, of course, particularly interested in securing absolute control over the content of motion pictures and they, the Communists, feel that through the Screen Writers Guild they will be able to force the producers of the Motion Picture Industry to accept a license to use a particular screen story and as an incentive to the use of that license, the producer would not, of course, be able to change the script.

James Cain, prominent novelist and screen writer, has appeared before the Screen Writers Guild and asked the Guild to accept the idea of a license apparently on the basis that the producers frequently re-issue pictures for which they do not pay the writer a second time. In the May, 1946 issue of the "Screen Writer," one of the feature articles is entitled "A Time for Action," which is written by Emmett Lavery, President of the Screen Writers Guild. In this article, Lavery, who has been identified in numbers of Communist Front organizations and activities, has pointed out that the Executive Council of the Authors League has come out for the principle of licensing and he has called upon the Authors League to assist the Screen Writers Guild in securing such rights for the Screen Writers. He admits that the Guild is nearly powerless to enforce the licensing idea at the present time inasmuch as the minimum basic agreement under which the Screen Writers Guild operates applies to employment conditions only and does not apply to material sold to the studios for the screen. He feels that the problem is one for concerted action by the Authors League and the Screen Writers Guild.

Lavery pointed out that at a recent meeting of the Screen Writers Guild, a resolution was passed which states, "In any arrangement by which there is granted the right to produce a motion picture based on material written by any member of the Authors League, or, its member or affiliated guilds (the Screen Writers Guild is affiliated with the Authors League), there should be granted only the right to produce and exhibit within a stated period a single motion picture on 35 mm film in the English language. These rights should be in the form of a license limited as aforesaid, which shall cease upon the expiration of a fixed time."

[redacted] feels that if the Communists and the Screen Writers Guild [redacted] able to secure a contract with the producers based upon licensing rather than the sale of material, they will be able to control the content of each motion picture. This informant feels that along with a license to use a motion picture will be an accompanying restriction upon changing it by the producers.

James Cain, recently, during a meeting of the Screen Writers Guild, according to the March 5, 1946 issue of "Variety" stated: "Once we control our properties we can demand and get all sorts of concessions. We should have a fund, like the ASCAP fund for the musicians obtained from a check off on all pictures for the benefit of all members of this Guild to be whacked up on a rating basis to take care of us in our old age, to be put in the bank or to be used for whatever we choose to spend it on."

Apparently, in line with this new move on the part of the Communists within the Screen Writers Guild, H. S. Kraft, a Communist, wrote a four-page article for the March, 1946 issue of the "Screen Writer" entitled, "Dreiser's War in Hollywood." This article was an account of Theodore Dreiser's attempt to force Paramount Pictures to dramatize his novel, "An American Tragedy" with a full realization of "the violent social, economic and loyal influences affecting the hero of the novel."

COMMITTEES APPOINTED BY SWG

The May, 1946 issue of the "Screen Writer," which is the official publication of the Screen Writers Guild, carried a list on page five of the Screen Writers Guild Studio Chairman. An examination of this list reflects heavy infiltration and domination by the Communists in the Guild. This list is as follows:

Columbia Studios:	Melvin Levy
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer:	Isobel Lennart
Paramount:	Abe Polonsky
RKO:	Henry Myers
Republic:	John Butler
Twentieth Century Fox:	Wanda Tuchack
Universal:	Joel Malone
Warner Brothers:	Ranald MacDougall

Elizabeth Benson, Section Organizer and Membership Director of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles Communist Party, which is composed of motion picture personnel had in her possession records reflecting that Levy, Lennart, Polonsky and Myers were members of the Communist Party according to a highly [redacted]idential but delicate source and [redacted], Confidential Informant of the Los Angeles Office, has identified MacDougall in several front activities.

The February issue of the "Screen Writer" identified members of the Screen Writers Guild Arbitration Panel and it was noted that the following Communists were members of this panel: Leopold Atlas, Ben Barzman, Guy Endore, Robert Lees, Melvin Levy, Waldo Salt and Leo Townsend. It was also noted that Melvin Frank is a member of this panel and although it has never been determined that he is a member of the Communist it has been ascertained through a highly confidential but delicate source that Elizabeth Benson, Section Organizer and Membership Director of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles Communist Party, which is composed of motion picture personnel has in her possession records which reflect Ann Ray Frank, his wife, is a Communist.

During the last three or four years, W. R. Wilkerson, Editor of the trade publication "The Hollywood Reporter" has repeatedly attacked the Communist infiltration of the Motion Picture Industry and he has paid exceptional attention to the Communist infiltration of the Screen Writers Guild. In the April 16, 1946 issue of the "Hollywood Reporter," Wilkerson attacked members of the Screen Writers Guild and stated that most of them were either Communists or Fascists and that all of them spend far too much time in political activities. Wilkerson stated that the writers in Hollywood are "doing every job but the one that they are being paid for. The former $200 a week writer is now getting $2,000 each pay day and doing less work." Again on June 20, 1946, Wilkerson described what he called "some screwy undercover tricks being pulled by our creators in the studios are promulgated by the Commies among them." Wilkerson then went on to relate a situation of an unidentified important star who refused to accept a certain director stating that the director was a red baiter, and Wilkerson related another incident in which an individual was a known Communist writer and was dismissed from a screen story because the star who was allegedly a Communist complained to the studio about the writer.

At a membership meeting of the Screen Writers Guild on April 29, 1946, a resolution was raised urging action against the Hollywood Reporter and in the May, 1946 issue of the "Screen Writer," Wilkerson was pictured as "inviting Congressman Rankin to push on with his witch hunt in Hollywood" and in the light of this discussion the SWG passed the following resolution: "That the Screen Writers Guild now declare officially that Wilkerson has been unfair to the Guild and all its members and that the members of the Guild are called upon to institute a voluntary boycott of the publication and that we call upon other Guilds and unions and Agents to join us in this boycott."

It has been noted that recent issues of the "Screen Writer" have prominently displayed in heavy black type an announcement that the Screen Writers Guild has indorsed the FEPC and requested members of the Guild to sign a petition which will put the FEPC on the California ballot.

In the March issue of the "Screen Writer" there was a note on page 46 which urged all members "and friends and others interested in this extension of democracy" to sign the petitions of the Fair Employment Practices Committee. This note then went on to list the members of the State Executive Committee to place the FEPC on the California ballot.

Well informed sources have stated that the FEPC has been originated and promoted by the Communist Party.

The "Screen Writer" is the official publication of the Screen Writers Guild and is issued monthly. It has been noted that the May issue of the "Soreen Writer" stated that Isobel Lennart had been selected to serve on the Editorial Committee. Those responsible for the publication are as follows:

Dalton Trumbo - Editor (Communist)
Gordon Kahn - Managing Editor (Communist)

Editorial Committee:
Adele Buffington
F. Hugh Herbert
Philip Dunne
Sonya Levien
Theodore Strauss (Communist)
Ring Lardner, Jr. (Communist)
Paul Trivers (Communist)
Stephen N. Avery

The "Screen Writer" is sold at only eleven book stores and news stands in Los Angeles and it is noted that among these are the Lincoln Book Store, 1721 North Highland Avenue in North Hollywood and the Progressive Book Shop, 717 West Sixth Street, Los Angeles, both of which have been identified by reliable informants as Communist book stores. Under date of August 14, 1946, the "Hollywood Reporter," a motion picture trade sheet edited by William Wilkerson, contained the following editorial under the caption, "Another Vote for Stalin." Because of its interest, this article is being set out in full:

"The Screen Writers Guild continues to take its orders from Moscow!

"A late issue of Izvestia, the official newspaper of the Soviet government, attacked the recent film trade agreement arranged between the American and French state departments.

"According to an Associated Press dispatch dated August 9 from Moscow, Victor Poltoralsky, writing in the Communist organ, attacked the agreement as a threat to the very existence of the French film industry, and became particularly virulent over an alleged statement by American economists that American films offered 'the best method of fighting Communism in France.'

"Izvestia is the voice of World Communism giving orders. The voice of the Red Beachhead in Hollywood—saying, 'aye, aye, comrade!!'—was heard in the Screen Writers Guild meeting on July 29, at the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel, when that Red-dominated organization adopted the following resolution:

> ....."that the Screen Writers Guild, in answer to the appeal of the French film workers, expresses its opinion of the French-American film agreement and asks our State Department to investigate the possibility of re-negotiating this agreement so that the French film industry can survive.'

"In other words, the Communist Party organ in Moscow and the Screen Writers Guild in Hollywood attacked the French trade agreement on the same spurious grounds—that it would destroy the French film industry.

"And the Guild voted against the State Department of the republic that gives American writers their freedom, and against the motion picture industry, which gives them their living.

"They were persuaded to do this by Harold Salemson, who addressed the Guild for 25 minutes, denouncing the trade agreement. He charged that a third of the workers in the French film industry would be thrown out of work by the American trade agreement. He said the American industry was prepared to flood France with five years of film product. And he implied that the State Department was imperialistically forcing American films upon an unwilling French public.

"This was barefaced lying. The agreement negotiated by Leon Blum and the American State Department does not guarantee THE EXHIBITION OF A SINGLE AMERICAN MOTION PICTURE IN FRANCE. American pictures will be played ONLY if French theatre owners and the French public want them.

"The trade agreement DOES GUARANTEE that four out of every 13 weeks' playing time in French theatres shall be devoted to the exhibition of French pictures. All 13 weeks CAN be devoted to French pictures if the theatre manager prefers.

"The Guild resolution deliberately beclouds this situation by making it seem that French exhibitors were forced to play nine weeks of American pictures. But the only force backing American films in France is that of popular demand.

"And this, the Communists can't stand!

"The true situation is revealed in a copy of a letter which the Reporter received from the head of a major studio yesterday—a letter written by Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association, to Emmet Lavery, President of the Screen Writers Guild. It speaks for itself:

'Dear Mr. Lavery:

'I am profoundly disturbed by the implication of a resolution which I understand was recently adopted by the Screen Writers Guild.

'According to information received from our Hollywood office, this resolution said in part:

> "that the Screen Writers Guild in answer to the appeal of the French film workers, expresses its opinion of the French-American film agreement and asks our State Department to investigate the possibility of re-negotiating this agreement so that the French film industry can survive."

'The plain implication of the resolution is that the agreement recently negotiated by our government and the French government is a threat to the survival of the French film industry.

'I believe there is absolutely no basis for the unwarranted assumption that the agreement threatens the extinction of the French film industry and I believe further that such an assumption casts an undeserved reflection upon the good faith of the American and French officials who negotiated the agreement for the two governments.'

'The Guild's resolution, in effect, distorts so completely the purpose and meaning of the agreement that I believe a clarification of its provisions is vitally essential. With that in mind I shall set forth briefly why it was adopted and the purposes which it is designed to achieve.

'The moving purpose behind the agreement was a desire to promote the ideal of world unity by removing some of the restrictions which isolate one nation from another by Chinese Walls of nationalism. The motion picture is a primary medium for the exchange of ideas between people. I have always believed that excessive nationalism breeds war; that a freer exchange of goods, services and information is a healthy offset to the friction which causes war.

'As for the specific conditions of the agreement relating to the motion picture, I believe that any fair-minded person will agree that the terms set forth actually protect the development of the French film industry and give it a greater measure of protection than it had before the war.

'For example, every theatre in France must reserve at least four week's playing time out of every 13 solely for French pictures. During the remaining nine weeks of the quarter, the theatre is free to play foreign pictures or French pictures, whichever it prefers. The free playing time is not reserved for American pictures—it may be used for the exhibition of Russian films or British films or French films or the films of any other nation.

'Actually, the agreement does not guarantee the exhibition of a single American motion picture in France. It simply opens the market to the best pictures.

'Before the war, the American motion picture industry annually supplied between 150 and 185 "dubbed" feature pictures for the French market. Since the agreement, however, the eight leading American companies voluntarily agreed to release not more than 124 "dubbed" features in the French market annually. The number of feature pictures with superimposed titles which have a limited distribution in France will be substantially smaller than before the war. This should reassure anyone who honestly believes that the American industry is preparing to flood the French market with films produced here during the war period.

'The observation of Monsieur Leon Blum, an outstanding French patriot who aided in negotiating the agreement, should be sufficient answer to the accusation that the agreement is against the best interests of the French producing industry. In a statement, quoted in the American press on June 29, Monsieur Blum said:

"In renouncing the 1936 pact, the United States made a considerable concession in agreeing to let France keep exclusively four weeks out of every 13 for French products, assuring 30 percent of the playing time. When negotiations started, the French hoped to get a seven weeks quota, but after long discussion France did well in comparison to a 17 percent guarantee granted to Italy and a 22 percent accord with Britain."

'Monsieur Blum added:

"There is not a word in the accord to prevent an exhibitor from showing 100 percent French films if he wishes. What is needed is for the French film industry to produce films pleasing to the public.

"Film interests here must remember the Washington accord would assist in the re-establishment of the French film industry. The French industry will aid in every way."

'You may be interested in knowing that when the loan agreement was up for approval in the French assembly, the only spoken opposition to the film provisions came from a few Communist deputies. It is obvious to me why French Communists wish to keep out American motion pictures which reflect American democratic life.

'I do not for a moment challenge the right of the Screen Writers Guild or any other group to ask the State Department to re-negotiate the existing film agreement with France. That is simply the exercise of an American fundamental right.

'But the implication that the government of the United States or the American film industry took undue advantage of the French film industry is both naive and false. I challenge it.

'I am giving you these facts in the interest of fairness and accuracy.

Sincerely yours,

Eric Johnston.'

"Mr. Johnston's appeal probably will fall on deaf ears. [redacted] Communists are not interested in 'fairness and accuracy'.

"Mr. Salemson, the sponsor of this attack on industry and government, has been an industrious member of many of the extreme left-wing groups which have consistently followed the Party line!

"This is the kind of leadership to which the Screen Writers Guild listens. This is the kind of leadership which causes the Guild to ignore the fact that the foreign market on many pictures means the difference between profit and loss, and to attack the industry of which it is a part.

"THE PARTY FIRST!"

The "Hollywood Reporter" on August 20, and 21, 1946, contained articles which were directed at the Screen Writers Guild and accused this organization of being a Communist controlled and dominated group. The "Hollywood Reporter" carried articles reflecting that the President of the Guild, John Howard Lawson, has been a sponsor of numerous Communist front groups, such as the American Youth for Democracy, and the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee, as well as the Harry Bridges Defense Committee and the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee for the Arts, Sciences and Professions.

The article also reflected that Dalton Trumbo, a member of the Guild's Executive Board and Editor of the Guild's official magazine, was a Communist and is the holder of Communist Party Membership Book No. 36802.

Gordon Kahn, Ring Lardner, Jr. and Richard Jay Collings, all members of the Executive Board, are also accused of being Communists and their Communist Party Book numbers are set out therein.

These articles were followed in this periodical by an article on the American Authors Authority, which is sponsored and backed by the Screen Writers Guild. The latter article is referred to in the section set out concerning "The American Authors Authority."

DEVELOPMENTS IN CONFERENCE OF STUDIO UNIONS
(November 14, 1946 to February 14, 1947)

This block of Communist controlled unions, according to [redacted] a paid confidential informant of the Los Angeles Field Division, is still on strike. The strike is a continuance of the 1945 strike which was and still is an attempt of the Communist elements, according to this source, to control the unions in the Hollywood studios.

[redacted] reported that during the picketing of the studios the pickets were singing "Solidarity Forever." This source also reported that the Painters District Council #36 voted a $5,000 fund for the benefit of the strikers. The Radio Writers Guild met at the home of Ring Lardner, Jr., and voted $4,000 for the strikers' benefit.

The Conference of Studio Unions has been spreading its influence to the radio field through an alliance with another group of like nature now being formed in that field. This new block of unions is to be called the Council of Radio Unions. An organizational meeting of radio unions was held on November 21, 1946, in Hollywood. Composing this parallel block of unions are the following:

Radio Writers Guild
Radio Directors Guild
American Federation of Musicians,
Local #47
American Federation of Radio Artists

According to this source this group has announced that it will affiliate with the Conference of Studio Unions. Commenting on this alliance, the source indicated that this would be a most effective weapon because of the affinity of the motion picture industry with the radio industry. [redacted]

With regard to the strike in the Hollywood motion picture industry, it is reported that this strike is now more or less ineffective. The studios have used replacements put in by the ITASE and seem to be making pictures as usual. It is reported that the Conference of Studio Unions is attempting to get the support of the unions in England in order to stop production there of any pictures in which American capital is interested. So far there has been little success attached to this effort. [redacted]

COUNCIL OF HOLLYWOOD GUILDS AND UNIONS

[redacted] Special Agents of the Los Angeles Field Division on September 9, 1946, obtained a 10-page typewritten report which described the activities of the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions. This report reflects that there are now seven CSU unions, two IATSE locals, two independent unions, and one A. F. of L. miscellaneous union, which comprise this organization. They are as follows: Screen Story Analyst's Guild; Screen Cartoonist Guild; Screen Costumers Guild; Film Technicians; Film Electricians Local 40; Machinists Guild; Musicians Local 767 (This is not the musicians union to which musicians in the studios belong.); Painters Union; Screen Publicists Union; Screen Supervisors Union; Screen Set Decorators; Screen Writers Guild.

It is noted that the subject organization has lost, mainly because of difficulties over the current film strikes, the Screen Actors Guild, Screen Office Employees Guild, and Musicians Local No. 47, to which all musicians in the motion picture industry belong.

According to this report the Council is seeking new affiliation and is attempting to induce the Radio Writers, the Radio Directors, and the Film Editors Guilds to join with them in pressing for "progressive legislation." This report also points out that the Council must seek for closer affiliation with the Conference of Studio Unions which is, as has been previously pointed out, heavily infiltrated with the Communist Party. This report also points out that the "Progressives," i.e. Communists within the Council, see the current Hollywood film strike, together with the move by the AF of L to set up a Hollywood Council, as a "serious threat" to the subject organization. According to the report, the Communists feel that if the AF of L does set up a Hollywood Labor Council in addition to the Los Angeles Labor Council the two may be operated in parallel but that it is also quite likely that the AF of L will take the AF of L local out of the Council and may have them use only the independent unions. Moreover, the current jurisdictional dispute between the CSU and the IATSE is a serious threat to the internal stage of the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions. Regardless of which stand the Council takes in the settlement of the dispute, several locals which are affiliated with the Council will obviously protest and this leaves the Council unable to take the affirmative, definite stand in the current dispute.

This was put quite clearly in this reports, [redacted] which report is believed to have been written by C. Margaret Bennett Wills, Executive Secretary, when she stated, "I am sure that everyone will agree that either the Council will cease to exist entirely or it must be stamped as a real source in Hollywood."

This report also detailed some of the highlights of the Council's activities, an examination of which reflects that the Council has constantly supported the measures advocated by the Communist Party in the Los Angeles Field Division. These include (1) a fight against Cecil B. DeMille, (2) participation in the fight for radio freedom, i.e. the protest against high labor contenders, (3) the fight against motion picture aliens, (4) "conferences with Robert Riskin of the OWI on educational films for Europe," (5) protest against the State Un-American Activities Committee, (6) activity for a state FEPC, (7) sending a delegate to the "Win the Peace" conference, (8) a protest against banning of Lena Horne film in Tennessee, (9) a protest against Truman's intervention in the railroad strike.

This summation of Council's activities in the last few months concludes by stating, "Nor have we forgotten the Yugoslavs, the Russians, and the drive toward World War III."

The Council has continued to support those measures and activities in which the Communist Party has been prominently identified. For example, on Sunday, March 17, 1946, the Council was identified as one of the sponsors of an address by Congressman Hugh DeLacy, who gave a "hard-hitting expose of the plot against the peace."

[redacted] an Agent of the Los Angeles Field Division obtained minutes of the meeting of the Council which was held on June 6, 1946. According to the minutes, the Council received a letter from Festus Coleman, a Negro prisoner at San Quentin, thanking the Council for their support in an attempt to secure his parole. It is well known that the Communist Party has waged a vigorous campaign to free Coleman alleging that he was improperly convicted. At the same meeting the Council stated that President Truman had "used the powers of his office to blackjack the railroad workers rather than to effect a just settlement."

At a meeting held on August 8, 1946, the Council registered a strong protest with the Ambassador Hotel for refusing lodging to a Negro song writer, Carlton Moss. Moss was identified, through a highly confidential but delicate source who had access to the records of Elizabeth Benson, the section organizer and membership director of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party, as a member of the Communist Party. This meeting of August 8, 1946, closed with a resolution urging the widespread distribution of leaflets which had been prepared by the Mobilization for Democracy. Mobilization for Democracy has been identified as a Communist front organization and according to [redacted] a paid active informant of the Los Angeles Office, this organization works very closely with the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions.

SCREEN WRITERS GUILD

In the October, 1946, issue of the Screen Writer, the publication of the Screen Writers Guild, on page 32 there is a note which reads, "The current outlook and strike in the major motion picture studios began too late to permit inclusion in this issue of any summary of events." The note then [redacted] on to point out that the Screen Writers Guild has made an independent investigation and found that there was considerable violence at the studio gates. It reminded the members of the Screen Writers Guild that they need not go through a picket line where there was any fear of violence and concluded by stating that they would legally assist any member of the Screen Writers Guild who was fired or otherwise discriminated against by a producer for refusing to come to work.

At a so-called emergency meeting of the Screen Writers Guild on October 1, 1946, which was reportedly attended by only a very few Screen Writers, a resolution was passed to loan the striking unions $10,000. However, at a general membership meeting held on November 13, 1946, this proposal was decisively defeated.

[redacted] a screen writer and an informant of the Los Angeles Office, pointed out that recently there has developed within the Screen Writers Guild considerable opposition to the pro-Communist leadership. This source stated that following the publication of the articles by Wilkerson identifying most of the Executive Board as members of the Communist Party, many of the writers began to challenge this leadership, and a movement was begun to draft a slate of non-Communist writers as officers. At a general membership meeting of the Screen Writers Guild, held on November 13, 1946, the following were elected to executive positions:

President	Emmet Lavery
1st Vice President	Mary McCall, Jr.
2nd Vice President	Howard Estabrook
3rd Vice President	Hugo Butler
Secretary	F. Hugh Herbert
Treasurer	Harold Buchman

Lavery secured 495 votes, to 293 votes for the opposition candidate, Talbot Jennings. This vote does not in some small measure eliminate a portion of the Communist influence from the Executive Board of the Guild. However, Mary McCall and Howard Estabrook have both been identified in several Communist front organizations. Through a highly confidential but delicate source it was ascertained that the records of Elizabeth Benson, membership director of the Los Angeles County Communist Party, reflected that Hugo Butler and Harold Buchman were members of the Communist Party.

At this same meeting, a resolution to loan $10,000 to one of the unions now on strike in the motion picture industry was defeated; however, a resolution to loan $2500 to the Newspaper Guild was passed.

The Screen Writers Guild continues to publish the Screen Writer as its official publication, and many of the articles are contributed by known members of the Communist Party. The editorial committee of SWG is presently composed of:

Dalton Trumbo, Editor
Gordon Kahn, Managing Editor
Stephen Morehouse Avery
Harris Gable
F. Hugh Herbert
Ring Lardner, Jr.
Isabel Lennart
Sonia Levien
Theodore Strauss
Paul Trivers
Harold J. Salemson, Director of Publications

Of this committee, seven including Trumbo, Kahn, Lardner, Lennert, Strauss, Trivers and Salemson are members of the Communist Party.

In the October, 1946, issue of the Screen Writer, which was the latest one available at the time, there are six articles. One concerns the establishment of the AAA; another, the scope of the Screen Writers Guild; a third article by Communists Howard Dimsdale and Guy Endore; the fourth on a technical phase of screen writing; the fifth on opinions and motion pictures; and the sixth by Communist screen writer Lester Cole on wage negotiations for screen writers.

This publication contains each month an editorial which in the October issue was devoted to the merits of the AAA, and in the back of the publication there is a section entitled "News Notes." An analysis of these notes clearly shows that quite often Communist causes are sponsored or advertised in them. For example, the news notes in the October issue of the Screen Writer reflect: (1) an announcement by the California Labor School of a series of courses; (2) a production by the Communist-dominated Actors Laboratory; (3) a note regarding the symposium of "The Challenge of the Post War World to the Liberal Movement"; (4) an announcement of the Communist-dominated Peoples Educational Center; (5) details of the new curriculum of the Peoples Educational Center; (6) a note concerning the Hollywood Writers Mobilization and the Communist front organization, Mobilization for Democracy; and (7) a note that "Orson Welles has relinquished his air time to concentrate on film production; a distinct loss to the forces of liberalism on the American air waves."

[redacted] ascertained that Ann Roth Morgan, 860 Westmount Drive, Los Angeles, and Ruth Birnkrant are employed as secretaries in the office of the Screen Writers Guild. This same highly confidential but reliable source reported that the records of Elizabeth Benson reflected both of these women were members of the Communist Party.

The Screen Writer is designed by John Hubley, an artist whom, according to the same source, has been also identified as a member of the Communist Party.

International Film and Radio Guild

The International Film and Radio Guild threw a picket line around the Avalon Theater on the East Side of Hollywood on January 30, 1947, in the first phase of an all-out campaign against the continued production of "inferior and insulting" all-Negro quickes currently being produced by a handful of Southern and Eastern independent producers for showing in predominately Negro theaters. The management of the Avalon Theater in Hollywood cancelled the film "Beale Street Mama" after three showings of the scheduled minimum five-day run. This action combined with violent protests from other leading citizens of the community against the continued showing of the Bert Goldberg all-colored featurette forced the theater manager to discontinue the showing of the featurette.

A. Frederici, manager of the Avalon Theater, issued the following statement: "We have a contract with the Alfred N. Sack Amusement Enterprises to show 15 of these all-colored films throughout the coast area in the near future, but if the Negro people consider these pictures insulting, we certainly prefer to take the consequences with Sack rather than to offend an entire race."

Leon Hardwick, executive secretary of the International Film and Radio Guild, explained his organization's position thusly: "For several years, IFRG, NAACP, the Negro press and various other groups have been lambasting Hollywood studios for presenting Negroes in non-complimentary roles, seeking at the same time a more balanced presentation of Negro life on the screen. Meanwhile we have been overlooking entirely the practice of a small group of money-mad individuals in the east and south who dump these inferior, insulting films on the Negro market throughout the country. How can we expect to get better treatment from Hollywood as long as this latter evil persists?

"IFRG, an organization dedicated to the task of helping protect the interests of minorities in the entertainment world, is launching an active campaign against this vicious type of racial exploitation in films and hope others will join us."

Listed among the officers of the International Film and Radio Guild are Superior Judge Stanley Mosk, Lena Horne, John Garfield, Joseph Calleia, King Cole and Al Jarvis.

The above information concerning this group was obtained from the Peoples Voice of February 1, 1947.

DEVELOPMENTS AS A RESULT OF MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY STRIKE

Following the outbreaks of violence in the Hollywood motion picture industry strike on November 14, 1946, in which at least five homes of non-strikers were reportedly bombed, unidentified vandals on November 15, stole and burned a passenger bus owned by the Tanner Motor Company which had been used to transport nonstrikers through the Conference of Studio Unions' picket lines. The Los Angeles Field Office reported that reliable police contacts confidentially advised that they had identified a Communist from San Pedro, California, as probably being implicated in the bombings. The Los Angeles Times as a result of this violence called upon the Conference of Studio Unions' leaders to deny or affirm that they were in any way implicated.

The IATSE representatives on November 15, 1946, again refused to confer with the Conference of Studio Unions leaders as long as their members were subjected to possible violence. On the afternoon of November 15, it was reported that the Conference of Studio Unions held a mass meeting which resulted in the sending out of orders to all members that they must assemble in front of Columbia Motion Picture Studios the following morning at 6:00 a.m. and that any member who was not arrested would be fined $25 by the Union. It is reported that Sorrell confided in a police informant that he as well as his entire Strategy Committee would go to jail. This picketing, of course, would be in violation of the Superior Court's injunction. As a result of this mass picketing, the Los Angeles Police Department arrested approximately 802 strikers in front of Columbia Studios for violation of the Superior Court injunction relating to the limiting of the number of legal pickets.

The Los Angeles Field Division reported that at a Communist mass meeting held the previous night, a Conference of Studio Unions representative spoke and urged Communists to turn out in mass for the morning picket lines. It was later learned that at this meeting which was held to celebrate the 29th Anniversary of the October Revolution under the auspices of the Los Angeles Communists, John Stepp, Communist Party organizer for the Hollywood Section, urged all present to turn out for picket duty.

A reward being offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction for those responsible for violence in this film strike has grown to $30,000. Governor Earl Warren on November 15, 1946, stated that he would give full cooperation to local authorities who were endeavoring to determine who was responsible for the recent bombings and terrorisms. Although the Conference of Studio Unions leader, Herbert Sorrell, had refused to make any public comment some Conference of Studio Unions leaders were charging that the IATSE had imported Chicago gunmen. This, however, appears to be highly doubtful inasmuch as all violence had been directed against members of the IATSE.

On November 19, 1946, the Conference of Studio Unions pickets massed in front of the RKO studios. The RKO studios at that time had not secured a court order limiting the number of pickets.

The District Attorney's Office on the evening of November 18, 1946, announced that it would file criminal conspiracy charges against the Conference of Studio Unions film leaders and a deputy district attorney publicly stated that the Conference of Studio Unions action was a declaration of war and described it as a "campaign of lawless violence." According to the Los Angeles Police Department, only a few of the 812 strikers arrested raised bail and that the remaining individuals who were incarcerated in the Los Angeles city jails were starting on a hunger strike to call attention to their plight.

On November 21, 1946, the Los Angeles County Grand Jury commenced subpenaing witnesses and inquiry into violence which had accompanied this strike. Also examining evidence against 14 ring leaders who were arrested on the 18th and 19th of November, 1946, on complaints issued by the Los Angeles County District Attorney. Those indicted included Herbert K. Sorrell, business agent for Painters Union, Local #1421, and President of the Conference of Studio Unions; Matthew Mattison, business agent for the Screen Story Analysts Guild and a Communist; James Skelton, Chairman of Strike Strategy Committee; Averill Berman, radio commentator and Communist; Norval Crutcher, Secretary-Treasurer of the IATSE, Local #683, and a Communist; and Andrew Lawless, Louis Whitman, Ray Higby, Carl Head, John R. Martin, Frank Drdlik, Russell McKnight, Roy Tinsdall and Edward Gilbert.

On November 23, 1946, these individuals were indicted for felonious conspiracy by the Los Angeles County Grand Jury. The 812 individuals previously arrested for mass picketing in violation of the Superior Court's injunction were released on $50 bond each on this same date. The following individuals suspected of committing the recent bombings were arrested for having in their possession explosives: Robert McCuskey, alias McCorskey; and John F. Veazey, Eugene Calvin Horton and Robert A. Perry. Horton is reported to be a painter, Perry an engineer and the others longshoremen.

On November 25, 1946, Sorrell made a statement in which he denied that the Conference of Studio Unions was in any way responsible for the recent bombings. He made an appeal to the studio producers to reopen negotiations looking toward a return to work. Spokesman for the producers stated that Sorrell's appeal was under consideration and it appeared that the producers would reopen negotiations.

On November 26, 1946, Superior Court Judge Willis denied the strikers' appeal to dismiss a restraining order limiting the number of pickets and pointed out that the motion picture studios were caught in a union jurisdictional dispute.

Following the District Attorney's action of instigating the conspiracy charges against the strike leaders, the Los Angeles Office reported that the Communist attorney Benjamin Margolis, the attorney for the Conference of Studio Unions, was contacted by the Communist Party County Chairman for advice as to how far the Communist press could go in attacking the conspiracy charges. Margolis advised that the Communist press could call this "an attack on labor, and "fascist techniques" but cautioned Communist Party leaders against threatening the judge or alleging corruption. It is reported also that the Communist Party leaders urged their members to maintain the picketing and "tough attitude" for at least a few more days.

On December 2, 1946, approximately 50 members of the Conference of Studio Unions picketed the Los Angeles Times newspaper office for alleged unfair news reporting of the strike.

The Mexican labor leader, Lombardo Tolendano, President of the Latin American Confederation of Labor, pledged his support to the Conference of Studio Unions.

It was also reported on December 3, 1946, that former Congressman Ellis E. Patterson was employed by the Conference of Studio Unions for political liaison work.

With regard to the strike itself, it is reported that Sorrell has clearly lost the jurisdictional issue and continues to press his new demands for higher wages and shorter hours in an apparent attempt to justify his calling the Conference of Studio Unions out on strike.

At a meeting held December 3, 1946, office employees of the International Union which has jurisdiction over the white-collar workers in the film industry voted to call a strike in all local film exchanges but did not set a date for this strike. Office workers were demanding a 20 per cent wage increase and improved working conditions. This local has wired the National Labor Relations Board and the Secretary of Labor under the provisions of the Smith-Connally Act for the strike authorization and has called upon the Central Labor Council to place all motion picture studios on the unfair list. Workers in major studios have pledged their support to the Office Employees International Union in the film exchanges and should the entire membership of the OEIU go out on strike it would effect the stenographic and clerical employees in all major studios except Paramount which has a company union for these employees.

On December 5, 1946, Roy M. Brewer, International representative of the IATSE, testified before the House Committee on Un-American Activities that the current Hollywood film strike was brought about by Communists. It was reported that the House Committee was unable to serve a subpena on Sorrell, but it was reported that State Senator Tenney, who is Chairman of the California State Un-American Activities Committee appeared before the United States House Committee on Un-American Activities and testified that Sorrell was a Communist Party member. At that time the House Committee indicated that it would call Sorrell to testify at a Committee Hearing which was to be held in Washington, D. C., sometime in January. Hearings conducted by the House Committee were being held behind closed doors, but sources believe they were conducting intensive inquiries into the film industry.

As of December 10, 1946, the producers still refused to open negotiations with the Conference of Studio Unions unless the latter assured them that it would act to prevent violence, that the Conference of Studio Unions would assure them that that they would accept the AFL jurisdiction over this strike, and would abide by their July agreement not to ask for additional wage increases.

The mass trial of over 800 pickets opened in Los Angeles on December 11, 1946. Warner Brothers studios reported minor vandalism when unidentified individuals attempted to chop open a cable of over 200 telephone lines at their studio.

Fifteen members of the Studio Carpenters Union asked the Federal Court in Los Angeles to issue a declaratory judgment. This action was described as unprecedented legal action to settle jurisdictional disputes. These men allege in their complaint that they are unable to work at their accustomed jobs because of a jurisdictional dispute and named both the IATSE and Conference of Studio Unions as defendants.

According to the Los Angeles press, the Los Angeles Field Division reported on December 13, 1946, that 35 screen set decorators affiliated with the Conference of Studio Unions petitioned the IATSE to grant them membership cards in order that they might continue to work in the motion picture studios. [redacted]

The 14 film union officials and pickets who were indicted on charges of criminal conspiracy on January 7, 1947, entered pleas of not guilty. Sorrell and Mattison in addition to the indictments of criminal conspiracy have been charged with conspiracy to influence and coerce strikers to break an injunction on November 14, 1946.

Meanwhile Municipal Judge Ellsworth Meyer has denied a defense motion for separate trials for each of the 202 film pickets now on trial in Los Angeles and on January 10, 1947, former Congressman Ellis Patterson, who is reliably reported to be a member of the Communist Party, and Ruth Seade, who is known to be a member of the Communist Party, appeared at the City Attorneys office and demanded that the City drop prosecution against the pickets who were arrested in connection with illicit picketing in November of last year.

Charging "unexcusable brutality" and "unwarranted" persecution of film strikers, Allen Heist, Southern California Director of the American Civil Liberties Union, appealed to the police and District Attorney to drop the conspiracy indictment against the strike leaders. Heist also charged that the present mass trials of pickets impinges upon the civil rights of strikers and stated that the resources of the American Civil Liberties Union would be available to those charged with conspiracy and disorder in the current film strike.

Negotiations for the settlement of this strike appear to be deadlocked and the producers have again stated that inasmuch as it is a jurisdictional dispute it can be ended only by action within the AFL.

(February 14, 1947 to April 22, 1947)

Confidential Informant [redacted] of Los Angeles reported that the Conference of Studio Unions, under the leadership of Herbert K. Sorrell, a former Communist, is still on strike. He stated that picket lines are still before the studio gates and all attempts to settle the strike so far have failed. He reported that the Conference of Studio Unions, although an AFL bloc, has the sympathies of the CIO and all groups where Communist influence is felt. The World Federation of Trade Unions has been appealed to by Sorrell and unions in France and England have responded. Some of them have refused to handle film in their countries. The same applies, according to [redacted] to South America and Mexico where Communists are strongly entrenched. Vicente Lombardo Toledano, head of the left-wing unions in Mexico and a vice president of the World Federation of Trade Unions, was in Los Angeles during February of 1947, and spoke at a meeting of the Conference of Studio Unions, at which time he promised he would shut down every motion picture theater in Mexico for one day in sympathy with the strike of these Hollywood unions.

The Hollywood Reporter for February 3, 1947, under the heading "Mexican Theater Strike to Aid CSU" stated in part that Vicente Lombardo Toledano, Mexican labor leader, on Sunday night, February 2, 1947, told a C.S.U. mass meeting that he was wiring the Mexican union, the equivalent of the I.A.T.S.E. in the United States, to call a one day strike of all Mexican theaters on the first convenient Sunday, as a means of telling the Mexican public of the Hollywood strike

It stated that Toledano is in Los Angeles attending a meeting of the International Labor Organization and he was quoted as saying that he was "wiring my office in Mexico City to write to all Latin American theater unions requesting them to take similar action." He said if the strike were not settled by May, when the World Trade Federation of which he is a vice president meets in Prague, he would try to have a world wide one day theater "close-down" called. It further stated that a majority of the Screen Actors Guild has gone on record as supporting the Screen Actors Guild's policy and activities of the Board of Directors in the current Hollywood film strike.

It also stated that the Screen Actors Guild leadership was blamed for a lack of moral courage to support the strike in a talk last night by Father George Dunne. He called on the Screen Actors Guild to adopt a policy of refusing to cross picket lines and thus speed the end of the long studio strike.

The Labor Herald for February 6, 1947, stated that the American Labor Delegation from the American Federation of Labor objected to any consideration of the Hollywood strike on the grounds that it is a strictly jurisdictional strike and it then was emphasized that Toledano's presentation was unofficial.

Regarding the Hollywood situation, Toledano said that he had received a telegram from Hollywood strikers while he still was in Mexico. The strikers asked that Mexican workers refuse to finish work on any films produced in the United States which might be sent to Mexico for completion. His reply was that Mexican trade unions "of course" would not finish any such films sent to Mexico.

It stated that Herbert Woods, a United States worker and an AFL delegate who was presiding, cut short the exchange of positions with a reminder that "Mr. Toledano's declarations had been entirely unofficial" and required no formal action from the group of delegates.

This is the second strike in two years by this group for control of the studio workers. There is no question of wages or hours involved. The present strike is now in its fifth month.

A benefit to raise money for the strikers was held at the Philharmonic Auditorium on February 6, 1947. All those entertainers appearing or sponsoring same have reportedly records of Communist activity or sympathy. The prominent ones were:

Abe Burrows and Irving Reis (Co-Chairmen of the Meeting);
Ivie Anderson (Negress) - singer;
Eve Arden, actress;
Saul Chaplin, son of Charlie Chaplin;
Betty Comden;
Adolph Green;
Howard Da Silva, screen actor;
Anita Ellis, Actors Lab.;
John Garfield, actor;
Peter Lind Hayes, actor;
Dan Seymour;
Paul Henreid, actor;
Al Jarvis, radio entertainer;
Sol Kaplan;
Gene Kelly, actor;
Evelyn Keyes, actress;
Harpo Marx, actor;
Sidney Miller;
Corinna Mura, actress;
Stanley Prager, actor;
Jessie Price, Actors Lab.;
Alan Reed;
Keenan Wynn, actor.

Approximately $6000 was raised.

Agents of the Los Angeles Office attended the show at the Philharmonic Auditorium February 6, 1947, given by the so-called "motion picture stars of Hollywood" for the benefit of motion picture strikers. The program was the usual songs, dances, dialogue, jokes and skits of various sorts. Interspersed, there were several strike scenes where the police were shown "beating up strikers." Usually only one or two strikers were shown as if peacefully picketing, carrying banners or boards on which some slogans were inscribed.

The police, usually several in number, would arrive on the scene and charge the pickets with "conspiracy" to do something and proceed to "beat up" the pickets. At no time did the pickets resist but meekly submitted to the pretended beatings."

There were approximately 3000 persons present. The admission was from $1.00 to $5.00. It is estimated that approximately $2500 to $3000 net was realized from the box office. In addition, a collection was taken. The contributions announced were as follows:

1	$1000.00
2 $500 checks	1000.00
1 $250 check	250.00
1 $200 check	200.00
10 $100 checks	1000.00
3 $50 checks	150.00
12 $25 checks	300.00
20 $5.00 bills	100.00

In addition to the above, a general collection was taken by passing baskets. The total from the collection, including the above mentioned as announced was $3829. It is estimated that the total net from the entertainment was at least $6000 and may have been as much as $7000.

This same informant reported that on the morning of March 3, 1947, Herbert K. Sorrell, alleged Communist leader of the studio strike, was found 150 miles from Los Angeles in the desert where, supposedly, he had been thrown from a car. He was found to have been beaten and scratched; he stated that the night before he had been kidnapped by three men near his home in Glendale, California; that they had threatened to kill him. He had been trussed up and thrown into the car, then taken out into the desert and left there. He said threats to kill him had been made.

This story made headlines all over the country. However, according to a statement made by Ben Martinez, Business Representative of Studio Plasterers, Local 755, who had attended a cocktail party given by the Studio Managers on the evening of March 6, 1947, this story is false. Martinez stated that some of Sorrell's own union members who wanted to go to work had, on Sunday morning, March 2, 1947, gotten into an argument with Sorrell and beat him up pretty badly; that the whole story of the kidnapping was a fake manufactured by Sorrell.

Despite this, the strikers in the studios, aided by all the forces of the Communist Party in Los Angeles County, were to stage a mass meeting to protest against this "attack on labor" by the Motion Picture Producers and the "gangster-ridden IATSE unions." The mass meeting was to be held at the Olympic Auditorium in Los Angeles on Sunday evening, March 9, 1947. Those billed to speak were the following:

Phillip M. Connelly	Secretary-Treasurer of LAIUC
Ellis E. Patterson	Ex-Congressman
Walter J. Turner	AFL Pressmen's Union (Candidate for School Board)
Joe De Silva	AFL Retail Clerks, Business Agent
Rev. Father George Dunne	Loyola University
Rev. J. L. Castin	Negro Candidate for City Council
Mary McCall, Jr.	Writer
Dalton Trumbo	Screenwriter

The Conference of Studio Unions issued a circular on or about February 10, 1947, entitled "Anti-Labor Injunctions" in which was stated the following in substance:

> "Anti-Labor injunctions are being issued at the request of employers in many parts of the United States, to prohibit picketing, encourage scabbing, break strikes and destroy unions.
> "Local injunctions have been ruled out in Federal Court and in 26 states, but not in California."

He further stated that in the current Hollywood dispute, the motion picture employers have obtained court orders and injunctions without any court hearing, often with violence and with mass arrests of more than 1000 peaceful pickets.

It stated that these injunctions aid the employers in their purpose which is to smash those unions now picketing the film studios for the following advantages:

> "1. Workable arbitration machinery to settle all disputes concerning the allocation of work.
> "2. Signed contracts covering wages, hours and working conditions.
> "3. Return to their job without discrimination of all workers on or respecting the picket lines."

"Variety," for March 10, 1947, under the heading "Six Thousand Hear Sorrell at C.S.U. Rally," stated that approximately 6000 persons turned out last night at the Olympic Auditorium to hear Herbert K. Sorrell recount the story of his recent kidnapping and beating.

It stated that those attending the mass meeting voted to send telegrams to Senator Robert A. Taft and Representative Fred A. Hartley, Chairmen of the U. S. Senate and House Labor Committees, protesting proposed legislation outlawing the closed shop and collective bargaining and what were called "restrictive amendments" to the Wagner Act. Other telegrams were sent to Mayor Bowron, the District Attorney, and the City Attorney of Los Angeles, demanding dismissal of the mass trials, apprehension of Sorrell's assailants, and an end to the violence which has characterized the strike.

In addition to Sorrell, the following persons addressed the meeting:

Ellis E. Patterson (former Congressman)
Walter J. Turner	Father George Dunne
Rev. Jonathan Castan	Averill Berman
Phillip M. Connelly	Dalton Trumbo

This informant, who was again contacted between April 9 and 11, 1947, reported that there was no evidence of a settlement of the strike, which is not over wages or hours but is completely one for Communist control of the Studio Unions.

CONFERENCE OF STUDIO UNIONS
(April 22, 1947 - May 24, 1947)

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office reported during the first part of May, 1947, that this Communist-controlled bloc of Studio Unions still remains on strike and maintains picket lines before the motion picture studios. He stated this strike is now in the eighth month. He indicated the motion picture producers are attempting to bargain with the strikers but so far nothing has resulted. He also stated that the usual forces influenced by the Communist movement still support the strike.

II. COMMUNIST INFILTRATION OF INTELLECTUAL GROUPS

The Communist Party "Directive" of 1935 directing penetration of the motion picture industry included also specific directives to concentrate on the so-called intellectual group including directors, writers, artists, actors, actresses and highly paid technicians. Reportedly the purpose of this control is to utilize the motion pictures as a powerful instrument of propaganda and to cause the production of pictures which will serve the interests of the foreign policy of the Soviet Union throughout the world. While there has been an immense program of infiltration into the studio labor unions, it is, nevertheless, among the "intellectuals," particularly the writers, directors, actors and artists, or the so-called cultural field, where most progress has been made and where Communist sympathy and influence is the strongest and most far-reaching. As is frequently the case in handling such groups, the Communist strategy was to work through the use of front organizations which were not openly identified with the Communist Party, but which were nevertheless controlled by the Party through the official membership.

In 1930 the International Union of Revolutionary Writers held a convention in Kharkov, Russia, under instructions from the Communist International. This International Union of Revolutionary Writers was responsible for the ultimate formation of the League of American Writers in the United States. Many of the writers now employed in the Hollywood Picture Industry were schooled in the organization which sprang from this Congress and those writers who were so schooled are reportedly still carrying on for the Communist Party. At about the same time, that is in 1930, another organization was set up in the Soviet Union known as the International Union of Revolutionary Theater. This likewise was the parent of a multitude of sub-organizations in the United States called Workers Theaters, Theater Groups, Little Theaters, etc. It is reported that all of these projects were under the firm control of the Communist Party. The first organization formed as an outgrowth of the International Union of Revolutionary Theaters was the League of Workers Theater created in New York about 1932. In 1934 its name was changed to New Theater League. [redacted]

New Theater League

The New Theater League set up a National Executive Board in 1935 composed of theatrical representatives in the writing and directing fields throughout the United States. Among the individuals who have been associated with the New Theater League in executive positions and who are now in Hollywood carrying on its activities are Herbert Kline, director; John Howard Lawson, writer; Albert Maltz, writer; Langston Hughes, writer; Clifford Odets, writer; Jay Leyda, director; Viola Brothers Shore, writer; Lester Cole, writer; Lillian Hellman, writer; Herbert Biberman, director; Frank Tuttle, director;

J. Edgar Bromberg, actor; Donald Ogden Stewart, writer, and Lionel Stander, actor. All of these persons have been identified as members of the Communist Party. [redacted]

Contemporary Theater, Incorporated

As a part of the Communist Party program and under the auspices of the New Theater League, there was set up in Hollywood an organization known as Contemporary Theater, Incorporated. Its aims and purposes were "devoted to the production of the best available plays dealing with the struggles and conflicts of our times." This organization was responsible for the production of such plays as "Peace on Earth" by George Sklar and Albert Maltz, Communist Party members; "Sailors of Cattaro" by Frederick Wolfe, which portrayed a revolutionary uprising; and "Waiting for Lefty," "Awake and Sing," "Paradise Lost" and "Until the Day We Die," all by Clifford Odets, a Communist Party member. Among the Hollywood sponsors of Contemporary Theater, Inc., were Dorothy Parker, writer; Herman Schumlin, director; Herbert Biberman, director; Dudley Nichols, writer; Donald Ogden Stewart, writer; Lionel Stander, actor; Frederick March, actor; Florence Eldridge, actress; James Cagney, actor; Lewis Milestone, director; John Howard Lawson, writer; Clifford Odets, writer, and Frank Tuttle, director. All of these persons have been reported as Communist Party members or as members of recognized Communist Party front organizations.

Contemporary Theater, Inc., had a comparatively short life. This was not because of a lack of interest, but rather because it discovered that a simpler and easier way to get the Communist propaganda plays before the public was to utilize the WPA Federal Theater Project for their purpose. However, in 1939 the Federal Theater Project was eliminated from the Work Projects Administration due to alleged Communist control. Therefore the same Hollywood group which was instrumental in creating Contemporary Theater, Inc., again reverted to setting up its own theater group and formed the Hollywood Theater Alliance. [redacted]

Hollywood Theater Alliance

This organization reportedly followed the usual formula of a Communist front group. Within a few months after its creation the Non-Aggression Pact between Stalin and Hitler was announced and the effect on the organization was immediately apparent. From a position of support for democracy and the popular front, the organization changed to one of isolation, opposition to lend-lease, opposition to the Selective Service Act and complete support of the Communist Party line.

The first show produced by the Hollywood Theater Alliance was "Meet the People," which followed the Communist Party line completely. It sneered at preparation for national defense and contained cleverly satirized propaganda aimed at preventing aid to Great Britain and in a general sense upheld the position of the Communist Party in its attitude toward war at that time.

At the present time the Hollywood Theater Alliance is inactive.

Most of the writers and intellectuals responsible for the organization have become active in the Hollywood Writers Mobilization or other front groups which are now very patriotic. During the period of the Hollywood Theater Alliance for the duration of the Stalin-Hitler pact, August 1939 to June 1941, it was extraordinarily successful.

Hollywood Anti-Nazi League

This organization was one of the most outstanding in the series of Communist front organizations set up in Hollywood. It appealed to the large Jewish population in Southern California on the basis of fighting Hitlerism and drew financial support from the producers of motion pictures on that program. Among the original founders of the Hollywood Anti-Nazis League are Donald Ogden Stewart, writer; Dorothy Parker, writer; Gloria Stuart, actress; Herbert Biberman, director; Frederick March, actor; Viola Brothers Shore, writer; Gail Sondergaard, actress, and Alan Campbell, writer. All of these persons have been reported to be Communists or Communist sympathizers. Following the Stalin-Hitler Non-Aggression Pact and the consequent change in the Communist Party line from opposition to Fascism to a program of general isolation, the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League was "liquidated." It then became the Hollywood League for Democratic Action.

Hollywood League for Democratic Action

The program of the Hollywood League for Democratic Action was just the reverse of the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, although the same people were in control of both organizations. Its officers and members included practically the same persons who had previously been members of the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League. As stated above, many of these persons are known Communist Party members and in addition, many others, although not definitely identified with the Communist Party, are members of numerous Communist front organizations.

The organization gradually drifted out of the picture with the coming of the American Peace Mobilization.

American Peace Mobilization

This was a nationwide group set up in accordance with the Communist Party line of opposition to all national defense measures and the participation by the United States in "the imperialist war." The leading figure in the Hollywood area was Herbert Biberman, a director who has been identified as a Communist Party member. Known Communists associated with the group in the Hollywood area were Sam Ornitz, John Howard Lawson, Donald Ogden Stewart, Dalton Trumbo, Michael Blankfort, Frank Tuttle and Guy Endore. Many other Hollywood "intellectuals" were reported to be associated with this group whose activities as a Communist Party front group are well recognized.

Hollywood Democratic Committee

The Hollywood Democratic Committee was set up in January, 1943.

Its announced purpose was the formation of an association of voters in the motion picture community to support "victory legislation" and "victory candidates." It included a number of writers, directors and actors who had previously been identified with other Communist front or Communist controlled labor groups. [redacted]

Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee

Over the years from 1937 on, during the period of the war in Spain, numerous Communist front groups had been formed to assist the Communist cause in Spain. Prominent among these were the Medical Bureau to Aid Spanish Democracy, Spanish Refugee Relief Campaign, Spanish Refugee Ship Mission, Friends of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade, Hollywood Committee for Writers in Exile and the United American Spanish Aid Committee. These groups had found membership and support among the intellectual colony in the Hollywood area. The remnants of all these groups were consolidated together with the formation of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee. The organization is reportedly completely Communist dominated and is said to be interested only in those refugees whose political opinions coincide with those who are in control of the committee. A check of the personnel and those in charge and active in the organization shows the same names and control that have been observed in the other Hollywood front organizations. Prominent among them are Phillip Merivale, Robert Rossen, Tamara Geva and Lion Feuchtwanger. [redacted]

League of American Writers

The Hollywood chapter of the League of American Writers is of importance because operating through its members who are firmly intrenched in the motion picture industry, it is reported to exercise an insidious influence over the type of picture produced. An examination of propaganda type pictures reflects that in almost every case the writer or writers, and in many cases the directors, are persons who have been identified as members of the League of American Writers.

The parentage and control of the League of American Writers by the Communist Party is a matter of record. In 1930 a congress of so-called revolutionary writers was held in Kharkov, Russia. An International Union of Revolutionary Writers was formed to cooperate in all countries outside the borders of the Soviet Union. The basic purpose of this union was to organize intellectuals, particularly writers, in all countries, indoctrinating them with the philosophy of Marxian Communism and to create cultural organizations for the defense of the Soviet Union. There had already been set up in the largest cities of the United States, groups of writers, artists and intellectuals called John Reed Clubs, named after John Reed, the Communist Party revolutionary. In January, 1935, a Congress of John Reed Clubs was held in New York City called the First American Writers Congress. As an outgrowth of this Congress the League of American Writers was formed. The National Council of the League of American Writers then affiliated with the International Union of Revolutionary Writers with headquarters in Moscow. Thus through the action of its National Council the League in America became an affiliate of this international revolutionary organization which has always been under the control of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union.

In approximately 1935 the Hollywood chapter of the League of American Writers was formed. Its purpose was to include those writers who were employed in the motion peiture industry in order to concentrate more effectively on the production of motion pictures. Headquarters were set up in Hollywood and the organization has functioned steadily since its formation. Among the known Communist Party members or Communist sympathizers affiliated with the Hollywood chapter of the League of American Writers are Guy Endore, Morton Grant, Paul Jarrico, John Howard Lawson, Waldo Salt, Viola Brothers Shore, Tess Slessinger, Donald Ogden Stewart and Dalton Trumbo.

The Hollywood Chapter of the League of American Writers has as an organization followed the Communist Party Line ever since it was established. It is reported that this organization has now reached such a position of power and influence in the industry that it can be said that it practically dominates the cultural section of the motion picture industry. It is said that the entire record of the Hollywood chapter, as well as the record of the national organization of the League of American Writers, shows conclusively that the Communist Party completely dominates and controls both groups.

As of February, 1944, it has been reported that a number of individuals who were formerly members of the American League of Writers and who were engaged only in writing, have now been promoted to the position of directors or producers. Among these are Robert Rossen, Director at Warner Brothers; Norman Corwin, Associate Producer at MGM, Vincent Sherman, Producer-Director at Warner Brothers; Dore Schary, Producer at RKO; Clifford Odets, Producer at Warner Brothers; Sidney Buchman, Producer at Columbia; Sheridan Gibney, Producer at Paramount; Julius and Phillip Epstein, Producers at Warner Brothers; Arthur Schwartz, Producer at Warner Brothers, and E. Y. Harburg, Producer at MGM.

Hollywood School for Writers

The Hollywood School for Writers is a subsidiary of the Hollywood Chapter of the League of American Writers and is said to be a transmission belt whereby budding writers and those who have ambitions to become writers are developed along the political lines followed by the League of American Writers and conditioned for eventual membership in the League and the Communist Party. The School for Writers was established in October, 1939 by the Hollywood Chapter of the League. A careful check on all instructors and lecturers who have appeared before classes in the last two years shows that there has not been one who has not been identified either as a Communist Party member or as a member of recognized Communist front organizations.

Hollywood Canteen

The Hollywood Canteen is a project set up and operated by the various labor unions and guilds connected with the motion picture industry in Hollywood. As the name implies, and as stated in its literature, the purpose of the canteen is to furnish entertainment and recreation for men now serving in the Armed Forces of the United Nations. The organization is incorporated under the laws of the State of California as a non-profit organization.

The movement to establish this canteen began in August, 1942, and was a proposal of a group within Local 47, American Federation of Musicians. Of the individuals active in creating the canteen, J. K. Wallace, Carroll Hollister and Sam Alberts, are all members of the Communist Party. There immediately became affiliated in the movement a number of labor organizations attached to the Conference of Studio Unions, which is Communist dominated. With the exception of the American Guild of Variety Artists, all the groups active in the formation of the Hollywood Canteen are reported to be under Communist influence. Following the formation of the canteen, however, practically every union in the motion picture industry became affiliated with it.

The present officers include Bette Davis, President; Carroll Hollister, Vice President; John Garfield, Vice President, and J. K. Wallace, Vice President. Hollister and Wallace have been identified as Communist Party members and Garfield has been associated with numerous Communist front groups. A number of individuals on the Board of Directors and on the Executive Committee of the Hollywood Canteen are reported to be either Communist Party members or members of recognized Communist front groups.

It is reported that there is little doubt that the inspiration for the creation of the Hollywood Canteen originated in Communist circles. It is also said that there is no doubt that Communist dominated individuals have much to say about the conduct of the canteen. However, owing to the fact that so many organizations and persons not sympathetic to the Communist cause are also interested in the work of the canteen at the present time, there has not been any definite attempt at propaganda or other Communist activities.

Cinema Post American Legion

Information has been received that in June, 1943, an effort was made by Communist individuals in Hollywood labor groups to form a post of the American Legion to be known as the Cinema Post. Norval D. Crutcher of Film Technicians Local 683, was the leading figure in the organizational campaign. Crutcher, as mentioned above, was a member of the Communist Party. Approximately forty prospective members were obtained for the Cinema Post and it was reported that a temporary charter was issued by the Los Angeles County Council of the American Legion. It was reported that the purpose in setting up this post was to obtain an American Legion group which would counteract the critical action of the American Legion generally toward Communist propaganda pictures. The formation of this post was not successful due to the fact that the national headquarters of the American Legion withdrew the temporary charter which had been granted and refused to issue a permanent charter.

Actors Laboratory

As of February, 1944, it has been reported that a school was opened in the Santa Monica Junior College to train enlisted men of the U. S. Army in the show business. This school was established in December, 1943, under the supervision of the Army Special Service Forces, Ninth Service Command, and contained a selected group of 500 enlisted men from eight states who were to be instructed in the various types of entertainment to be presented to the Armed Forces.

Information has been received that the principal instructors in this school were persons who were members of, or instructors in, the Actors Laboratory. It is reported that the Actors Laboratory is an organization set up by a number of known Communists and persons affiliated with Communist Party front organizations in the motion picture business for the estensible purpose of teaching motion picture acting. In reality, it is reported to indoctrinate those who attend meetings or classes with Communist philosophy. Among the reported Communist Party members connected with the Actors Laboratory are Helen Levitt, David Hellweil, Phil Brown, Roman Bhonen, J. Edward Bromberg, Morris Carnovsky and Jules Dassin. Among the persons reportedly acting as instructors in the laboratory who are reported to be Communist Party members were Irving Reis, Frank Tuttle and Gloria Stuart.

Hollywood Democratic Committee

This committee, as of May, 1944, is described as very active and has exerted considerable influence in the political field in California. It commenced its activities in July, 1943 under the leadership of John Howard Lawson, a writer who is a known Communist Party member. It is not, as the name might imply, officially a part of the Democratic Party. It is a separate group composed in the main of known Communists and members of Communist front groups. Its activities thus far have been devoted principally to publicity for its favored candidates, violent attacks on those with whom it is not in agreement and attempts to high pressure Congressmen and other legislators to adopt legislation favored by the Communist Party. It reportedly was raising the sum of $50,000 to be used in the primary elections in California in May, 1944. As of that time it claimed a membership of over 1,000 and a mailing list of 2,500. Among the persons associated with it are Helen Gahagan Douglas, John B. Hughes, H. K. Norton, Albert Maltz, Rita Hayworth, Virginia Bruce, Olivia de Havilland and Rex Ingram. All these persons are known to have supported Communist fostered causes in the past. It is reportedly following the Communist Party line as laid down by Earl Browder in May, 1944, to work within Democratic processes to carry out the Communist Party doctrines. It is said to be the political spearhead of the Communist Party in Hollywood as of May, 1944. [redacted]

Screen Writers Guild

This organization, which has been described as one of the most strictly Communist dominated groups in Hollywood, has been very active in recent months. It has led the attack on the Motion Picture Alliance for the Preservation of American Ideals. The latter group is an anti-Communist organization. John Howard Lawson, a Communist writer and a member of Screen Writers Guild, has been the leading figure in using the S. W. G. as the focal point for the attack on the Motion Picture Alliance. [redacted]

Motion Picture Alliance for the Preservation of American Ideals

This organization was formed in February, 1944, by a number of prominent writers, directors and actors and said to be opposed to the Communist influence in the motion picture industry. A number of anti-Communist labor leaders are also affiliated with the M. P. A. The officers of the organization include:

Sam Wood, President
Walt Disney, Vice-president
George Bruce, Executive Secretary
James K. McGuinness, Chairman of the Executive Board

Prominent motion picture figures who have spoken before this group and have indicated sympathy for its anti-Communist aims include Clark Gable, Gary Cooper and Mrs. Lela Rogers, mother of Ginger Rogers.

The M. P. A. has been the subject of vigorous attacks by the Communist apparatus which reportedly has lined up all Communist controlled unions, guilds front organizations to contact it. It has been the subject of a vicious smear campaign by the Communist elements and has been accused of being anti-[redacted] anti-Semitic and opposed to the progress of the war.

[redacted]

Hollywood Writers Mobilization

It is [illegible] one of the four outstanding Communist front organizations in Hollywood. It was created by the League of American Writers, a Communist front group, late in 1941. The League of American Writers had become so well known as a Communist front group that it was considered necessary to create a new organization. The Hollywood Writers Mobilization did not bear the stigma of having guessed wrong at the time of the Nazi invasion of Russia in 1941. Its announced purpose was all aid to the defense of the United States and the progress of the war. Practically all the leading figures [illegible] are members of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization. A large number are Communist controlled [illegible] affiliated with the group. Among the latter is the Screen Writers Guild which in May, 1944 reportedly contributed $25,000 to the Hollywood Writers Mobilization to carry on its work. The chairman of the H. W. M. is Robert Rossen, a director and producer who is known to be a member of the Communist Party in Hollywood.

[redacted]

Peoples Educational Center

The Peoples Educational Center was formerly known as the Hollywood Writers School which is mentioned earlier in the memorandum as an offshoot of the League of American Writers. It changed its name following the announcement by Earl Browder on January 10, 1944 that the Communist Party would cease to be a political party but would become an educational organization. As this school is conducted and almost solely identified with the motion picture industries and as all instructors are from that source, the influence and prestige of the motion picture industries are thus bestowed upon the school. Most courses taught have to do with screen writing, acting, directing, radio writing and kindred subjects and are closely tied to the motion picture industries. Some well known Communist Party members who act as instructors in the Peoples Educational Center are Alvah Bessie, screen writer; Edward Biberman, screen artist; Revels Cayton, Negro Communist Party functionary; Guy Endore, screen writer; Morton Grant, screen writer; Joris Ivens, screen director; Dorothy Tree, screen actress; Frank Tuttle, screen director; A. Lal Singh, Hindu editor of "India News"; Charles J. Katz and Ben Margolis, attorneys. It is reported that the purpose of this school is the dissemination of Communist propaganda and that it operates as a valuable transmission belt for the Communist Party.

Hollywood Writers Mobilization

In June, 1944, it was reported that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization would produce a number of documentary films for the Overseas Branch of OWI. This arrangement reportedly was made through Robert Riskin, Chief of the Overseas Bureau of Films for OWI, a former motion picture producer in Hollywood who was a member of the League of American Writers and a close associate of John Howard Lawson and Robert Rossen, both of whom are Communist Party members. Rossen is Chairman of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

An article in the "Peoples World," West Coast Communist news organ, dated June 9, 1944 indicated that a Committee of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization would have responsibility for writing and producing all documentary films for overseas distribution. Among those named as participating in this program are: John F. Cohee, Professor Franklin Fearing, Philip Dunne, Robert Rossen, James Hilton, Charles Brackett, Marc Connelly, Howard Estabrook, Frances Goodrich, Albert Hackett, John Houseman, Talbot Jennings, Howard Koch, Emmett Lavery, John Howard Lawson, Mary McCall, Jr., Allan Rivkin, Allan Scott and Harry Tugend. Of the above individuals, Cohee, Rossen and Lawson are known to be members of the Communist Party and extremely active. All of the other individuals have been associated with one or more Communist Party front groups and most of them were members of the League of American writers, an organization which was completely Communist dominated and controlled.

It has also been reported as of June, 1944 that the following labor unions in Hollywood are cooperating with the Hollywood Writers Mobilization. All of these unions are described as Communist controlled.

Screen Writers Guild
Radio Writers Guild
Independent Publicists Guild
Screen Story Analysts Guild
Screen Publicists Guild
Los Angeles Newspaper Guild [redacted]

Hollywood Democratic Committee

As of June, 1944 this Committee was described as the spearhead of the attack on Congressman John M. Costello, a member of the Dies Committee, who ran for renomination in the 15th Congressional District in California. Costello was defeated. Nominated in his place was one Hal Styles, a radio commentator, who is reported to have followed the Communist Party line. The Hollywood Democratic Committee announced that it had raised a sum of $50,000 to be used in the local campaign. It is reported that the efforts of this Committee were coordinated with all other Communist controlled organizations directly and indirectly connected with the motion picture industry. The Hollywood Democratic Committee is described as the leader in political action in the Hollywood community. Among candidates who were supported by the Hollywood Democratic Committee and who were successful were: Helen Gahagan Douglas, wife of actor Melvin Douglas, who secured the Democratic nomination in the 14th Congressional District; Ned Healy, Democratic nominee in the 13th Congressional District; Ellis E. Patterson, Democratic nominee in the 16th Congressional District. Reportedly, all three of the foregoing individuals had the unqualified support of the Communist Party in connection with their elections.

Two members of the Executive Board of the Hollywood Democratic Committee received nominations for the State Assembly in California. These individuals were Albert Dekker and Lucille Gleason, both of whom are reported to be active in Communist front groups. [redacted]

Motion Picture Alliance for the Preservation of American Ideals

An intensive campaign is still in progress on the part of the Communist Party to attack the MPA. A group of 38 Hollywood organizations, including a number of Communist dominated union locals and guilds, have taken the lead. This group is referred to by the Communists as "The 38 Guild." Under the leadership of John Howard Lawson and Dalton Trumbo, both known members of the Communist Party, plans were made for a large mass meeting to be held in the middle of June or early in July to attack the MPA. Lawson is definitely the directing force of the anti-MPA movement, according to reliable informants. It was planned that this meeting should be used to start a concerted campaign against the MPA and to show it as a menace to the entire movie industry and as one which would affect the pocketbooks of every person in the industry. The issue of Communism was to be avoided and it was planned that the MPA would be attacked on the ground that it was a danger to the movie industry as a whole.

It has also been reported that this group of motion picture studio unions held several meetings and set up a planning committee to devise a modus operandi for spearheading the attack on MPA. John Howard Lawson is also known to be advising and directing the strategy of this group. Informants report this group contemplated adoption of the name, Hollywood United Film Front (HUFF), and that it appears to be a Communist front group in the making.

Latest information is that the mass meeting mentioned above was to be held at the Hollywood American Legion Stadium June 25, 1944, for the purpose of putting the MPA out of existence.

Hollywood Writers' Mobilization

On July 5, 1944, an election of officers of the HWM was held with the following results:

Emmett Lavery - Chairman, replacing Robert Rossen.
Dr. Franklin Fearing, Professor of Psychology at U.C.L.A. - First Vice Chairman.
W. F. (Bill) Blowitz, Hollywood Publicist - Second Vice Chairman.
John Houseman, Screen Writer - Third Vice Chairman.
Abram S. Burrows, Screen Writer - Treasurer.
Howard Estabrook, Writer and Associate Producer - Secretary.

Of the above listed officials, Blowitz and Burrows have been identified as Communist Party members and all of the others have been affiliated with one or more Communist Party front groups. Of interest in connection with Lavery's election as Chairman is the fact that John Howard Lawson, leading Communist in Hollywood, conferred with Robert Rossen, former Chairman of the HWM and known Communist Party member, prior to the elections. At this time Rossen stated that he had held office for three years but that there was some objection to him and upon the suggestion of Lawson it was agreed that he would decline to run. Lawson is reported to have believed this to be a good idea in order that Rossen might devote himself to the overseas film work of OWI.

In furtherance of the plan whereby the Hollywood Writers' Mobilization will direct and produce documentary films for overseas use by OWI, it is reported that in July, 1944, Phillip Dunne, former Hollywood screen writer and next in authority to Robert Riskin of OWI, appeared in Hollywood to complete arrangements for the production of these pictures by the HWM. On July 7, 1944, Dunne spoke before a meeting of the HWM at the Beverly Hills Hotel, outlining the program and stating its objectives. Also speaking at this time were Albert Maltz and Robert Rossen, both prominent in the Hollywood writing field and both members of the Communist Party.

An editorial board was set up to direct the writing of the scripts for the Overseas Branch of OWI. The following known Communist Party members are on this board: John Howard Lawson, Robert Rossen, Sidney Buchman, and Meta Reis. All of the remaining members of this board have been identified with one or more Communist front groups. [redacted]

Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions

In June, 1944, the Communist attack on the MPA crystallized in the formation of a group known as the Emergency Committee of Hollywood Guilds and Unions. This organization was composed of seventeen Hollywood labor organizations, many of which are reported to be Communist dominated. The so-called Emergency Committee arranged for a mass meeting to be held June 28, 1944, in Hollywood for the purpose of attacking the MPA. Approximately 1,000 persons attended this meeting during the course of which the MPA was bitterly attacked as anti-Semitic, anti-Roosevelt, and anti-labor. Prominent speakers at the meeting were Walter Wanger, motion picture producer; James Hilton, prominent writer and member of the Screen Writers Guild; Sidney Buchman, producer of Columbia Studios and Herbert K. Sorrell, President of the Conference of Studio Unions. Buchman is a Communist Party member and Sorrell is a former member. At this meeting it was decided that a permanent group should be formed to combat the attacks brought by MPA and others in the movie industry. This group will be known as the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions. The Los Angeles Office has indicated that this is a new Communist front group.

Motion Picture Alliance for the Preservation of American Ideals

As of July, 1944, the MPA continued to be the only organized opposition to Communist activity in Hollywood. It remained the target for attack by the Communist element. Reportedly the Communists, having failed in their first tactic of attempting to force the producers and heads of the industry to eliminate the organization on the grounds that it would "disrupt the industry," have now changed tactics and are carrying on the fight with the organized labor groups. Informants report that it appears possible that the Communists will foment a labor war in the industry by misrepresenting to the workers that the MPA is "a tool of reactionary interests" designed to disrupt the labor unions and destroy their gains in the industry.

Peoples' Educational Center

This organization, which has been described above as a continuation of the old Hollywood Writers' School, continues to be active as a so-called labor school in the Hollywood area. On an advertising list of sixteen instructors appear the names of five persons who have been definitely identified as Communist Party members. These are: Abram S. Burrows, Edward Dmytrik, Charles Morton Grant, William Shore, and Michael Uris. When this venture was first set up, many local labor unions affiliated with it because it was reported to them as a labor school. However, it is reported that some unions have already withdrawn when they learned it was a Communist propaganda center. On July 8, 1944, the California A. F. of L. State Federation of Labor

"unanimously repudiated" this so-called Educational Center as not being a "bona fide" labor school and so have notified all local unions belonging to the Federation. [redacted]

Cinema Post American Legion #561

The charter for this post was installed on April 1, 1944, after much opposition from local organizations and individuals. The opposition reportedly was caused by the evident Communist influence over those arranging for the charter.

In connection with the Communist activity in the American Legion, Los Angeles informants report that in September, 1943, an organization called National Conference of Union Legionnaires was formed, the purpose of which was to "neutralize the legion in labor disputes." Charles Vencil of Los Angeles was elected President of this group and Dr. Robert Ziegler of Los Angeles was elected Regional Vice President. Informants report that the National Conference is distinctly a Communist effort and stems from Communist Party activity. [redacted]

American Committee of Jewish Writers, Artists and Scientists - Hollywood Chapter

As of July, 1944, it was reported that a group met at the home of I. H. Prinzmetal, investigator for the Hollywood anti-Nazi League and Attorney for M.G.M. Studios, and set up an organization with the above title. The purposes of the group were outlined as "problems of Jewish unity, cultural relations with world Jewry, cooperation with World Jewish Congress in Palestine, and the Jewish Anti-Fascist Committee for Moscow." The meeting reportedly was almost completely composed of persons connected with the Hollywood Motion Picture Industry, all of whom have been connected with Communist Party activity. Known Communist members at the meeting were Albert Maltz, Paul Jarrico, Jack Moss, Eva Shafran, Director of the Communist Workers' School, and Abraham Maymudes of the International Workers Order (IWO). Los Angeles informants report the new organization is apparently a Communist front group.

Hollywood Writers' Mobilization [redacted]

As reported in July, 1944, the Hollywood Writers' Mobilization effected an arrangement with the Office of War Information for the production of several documentary films. In August, 1944, an article in the Hollywood "Daily Variety" indicated that a number of these films to be produced in the near future would deal with postwar and international planning as well as air cadet recruiting and Red Cross campaigns. Details concerning the films planned are being set out in Section IV of this memorandum. [redacted]

Actors' Laboratory

In August, 1944, the Actors' Laboratory was reported to be completely Communist controlled and to constitute an important factor in the Communist apparatus in the Hollywood motion picture industry. An article appearing in the Los Angeles Times for August 10, 1944, reported that a troop of seven players, the first of four such groups to be provided by the Actors' Laboratory, had left for England to begin a six-month tour for the entertainment of Army service personnel. Of the seven individuals, three were reported to be known Communist Party members, namely, Art (Arthur) Smith, Ned Glass, and Mary Jo Ellis. [redacted]

Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions

In August, 1944, it was reported that two additional unions had joined this Communist front group, namely, the Screen Actors' Guild, A. F. of L., and the American Federation of Musicians, Local 47, A. F. of L. These two unions are described as two of the most powerful in Hollywood. Both include a number of known Communist Party members. It was reported that the purpose of the Council is to furnish a front for the Communists within the Hollywood labor unions. [redacted]

Hollywood Democratic Committee

In August, 1944, it was announced that on September 15, 1944, a daily newspaper would enter the Hollywood publications' field to be sponsored by the Hollywood Democratic Committee. Los Angeles informants reported that it can be safely assumed that this publication will also be a Communist propaganda organ since the Hollywood Democratic Committee itself is a Communist front group. [redacted]

General Political Activity of Cultural Groups

As of August, 1944, it was reported that the principal Communist activity and propaganda in the motion picture industry is directed toward the coming national and local elections. The activity of Hollywood Communists was reported to consist largely of their work through Democratic Committees, Trade Union Committees, Cultural Groups, Hollywood Writers' Mobilization, Screen Writers' Guild, and all other front organizations, in supporting certain candidates for office at the coming fall elections.

Hollywood Democratic Committee [redacted]

Informants have advised that this front organization has now become the most important political group in Southern California due to its connections with the motion picture industry and the prestige derived therefrom and due to the further fact that it has enrolled within its membership many prominent persons and well-known writers. It has announced that it will launch a campaign of publicity for its program within the next sixty days, utilizing the talents of its membership as writers, speakers and workers. On September 6, 1944, the Hollywood Democratic Committee held a meeting, the purpose of which was stated to be "to mobilize writing talent for the election campaign." Among those at this meeting were Donald Ogden Stewart, Dalton Trumbo and Olivia de Havilland. Stewart and Trumbo are known Communist Party members and Olivia de Havilland has been associated with numerous front organizations. It was reported that 143 writers of the motion picture industry endorsed this meeting and of this group, 76 writers are reported to have records either of Communist Party membership or activity in various Communist front organizations. Reportedly the writers affiliated with this group will offer their services to the CIO Political Action Committee or to the United A. F. of L. Political Action Committee.

Hollywood Free Press

It has been reported that the Hollywood Democratic Committee on September 15, 1944, will commence publication of a daily newspaper which, it is stated, will have a circulation of 500,000 in Southern California. The paper will be under the supervision of the HDC and allegedly will be called the Hollywood Free Press. A meeting was held August 28, 1944, in Hollywood to consider material available for the first issue of this paper. Among known Communists present at this meeting were Dalton Trumbo, George Pepper and Eddie Blum. A special edition of the paper was planned in connection with the campaign to elect Styles and Healy to Congress in the Los Angeles area.

Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions

Informants advise that this organization has now grown to such size that it has enrolled 21 of the most important key unions in the motion picture industry. Although it is composed mainly of unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, it contains several independent cultural unions such as the Screen Writers' Guild. During August and September, 1944, it has taken into its membership the Screen Actors' Guild and Studio Utility Employees' Local 724. These two unions are said to represent some 12,000 members. Informants advise that the Council is well on the way to achieving domination of the Hollywood Motion Picture Labor Unions, which has been a program of the Communist Party for some time.

The Council issued a 34 page booklet attacking the Motion Picture Alliance for the Preservation of American Ideals and mailed the booklet to every union and political organization throughout the United States. It was reported that 10,000 copies were printed. The content is said to be a most violent attack on the MPA, accusing it of having been sympathetic to the DAB and implying connections with Father Coughlin, the Christian Front, the KKK, Gerald L. K. Smith, Joe McWilliams, and the individuals now on trial in Washington, D. C. for sedition. The address shown in the booklet as the headquarters of the Council is 1655 North Cherokee Avenue, Hollywood, California, which is the address of the Screen Writers' Guild, a completely Communist-dominated union.

Cinema Post #561, American Legion

In September, 1944, it was learned that as of August 1, 1944, a permanent charter was issued to this Post of the American Legion. As stated earlier in the memorandum, considerable opposition had been encountered; however, a temporary charter had been issued at this Post in December, 1943, and an investigation had been made by one George Contreras, a Deputy Sheriff and Legionnaire in Los Angeles, to determine the validity of charges of Communist control. Contreras allegedly made a favorable report to the national headquarters and an installation ceremony was held on or about April 1, 1944, which resulted in the granting of a permanent charter. The persons chiefly active in this group have been Norval Crutcher, Robert Lester alias Robert Watson Leicester and Don King. King and Crutcher are known to have been Communist Party members and Lester has been associated with numerous Communist movements. However, at the present time none of these individuals hold important offices in the Post.

Writers for Roosevelt

A Daily Worker article for September 16, 1944, reported formation of the above organization for the purpose of securing election of Roosevelt. The sixteen members of the main executive committee included Dalton Trumbo, Guy Endore, Edward Blum and Edward Eliscu, all of whom are Communist Party members. Members at large of the Committee included Julius and Phillip Epstein and Paul Trivers, reported to be Communist Party members. It is said that the group is affiliated with the Hollywood Democratic Committee.

General

During the latter part of September, and during the month of October, 1944, a number of the Communist front groups, including the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee, the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, the Peoples Educational Center, the Hollywood Women's Council, etc., dropped all other activity and concentrated on the election campaigns. Their purpose was to work for the election of those candidates who were backed by the CIO Political Action Committee, and with two exceptions those candidates were also supported by the United A. F. of L. Political Action Committee. The exceptions were the candidacy of Hal Styles for Congress in the 15th District in California, and Ned R. Healy for Congress in the 13th District. All groups centered their forces in the Hollywood Democratic Committee, the organization which is reliably reported to be the main front through which the Communist Political Association operates in the Hollywood Section.

Hollywood Democratic Committee

This organization, the character of which has been described hereinbefore, sponsored a political meeting on October 16, 1944, at the Shrine Auditorium in Los Angeles, at which nationally known speakers were to appear, the principal one being Senator Harry Truman, Vice Presidential candidate on the Democratic Party Ticket. A list of approximately 600 names appeared as sponsors of the meeting. This list included "men and women of the film colony." A confidential source advised that in the list there appeared the names of many known Communists and Communist sympathizers.

In its political activity, the Hollywood Democratic Committee sent its members on a door-to-door program. It has also issued a newspaper entitled "Free Press." This organ is issued in newspaper style and has a claimed circulation of 500,000 copies. It is stated that the content is written by known Communists under their signatures. The subject matter of the articles follows the Communist Political Association Line. Also in its political activities, the Committee has furnished speakers and entertainment in the form of playlets and skits for all gatherings where Communists are active, particularly in the CIO and A.F. of L. labor unions. Arrangements were made by the Committee with a group known as the "Actors Lab", a Communist controlled school for the development of actors for the motion picture industry. This organization is the original source of the entertainment.

The Hollywood Democratic Committee has been described by informants as one of the dominating influences in the Democratic Party of Southern California. It has raised a large amount of money, approximately $150,000, according to its claims, which money, according to the Committee, was devoted to the election of its endorsed candidates. It might be noted that the Committee supported all those candidates who were supported by the Communist Political Association.

With regard to its selection of candidates, Hal Styles, a radio broadcaster, was selected and endorsed by the Committee, as a candidate for Congress in the 15th Congressional District. Styles was running on the Democratic Ticket against the incumbent John M. Costello in the Primaries. Styles received the nomination. Subsequently there was publicized his background wherein it was alleged that at one time he had been the Kleagle and Exhaulted Cyclop in the Ku Klux Klan in 1927 and 1928 in Jamaica, New York. He was exposed in the Los Angeles Examiner in a series of articles beginning September 21, 1944. It is said that his name in Jamaica, Long Island, was Harry J. Styles. The expose further stated that Styles had been indicted, tried and convicted for the crime of perjury in Jamaica, New York, and had been sentenced from two to four years in prison. The conviction, however, was reversed on appeal, according to the articles, and the case was not tried again. It is said that the discovery and expose caused commotion within the Hollywood Democratic Committee, and after due consideration it withdrew its endorsement of Styles. Furthermore, some A. F. of L. labor unions in Hollywood which had originally endorsed Styles, also withdrew their endorsements. The Communist element in control of the Committee wanted to continue the endorsement of Styles but in deference to the objections of certain motion picture producers who have supported the Committee, the Communist element permitted its withdrawal to stand. Styles, it might be noted, was defeated in the November 7, 1944, elections. At least four of the candidates who were supported by the Hollywood Democratic Committee won their posts in the elections. They are Ned R. Healy, Congress, 13th District, California, (Healy has been described by informants as a follower of the Communist Party line since 1938.); Helen Gahagan Douglas, Congress, 14th District, (A source has advised that this person was supported by all Communist forces and furthermore, that when she was active in Hollywood film circles, she was connected with and supported various Communist front groups.); Ellis E. Patterson, Congress, 16th District, (Patterson has been described by an informant as one active in Communist affairs for a number of years. He has been a member of or supported a great number of front groups, including the American Peace Mobilization, the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League and the Motion Picture Democratic Committee, all of which groups followed the Communist Party line from isolationism to pro-war when Germany invaded the Soviet Union.); Albert Dekker, California State Assembly, 57th District, (Dekker is said to be one who has followed the Communist Party line for a number of years. As an actor he was active in the New Theater League and in the International Union of Revolutionary Theaters in the New York area during the period 1935 - 1937. This was prior to his coming to Hollywood where he later became a member of the Hollywood Democratic Committee and a member of the Executive Council of this group. [redacted]

Conference of Hollywood Guilds and Unions

During October, 1944, it was reported that the Council was gradually absorbing the Conference of Studio Unions. According to the Confidential Informant, this is the regularly established process of "face-changing" which has long been used by Communist elements. The source offered the opinion that the Conference of Studio Unions will disappear and later emerge within the Council, not as a group, but as individual unions, and those who controlled the Conference will control the larger bloc of twenty-three unions.

In addition, the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions has proposed to set up a "Labor Center" in Hollywood where all unions can meet and have office. To date, however, no progress of note has been made.
(Ibid.)

Hollywood Writers Mobilization
(Formerly League of American Writers)

In the latter part of September, 1944, information was received that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, which formerly served as a "front" for the League of American Writers, assumed most of the work of the League of American Writers, which organization passed out of existence. Former members of the League of American Writers now operate through the Hollywood Writers Mobilization in the political and propaganda fields and through the Screen Writers Guild, an independent labor union representing writers in the motion picture industry. [redacted]

Motion Picture Alliance for the Preservation of American Ideals

This organization, which was formed to oppose Communist activity, became inactive during the two months prior to the elections in November, 1944. It has been stated that the Alliance issued a statement to the effect that it did not desire to be looked upon as a partisan political organization, and therefore was waiting until after the election before again becoming active. (Ibid.)

The following information is being set out under this section, inasmuch as it involves irregularities on the part of Maribess Temple Stokes, also known as Mrs. Everett L. Stokes, who has been employed in the offices of the Alliance.

On October 14, 1944, a confidential informant of the Los Angeles Field Division saw in the offices of the Alliance a document containing the names of Communists, the source of which information allegedly was the FBI. Examinations of the document made available by this informant, who had obtained it from the offices of the Alliance, indicated rather clearly that the information therein had appeared in an FBI report. The informant in the meantime had been advised the information in the document had been received from ONI.

As a result of a file check, suspicion centered on Maribess Stokes who has been serving as a secretary to the Alliance. She was formerly employed by ONI and she is the wife of a Naval officer. She had discontinued her employment in May, 1944. It was subsequently learned that she had had the opportunity of reviewing an FBI report from which she had made notes, thereafter typing them into a memorandum. Copies of the memorandum were furnished to Borden Chase, Hollywood film writer, and a member of the Executive Board of the MPA; Sam Wood, producer and president of the Alliance, and James McGuinness, Executive Chairman of the Alliance. It was learned that McGuinness had had additional copies made and distributed to the directors of the Alliance. Subsequent information from McGuinness indicated that approximately eighteen copies were made and distributed.

Maribess Stokes admitted obtaining the information from Lt. Daniel E. Goodykoontz. She also admitted that it was a matter of common knowledge to high officials of the Alliance that she could obtain information from ONI with the result that whenever they desired a check made on anything they would contact her and she, in turn, would contact Goodykoontz, who would check the files. She said she understood that such information, in all probability, originated with the FBI. She also admitted seeing a copy of the FBI report in question and making shorthand notes from the report for approximately two hours, taking down some excerpts and comments verbatim.

While the material obtained by Maribess Stokes was reprinted in the form of a pamphlet entitled "We Accuse" prepared by Borden Chase, no distribution was made.

As a result of the activities of Goodykoontz, he was immediately removed from duty and confined to his home. Later it was learned that he was transferred to Iceland apparently for his unauthorized disclosure of ONI information. [redacted]

National Council of American-Soviet Friendship

The November 21, 1944, issue of the Daily Worker, page 12, carried an article listing the identities of screen stars who reportedly wired greetings to the rally held by the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship, an organization known to be under Communist control, which has for its purpose propagandizing the Soviet Union in this country. According to the Daily Worker, the text of the message was as follows:

"In time to come the recognition of the Soviet Union by the United States will be remembered as the beginning of an era which brought savagery, ignorance and hunger to an end. It will be remembered as the first step taken toward new horizons of a world where security and culture are meant for the happiness of all people everywhere.

"On this occasion Hollywood wishes to add its voice to the voice of all Americans hailing the mutual bond which exists and which will continue to grow between our great country and our great Allies. In this friendship lies not only the hope but the future of the world."

The article also advised that the following people signed the telegram:

Mr. Tolson
Mr. E. A. Tamm
Mr. Clegg
Mr. Coffey
Mr. Glavin
Mr. Ladd
Mr. Nichols
Mr. Rosen
Mr. Tracy
Mr. Carson
Mr. Egan
Mr. Hendon
Mr. Pennington
Mr. Quinn Tamm
Mr. Nease

Orson Welles

Of the above listed persons practically everyone has, in the past, been affiliated in some degree with the Communist Movement.

(Daily Worker, November 21, 1944 - [redacted]

General - November, 1944

The informant has advised that after the November elections Communists in the Hollywood Motion Picture Industry and the numerous front organizations, in the Hollywood area, have become more open in their activity. According to the informant, the part they played, operating through their front organizations, in the elections, was most effective from their standpoint. They have been very successful in lessening antagonism to Communists by stressing the great part they played in the elections as an example of their Americanism. Very cleverly they have instituted a slogan which is being heard from all sides within the industry. The slogan is, whenever there is the slightest criticism of Communists or the Soviet Union, "After all, what is the matter with Communism?" This is a very effective tactic because the ordinary employee does not have sufficient knowledge of the subject to give an intelligent answer. The purpose of this is to break down the "taboo" against discussing the subject matter. This is a common expression heard within the unions and on the studio lots at the present time.

In summation, according to the informant, it can be said that in a broad sense, objections to Communism or Communists are apparently losing their force. This permits the Communists employed in the motion picture industry a greater latitude in using their personal prestige by more openly supporting the various front groups in the Southern California area.

American Youth for Democracy

In connection with the section set out immediately above, the informant has advised that a clear and emphatic example of the open work described above, was exhibited at the first anniversary meeting of American Youth for Democracy, the successor group to the Young Communist League. This anniversary meeting was celebrated at the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel, December 1, 1944. The organization is known to the general population in Hollywood as a Communist group. However, seventeen prominent persons now employed in the motion picture industry, either sponsored or addressed the meeting. While this was a meeting of American Youth for Democracy, and presumably independent of the motion picture industry, yet the prestige of this industry was lent to the organization through the publicising of names of prominent motion picture people who supported it. Those people were:

George Bradley, Business Agent,
Local 99, Studio Laborers.
Edward Dmytrik, Director
Lion Feuchtwanger, Writer
Irving Fineman, Writer
Carroll Hollister, Musician
Rex Ingram, Actor
Ring Lardner, Jr., Writer
John Howard Lawson, Writer
Albert Maltz, Writer
Thomas Mann, Writer
Sam Moore, Actor
Clarence Muse, Actor
Sam Ornitz, Writer
Earl Robinson, Musician
Frank Scully, Writer
Herbert K. Sorrell, Labor Official
Dalton Trumbo, Writer

Hollywood Democratic Committee

The informant has pointed out that during November, 1944, and the first part of December of 1944, this Communist front group which originally was presumed to be set up as a temporary group to support the Democratic Party as well as Communist sponsored candidates in the November, 1944, election and the primaries which preceded it, is now to be maintained as a permanent organization. It is proposed that its work will continue in the political field and that the organization will cooperate with and support the Political Action Committee and all other "progressive" groups in politics.

In an official report issued subsequent to the November, 1944, election, this organization stated it had collected and expended $85,133.57 during the period July 14 - October 27, 1944. This money was reportedly used for political campaigns. The organization did not state that any money had been collected between October 27, 1944 and the date of the elections, November 7, 1944. The report goes into detail as to the activities of the Committee, stating who the persons were taking part in its program and how the work was divided. It also gives the names of the motion pictures, actors, writers, musicians, etc. who worked in the program. The entire list of those given contains names which have been identified with the Communist movement in varying degrees. The informant has advised that the Hollywood Democratic Committee states that it is now making preparations for future local elections during May, 1945, and it is through this organization that the film industry exerts political pressure in local politics. Control over the Committee is exerted in the usual way, Communists in the background, pulling the strings of control. [redacted]

Motion Picture Alliance for the Preservation of American Ideals

During the month of November, 1944, this anti-Communist group, according to the informant, continued its inactiveness. It has taken no action of any kind worth mentioning, and it is recalled that the organization took the position before the election that, to avoid any implications the group is of a partisan political nature, it would practically cease activity. After the elections there was little evidence of any activity. It is alleged that motion picture producers are putting pressure privately on members of the organization to dissolve it. The informant believes that it will succumb within the near future. [redacted]

Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions

Originally this Council was formed to combat the anti-Communist campaign of the Motion Picture Alliance for the Preservation of American Ideals. At the very beginning it was a loosely formed group composed of some twenty-one guilds and unions in the industry. Although the Motion Picture Alliance has now become more or less inactive (November 1944 and the first part of December, 1944), and shows signs of disintegration, the Communist elements in control of the Council have taken advantage of this situation to continue as a permanent organization. It has been announced that a permanent paid executive secretary has been appointed and further, that the Council will broaden its activities into other fields. The informant states that this means the Council will become a very powerful Communist influence in Hollywood and can possibly supplant the existing bargaining involved in labor relations in the industry, as well as in other matters.

Hollywood Writers Mobilization

During November, 1944, and the first part of December, 1944, this organization continued its activity in the usual manner. The informant advises that the organization has grown through its connections with the Office of War Information and its resultant "war activities." While not officially affiliated with the Peoples Educational Center (referred to immediately hereinafter), a Communist controlled school, many of those prominent in the Hollywood Writers Mobilization have taken a part in the educational activity in this so-called school and thus the influence of the organization is brought into play in this field. The League of American Writers, the parent organization of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, as of December 10, 1944, had become completely inactive and practically dissolved.

[redacted]

Peoples Educational Center - Hollywood Extension

The informant has advised that this school of "indoctrination" has become one of the most effective Communist controlled groups in Hollywood. Because by using the "lure" of Hollywood and the motion picture industry, it is attracting large numbers of young people who wish to become employed in the film industry. By using the names of many Hollywood top directors and writers - many of them acting as instructors - this school is doing more to propogate the Communist movement in the film industry than any other effort. It has the support of and the sponsorship of some thirty-nine labor unions and guilds and is a part of a chain of such schools now being inaugurated in the Southern California area. The informant has advised that Communist influence in the film industry and its connections is growing day by day and the opportunity afforded by the war effort makes all this possible and Communists are exploiting this situation to the limit with telling effects.

National Council of American-Soviet Friendship - Los Angeles, California

Information was received that on November 20, 1944, Thomas Leonard Harris, former head of this organization in Los Angeles, who subsequently resigned, advised Mrs. William Dieterle, wife of William Dieterle, who is prominent in the motion picture industry, that the only thing this organization proposed to do in the Los Angeles area from that time on was connected with the motion picture industry.

Hollywood Democratic Committee

The January 25, 1945, issue of the "Daily Worker" carries an article on page 5 entitled "100 Hollywood Leaders Sign Wire to F.D.R." This article concerns a telegram reportedly sent by 100 people in the movie industry which was directed to the President and which requests the President to terminate proceedings against Harry Bridges.

The article stated that the action in drawing up a telegram was taken at a dinner sponsored by the Hollywood Democratic Committee. Bartley Crum was one of the prominent speakers at the dinner. He is a San Francisco attorney and a close friend of Louise Bransten, wealthy Communist functionary. John Cromwell, movie director and President of the Directors Guild, presided at the meeting and Walter Wanger, motion picture executive, introduced Crum, both of whom urged executive action in the Bridges case. The following persons are also said to have signed the telegram: Abe Burrows, known Communist who is the writer of "Duffie's Tavern", radio show; William Dieterle, Director; Yip Harburg, writer; Walter Houston; Emmett Lavery, President of the Screen Writers Guild; John Lawson, known Communist motion picture writer; Jack Moss, Producer; Dalton Trumbo, known Communist screen writer and Morris [redacted] President of the Los Angeles Chapter of the National Lawyers Guild.

Hollywood Writers Mobilization

During the month of January, 1945, information was received that this organization, through its connections with the Office of War Information, has now become a part of what is officially called the War Activities Committee, Hollywood Division. The Committee is now setting up a program for "patriotic cooperation for 1945." Other organizations officially affiliated with this Committee are the Screen Writers Guild, the Screen Directors Guild, the Screen Actors Guild, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, the Artists Managers Guild, the Association of Motion Picture Producers, the Public Information Committee of the Motion Picture Industry, and the Hollywood Victory

Committee. It has been pointed out that although most of the foregoing are free from Communist influence the presence of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, Screen Writers Guild, the Screen Directors Guild and to some extent the Screen Actors Guild, constitutes a potential infiltration of the program of Communist influence. The Hollywood Writers Mobilization has announced it will shortly issue a publication, first as a quarterly magazine "For People All Over America and the World Who Want to Keep in Contact with the New Currents of Opinion, Hope and Achievement, Flowing Out of Hollywood." The proposed publication has the name "Hollywood Quarterly." A confidential source has advised that the Editorial Board will be composed of John Howard Lawson, Dr. Franklin Fearing, Ralph Beals and James Hilton. Lawson is a known Communist and the other three have long records of Communist activities.

Hollywood Democratic Committee

This organization as of January, 1945, became a permanent group at which time its announced membership reached 3,000. It has been described as the leading political group in Southern California in the Democratic ranks. It is said that while the Committee is not a part of the Democratic Party, officially, it identifies itself as the Coordinating Committee for the purpose of bringing together all groups to work within the Democratic Party. In line with this policy it is said to have called a meeting held at the Biltmore Hotel in Los Angeles, California, on January 8, 1945, for the purpose of creating a "Coordinating Council."

Delegates representing the CIO Political Action Committee, the United A.F. of L. Committee for Political Action, the Railroad Brotherhood and the Hollywood Democratic Committee were present. It is claimed that all expenses for the meeting were paid by the Hollywood Democratic Committee. Michael Fanning, Chairman of the Los Angeles County Democratic Committee was Chairman of the Conference. Some seventeen others were present representing trade unions, and minority groups composed of Negroes, Mexicans and others. Confidential Informant [redacted] advised that several A.F. of L. representatives refused to ally themselves with the program because they considered the Hollywood Democratic Committee as a Communist controlled group. According to the informant the following persons planned the conference: Norvall D. Crutcher, Secretary-Treasurer of the Screen Technicians Number 683 and a former Communist; George Campbell, writer; Max Connelly, Chairman, Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

On January 5, 1945, the Hollywood Democratic Committee began a series of radio forums. The first one of these was held on this same date over radio station KFWB, Hollywood, California. This station was said to be owned by Warner Brothers Studios and those participating in the first forum were John Howard Lawson, known Communist, Orson Welles, Dr. Franklin Fearing, University of California at Los Angeles professor with a long record of Communist activities; Albert Dekker, writer and member of the State Assembly, and John Cromwell, writer.

It has been further reported that the Hollywood Democratic Committee has begun to take part in the spring elections in Los Angeles during 1945. It has been announced that the Committee will publish a daily paper which will serve as a continuation of the Free Press which it issued during the recent National elections in November, 1944.

Hollywood Writers Mobilization

This organization revived its publication "The Communique" and distributed it during January, 1945. The first revived issue was dated December 1, 1944. Among the following items of interest in this revived publication were protest and action taken to counteract the investigations of the California Legislative Committee on un-American Activities of the Writers Congress held October 1, 2, and 3, 1943 on the campus of the University of California at Los Angeles. A letter of protest was sent to the California Bar Association protesting the methods of this Committee's investigation, which investigative committee has investigated Communism and Communists since its inception. The publication also referred to the holding of the "Premier and Town Meeting" at the Village Theater, Westwood, California, when the picture, "Tomorrow, The World" was given its first showing.

In the early part of March, 1945, the press, including the Communist "Daily Worker," carried news items to the effect that Robert Riskin, Chief of the OWI Overseas Motion Picture Bureau, had proposed that the motion picture industry set up a nonprofit company for the postwar production of educational films for overseas distribution. His proposal is alleged to have had the backing of the State Department which would help determine the subject matter for the films. The "Daily Worker" writer, David Platt, in his column for March 14, 1945, set forth information that Lester Cowan, an independent producer, opposed Riskin's idea on the ground that "it would handicap our industry by imposing a stigma of propaganda or political control..." Platt condemned Cowan's statement as sounding like the "line of the Motion Picture Alliance." He stated that fortunately there were other influential producers who supported the project.

The Hollywood Writers Mobilization, in March, 1945, gave full support to the proposition and as it is reported in the "Daily Worker" for March 11, 1945, a letter was directed to Cowan by the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, expressing amazement and denying that any such arrangement would mean governmental control. The following statement was made in the letter: "To assert, as you do, that 'to handicap our industry by imposing a stigma of propaganda or political control is the surest way to destroy it,' is, in our opinion, so much eye wash. The government of our American democracy has not and is not trying to impose any such control on the industry. It has been cooperating with the industry in a time of world crisis in an effort to use the international language of pictures in a more informed and intelligent way for strengthening the forces of Democracy in this world." [redacted]

The publication of this organization, "The Communique," for March, 1945, carried an article entitled "Hollywood Writers Mobilization Contacts with New France," and stated, "Several Hollywood Writers Mobilization members recently had the honor of greeting a group of distinguished French journalists who wrote and published underground newspapers in France during the German occupation.

"Among the French journalists were Mme. Andree Viollis of 'CeSoir' and 'L'Humanite' of Paris; Etienne Bonichon of Toulouse; Jean-Paul Sertre, representing 'Figaro' and 'Combat'; Stephanie Pizella of the 'Paris Libre'; Pierre Demoger of Paris; Louis Lombard, representing 'Grenoble' newspapers; Joseph Antonorsi of Marseilles; and 'Villers', the legendary underground editor of Lyons."

The article stated, "They are in the United States as the guests of the American Government. Traveling in an Army plane, they are making a survey of the country's war effort and will carry back to France the story of America's contribution to the common cause."

Reliable information received from confidential sources is to the effect that the contacts of the two women listed above were principally Communists connected with the Hollywood Writers Mobilization. It is known that their contacts included Carl Winter, Los Angeles County President, Communist Political Association, and certain functionaries of the Communist "Peoples World" newspaper.

A reception or a social affair in honor of Mme. Andree Viollis was held in the home of Jean Renoir, Motion Picture Director, who resides at 1615 North Martel, Hollywood, California. A number of known and reliably reported Communists and Communist sympathizers were reported to have been present at the affair, including Vladimir Pozner, Dalton Trumbo, Ring Lardner, Jr., Fred Rinaldo, George Sklar, Robert Lees, Janet Marjorie Lewin, Herbert Biberman. Etiennette Benichon, on February 13, 1945, was in conference with Carl Winter. On February 15, 1945, she was present at a meeting at the "Peoples World" office in the presence of such Communists as Carl Winter, Max Silver, Paul Cline, Frank Radish and Elizabeth Leach. During her visit there she spoke concerning the underground of the French Communist Party, the De Gaulle Government, the French Labor Movement and De Gaulle's recognition of Franco.

The most recent editorial board of "The Communique" of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization was listed in the March 9, 1945 issue of "Daily Variety." The list is as follows:

Sidney Buchman - Chairman, member of League of American Writers.
John Howard Lawson - Writer and Communist Party functionary.
Phil Dunne - Member of the Screen Writers Guild and League of American Writers.
Dore Schary - Member of League of American Writers, Hollywood Writers Mobilization, Hollywood Democratic Committee, Assistant Producer at MGM.
Richard Collins - Member of League of American Writers and husband of Dorothy Commingore.
Meta Reis, Reader at Paramount Studios.
Waldo Salt - Writer.
Melvin Levi - Member of League of American Writers and one of the founders of the Writers School.
Sidney Harman - Member of the League of American Writers, representative of the Government in OWI Films.
Major Edmund North
Leonardo Bercovici - Writer. [redacted]

Hollywood Democratic Committee

Information was received in January, 1945, that this organization had formed the Mobile Theater Unit, the function of which is to provide dramatic presentations for union and political meetings. A confidential source stated that a memorandum in the possession of the Communist Political Association in Hollywood contained these statements with regard to the Mobile Theater Unit: "The Unit attempts to put on material of a high dramatic quality, not superficial ajit-prop stuff. In all dramatic activities, one of the greatest problems is material. The dramatic groups are fumbling around trying to develop standards of material but still do not show too much political alertness and a tendency to be carried away by flashy dramatics, for example, the Vanguard Theater, many of whose members are also active in the Hollywood Democratic Mobile Unit and the laboratory, was considering producing 'Native Son.' No one in the group was alert to the serious dangers in such a production although they saw them after some discussion about them was had." It was reported in March, 1945, that this organization was in the process of organizing functionary radio committees and committees of well-known actors to produce material not only for the use of this organization, but also for others. [redacted]

On March 24, 1945, the Hollywood Democratic Committee held a meeting at the home of Dalton Trumbo, Communist Hollywood screen writer. The Chairman of this meeting was Bartley Crum of San Francisco, an Attorney who has supported Communist causes for a number of years. The meeting was in furtherance of its campaign to prevent the deportation of Harry Bridges and to secure for him the right of citizenship. [redacted]

General

Confidential Informant [redacted] advised in the latter part of May, 1945, that the Communist activities in the motion picture field in Hollywood were devoted almost exclusively to the United Nations Conference, the jurisdictional strike called by the Conference of Studio Unions, the municipal primary elections, and the runoff of municipal elections. This source has advised he has observed a great deal of confusion and indecision in the inner-Communist circles because of the Communist issue being forced into the open by this strike. On the position which the trade paper "Hollywood Reporter" has taken on the subject of Communism, the source stated that the Communist line has not been clear on some angles of procedure. The source stated he has noted considerable apprehension that there is to be a major change in the Communist line, as well as excitement and speculation on the results of the United Nations Conference.

This same source subsequently reported that during the latter part of May and the first part of June, 1945, Communist activity in Hollywood, as elsewhere in the United States, was taking a different form because of changes in the Soviet foreign policy and the alignment of various Allied Nations with regard to claims at the Peace Table. This source pointed out that the transition period, as far as the change in policy of the Communists in Hollywood, will be from 60 to 90 days before the policy becomes clear since there will be the necessity of preparing the groundwork and devising political "analysis", which always precedes a change in Communist tactic and visible objectives.

Hollywood Writers Mobilization

This organization, during the latter part of April and the first part of May, 1945, appointed John Howard Lawson, Communist functionary, as its representative to act as an impartial observer at the United Nations Conference. Richard Collins and Leonardo Bercovici were said to aid Lawson in his work.

During the same period the publication "Communique" announced the organization would hold a conference on the United Nations program at the Los Angeles high school on May 18, 1945. Those announced as being the principal speakers were Archibald MacLeish, Assistant Secretary of State, and Henri Bonnet, French Ambassador to the United States.

During this same period Confidential Informant [redacted] stated, "The work of the Mobilization in connection with the OWI Overseas Bureau went into high gear as a result of a recent series of conferences between

Robert Riskin, Chief of the Bureau; Phil Dunne; and the Hollywood Writers Mobilization Educational Committee on Overseas Films, headed by Sidney Buchman. Nine out of the 14 members of this Educational Committee are all reliably reported to be members of the Communist Political Association.

It was also learned that beginning March 21, 1945, this organization was to present a series of radio programs over the Blue Network, dealing with problems of the returning soldiers. The Committee producing this has been described as one strongly under the influence of Communists, including Sam Moore, Louis Solomon, and Pauline Lauber Finn.

It was subsequently reported in June, 1945, by Confidential Informant [redacted] that this organization, to conform with the new Communist line (transitory), has held its open activities in abeyance pending a clear delineation of the new line.

Hollywood Democratic Committee, now Changed to Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences, and Professions.

On June 6, 1945, a meeting was called by this organization at American Legion Hall in Hollywood for the purpose of changing its name as indicated above and to formulate its work for the future. By unanimous vote 350 persons present agreed to the change in name. At present the Hollywood Democratic Committee is said to be going through the necessary maneuvers to affiliate with the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences, and Professions, which organization was first set up in July, 1944, under the name Independent Voters Committee of Arts and Sciences for Roosevelt.

General [redacted]

On April 18, 1945, the "Hollywood Reporter," a daily trade publication, printed an editorial stating that while Hollywood had performed a great service in exposing and opposing Nazis and Fascists, it was now about time that pictures be made showing the attempts of Communists to undermine our way of life in the United States. The "Daily Worker" immediately made a violent attack on the editor of the paper, W. R. Wilkerson, and on April 30, 1945, the paper again came back with a caustic editorial and exchange of viewpoint, threatening to raise the question of Communism in the Hollywood motion picture industry and creating a heated controversy.

Motion Picture Alliance for the Preservation of American Ideals

Confidential Informant [redacted] advised that after inactivity for six months, this organization came forward during the first part of May, 1945, and issued what is called "a report for the past year" setting forth a resume of its activities. The report is said to be lengthy, containing the usual attacks on the activities of Communists in the Hollywood motion picture industry.

On May 21, 1945, the organization held a membership meeting in Hollywood, electing officers and an executive board. Some 250 persons attended, many of whom are connected with Hollywood labor unions opposing Communist infiltration. The principal speaker of the evening was Mathew Levy, attorney for the IATSE. Since the meeting the organization has taken no further action although it is stated it will begin a campaign shortly to combat Communism in Hollywood. In this regard Confidential Informant [redacted] predicts with the coming change of Communist activity, tactics and objectives, there will in all probability be a serious change within the motion picture industry. It is pointed out that for many years Communist infiltration has been intense but the "patriotic line" followed by Communists when Russia needed help will be abandoned.

Hollywood Independent Citizens' Committee of Arts, Sciences and Professions

This organization became the successor to the Hollywood Democratic Committee on June 6, 1945. The Hollywood Democratic Committee was a Communist dominated group. The reason for the change in name reportedly was to broaden its field of operations and to make it appear that it was independent in politics. The new organization was planned to operate principally as a propaganda agency using the names and prestige of nationally known actors, writers, artists, scientists and professional men and women to draw membership and to increase the strength of the group in communities where branches of the committee were operating.

The first meeting of the Committee was held in Los Angeles, California on June 27, 1945. There were approximately 2700 persons present, among whom the most prominent were:

Edward G. Robinson, Screen Actor
Olivia DeHavilland, Screen Actress
Robert W. Kenny, Attorney General of California
Albert Dekker, Screen Actor and Member of the California State Assembly
Joan Fontaine, Screen Actress and sister of Olivia DeHavilland
Morris Carnovsky, Screen Actor
Rex Ingram, Screen Actor

The general program of the meeting was twofold:

1. Support the foreign policy of the Soviet Union in such matters as Bretton Woods, Dumbarton Oaks and the World Charter.

2. Raise the issue of "native fascism" in the United States.

CRD:bm

[redacted]

"Quiet activity on behalf of good legislation, like the State Fair Employment Practices measure, and against measures like the Lethal Proposition 12."

The report also discussed the Council's future activity concerning a post-war program. This post-war program concerned itself with full employment, education, labor leadership, veteran's aid, foreign employment exchange, public relations and the support of the United Nations Conference objectives.

The Screen Actors' Guild, according to the "Daily Variety" for June 8, 1945, appointed Sam Ingram, Robert Shaw, Bill Davidson, Leroy Taylor and Dave Clark as Guild representatives to the Council.

On June 26, 1945, it was learned from a confidential source that a committee had been appointed by the Council to fight Cecil B. DeMille's open shop scheme. Mr. DeMille was ousted from the American Federation of Radio Artists because of his refusal to pay a $1.00 assessment to be used by the American Federation of Radio Artists for political activity. The committee appointed by the Council to fight Mr. DeMille is named below:

Kim Selvin, Field Organizer of the Screen Office Employees Guild;
Hamton Alexander, Radio Writers Guild;
George Campbell, representative of Local 47, American Federation of Musicians, AF of L;
Herville Gretchen, Secretary of the Film Technicians Local 683, and Executive Board Member of the Central Labor Council, AF of L. Gretchen was formerly Chairman of the conference of Studio Unions but was replaced when his union, the I.A. Local, withdrew from the CSU.
Charles Daggett, Screen Publicist Guild representative;
Ted Hilsworth (1944 President), representative of the Conference Union;
Elmer Fain, representative of the Musicians Union;
Maurice Howard, business representative of the Screen Cartoonists Guild, former representative of the State Labor Department at San Jose, California;
Charles Jones, representative of the Screen Cartoonists Guild;
Al Katz, representative of Local 47, American Federation of Musicians; control of the Committee is plainly apparent through its leaders, its activities and its publication.

The Committee is a sponsor for the American Youth for Democracy; it is backing Robert W. Kenny, Attorney General of California, for Governor in the coming campaign, a program also being pushed by the Communist Party; it is instigating propaganda against General MacArthur; it is supporting the "Free Spain Committee"; and is has attacked "Free Enterprise" stating that if the system does not fulfil conditions laid down by demands of "Economic Democracy" it "will go the way of the dinosaurs and other prehistoric monsters, which could not or would not adapt themselves to the new problems in a rapidly changing world."

According to an informant, the "line" outlined above has been adopted by the Committee only since July, 1945, at which time the program of the Communist group in this country was changed back to the tenets of Marxism-Leninism.

The Hollywood Writers Mobilization

In recent months the principal accomplishment of this organization, which was reported prior to July, 1945, to be holding its open activities in abeyance pending a greater delineation of the new Communist line, has been the publication of the "Hollywood Quarterly" a magazine sponsored jointly by the University of California at Los Angeles and the Hollywood Writers Mobilization. One of the editors of the magazine is John Howard Lawson a Communist Party functionary.

The sponsors of the publication assert that it is a guide for a "thoroughly mature approach to the creative and technical problems and the educational potentialities of motion pictures, radio and television." An informant has asserted that this statement really means how these media can best be directed for propaganda purposes on behalf of the Communist Party.

The Hollywood Writers Mobilization beginning October 1, 1945, sponsored a series of coast-to-coast radio broadcasts from Los Angeles. Four of the writers assigned to prepare scripts are active members of the Communist Party, according to highly confidential Communist records which have been made available.

This organization which was set up during the war had been presumed to be a war agency only. Its main work was in the propaganda field, and as such, the organization reportedly was one of the moving forces of the OWI, many of its members having been placed in that Governmental agency. It has been announced, however, that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization will not cease to an end now that the war is over, but will continue on a permanent basis as a social betterment group utilizing the motion picture industry as a vehicle of influence.

Actors' Laboratory

This organization, according to Confidential Informant [redacted] is a Communist controlled institution where screen and stage acting is purportedly taught by directors, actors and writers affiliated with the motion picture industry. The Actors' Laboratory reportedly has been accredited under the GI Bill of Rights as a school of acting, where veterans may secure dramatic training with tuition paid by the Veterans Administration.

The informant stated that this alleged school was formerly located in New York City under the name of the Group Theater. The Group Theater was reportedly affiliated with the New Theater League allegedly a Communist venture. According to the informant, the New Theater League from about 1932 to 1936 was a propaganda agency making use of the stage as a medium which was successful in turning out actors who later served the Communist movement in the United States.

Seven of the individuals named by Confidential Informant [redacted] as leading figures in the Actors' Laboratory are reflected by the records of the Los Angeles Office to have been active members of the CPUSA. Bureau records also reflect that all others named by the informant have been reported as engaged in Communist activity.

The Actors' Laboratory has been working for the establishment of a Civic Theater to be supported by the City of Los Angeles. The Civic Theater reportedly will follow the lines of the National Theater idea, a program long sponsored by the Communist Party. One of the proposals of the Communists during the days of the WPA was that the Federal Theater Project be turned into a permanent national theater plan. Individuals backing the Los Angeles Civic Theater are reported to include Richard Athinson, lecturer in the Los Angeles vicinity and a Soviet apologist; Gordon Kahn, writer and actor; Irving Pichel, director; Mrs. Edward G. Robinson, wife of the actor; and Walter Wanger, producer.

Actors' Laboratory cooperates with such alleged Communist front organizations as Hollywood Writers Mobilization, Hollywood Independent Citizens' Committee of Arts, Sciences and Professions and Mobilization for Democracy by furnishing entertainment at mass meetings of those groups.

Citizens' Committee for the Motion Picture Strikers

Confidential Informant [redacted] advised that this organization was set up for the purpose of aiding the strike in the motion picture industry.

According to the informant, the Committee was under Communist control and was made up of the individuals who were most active in such other Communist dominated groups as the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, the Hollywood Independent Citizens' Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, the Screen Writers Guild and others.

Officers of the organization who reportedly have records of Communist activities were:

Carey McWilliams, Chairman, sponsor of a number of Communist front groups;
Daniel Ostrow, Treasurer, active in Russian War Relief;
Mrs. E. Y. Harburg, Secretary, wife of E. Y. Harburg, a sponsor for the ASP and active in many Communist front groups.

Of other individuals leading the Citizens' Committee for the Motion Picture Strikers confidential Communist records have identified the following as members of the Communist Party:

Maurice Clark, Screen Writer and husband of Helen Fisher, executive secretary of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee;
Ernest Dawson, Bookstore proprietor;
Edward Dmytryk, Director;
Charles J. Katz, Attorney who represents various unions and motion picture organizations;
Mrs. Sadie Ornitz, wife of Sam Ornitz, writer and formerly a Communist Party functionary;
Frank Suttle, Director;
A. Maynades, IFO official.

The Committee was active in calling mass meetings, raising money for the strikers, pressuring local officials and arranging for the picketing of theaters. According to Confidential Informant [redacted] the entire strength of the Communist Party was concentrated on the strike through this Committee. Leaflets and bulletins signed by the Communist Party of Los Angeles County, by the Communist Party of Burbank and by the North Hollywood Unit of the Communist Party of Los Angeles County were distributed freely by members of the Citizens' Committee for the Motion Picture Strikers who engaged in picket activity.

Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions

According to the April 6, 1945 issue of the "Hollywood Reporter" the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions has rented office space at 6404 Sunset Boulevard, Hollywood 28, California, telephone Granite 5913, and was expected to establish permanent headquarters at that address.

It has been reported that Mary C. McCall, Jr., is the new chairman of the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions having been elected to succeed Ernest Lavery. The April 23, 1945 issue of the "Hollywood Reporter" indicated that the total number of unions connected with the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions (this organization will be hereinafter referred to as the Council) was raised to 22. Applications were accepted from the Script Clerks' Guild and Local 767 of the Musicians Mutual Protective Association.

Mary C. McCall, Jr., made a report on the program and activities of the Council to the delegates of this organization on May 3, 1945. A copy of this report was obtained by the Los Angeles Office, the pertinent content of which is being set out herein:

REPORT OF CHAIRMAN ON PROGRAM AND ACTIVITIES

"In June, 1944, the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions was born. It was born out of a threat... a threat to the good name, the unity, of our Industry. This threat was made by the Motion Picture Alliance for the Preservation of American Ideals. I think, and certainly the many organizations represented at that fine meeting thought, that we made a good case against the Alliance. We also made a good case for the creation of a constructive, pro-industry, pro-labor, pro-unity body.

"These were the goals, the program of activity set for this Council at the time of its inception, and later enlarged upon by Ernest Lavery, the Council's first chairman:

"Labor-management cooperation on mutual problems.

"Increasing unity among Guilds and Unions in the industry.

"Protection of freedom of the screen.

"Development of good public relations - a good press for industry and industry labor.

"A post-war program of full employment; and, implementing that program, development of new jobs -- new fields of activity for industry workers, such as television, commercial or documentary films.

"Reemployment and protection of the rights of returning service men and women.

FJR:bm

"Construction of a common center, with offices, meeting rooms, a theatre, research facilities; a Hollywood Guild and Union building where our various organizations could find better quarters with less expense, and where wasteful duplication of equipment might be ended.

"United activity on behalf of good legislation, like the State Fair Employment Practices measure, and against measures like the lethal Proposition 12."

The report also discussed the Council's future activity concerning a post-war program. This post-war program concerned itself with full employment, education, labor leadership, veteran's aid, foreign employment exchange, public relations and the support of the United Nations Conference objectives.

The Screen Actors' Guild, according to the "Daily Variety" for June 8, 1945, appointed Ben Ingram, Robert Shane, Bill Davidson, Leroy Taylor and Dane Clark as Guild representatives to the Council.

On June 26, 1945, it was learned from a confidential source that a committee had been appointed by the Council to fight Cecil B. DeMille's open shop scheme. Mr. DeMille was ousted from the American Federation of Radio Artists because of his refusal to pay a $1.00 assessment to be used by the American Federation of Radio Artists for political activity. The committee appointed by the Council to fight Mr. DeMille is named below:

Kim Selvin, Field Organizer of the Screen Office Employees Guild;
Harmon Alexander, Radio Writers Guild;
George Campbell, representative of Local 47, American Federation of Musicians, AF of L;
Norville Crutcher, Secretary of the Film Technicians Local 683, and Executive Board Member of the Central Labor Council, AF of L. Crutcher was formerly Chairman of the conference of Studio Unions but was replaced when his union, the I.A. Local, withdrew from the CCU.
Charles Daggett, Screen Publicist Guild representative;
Ted Ellsworth (1944 President), representative of the Costumers Union;
Elmer Fain, representative of the Musicians Union;
Maurice Howard, business representative of the Screen Cartoonists Guild, former representative of the State Labor Department at San Jose, California;
Charles Jones, representative of the Screen Cartoonists Guild;
Al Katz, representative of Local 47, American Federation of Musicians;

Joe Lopez, representative of the Screen Artists Union;
Blanche Nichols, representative of the American Federation of Radio Artists (AFRA);
George Pudelin, Script Supervisor;
Mrs. Pudelin, representative of SWG;
Frances Millington, President, Screen Story Analyst Guild;
H. L. Mitchell, representative of the Motion Picture Painters Union, Local 644;
William Pomerance, Executive Secretary, Screen Writers Guild, former business representative of Screen Cartoonists Guild and prior to that he was with the National Labor Relations Board;
Glen Pratt, business representative of the SCSG;
Jack Robinson, representative of the Radio Writers Guild;
Leroy Taylor, representative of the Screen Actors Guild;
Dorothy Tree, representative of the Screen Actors Guild.

Of the Committee members mentioned above Min Selvin, Harmon Alexander, George Campbell, Herville Fetcher, Charles Daggett, Frances Millington, William Pomerance, Glen Pratt, Jack Robinson and Dorothy Tree are said to have been either members of the Communist Political Association or closely associated with known members of the Communist Party.

A letter from Louis Daquin, Director-Producer, General Secretary of the Committee of Liberation of the French Film, and General Secretary of the Union of Technicians of Motion Picture Production, addressed to Ernst Lavery, former President of the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions, was secured by the Los Angeles Office from the confidential records of Elizabeth Bentley, Secretary of Organization and Membership Director of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party. This letter referred to a resolution passed by the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions at a meeting held December 20, 1944, which was reported to the Committee of Liberation of the French Film by Pierre Blanchar.

Daquin expressed the French Committee's gratitude at the reception given Blanchar. He mentioned the hope of having even closer ties between the American film industry and the French film industry, and indicated he felt the creation of the Exchange Bureau in which the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions took the initiative, is the first concrete result which will aid the bond between the two countries.

Daquin also mentioned that his organization intended to set up a trade union bureau of foreign relations in France and hoped to have an exchange with England and Soviet Russia. Daquin hoped that eventually the organized system of exchanges would give an opportunity to definitely lift the cinema "above the private interests and the erroneous conceptions of certain financial groups."

(Period January 1, 1946, through March 30, 1946)

During the period January 1, 1946, through March 30, 1946, the Hollywood Writers Mobilization has not been very active, and it has been reported this organization will soon go out of existence. It was expected it would either reappear under a new name or would be consolidated with the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions. It was also thought this organization might revert to its old form, the League of American Writers. This organization has, however, in cooperation with the University of California published a quarterly magazine known as the "Hollywood Quarterly." The first issue of this magazine appeared about November 1, 1945, but for some unknown reason it was not distributed generally. The second publication of the "Hollywood Quarterly" came off the presses during February, 1946.

The editors of this new publication are listed as follows:

Samuel T. Farquhar	UCLA professor
Franklin Fearing	UCLA professor
Kenneth Mac Gowan	Screen writer
Franklin P. Rolfe	UCLA professor
John Howard Lawson	Screen writer and a functionary of the Communist Party.

The names of the individuals who compose the four advisory committees of this publication are set out below:

Motion Picture Advisory Committee

Ralph Beals	UCLA professor
Howard Estabrook	Screen writer
Leonard Bloom	UCLA professor
*Bill Blowitz	Screen writer
*Sidney Buchman	Screen writer
*Edward Dmytryk	Screen director
Margaret Gledhill
Richard Hocking
Dorothy Jones
Alexander Knox	Connected with the Peoples Educational Center
Emmett Lavery	Chairman of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization

Jay Leyda	Technical advisor for the motion picture "Mission to Moscow"
Ben Maddow	Member of the Screen Writers Guild
*Josef Mischel
Jane Murfin
Dudley Nichols	A member of, or a sponsor for, 34 front organizations
Florence Odets	Screen photographer
Abraham Polonsky
Vladimir Pozner	Screen writer
*Zachary Schwartz	Director
*Vincent Sherman	Writer
Theodore Strauss
Ernest Templin
*John Weber
Virginia Wright	Columnist

Music Advisory Committee

Lawrence Morton
Ingolf Dahl
Martha Deane
Adolf Deutsch

Ranald Mac Dougall
Arnold Marquis
William Matthews
*Sam Moore
Jennings Pierce
Ashmead Scott
Orson Welles — Screen director and news commentator

Technological Advisory Committee

Arthur Ball
*Leon Becker
Carl Beier
William Brockway
Charles Clarke
Girard B. Ihner
Boris Ingster
William J. Kelley
Harry Kimball
Vern O. Knudsen
Robert Leonard
Irving Pichel
Fred Person
William Slaughter
Greg Toland

The individuals listed above before whose names an asterisk appears have been reported as members of the Communist Party by sources considered reliable and authentic by the Los Angeles Office. Nearly all of the other individuals listed above, including the UCLA professors, have been identified for the past two or three years with Communist fronts and Communist front activities.

[redacted] an informant of the Los Angeles Office, has advised that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, which is Communist inspired and controlled, has recently come under the scrutiny of the Joint Fact-Finding Committee on Subversive Activities of the California Legislature, more familiarly known as the Tenney Committee. This Committee is especially interested in the cooperation between the Hollywood Writers Mobilization and the University of California in the publication of the "Hollywood Quarterly."

W. R. Wilkerson, editor of the "Hollywood Reporter," a daily trade publication which opposes Communism in the United States, commented in the November 23, 1945, issue of that paper that the first issue of the "Hollywood Quarterly" indicated that the motion picture industry "is about to take another beating from the many volunteer critics who will take advantage of any outlet in which to vent their spleen against producers." Mr. Wilkerson pointed out that there was a noticeable political content in the "Hollywood Quarterly" and identified several "left wingers" as editors. Those mentioned by Wilkerson are:

John Howard Lawson	Emmet Lavery
Edward Dmytryk	Dudley Nichols
Abe Burrows	Boris Ingster
Sam Moore	Earl Robinson

Wilkerson further pointed out that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization is partially supported by the Community Chest and that if the motion picture industry contributed a great deal of money to the Community Chest, it had the right to demand that none of the money should find its way into the coffers of a political, left-wing group like the Hollywood Writers Mobilization. In this regard [redacted] has advised that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization received $26,000 of War Chest funds for its 1945 budget. He said that part of this money was paid to the following persons:

Pauline Lauber, Executive Secretary, Hollywood Writers Mobilization. $6,000

Bert Bergman, Acting Secretary. 4,000

Robert Shaw, Research Director. 5, 200

Judy Raymond, Stenographer. 2,250

Thelma Walker, Stenographer. 2,250

Mary Shaw, Stenographer. 2, 250

Confidential Informant [redacted] advised that the Joint Fact-Finding Committee on Subversive Activities of the California Legislature, more familiarly known as the Tenney Committee, had started hearings with regard to an investigation it was making into the activities of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization. These hearings were interrupted by a special session of the Legislature which was called during January, 1946. It was expected, however, the Tenney Committee would continue its investigation after the close of the special session of the Legislature and that it would inquire particularly into the connections of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization with the University of California, a state-supported institution. [redacted]

Peoples Educational Center - Hollywood Extension

The Joint Fact-Finding Committee on Subversive Activities of the California Legislature has brought to light the fact that this so-called school was a Communist-controlled propaganda institution. The Committee showed that this school was the outgrowth of the Communist Workers School and came into existence as an "educational" center when the Communist Party was changed into the Communist Political Association. This change took place in January of 1944. At that time it was announced that henceforth the Communist Workers School would be an educational association and that it was abandoning the Marxist position of revolutionary action. [redacted]

[redacted] a confidential informant of the Los Angeles Office, informed that the Peoples Educational Center had announced its winter semester would begin on January 28, 1946. There have been some changes in the faculty of this school since the Tenney Committee held hearings in which some details of the character of the school were brought out. The officers and board of directors now are:

Willis J. Hill, President
Ralph Winstead, Vice President

Board of Directors

Fay E. Allen	*Dorothy Healy
R. S. Avery	*Maurice Howard
Harry Brown	*John Howard Lawson
Dr. Frank C. Davis	C. T. Peterson
Frances Eisenberg	*Albee Slade
Gertrude Platte	William Wolff
*Dr. Sanford Goldner	*Mildred Baskin, Executive Secretary
Frank Green (Greenberg)	*Sidney Davison, Director

It should be noted that Sidney Davison, a known Communist and former educational director of the Los Angeles County Communist Party, has succeeded Dr. Frank C. Davis as director of the Peoples Educational Center. This change was made shortly after Mr. Davis had been called to testify before the Tenney Committee.

Instructors in the Peoples Educational Center who are also connected with the motion picture industry are:

Dr. Leo Siegelman	Alexander Knox
*John Howard Lawson	*Robert Lees
*Ben Barzman	*Melvin Levy
*Herbert Biberman	Irving Pichel
Robert Cummings	*Wilma Shore
Edward Dmytryk	*Frank Tuttle

All of the above-named individuals before whose names an asterisk appears have previously been reported as known Communist Party members by sources considered to be reliable by the Los Angeles Office.

The Peoples Educational Center has been making a special drive to enroll students from the colleges and high schools, union members and members of the Armed Forces.

One of the graduates of the Peoples Educational Center, Jean (Jan) Lowery, has become very active in Hollywood union circles. She is a member of the Laboratory Technicians Local 683 and is looked upon in Communist circles as one of their most promising recruits. She is especially able and it is predicted that she will become a leader in the Hollywood Communist movement.

The Hollywood Branch of the Peoples Educational Center, which is located at 1717 North Vine Street, has not been changed. However, the downtown branch of this organization is now known as the Los Angeles Educational Association, Incorporated. [redacted]

(Period January 1, 1946, through March 30, 1946)

[redacted] confidential informant of the Los Angeles Office, has advised that the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions has now become a national organization with branches in several of the large cities of the United States. The Hollywood Branch of this organization because of the names of the prominent persons used is the most powerful pressure group of its kind in the United States. The Hollywood Branch is under the control of the Communist Party and that party takes credit for the formation of this organization. The "New Leader," a weekly publication issued in New York City, is reportedly in possession of information that Lionel

Berman, a known Communist, reported to the Communist Party Convention of the State of New York in the summer of 1945 that he had set up the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions (ICCASP) and that he had been rewarded at the convention with high praise for the good job he had done. The above information appeared on page 5 of the January 26, 1946, issue of the "New Leader."

Mr. [redacted] has advised that the list of prominent persons who are members of the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions and active in its affairs now contains the name of James Roosevelt, who is presently national director of the national organization according to press dispatches and literature of the ICCASP.

In the February 5, 1946, issue of the Hollywood Citizens News, a local Hollywood daily newspaper, an editorial appeared which questioned whether James Roosevelt knew the nature of the ICCASP when he accepted the position of national political director. The editor of the Hollywood Citizens News, Harlan G. Palmer, is well aware of the Communist nature of the Hollywood Branch of this organization, inasmuch as it is an evolution of other previous Communist controlled groups in the Hollywood locality such as the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, Hollywood League for Democratic Action, American Peace Mobilization, and the Hollywood Democratic Committee and others. The group which is now in control of the Hollywood Branch of the ICCASP is composed of the same individuals who controlled the above-mentioned organizations. It is interesting to note that John Howard Lawson is the leading figure in the Hollywood Branch of the ICCASP.

Another editorial appeared in the February 8, 1946, issue of the Hollywood Citizens News which gave the content of an answer to the editorial which appeared in the February 5, 1946, issue of this newspaper sent to the editor by James Roosevelt. In this answer Mr. Roosevelt stated he had investigated the ICCASP and knew all about it, what it stood for and indicated he was satisfied with its objectives. He said that he was sure the organization was all right because he found the following persons of national reputation connected with it as members: "Bartley Crum, an attorney of San Francisco, Chester Bowles, OPA Director, Professor Harlow Shapely, Harvard University professor, Joseph E. Davies, author of Mission to Moscow, Dr. Channing Frothingham, Dr. Linus Pauling, and Fiorello La Guardia. Therefore, there could be nothing wrong with the organization."

[redacted] further informed that the Hollywood Branch of the ICCASP has been carrying on a campaign to discredit the findings of the Joint Fact-Finding Committee on Subversive Activities of the California State Legislature, which as a result of an investigation of the University of California at Los Angeles found that some fourteen members of the faculty of that educational institution which is supported by state funds had been engaged in Communist activities by teaching and lecturing in the Peoples Educational Center. The Peoples Educational Center which has previously been mentioned in this memorandum is a Communist dominated organization and grew out of the Communist Workers School of Los Angeles. The Fact-Finding Committee also learned that there existed on the campus of the University of California a strong faction of the American Youth for Democracy, formerly known as the Young Communist League. During the recent studio strike these young people appeared on the picket lines and aided in bringing about violence and defiance of law which they openly flaunted.

The Hollywood Branch of the ICCASP is now engaged in putting pressure on the Tenney Committee and carrying on a propaganda campaign in defense of the faculty and the radical students at the University of California. It has denounced the Tenney Committee as restricting "academic freedom." The ICCASP has sent out thousands of circulars to colleges throughout the United States calling for a pressure campaign in connection with this situation. The signer of the circulars is George Pepper, who has a long record of Communist activity. This circular letter is a clear distortion of fact and is an attempt to cover up the real object of the Tenney Committee, which was to expose the Communist activities of a small group within the faculty and some of the students who are members of the American Youth for Democracy, formerly known as the Young Communist League. The Tenney Committee, in addition to Dr. Clarence A. Dykstra, Provost of the University, called for questioning the following professors:

Dr. Franklyn Fearing
Dr. Ralph Beals
Dr. Leonard Bloom
Dr. Harry Hoijer
Dean E. McHenry
David Appleman
Edwin Lemert
Corinne Seeds
Dr. Frank Davis

It should be noted, as has been mentioned hereinbefore, that Dr. Davis severed his relations with the University of California on July 1, 1945, to become the director of the Peoples Educational Association, an institution established and directed by the Communists.

All of the professors mentioned above denied knowledge of any Communist activity although they all have long records of activity in Communist controlled front organizations. All of them, however, admitted that they had given lectures at the Peoples Educational Center in Hollywood.

As a result of the investigation made by the Tenney Committee, the Board of Regents of the University are presently making their own investigation and have threatened to dismiss any of the faculty or students whom they find have been active in Communist efforts and activities.

The Hollywood Branch of the ICCASP has also used its influence to collect funds for the present CIO strikes which have been in progress throughout the nation. It has also distributed a large newspaper-size announcement in line with this program.

This organization has also taken a most active part in a campaign designed to recall a Los Angeles City Councilman, Reade McClanahan, because it charged that McClanahan sponsored a meeting held by Gerald L. K. Smith in Los Angeles several months ago. The entire Communist Party apparatus is behind this recall movement.

The Hollywood Branch of the ICCASP is also officially affiliated with a recently formed organization known as the American Committee for Spanish Freedom. This latter organization is another of those Spanish Committees like the former United Spanish Aid Committee. The Hollywood Branch of the ICCASP is also working in close collaboration with the Los Angeles CIO Industrial Union Council. This council is completely dominated by Communists under the leadership of Phillip M. Connelly.

There is no doubt that the Hollywood Branch of the ICCASP is heavily infiltrated and controlled by Communists and that it has become a powerful influence in the state of California. It takes part in all local activities inspired by the Communist Party such as:

Mobilization for Democracy, directed by State Attorney General Robert W. Kenny and William R. Bidner, Executive Secretary.

Recall of Councilman Reade McClanahan of Los Angeles, directed by William R. Bidner.

Support on picket lines and financially of all local CIO strikes. These strikes are largely directed by Phillip M. Connolly, Secretary-Treasurer of the Los Angeles CIO - Industrial Union Council.

Collaboration with the CIO Political Action Committee through Harry Bronn as Assistant Director.

Collaboration with the National Citizens Political Action Committee, John Howard Lawson, Communist Party functionary.

Collaboration with the Los Angeles County Democratic Central Committee of the Democratic Party (under Communist control), through Rollin McNutt, the County Chairman and John Howard Lawson.

Sponsorship of the American Youth for Democracy, formerly Young Communist League, represented by Meyer Frieden.

Propaganda Campaign in the interest of turning over the secret of the Atomic Bomb to United States or Civilian control, directed by John Howard Lawson.

This organization has announced that it will soon launch a nation-wide radio program to carry out its policies and objectives. There seems to be no doubt that this organization with its Hollywood prestige and influence will succeed in securing the nomination in the forthcoming primaries of what is termed the "liberal" slate in California. The word "liberal" as used in this instance means "Communist-endorsed." [redacted]

General

The most significant events which have marked the activity of the Hollywood Communists during the period January 1, 1946 through March 30, 1946, have been the completion of the change in the Communist Party line from one of collaboration under Earl Browder to one of revolutionary action and "class struggle" under the leadership of William Z. Foster, and the apparent decision of the Hollywood Communists to go "underground."

With respect to the change in the Communist Party line, [redacted] a confidential informant of the Los Angeles Office, has informed that the Communist activity in the motion picture industry has become more apparent for what it really is because of the new Communist Party line which came into existence on July 28, 1945 with the change from the Communist Political Association back to the Communist Party of the United States. The resumption of the Marxist-Leninist line of revolutionary action, as distinguished from the "democratic" or collaboration line of the Communist Political Association, has forced the Communists and their followers more into the open in their support of directives emanating from the foreign policy of the Soviet Union and in their support of other phases of activity called for by the new line of Marxian "class struggle." This was evidenced by the activities of the various Communist-controlled organizations previously mentioned in this memorandum in their support of the recent Communist-supported strike in the film studios, support of the Communists' demand for the return of all American soldiers from foreign soil, particularly China, support of the campaign of opposition to General Douglas McArthur in his military occupation program in Japan, support of the CIO in its attacks on the AF of L, and local support politically of all so-called "liberal" candidates for office in the coming elections in California.

As a result of this change in policy, all Communist activity in the cultural propaganda line and the activities in the labor unions are now directed to burning out dissension and discord in the United States, toward supporting all activity which will bring about strikes, political antagonisms, racial antagonisms, under the deceptive slogans of "Unity" and Anti-discrimination". In general, the program of the World Communist movement now enters what the Marxists-Leninists' interpretation calls the "Flow of World Revolution."

The activities of the Communists in the Hollywood motion picture industry have been so intense during the last six months and they have been so successful in creating discord and dissension in the industry that the producers of motion pictures in Hollywood have considered shuting down the industry completely for a period of four months. This condition has not been brought about by the labor agitators alone, but has received the all-out support of the cultural elements, including writers, directors and some actors who are either members of the Communist Party, or close sympathizers with the aims of that Party. There seems to be no doubt that Hollywood and the area immediately adjacent thereto, Southern California, have now become one of the main centers of Communist propaganda and activity in the United States.

In addition to the activity outlined above, the Communists through pressure groups in Hollywood have asserted their influence in the direction of foreign relations and domestic affairs by pressuring the lawmakers locally and nationally, using Hollywood names and personalities for that purpose.

[redacted]

Confidential informant [redacted] further advised with regard to the decision of the Hollywood Communists to go "underground," that they have decided to make themselves less conspicious, first because of the increasing strain their activities might bring on international relations between Soviet Russia and the United States and, second, because of the expose made of the Hollywood Communists by the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees-AF of L and the Joint Fact-Finding Committee on Subversive Activities of the California legislature, more familiarly known as the Tenney Committee.

The Tenney Committee, of which Jack Tenney, California State Senator, is Chairman, conducted open hearings on subversive activities in Los Angeles on January 2, 3, 4 and 5, 1946. According to Confidential Informant [redacted] while these hearings were not directed at the Hollywood motion picture industry and the Communist infiltration thereof specifically, they did bring to light the fact that much of the Communist activity in Los Angeles had its origin and support in Hollywood. It also brought out the fact that several Communist front organizations formed by persons employed in the motion picture industry in high positions were extending their activities and influence outside the industry and into schools, the political field and the labor unions.

The day to day announced results of the Tenney Committee hearings in the press and the previously announced statement of the Committee that it would hold the hearings tended to put the Communists on guard and caused them to temporarily curb and hide certain activities which had previously been carried on openly. The Tenney Committee hearings were interrupted by the calling of a special session of the California State Legislature on January 7, 1946. As early as January a campaign was launched by various Communist front organizations in Hollywood and Los Angeles to discredit the findings of the Tenney Committee.

In addition to the foregoing, there is another factor which has a bearing on this change in activity of the Hollywood Communists which can be described in the Communist lingo as "going underground." That factor is the sudden realization by the producers of pictures and the supreme heads of the industry that there is a likely possibility that the film industry as a whole might be seriously embarrassed because they have permitted it to become a haven and springboard for Communist activities over a period of years.

Another reason for the decision of the Hollywood Communists to go "underground" was the exposure of their activity by the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees Union during the recent studio strike. During the last 60 days of that strike and for a short period thereafter, the exposure of the Communist activity was continuous.

Roy M. Brewer, leader of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees brought to public notice a situation which existed in the Hollywood studios and showed beyond doubt that the film industry was saturated with Communists and followers of the Communist Party line. When Brewer made this information public, giving the names and partial records of prominent individuals in the motion picture industry, the entire industry apparently demanded a halt to that type of publicity. Their demands were evidently acceded to in view of the fact that Brewer stopped the expose.

The heads of the motion picture industry in Hollywood have continually denied that there were any Communists involved in the making of pictures or in the industry itself. Although the film producers are aware that known Communists and sympathizers are employed in the industry, they have been successful in every instance in stopping any publicity which would involve the motion picture industry, as such. Thus far, they have been successful in keeping publicity regarding Communist activities in their industry to a minimum.

As a result of the foregoing factors those who have been most vigorous in Communist activity in the motion picture industry, and this includes some who might possibly be "innocents" are now becoming less and less conspicuous and retiring. Some of the important individuals have been commanded by the producers to cease their open Communist activity. One example of this hiding out process, according to Confidential Informant [redacted] is the case of John Howard Lawson, who has long been the leader of the Communist contingent in the upper brackets and the Hollywood "front" organizations. Lawson has announced that he will retire to his farm and write a book. His name appears less and less as an active Communist.

Another instance is the case of Bette Davis, Warner Brothers Screen Star who has withdrawn from that type of Communist-influenced activity as expressed by the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions. It has been reported that the Warner Brothers Studio ordered her to "cut it out."

All of this does not mean, however, that Communist activity will be lessened in Hollywood. It merely means that the work of the Communist Party in Hollywood will be carried on in an "underground" manner. The open and above ground "front" organizations will be maintained, and others formed. These, however, will serve only as propaganda instruments, using the prestige of prominent personages in pictures as the "draw" to carry out the program of the World Communist Movement in its present attack and undermining attempts on the so-called "imperialist" nations in attempts to block the world conquest by the Soviet Union and the World Communist Movement to bring about world Communism.

Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, HICCASP

During the period of April 1, through July 1, 1946, this organization has been very active. It has served as a powerful political pressure group and attempted to use the motion picture industry and its prestige as a basis to dominate the coming primary elections in the State of California.

Every endorsement for public office made by this organization coincides with that made by the Communist Party of the State. In addition to the endorsement of these Communist-favored candidates, the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions mailed out a tremendous amount of propaganda which not only is a service to the candidates for office but is in favor of every Communist endorsed proposal, grievance or pressure point.

At a meeting held on April 14, 1946, the HICCASP held an election at which officers and an executive council for the ensuing year were placed in office. The present officers and council are as follows:

John Cromwell - Chairman - motion picture director
Colonel Evans Carlson - Vice-chairman - U. S. Marines
Olivia de Haviland - Vice-chairman - Actress

Marian Spitzer - League of American Writers, member
Louis Tabak
*Dalton Trumbo - Writer
*Frank Tuttle - Director
Benny Nanuta
*Bob Wachsman - Publicity manager for Jack Benny Walter Wanger - Producer
Franz Waxman
Virginia Wright - Columnist
William H. Wright - Sponsor Actors Laboratory Theater Program
Benjamin Zukor - Member of Executive Committee of American Society for Russian Relief

From the foregoing list of names the Communist influence within this organization may be seen. An asterisk has been placed before those individuals who have been heretofore reported members of the Communist Party.

Confidential Informant [redacted] stated on April 13, 1946, that the HICCASP took part officially in a parade in the downtown Los Angeles area conducted under the auspices of the Emergency Committee to Support OPA. This demonstration was reportedly in response to a call by the Communist Party of the United States for all organizations to support the OPA. Other organizations taking part in this demonstration which are reportedly under Communist influence in the California area were as follows:

Los Angeles County Democratic Committee
National Citizens Political Action Committee (L.A. Division)
American Veterans Committee
Young Women's Christian Association
CIO Industrial Union Council
Screen Cartoonists Guild
Screen Publicists Guild
Laboratory Technicians, Local 683, IATSE

The organization is also conducting a campaign of propaganda against restrictive covenants which limit residential districts on the basis of color, et cetera. The group officially endorsed and carried on an intensive campaign in support of the following candidates for State office in the California Primaries held on June 4, 1946.- All of these individuals have been reported to either support the Communist Party line or have been found to be subject to Communist influence:

Robert W. Kenny, for Governor
John F. Shelley, Lieutenant Governor
Lucille Gleason, Secretary of State
Ellis E. Patterson, U. S. Senate (now a member of Congress)
Claude Welch, State Senator
Ned R. Healy, Congress (incumbent)
Helen Gahagan Douglas, Congress (incumbent)
Emmett Lavery, Congress, writer
Reuben W. Borough, Congress, Pamphleteer
Chet Holifield, Congress (incumbent)
Cecil R. King, Congress (incumbent)
Clyde Doyle, Congress (incumbent)

This organization also has reportedly raised large amounts of money for the support and elections of the candidates it sponsored for office. With one exception, there has been no division in their ranks on this issue of preferred candidates. There was over the two candidates Ellis E. Patterson and Will Rogers, Jr., for the office of United States Senator. A small group, about forty in number, disagreed with the leaders of the HICCASP and came out with Will Rogers, Jr. for Senator. It should be pointed out, however, that it has been reported that there is practically very little difference between Patterson and Rogers, because they both have been supported to some extent by the Communist Party.

Confidential Informant [redacted] advised that he felt there would be some changes made within the organization due to the fact that it was now recognized and designated by the interested public generally as a Communist front organization.

Prior to the election for some four weeks, the subject organization cooperated with the following organizations connected directly or indirectly with the Hollywood motion picture industry in a series of political rallies for the benefit of the candidates sponsored by this group.

Conference of Studio Unions (Reportedly Communist controlled)
Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions (Reportedly Communist controlled)
57th A.D. Democratic Club (Reportedly Communist controlled)
American Youth for Democracy (Formerly known as Young Communist League, Communist controlled)
American Veterans Committee (Reportedly sponsored by Communists)
Mobilization for Democracy (Reportedly Communist front organization)

Hollywood Writers Mobilization

Confidential informant [redacted] has related that the political activities of this organization have corresponded with those of the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions. The principal activity of this organization during the month of May was in the showing of Russian propaganda motion pictures at the Gordon Theater in Los Angeles on each Tuesday night. In connection with the showing of these pictures made in Russia, a sort of town meeting forum is held in which the audience takes part. These gatherings are reportedly colored in nature and are used for propaganda purposes. Films already shown or to be shown are entitled as follows:

"Once There Was A Girl" - made in Russia and glorifying the Young Komsomols (Young Communists)
"The Last Chance"
"Marie-Louise"
"Seventh Veil"
"Open City"
"It Happened at the Inn"

William Dieterle, a motion picture director, is one of the prime movers in this venture. Others are:

Florence Odets - Photographer
*Edward Eliscu - Writer
*Mrs. Guy Endore - Hollywood Women's Council
Howard Koch - Writer
*Robert Rossen - Writer
*Corinne Seeds - Of the University of California at Los Angeles, Elementary Division

During the month of June the Hollywood Writers Mobilization reportedly secured the Laurel Theater in Los Angeles for the showing of propaganda pictures. In addition to those individuals not previously mentioned as being interested in this propaganda effort are the following:

John Cromwell - writer
*Alvah Bessie - writer
Frances Millington - studio worker, union officer
Lena Horne - Negress, actress, singer
John B. Hughes - news commentator
*Guy Endore - newspaper columnist
Lewis Milestone - Russian born film director

Those individuals whose names have an asterisk placed before them have been reportedly connected with Communistically inclined groups.

National Win-The-Peace Conference

According to a press dispatch, this organization came into existence at a meeting held in Washington, D. C., on April 4, 5, and 6, 1946. Confidential Informant [redacted] has advised that this organization came into existence in Los Angeles on May 12, 1946. This organization held the Win-The-Peace Conference meeting at the Los Angeles City College auditorium on that date. The co-chairmen of this meeting were:

*Paul Robeson - Singer and actor
Colonel Evans Carlson - U. S. Marines

The Los Angeles Conference was in charge of the following individuals who are reported to follow the Communist Party line:

Robert W. Kenny - Attorney General of California and candidate for Governor
Allen Chase - Writer and Executive Secretary of American Committee for Spanish Freedom
Edward Mosk - Attorney and former member of AMG in Germany
True Boardman - Radio writer
Reuben W. Borough - Pamphleteer
Victor Shocken
William H. Rosenthal - California State Assemblyman
Belle Dubnoff
Dr. Herbert Alexander - Professor at Los Angeles City College
Dr. Claude Hudson - Negro dentist
L. E. Claypool

Lal Singh - India, publishes a paper on Indian affairs
David Sarvis
Dr. I. Rees
*William Pomerance - Executive Secretary Screen Writers Guild
Willis J. Hill - President of People's Educational Center
*Ike Adams - Negro
*Phil M. Connelly - Secretary-Treasurer, LAIUC

It is also reported that the HICCASP and the Hollywood Writers Mobilization are both officially affiliated with the national and local groups. It is reported that both of these organizations sent official delegates to the Washington meeting.

Actors Laboratory

Confidential informant [redacted] has indicated that this Communist controlled school for acting has moved to a new location in the Las Palmas Theater, 1648 North Las Palmas Avenue, Hollywood, California. The Actors Laboratory is a continuation of the former Group Theater Organization which was affiliated with the International Union of Revolutionary Theaters through the New Theater League.

The Actors Laboratory is preparing to produce propaganda and revolutionary plays. Now in preparation to be produced in the near future is the Communist propaganda play by Clifford Odets called "Awake and Sing."

Hollywood Forum

This group reportedly devoted to Communist propaganda, according to Confidential Informant [redacted] holds its meetings each Friday night at the Allan Hudack Dance Studio in Los Angeles, California. According to the informant, while this organization is called the Hollywood Forum, it is held under the auspices of the "Daily People's World," which is the official organ of the Communist Party on the West Coast. Those taking part in the forum discussions are all connected with the Hollywood motion picture industry. The following are the most active in this venture:

*Waldo Salt - Moderator, Communist writer
*John Howard Lawson - Communist writer and Communist Party functionary
*Samuel Ornitz - Communist writer for many years
*Alvah Bessie - Communist writer
Carlton Moss - Negro, writer
*Patricia Killoran - "Daily People's World" correspondent
William P. Mutter - Representative of Railroad Brotherhoods

Those individuals whose names have an asterisk placed before them are reportedly members of the Communist Party or close followers of the Communist Party line.

General

Confidential Informant [redacted] has informed that the entire strength of the Communist forces in the Hollywood film industry, including members of the Party, sympathizers and fellow travellers, was devoted almost exclusively to the Primary Election for State and County offices held on June 4, 1946. In fact the entire Communist apparatus in the State was reportedly utilized in an effort to elect those candidates whom the Communist Party and its front organizations, in addition to those organizations previously referred to, had endorsed. The candidates supported by the Communists and so-called liberal and progressive elements were, as you undoubtedly know, defeated.

Robert W. Kenny, State Attorney General and candidate for Governor had the endorsement of the Communists and their sympathizers. In fact, Mr. Kenny had reportedly been raised to his present post of Attorney General of California by the efforts of these liberal and Communist forces.

Ellis E. Patterson, now a member of Congress and a candidate at this election for the Senate of the United States, was also defeated. It is said that he has a record of Communist affiliations which dates back for many years.

The Communists centered most of their strength on these two offices for obvious reasons. Other offices where Communists had endorsed candidates met a similar fate in the majority of cases. This defeat at the polls for the Communists throughout the State, where for about ten years they have enjoyed an almost preferred position, is alleged, by this informant, to be a turning point in the politics of the State, and also a change in Communist tactics, particularly within the motion picture industry where they are exceptionally strong due to the key positions they hold. This informant further advised that one important factor that contributed to this turnover was the open position the Communists are now required to take because of the change in the Party line. For this reason, Communists are more and more being exposed.

DEVELOPMENTS IN THE HOLLYWOOD WRITERS MOBILIZATION
(July 23, 1946 through November14, 1946)

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Field Division, has advised that the activities of the Communist-controlled Hollywood organization of writers known as Hollywood Writers Mobilization, has been confined to the promotion of the exhibition of Russian motion pictures at certain independent motion picture theaters in the Los Angeles area. In addition to this activity, the organization has sponsored and cooperated with such Communist fronts as the Mobilization for Democracy, the Hollywood Citizens Committee for the Arts, Sciences and Professions, the Citizens Committee for Better Education, and similar groups used for pressure purposes.

The Hollywood Writers Mobilization, being an organization of writers only, is more or less confined to writing. This was the function of the organization when it was allied with the Office of War Information during the period of the war. Its efforts then and now are devoted to the propaganda field. Information has been received that it is to be connected with a Government agency, this time under the jurisdiction of the War Department. The War Department has announced that it has appointed Pare Lorentz as the Chief of the Film and Theater Unit of the reorientation Branch of the Civil Affairs Division, an agency of the United States Government.

"Variety" for September 3, 1946, stated that Lorentz' division had a budget for 120 reels which was to begin his project and that he had been allocated 2000 projectors for distribution in Japan and Germany. These projectors, according to the article, were to be used in establishing schoolroom programs and reopening theaters in remote areas.

The article stated that 200 million people in Japan, Korea, Austria and Germany, will not be allowed to see any film that is not approved by the Lorentz unit, and producers in occupied countries will not be allowed to make any films until they have been certified and have an Army approved script. The article also related that Lorentz received authorization to select a nucleus of 34 technicians who will begin expansion of the entire operation. The first production unit of 100 people is to include film editors, camera men, sound men, art directors and other technicians. Veterans are to be given preference on all jobs. Five divisions have been made within the film and theater organization, including:

News Reel Unit
Story Unit
Theater Unit
European Unit
Pacific Unit

The duties of Lorentz' Division will be the production of motion picture documentary "shorts," news reels and theater units, all of which will be used to set up a system of re-education of occupied countries, especially Germany, Austria and Japan.

There is also to be another branch, under the same jurisdiction, devoted to magazines, newspapers, educational and religious, and "special projects." Pare Lorentz, who has been identified as being very sympathetic with the Communist cause, particularly when he was engaged on the WPA theater project, has announced that he will recruit the personnel largely from the Hollywood motion picture industry. Information has been received that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization will be the principal cultural group contacted; that the HWM will occupy the same relations with this War Department project that it did previously with the Office of War Information.

This organization being Communist-controlled and directed could be and very probably would be connected with a propaganda agency for that cause as it would be in a position to utilize the government agency to spread propaganda throughout those occupied countries not yet taken over by Soviet Russia.

The "Guildsman," official paper of the Los Angeles Newspaper Guild, for June, 1946, stated that following the screening of the Russian picture, "Once there was a Girl," portraying the children of Leningrad during the Nazi siege of that city, a talk was made by William Dieterle advocating greater realism and honesty in the production of American motion pictures. Dieterle said: "We saw in this Russian film a scene showing people drawing water through holes out in the river ice; the scene was real. The snow and ice were not artificial and the reality of the cold and hardship projected itself from the screen into the imagination of the audience. Here in Hollywood that scene would have been staged on the set. The snow would have been granulated salt and flour and the sense of reality would have been lost."

A film forum was then conducted, the other speakers being Dr. Corinne Seeds, UCLA educator; Howard Koch, screen writer and chairman of Writers Mobilization; and Charles Ellis, city editor of the "Labor Herald."

Harold J. Salemson about 1937 was the president of the Los Angeles Newspaper Guild and was active in Communist affairs and, according to [redacted] discontinued confidential informant of the Los Angeles Office, was a member of the Communist Party. He went into the Army Special Services early in 1942. He returned to Hollywood from the military service in March, 1946, and at the present time he is the director of publications for the Screen Writers Guild and is active in Communist front organizations.

Confidential Informant [redacted] has advised that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization in cooperation with the Mobilization for Democracy has instituted a series of broadcasts over Radio Station KLAC in Los Angeles. The title of the broadcast is "It is Beginning Here." The programs are propaganda in the interest of minority groups.

According to the informant, this is the usual Communist propaganda springboard for putting over the Communist Party line. The broadcasts are given every Monday evening at 7:15. This project also has the support of the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions. The following individuals are interested in conducting this venture: Harry Hoijer, teacher at UCLA; Ken Niles, announcer; Lee Horton, Hollywood Writers Mobilization; Lillian Randolph, Negro actress and Betty Jones, Negro social worker.

HOLLYWOOD INDEPENDENT CITIZENS COMMITTEE OF THE ARTS, SCIENCES AND PROFESSIONS (July 23 through November 8, 1946)

According to [redacted] the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee for the Arts, Sciences and Professions (ICCASP) has become the main political and propaganda pressure group of the Communist Party in Hollywood and is now carrying out the "open" line of the Communist Party in the political and pressure groups found in the motion picture industry.

[redacted] asserted that the Hollywood ICCASP derives prestige from the influence of the film industry and the influential film characters engaged in that industry. He related that the motion picture industry, as such, renders its tacit consent to these activities as there has never been any criticism of any kind from the top producers of pictures in Hollywood or any attempt to prevent this organization using the name of the industry for its "subversive" purposes.

[redacted] further advised that this organization is openly allied with many other Communist "front" organizations, both locally and nationally and is to be reckoned with as the western branch of the ICCASP, the joint sponsor with the National Citizens Political Action Committee of the meeting held in Madison Square Garden recently when Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace and United States Senator Claude Pepper from Florida made the pro-Russian speeches which caused national and international furore.

[redacted]

[redacted] further stated that while the organization has not been greatly affected by the present exposures of the Communist Party's relations to the Soviet Union and that country's attitudes toward world peace, or a coming war, there have been some withdrawals of membership and board members. The more timid among the group, evidently fearing that reputations in the film industry might suffer, have withdrawn from the organization. To make up for these resignations, the following have been added to the Executive Council:

Artie Shaw, Band Leader
Larry Adler, Actor
Averill Berman, Radio Commentator
Dr. Arthur Brower, newcomer
Virginia Bruce, Actress
Norval D. Crutcher, studio labor leader
Sterling Hayden, actor
Rose Hobart, actress
Maurice Howard, studio union labor leader
Gene Kelly, actor
Robert W. Kenny, attorney-general of California
Roland Kibbee, writer
Charles Lewin, writer
Margo, actress
Kenneth MacGowan, director
Kenneth McKenna, director
Groucho Marx, actor
Jack Moss, writer
Vincent Price, actor
Ann Revere, actress
Arthur Sheenman, writer
Gloria Stuart, actress
Sheppard Traube, writer
Cornel Wilde, actor
[redacted]
Mrs. Talli Wyler, wife of William Wyler, director

The majority of the above-listed individuals have been associated at one time with activities which have been under the influence and/or control of the Communist Party.

The Hollywood ICCASP arranged for a concert in the Hollywood Bowl on September 2, 1946 for the purpose of raising funds. According to a circular issued by the organization the funds were to be used for political purposes. The statement was:

"This concert is the most exciting and important public event HICCASP has ever undertaken. Its financial success will guarantee much of our fall election work as well as support of the many other urgent campaigns in which HICCASP is engaged."

[redacted] stated that the feature of this concert was the guest speaker, Claude Pepper, Senator from Florida, who gave the Communist Party line on the relations of the United States with Soviet Russia. The concert was a success, some 15,000 people attending, and the amount taken in is estimated as between $40,000 and $50,000. The artists taking part were:

Arthur Rubenstein
Frank Sinatra
Gregory Peck
Vincent Price
Alfred Drake
Earl Robinson
Dr. Hugo Strelitzer
Franz Waxman
Larry Adler, and Claude Pepper

[redacted] further advised that the Hollywood ICCASP is now affiliated with another Communist group, called Citizens Committee for Better Education. This Communist "front" is a pressure group set up to work on the public school system of the State of California and City of Los Angeles. Other organizations affiliated, are:

Communist Party
American Youth for Democracy
American Veterans Committee
Conference of Studio Unions
Hollywood Women's Council
Hollywood Writers Mobilization
Los Angeles Federation of Teachers, Local 430 (AFL)
Mobilization for Democracy
National Citizens Political Action Committee
CIO Political Action Committee
Southland Jewish Organization
United Public Workers, CIO

The Hollywood ICCASP has affiliated itself, according to [redacted] with the Los Angeles Civil Rights Congress, a branch of the National Civil Rights Congress, a completely Communist-controlled pressure organization.

Other organizations affiliated with this national organization, are:

American Veterans Committee
National Lawyers Guild
Home Protective Association (local group)
Home Owners Defense Council " "
West Hollywood Defense Council " "
San Fernando Valley Council on Race Relations " " Committee for Unity " "

[redacted] also informed that the Hollywood ICCASP participated on Sunday, September 22, 1946 in a mass demonstration against a meeting held by Gerald L. K. Smith in the Polytechnic School Auditorium in Los Angeles. This demonstration was called by the Mobilization for Democracy, a Communist-formed and controlled "front" in the Southern California area. In doing so, it cooperated with the following Communist-dominated groups:

American Youth for Democracy (formerly Young Communist League)
Mobilization for Democracy
American Jewish Congress
Progressive AF of L (Communists within the AF of L)
Los Angeles CIO Council
American Veterans Committee
Southland Jewish Organization
National Negro Congress
National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.
Jewish War Veterans

The speakers at this demonstration were:

Ellis E. Patterson, Congressman from 16th Congressional District
Phillip M. Connelly, CIO-Industrial Union Council
William Bidner, Mobilization for Democracy, Executive Director
Stanley Moffatt, Justice of the Peace at Huntington Park, Calif.

The HICCASP took part officially in a "strategy" meeting held in the St. Francis Hotel, San Francisco, on September 22, 1946. The purported purposes of this meeting of delegates from organizations mentioned below, were to carry out the policies of the late Franklin D. Roosevelt and "support 'progressive' candidates in the November 5 elections." The organizations represented were:

HICCASP
California State CIO
National Citizens Political Action Committee
National Association for Advancement of Colored People
Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen.

The meeting issued the following statement printed in the Communist "Peoples Daily World," September 23, 1946, Page 1, Column 7:

> "Since developments of the recent weeks had emphasized the need of a stronger, more unified stand among independent liberal groups, and in view of the seriousness of the coming November elections, we are meeting today to explore ways and means of implementing our independent political action in support of the late President Roosevelt's foreign policy of Big Three unity, as recently amplified in the statements of Henry A. Wallace, and the Roosevelt domestic program commonly known as the Economic Bill of Rights."

The Hollywood ICCASP called a mass meeting at the Hollywood Legion Stadium on September 18, 1946 held purportedly to "protest the sufferings of the Jewish people in Palestine."

This meeting was purely political in intent. All speeches dealt with the foreign policy of the United States, in the main, rather than strictly the question of the Jews in Palestine.

A. Hirschmann, listed as Special Inspector General of UNRRA, praised Secretary Henry A. Wallace for his criticism of Secretary of State Byrnes' "get tough" policy with Soviet Russia.

Edward G. Robinson, screen actor, stated that anti-Semitism, anti-Russian, anti-Negro and anti-Labor prejudices are one and the same thing.

Reuben Dafni, a citizen of Palestine, also spoke on the Jewish question, stating that there was no real trouble, except that which is being stirred up by British and other capitalist interests.

Others taking part in this HICCASP-called meeting and following the standard Communist Party line, were:

Gene Kelly, actor
Margo, screen and stage actress
Ned R. Healy, Congressman from Southern California
Charles Brown, chairman Jewish Community Council.

A. Hirschmann, mentioned above, was also listed as a member of President Roosevelt's War Refugee Board.

Approximately 8,000 persons attended this meeting. The general complexion of the meeting was the same as those who attend all other Communist "front" meetings. This, however, was strictly "Hollywood."

The principal activity, aside from that of a "pressure" nature, of the Hollywood ICCASP, was in connection with the recent National elections. The organization has endorsed all candidates favored by the Communist Party with the exception of one: that is, the write-in campaign for Archie Brown, a known Communist, for Governor of California, running on the Communist ticket, or rather, running as a Communist.

The HICCASP is the strongest organized political force within the Democratic Party of California. While not officially affiliated with the Democratic Party, it acts as a hard, disciplined core within that party devoted to an attempt to steer the Democratic Party in the direction of the official Communist Party line.

The Los Angeles "Daily News" for May 13, 1946 stated that a former Secretary of the Interior, Harold L. Ickes, emerged that day as the actual, if not the titular leader, of the new United Front formed by three citizen groups.

It stated that the organization of the three agencies under a single banner in time for this year's elections doubtless will serve to sharpen up Congressional campaigns between those who have been supporting the Administration's domestic program and those who have been methodically chopping it to pieces ever since V-J Day.

"These three groups will keep their autonomy, but will make their weight felt where it counts by pooling resources, talent, and strategy toward a single aim of electing liberal congressmen and senators.

"Heads of the three groups, the National Citizens PAC; the Congress of Industrial Organizations PAC; and the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions held their initial strategy session here over the week-end."

The Los Angeles Tribune for July 13, 1946 stated that more than 1,100 members of the HICCASP have registered their protests against an act of discrimination charged to the management of the Ambassador Hotel by Carlton Moss who was associated with Frank Capra in the production of "The Negro Soldier," War Department film.

The article stated that Mr. Moss is a member of the Executive Board of HICCASP and has been cited for meritorious service by the War Department in recognition of his production of the "Negro Soldier." Among the well-known members of the HICCASP who have joined in the committee's protest are:

Olivia DeHaviland
Albert Dekker
Helen Gahagan Douglas
John Garfield
Paul Henreid
Lena Horne
Frederick March
Harpo Marx
James Roosevelt
Gail Sondergaard

The "Hollywood Reporter" and "Variety," trade papers in the motion picture industry, on August 5, 1946 carried full page advertisements. Also, the "California Eagle" carried the same advertisement which in substance was as follows:

"AMONG THE CASUALTIES OF WAR-1946

"January 4:	Four Negro veterans killed in Birmingham, Ala.
"February 5:	Two Negro veterans killed in Freeport, L.I.
February 13:	Negro veteran's eyes gouged out by Aiken, South Carolina policeman.
February 25:	Two Negroes, one a veteran, killed in Columbia, Tennessee jail.
July 17:	Macio Snipes, veteran, only Negro to vote in his district, murdered in Taylor County, Georgia
July 22	Leon McTatie whipped to death near Lexington, Miss.
July 24:	Four Negroes--two men and two women--lynched by mob in Walton County, Georgia.

"STOP THIS SLAUGHTER!

"(A) Wire President Harry Truman urging defense of the Constitution and fulfillment of our Atlantic Charter obligations. Ask him, by a personal plea to the nation, to reassure the world that America is determined to preserve her democracy.

"(B) Wire Attorney General Tom Clark, Washington, D. C., demanding protection for Negro citizens and restoration of law. Commend him for his seven-state investigation of the KKK.

"(C) Wire Senator Sheridan Downey, Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C., urging him to move for the immediate creation of a United States Senate Committee to investigate denial of civil liberties and police protection to the Negro people.

"(D) Wire all Washington representatives urging passage by Congress of a Federal Anti-Lynch Law which has been pending for the last fifteen years.

"(E) Unite with the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions and all other progressive organizations, to undertake a campaign of education and protest."

The article states "This advertisement voted by the general membership of the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions."

The Los Angeles "Times" for August 2, 1946 carried a statement of the HICCASP to the effect that the HICCASP had voted $1,000 additional to the $10,000 reward which had been offered for the apprehension of the person or persons responsible for the Georgia lynchings in Walton County, Georgia.

According to this same source, the Hollywood ICCASP has supported the current "Consumers' Strike". For this purpose literature in huge amounts was mailed. Members of the group organized neighborhood meetings to agitate the boycott and arranged to take part in picket lines in front of commercial establishments. This buyers strike was to take place on July 18th and was officially called by the 16th Congressional District Section of the Communist Party. Picket lines were established in front of markets, etc. The HICCASP responded to the Communist appeal and furnished a sky-writing airplane to support the strike.

The HICCASP reported that it has secured 500 signatures to a telegram sent to Washington in support of this program. The signatures were secured on the streets by John Garfield and Georgia Gibbs. Garfield is the noted screen actor long connected with Communist activity. In this activity the HICCASP cooperated with the following:

Communist Party
American Youth for Democracy (formerly Young Communist League)
International Workers Order
American Veterans Committee
National Citizens Political Action Committee.

The organization led a demonstration in the press and by meetings against the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles because of the refusal of that hotel to serve Carlton Moss, a Negro writer connected with the Hollywood film industry.

The current activities of this group, according to confidential informant [redacted] and [redacted] were devoted toward the recent elections held on November 5, 1946. These consisted in raising funds, putting out literature and holding meetings in conjunction with other Communist-controlled organizations. As a body, it has endorsed all candidates supported by the Communist Party except one, a known Communist, Archie Brown, who is conducting a write-in campaign for the Governorship. All others endorsed by the HICCASP are what are known as "liberals" or "progressives." Those who receive intensive support by the organization are the following:

Will Rogers, Jr., Candidate for U. S. Senate
Ellis E. Patterson, write-in candidate for Congress after being defeated in the primary for Senator.
John F. Shelley, candidate for Lt.-Governor
Edmund G. Brown, candidate for Attorney General
Ned R. Healey, Congressman, candidate for re-election
Helen Gahagan Douglas, Congresswoman, candidate for re-election
Clyde Doyle, Congressman, candidate for re-election

All other endorsements of local Assemblymen and propositions on the ballot coincide with the endorsements of the Communist Party.

The HICCASP works in close connection with what is called School of Political Action Techniques conducted by Southern California National Citizens Political Action Committee, located at Parkview Manor, 2200 West Seventh Street, Los Angeles, California. Literature and folders mailed out by HICCASP state the aims and purposes of this school are mainly "mobilizing special groups for political action," political speech writing and making, public relations, etc.

The Communist character of this "school" is shown by the following names, listed as the faculty:

Joseph W. Aidlin, Democratic County and State Committees
Dr. Leonard Bloom, UCLA Professor
Dr. Frank Davis, listed as Professor of Sociology, UCLA.
Albert Dekker, screen actor
Mendel Lieberman, American Veterans Committee
Bernard Lusher, United Office and Professional Workers
Allen Metcalf, campaign manager Ned Healy for Congress
George Moore, President L.A. City Council
Edward Mosk, Attorney and Author
Mrs. Esther Nassitir, 13th District Coordinating Council
John Payne, Citizens Research Institute
Abraham Polonsky, screen writer
Dr. H. E. Scarbrough, 13th District Citizens Committee
George Stiller, Public Relations Consultant
Bert Witt, Director NCPAC
Sara Kleban, Coordinator.

Among sponsors of the school are the following, all of whom have extensive records of Communist activity:

Charlotta Bass, Editor of California Eagle
Averill Berman, Broadcaster
James H. Burford, CIO official
Rev. Ernest Caldecott, Unitarian Minister
George Campbell, AFL Secretary of Musicians Union
Dr. Franklin Fearing UCLA Professor
Augustus F. Hawkins, State Legislature member
Robert W. Kenny, State Attorney General
Albert Maltz, Writer
John T. McTernan, Labor attorney
Carey McWilliams, Professional sponsor for front organizations
Judge Isaac Pacht, Attorney
Gregory Peck, Actor
Mrs. Jean Sieroty, Wife of Manager of Columbia Department Store
Dalton Trumbo, Writer
Claude Welch, Lawyer, teacher
Alvin Wilder, Radio Commentator
Jacob Zeitlin, Book Store

In addition to the foregoing activities, the HICCASP affiliates with, supports and uses the publicity-gathering name of the organization to further all Communist-inspired ventures in the locality.

Spotlight on China Mass Meeting

According to confidential informant [redacted] a mass meeting under the above title was called by notices mailed by the HICCASP for October 6, 1946, to be held at the Hollywood American Legion Stadium. The meeting was widely publicized for weeks in advance. The top officers of the American Legion, having learned that the meeting was controlled by Communists, cancelled the contract for the stadium. The meeting was then moved to the Olympic Auditorium in downtown Los Angeles, where it was held on the date scheduled.

The main purpose of the demonstration was to create pressure on the State Department to withdraw American troops from China, one of the main objectives at this time of the Communist Party of the United States.

Those taking part in the meeting were:

Judge Stanley Moffatt, who acted as Chairman
Paul Robeson, Actor and singer
Ellis E. Patterson, Congressman
Harrison Foreman, Author and Communist sympathizer
Col. Evans Carlson (could not appear, but sent a telegram of support for the movement)
Bill Belton, CIO Organizer

A collection was taken, the Mobilization for Democracy donating $1500. An estimated $5,000.00 was collected.

Others contributing were:

American Veterans Committee
International Workers Order (IWO)
American Youth for Democracy (Young Communist League)

The usual Hollywood support for this meeting was given. Allen Metcalf was the Chairman of the arrangements committee.

AMERICAN AUTHORS AUTHORITY

The American Authors Authority is a recent organization under the leadership of James M. Cain, novelist and movie writer, which plans to control sales to magazines, movies and radio of all manuscripts written by American authors. It is reported that on July 29, 1946 the Screen Writers Guild voted 430 to eight to go into this project and fully supported this new group with the Radio Writers Guild.

The Washington Times Herald for August 13, 1946 quotes Cain's explanation of the operation of this new organization as follows: "The writer will send all works to the Authority to be copyrighted in its name, for his benefit. The Authority will then say, 'We shall copyright for assignment no works except from writers who have become members of the proper guild.'

"This will take care of the outlaw contributor who became so menacing to the American Society of Composers and Authors at the time of its fight with the radio studios.

"It will also say we shall lease no rights except to lessors who comply with the basic agreements of the guild.

"The Screen Writers Guild and the Radio Writers Guild will say, 'We shall permit our writers to work on no material not leased through the Authority' and this will compel every writer in the country hoping for picture or magazine sale to send his work to the Authority before the magazines or publishers get it."

As it may be seen, this new group intends to act as a copyright repository or a clearing house or agent for writers in the leasing of their writings and it empowers the Authority to represent all authors in the disposition of the rights to their literary works.

Some editorial comments have indicated that the American Authors Authority is endeavoring to control ideas. Consequently, if all this power of the ideas in movies, radio and fiction come into the hands of a few people, and those people are touched with "political wackiness, as Hollywood's writers are, how can Moscow miss?"

Press accounts also reflect that the American Authors Authority is to be run by a full-time, salaried employee and is to obtain its funds from magazines, movies and radio companies, totaling about $250,000 a year for its operating expenses.

The New York Journal American on October 22, 1946 carried an article indicating that Stefan Heym, alias Hellmuth Flieg, a former German Communist, is now one of the leading backers of the American Authors Authority. The article also reflects that in addition to Heym, John Howard Lawson, whom it describes as a Hollywood screen writer, Communist Party contact man and fund raiser in the film industry, is also one of the leading sponsors of this nationwide program.

The Hollywood Reporter for August 23, 1946 alleged that although Cain is the leader of this new American Authors Authority, it believes that the material was forwarded to Mr. Cain by some of the Communist members in the Screen Writers Guild. The Hollywood Reporter indicated that this new organization would not assist the writer either in a financial way or give him constructive protection. It cited the example of the Russian writings which contain only what Stalin wants written and it prohibits any Russian writer from using any free thought, freedom or expression or his own creative ideas. This periodical reflects that the same type of treatment can be expected if this organization is allowed to progress and remain in the hands of the Communist-controlled Screen Writers Guild.

The article further states that this control will be accomplished through the maneuver which permits the playwrights to have complete authority over their works for stage production. Consequently, no director or producer will be allowed to change any word or thought without the consent of the author. This, according to the article, is the immediate hidden effort of the Authors Authority in so far as the motion pictures are concerned.

According to the Washington Times Herald for September 9, 1946, a number of the nation's leading authors have banded together to form the American Writers Association. The President of this new organization is John Erskine and its Executive Secretary is Suzanne LaFollette. Its membership included such prominent authors as Clarence B. Kelland, Bruce Barton, Rupert Hughes, Norman Thomas, Clara Boothe Luce, Irene Kuhn, Philip Wylie, George Sokolosky, H. V. Kaltenborn and Oswald Garrison Villard.

This group, according to the press, is a counter organization set up in New York to fight the American Authors Authority proposal.

JOHN BARNES AND ASSOCIATES

This recently formed "public relations" organization, according to [redacted] confidential informant of the Los Angeles Field Division, announced that its functions are to "see that liberal, progressive commentators, such as are listed as supporting the organization are kept on the air as an antidote to the radio prostitutes who put their personal well-being above that of their fellow Americans...." The persons listed as supporting this group are all connected directly and indirectly with the Hollywood film industry. They are:

James Roosevelt
Sam Balter
Averill Berman
Peter De Lima
Bill Pennell
Sidney Roger (San Francisco)

Also listed as supporting this venture are businessmen of Los Angeles, all of whom lean toward the Communist position. The offices of this group are located at 6633 Whitley Terrace, Hollywood. [redacted]

WESTERN COUNCIL FOR PROGRESSIVE BUSINESS, LABOR AND AGRICULTURE

[redacted] Los Angeles confidential informant, informed that this is also a newly-formed pressure group in the Hollywood section which cooperated with the foregoing organization, John Barnes and Associates. This group is obviously a Communist pressure group because of the names given as supporting it. Some of them are:

Robert W. Kenny
Bartley C. Crum
Will Rogers, Jr.
Albert Dekker
Sam Balter
Paul Robeson
Arch Oboler
Phillip M. Connelly
George Campbell
James Roosevelt, and many others.

HOLLYWOOD COMMUNITY RADIO

[redacted] confidential informant of the Los Angeles Office, informed that a group of individuals, all of whom have been identified with Communist activities in Hollywood, has applied to the Federal Communications Association for license to operate a standard radio broadcast station to be located in Gardena, California. Gardena is a suburb of Los Angeles. The application was filed on July 18, 1946. The group also filed for a Hollywood FM outlet for the 1560 Kilocycle band.

While this venture is connected with the radio industry, all those involved are connected with the Hollywood motion picture industry. This source relates that the station would be devoted to spreading Communist propaganda. [redacted]

The hearing for a permit to operate this radio station was scheduled to come up before the Federal Communications Commission on October 14, 1946. The group applying for the license, according to [redacted] is under Communist control and all the officers and stockholders have long records of Communist activity. They are as follows:

Alvin Wilder, President, broadcaster
Paul Stewart, Vice-President, radio writer
Cal Kuhl, Second Vice President, writer
Pauline Lauber, Financial Secretary, Hollywood Writers Mobilization Secretary
John T. McTernan, Treasurer, Attorney

Directors:

Franklin Fearing, UCLA Professor
Sam Moore, President of Radio Writers Guild
Abraham L. Polonsky, writer
Phillip M. Connelly, Secretary Treasurer LA IUC
George Campbell, Secretary of Musicians Union, Local #47, AFL William Pomerance, business agent Screen Writers Guild
Hy Kraft, writer
Emil Corwin, a brother of Norman Corwin

Stockholders:

Charles J. Katz, attorney
Russ Avery, Treasurer of the Peoples Educational Center [redacted]

[redacted]

Kleck Moll
Theodore Saidenberg, musician
Seniel Ostrow
Jack Y. Berman, theater manager
Peter Kahn, Jr.
George Alexander Coulouris, actor
Leo A. Goldberg
John Garfield, actor
Robert B. Roberts, theatrical agency
Allen Scott
Lillian H. Taussig
P. C. Stewart
E. E. Kotkin
Robert Triest
Reginald G. Johnson
Emil Corwin

The purposes of this group are to use this station for "liberal" programs. "Liberal," in this instance means Communist. [redacted]

JEWISH BLACK BOOK COMMITTEE OF LOS ANGELES

According to [redacted] confidential informant of the Los Angeles Office, this organization is the local branch of the national organization of the same name headed by Albert Einstein. It has announced that on October 1, 1946, a mass meeting will be held at the Shrine Auditorium, Los Angeles. The principal speaker at this meeting will be Congressman Emanuel Celler of New York. The purposes of this organization are stated by it in the "People's Daily World," September 6, 1946, to be to "present every public official in the State with a copy of the Jewish Black Book as a reminder that what happened over there must not happen over here."

[redacted]tates that those active in this group have all been identified with Communist activities and most of them have connections with the motion picture industry. They are the following:

Lion Feuchtwanger, refugee writer
Julius Fligelman
Dr. Sanford Goldner, labor research
Peter M. Kahn
Jack Agins, an employee at the People's Educational Center
Mrs. Anne Allen

[redacted]

Harry Bauman, Businessman
Lewis Milestone, director
Artie Shaw, bandleader
John Garfield, actor
Oscar Pattis
Peter M. Kahn, Jr.
Jay Gorney, song writer
Robert Rossen, writer and director
Mrs. Fred C. Pollock
Henry Blankfort, writer and director
Dr. Isadore Rees, Jewish Rabbi
Paul Jarrico, writer
John Berry, director
Samuel Ornitz, writer
A. Maymudes, IWO
Mrs. A. Prinzmetal
George Stiller, businessman 100-138754-134 Page 8

As a result of the meeting held at the Shrine Auditorium, Los Angeles, October 1, 1946, the following resolutions were adopted and disseminated:

Stop the State Department's "Get Tough With Russia" policy

Support Henry Wallace in his attitude toward Russia and the atomic bomb.

Criticize the "imperialist" policy of Britain in sending troops to Greece.

Get United States troops out of China.

And all other "must" agitation according to the present Communist Party line.

Those taking part in the meeting were:

[redacted]

Ellis E. Patterson, Congressman from California
Artie Shaw, Hollywood band leader
Kenneth Leslie, Editor of "The Protestant," a Communist propaganda magazine, issued monthly supposedly in the interest of the Protestants in the United States and anti-Catholic

[redacted]

Rabbi Max Nussbaum, Rabbi, Israel Temple
Lion Feuchtwanger, Refugee and writer
Dr. Sanford Goldner, CIO Research Assistant
Peter M. Kahn, Businessman
Dr. Jack Agina, teacher in the Peoples
Education Center
Julius Fligelman

HOLLYWOOD INDEPENDENT CITIZENS COMMITTEE
OF THE ARTS, SCIENCES AND PROFESSIONS
(November 14, 1946 through February 14, 1947)

A confidential informant of the Los Angeles Field Division, [redacted] in November, 1946, advised the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions had issued thousands of letters to organizations, unions and individuals, asking support for the same list of candidates supported by the Communist Party and the Communist front groups. Despite this, only one candidate supported by the organization for a major office was elected. This candidate was Helen Gahagan Douglas who was reelected to Congress from the 14th Congressional district. All others were defeated.

In this campaign the organization cooperated with all other Communist dominated groups, such as:

Los Angeles CIO Council
National Citizens PAC
Progressive AF of L Committee
Railroad Brotherhoods Joint Legislative Council

But as this entire program was defeated and as the entire political complexion of the State of California was changed, swinging definitely to the right, the HICCASP is now left in an isolated and unpopular position, even within the Hollywood studio circles. In fact, one member of the organization stated, "we were completely stunned by this turn of events."

However, despite all this, the HICCASP is still dominated by the Communist Party. It will hew to any changes made by this party. In fact, the HICCASP, like the Communist Party itself, will now be reorganized to meet the conditions of change, which are referred to under Section III. It will conform to the change in the tactics of the Communist Party of the United States which will now be altered because of the coming clash with the Soviet Union. For this reason, it can be stated that the HICCASP is now midway between two political positions, one a hangover from the Communist Political Association and the other the late position, the revolutionary position of Marxism-Leninism. It will now become either a more open propaganda agency for the Communist Party, or go out of existence altogether.

In December, 1946, the same informant, [redacted] reported that the national organization ICCASP is contemplating merging with the National Citizens Political Action Committee with the ultimate object of laying the foundation for a "third party" to be composed of and controlled by the so-called "liberal" elements in the United States. It is not known as yet whether this new combination, should it be brought about, will bear a different name from either of the above named. Should this new combination emerge as a third party, it would be right in line with the Communist Party of the United States which is now agitating for such a third party.

While no open meetings have been held, or announcements made of this proposed merger of the two organizations before mentioned, meetings have been held in private homes for discussion of the subject. The last meeting was held in the home of Eddie Cantor on December 3, 1946, where the matter was discussed. It was impossible to secure the names of those who attended, but the matter of the new party was discussed favorably along with the proposed leadership of Henry Wallace and Claude Pepper. However, the informant states that the matter was discussed more from a racial standpoint (Jewish) than from a liberal (Communist) one.

In January of 1947, informant [redacted] reported that the Hollywood chapter of the national organization is now preparing to go out of existence under that name and emerge as the Hollywood Branch of the new organization formed in New York on December 28 and 29, 1946, called Progressive Citizens of America. This latter organization was formed by a merger of the ICCASP and the National Citizens Political Action Committee (NCPAC).

The convention to bring forth this new organization was held in New York on the afore-mentioned dates. The delegates who represented the Hollywood ICCASP were the following:

E. Y. Harburg - song writer
George Pepper - musician
Larry Adler - musician
Anne Revere - actress
Aline McMahon

The delegates representing the NCPAC from Southern California were:

Bert Witt
Simon Lazarus
Howard Da Silva - screen actor

The Hollywood branch of the new organization is now being set up, and up to the time of this report it had not been completed. Who the officers are and what the general program will be had not as yet been determined.

HOLLYWOOD WRITERS MOBILIZATION

The "Guildsman," official newspaper of the American Newspaper Guild [redacted] June 1, 1946, reflected the specific 1946-47 program of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization as follows:

"PUBLIC SERVICE

"Continue to meet the heavy volume of requests for writing, producing, and directing services in line with patriotic objectives and designed to help safeguard and give meaning to the peace.

"PUBLICATIONS

"Development of the field of 'The Hollywood Quarterly', the unique non-profit magazine co-sponsored by the Hollywood Writers Mobilization and the University of California to provide a mature medium of expression for workers in the communications industries and for the study of those industries. Publication of this magazine marks the first time, writers, producers, artists, directors, and technologists have joined with a major university in a project of this kind.

"MOTION PICTURES

"Once a month the Mobilization shows a distinguished motion picture, either American or foreign and then holds a town-meeting type of audience discussion concerning craft problems in motion picture writing, directing, and producing, and dealing with the social issues implicit in the picture. The Mobilization also premiers unusual films, and plans for film production in 16 mm. documentary and educational field are being made.

"RADIO

"In cooperation with the Federation of American Scientists, the Mobilization has created a public service sustaining series of radio plays, dealing with problems created by the atomic bomb and nuclear fission. The Hollywood Writers Mobilization is also establishing a new radio work shop for the exploration of new and experimental techniques in radio writing and production

"NEWSPAPERS

"The Mobilization is working closely with the Los Angeles Newspaper Guild in the public relations field, and in the creation of special articles, brochures, and news stories to serve worthy purposes. It is working closely with [redacted] to develop a nationally syndicated weekly column for the Negro press.

"Recently the Mobilization has received official awards from the Government of the United States, the Government of Canada and from Government Department [redacted] its war activities services in which the LANG played a vital role."

Following is a summary of the war activities services rendered by the Hollywood Writers Mobilization to the present time:

Documentary and short subject films	210
Radio scripts	1069
Army-Navy camp shows	910
War bond speeches	490
Blood bank speeches	430
War agency brochures	29
War activity feature stories	125
Songs	60
Posters and slogans	360

Confidential informant [redacted] in reporting on the Hollywood Writers Mobilization in November, 1946, stated that this Communist controlled propaganda organization has, within the last sixty days or more, narrowed its activities to a considerable extent. It has not, as an organization, supported or sponsored the usual run of Communist pressure groups, but has instead confined its activities to the radio field.

While the writer members of this group are, at the same time, members of or supporters of many other activities of a Communist front nature, the organization itself has withdrawn from open support of such. This does not mean any change in ideology or desertion of the Communist movement in Hollywood. It is because other organizations have preempted the field of open political action. Such organizations are the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, the Win the Peace Congress, National Citizens Political Action Committee, etc.

The last important activity of the organization, aside from its radio efforts, was the publication of the Hollywood Quarterly, a publication sponsored jointly by the HWM and the University of California at Los Angeles, UCLA. The last issue of this magazine was dated July, 1946. Another issue was due in October. At the time of this report, this issue had not been published. The alliance with the university is still in existence, although there has been very little activity in conjunction with the university.

Confidential informant [redacted] further advised that a radio program entitled "It is Beginning Here" is being sponsored by the organization and presented over radio station KLAC in Los Angeles. The program is presented each Monday evening at 7:15 p.m. The program purports to be in the "interest of minority groups." The program follows exactly the position of the Communist Party on this question of minorities. Those taking part in this program written by members of the HWM are:

Lillian Randolph, Negro actress
Ken Niles, announcer
Harry Hoijer, Professor of Anthropology of UCLA
Mrs. Betty Jones, Negro of a public housing project
Lee Horton, writer and director, member of HWM

The content of this program is the usual agitation of minority prejudices against the established American customs.

Interspersed with these programs at various times are so-called "discussions" of the Negro and minority questions. Such discussions took place on October 7, 1946, and several times since. Those taking part were:

Carey McWilliams, attorney and follower of the Communist Party line
Carleton Moss, Negro writer employed in Hollywood
True Boardman, Hollywood writer, radio and screen

All the foregoing are members of the Mobilization and connected with other Communist front organizations.

In December of 1946, [redacted] reported that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization had again become active in propaganda fields and pressure tactics. He reported that because of its connections with the University of California, a state institution, which connections are definite and fixed with the State Board of Regents, the Hollywood Writers Mobilization is able to penetrate and influence many other sources not possible otherwise.

Under the joint sponsorship of the University and the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, the organization publishes a "Quarterly" magazine dealing with motion pictures, radio and music and so-called "culture" in general. The October, 1946, issue of this publication, printed by the University Press and copywrited by the Board of Regents of the University, is now on the news stands. The nature of the publication is, of course, determined by the persons responsible for its content. The complete list of these persons, nearly all of whom have long been identified with Communist activity, either as actual members of the Party, or ardent sympathizers, is as follows:

Editors:

*John Howard Lawson - writer
Franklin Fearing - UCLA Professor
Kenneth MacGowan - writer
Franklin P. Rolfe - UCLA teacher
Samuel T. Farquahar - editor, Hollywood Quarterly
*Sylvia Jarrico - Assistant Editor, writer

Advisory Committees:

MOTION PICTURE

Ralph Beals - UCLA Professor
Howard Estabrook - writer
Arthur Ball - writer
*Leon Becker - writer
Carl Beier
Leonard Bloom - UCLA Professor
*Bill Blowitz - writer
L. M. K. Boelter - writer
William Brockway - writer
*Sidney Buchman - Director
Mae Churchill - writer
Charles G. Clarke - teacher
*Edward Dmytryk - Director
Farciot Edouart - teacher
Margaret Gledhill - writer
*E. N. Hooker - writer
*Boris Ingster - Russian writer
Dorothy Jones - writer
Harry Kimball - writer
Alexander Knox - actor
Vern O. Knudsen
Milton Krims - writer
Emmett Lavery - writer
Harold Leonard - writer
*Jay Leyda - writer
Ben Maddow - writer
*Josef Mischel - writer
Gordon Mitchell - teacher
[illegible] - writer
Dudley Nichols - director
Florence Odets - photographer
*Irving Pichel - director and writer

*Abraham Polonsky - writer
Vladimir Pozner - writer
David Robinson - writer
*Zachary Schwartz - writer
Fred Sersen
Vincent Sherman - writer and director
Sidney Solow - writer
*Theodore Strauss - writer
Ernest Templin - writer
Greg Toland - writer
*John Weber - writer
Michael Wilson - writer
Virginia Wright - columnist

MUSIC:

Lawrence Morton
Ingolf Dahl - composer of music
Martha Deane - teacher
Adolph Deutsch - composer
Hanns Eisler - (brother of Gerhart Eisler) composer and director of music
Hugo Friedhofer - composer
Gail Kubik - composer
Robert Nelson - writer
David Raksin - writer of music
*Earl Robinson - composer
Walter Rubsamen - writer of music

RADIO:

Harry Hoijer - UCLA Professor
Milton Merlin - writer
Forrest Barnes - writer
True Boardman - writer
*John Bunkel - radio writer

*Lwight Hauser - radio announcer
Nancy Holme - radio writer
John Houseman - writer
Carl Kuhl - writer
Jerome Lawrence - writer
Robert Leonard - director and producer

Ranald MacDougall - writer
Arnold Marquis - writer
William Matthews - writer
*Sam Moore - writer
*Harold Salemson - writer
Ashmead Scott - writer
Paul Stewart - director at Paramount
Orson Welles - actor
John Rhedon - writer, Committee for Better Education

The asterisk placed before certain names appearing on the above list indicates that these individuals have been previously identified as having been affiliated with the Communist Party program either directly or through its front organizations.

It will be noticed that the name of Hanns Eisler appears as a member of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization and as one of the "advisors" on programs. This is the same Hanns Eisler mentioned by [redacted] and [redacted] as the brother of Gerhard Eisler (Hans Berger) and active in the work of the Russian Secret Police in the United States for some ten years.

In addition to above activity, the Hollywood Writers Mobilization has launched a series of ten "forums" which it calls "Counter-Attack." These discussion forums purport to be for the purpose of "exposing the Tenney-Hearst-Rankin attack on cultural and academic freedom." The first of the series was held at the El Patio Theater, Hollywood, on December 2, 1946. The list of speakers for the entire series was announced as:

Millen Brand - writer
Peter DeLima - commentator
Frances Eisenberg - school teacher, San Fernando Valley
Franklin Fearing - UCLA professor
Lion Feuchtwanger - German refugee
Harry Hoijer - UCLA professor
John B. Hughes - commentator
Howard Koch - writer
Emmett Lavery - writer
*John Howard Lawson - writer
Kenneth MacGowan - writer
Arch Oboler - writer
*W.E.Oliver - writer
Harold Orr - Federation of Teachers Local 430
William N. Robson
Dore Schary - Assistant producer

Paul Stewart - director at Paramount
*Dalton Trumbo - writer

The following were the speakers at the December 2, 1946, meeting:

Averill Berman - broadcaster
John B. Hughes - commentator
Mrs. Frances Eisenberg - school teacher in San Fernando Valley
Howard Koch - writer
*Richard Collins - writer
Millen Brand - writer
Peter de Lima - commentator
Mrs. Blanche Bettington - school teacher in San Fernando Valley

Each speaker followed the present line of the Communist Party which purports to be aware of a "native fascist" movement to destroy personal liberties, control education and thought; in general all the speakers pretended to see the setting up of a fascist state in this country in short order; and only they and their kind can prevent such a catastrophe.

Mrs. Eisenberg and Mrs. Bettington were discovered to be indoctrinating their pupils with the Communist Party line, they both being teachers in the Los Angeles public schools.

The subjects for the complete series will be:

You Can't Teach That
The Attack on Hollywood
What's Behind the Rankin-Tenney-Wood Smear Campaign?
Who Owns the Air?
The Story Behind the Blue Book Report of the FCC
The Book Burners
The Hearst-Inspired Campaign to Control the Literary Freedom

HOLLYWOOD COMMUNITY RADIO

The Communists and Communist sympathizers which have been reported [redacted] Bureau as affiliated with the Hollywood Community Radio group indicates that this is another attempt on the part of the Communists to obtain a radio station within an area where they have a considerable following to disseminate their propaganda and doctrines. The Communist connections of this group were called to the attention of the Federal Communications Commission by memorandum dated October 1, 1946, and by memorandum dated December 18, 1946. A second hearing is to be held on March 10, 1947, at Los Angeles, California, by the Federal Communications Commission at which time the Hollywood Community Radio will endeavor to refute the allegations which have been made against it in that it has Communist connections. It should be pointed out that at the first hearing held by the FCC, Jack Tenney of the Un-American Activities Committee for the State of California belabored the Communists and Communist connections of the Hollywood Community Radio for some four hours.

There are two other groups applying for the license for this five kilowatt station. They are the Coast Radio Broadcasting Corporation and the Huntington Park Broadcasting Corporation. Should this license be granted to the Hollywood Community Radio group, confidential informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office has stated that while the name of this group is the Hollywood Community Radio in reality it is the Hollywood Writers Mobilization and that all of the active officers or officers to be are members of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization. He also indicated that if this license was to be given to the Hollywood Community Radio that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization would direct its entire efforts to the radio field.

AMERICAN AUTHORS' AUTHORITY

[redacted] a screen writer who has requested that his name be kept in the strictest confidence, advised Agents of the Los Angeles Office that the purpose of the American Authors Authority would be to set up a Director from each of the four guilds, namely, the Screen Writers Guild, the Dramatists Guild, the Authors League of America, and the Radio Writers Guild. These directors would in turn elect a president who would also be a director and chairman of the board. The American Authors Authority would then establish field representatives, lobbyists and offices to be maintained in Washington, D. C., New York City, Chicago and Los Angeles. The aim of the American Authors Authority would be to copyright in its own name for benefit of its members all literature whether for the stage, screen, book, magazine or radio and lease but never sell the rights to all of this literature under copyright.

The Authority is to be financed by a service charge levied on all corporations doing business with the AAA, and eventually a percentage will be levied against the gross of every magazine, book publisher, reprint publisher, [redacted] radio station and every picture company, which would be pooled into a fund and then either divided among the members or used for a plan for the member's future security. It has been carefully pointed out that the AAA would make no attempt to supercede the four guilds, but to insure its power, a plan is under way whereby members of the AAA would refuse to work on any material except that owned by the AAA.

For some time writers have been seeking to prohibit the outright sale of their material and thus gain revenue from the reissue of a film, or book, or story, and informant [redacted] previously mentioned, has pointed out that many of the writers within the Screen Writers Guild have been honestly and sincerely attracted by the economic aspect of establishing an American Authors Authority. However, this proposal can be seen as an instrument to demand absolute control over every type of printed material. In this connection it is interesting to point out that on May 23, 1946, through a technical surveillance maintained on John Howard Lawson, leader of the Communist movement in the motion picture industry, it was learned that Lawson while discussing the best way to "communize" the United States stated "the best part is by Communizing the writers and producers in Hollywood, and eventually controlling every picture and fiction story produced in Hollywood and perhaps one day controlling every news article in the US that the people read."

There has, of course, been a vigorous opposition to the establishment of an AAA, and the October, 1946, issue of the Screen Writer reflects a portion of the criticism expressed against this plan in the press. The plan has been attacked as an "iron curtain ban on writers," and the charge has frequently been made that the Screen Writers Guild has come under the complete domination of the Communist Party. W. R. Wilkerson, editor of the Hollywood Reporter, has called the AAA a vote for "Joe Stalin."

The criticism of the establishment of an AAA has not been limited to the press, but has extended to a group of prominent writers in New York who on September 12, 1946, formed "The American Writers Association" to combat what they termed an attempt to establish monopoly control over literary production in the U.S. This association of 50 prominent writers, including Louis Bromfield, Katharine Brush, John Erskine, and others, has set up a headquarters in New York and is seeking to enlist the aid of 300 other leading American authors, publicly stating that the Association will fight any attempt to establish "a dictatorship over the nation's writers."

Through a technical surveillance on John Howard Lawson it has been ascertained that the Communists are vigorously promoting the establishment of an AAA, and this source revealed that on September 24, 1946, V. J. Jerome, National Communist figure, came to Los Angeles to consult with Communist screen writers in an effort to promote the AAA. Recently, Laborair Linhart, [redacted]slovakian film czar, has been in Los Angeles, and on September 24, 1946, Linhart met with Communist Harold J. Salemson, Director of Publications for the Screen Writers Guild, to discuss the AAA.

Following the widespread opposition to the establishment of an AAA, James M. Cain announced in the October 4, 1946, issue of Variety that the entire plan was being redrafted by a special sub-committee of the Screen Writers Guild, to allay fears that politics would enter into the operations of the AAA. Later in the month, Cain went to New York to discuss this proposal with the American Authors League, but was unable to confer with the president, Elmer Rice, who has since resigned. Cain publicly accused Rice of ignoring him, and indicated that he was having considerable difficulty getting the Authors League of America to subscribe to his plan. Interviewed in New York, Cain stated that he was retreating from the original proposal for an AAA, and stated that the plan no longer envisioned a monopoly on writing properties, and he stated that authors would be free to join or not join.

Katherine Barnes of MGM studios has stated that in a discussion of this plan with Louie B. Mayer, head of MGM, Mayer advised this source that he would use public domain material for as long as twenty years if necessary, to defeat this proposal. Apparently in the realization that especially film producers would resort to public domain material, Howard Dimsdale and Guy Endore wrote an article in the October, 1946, issue of the Screen Writer, entitled "Want to Buy the Brooklyn Bridge?" Both Dimsdale and Endore are members of the Communist Party, and in this article "demanded" that public domain material be administered for the public level. The authors stated that "either the Government through a Secretary of Fine Arts (long overdue in our cabinet), or the various responsible bodies of organized artists should be put in charge of public domain.

The issue of the AAA is given widespread attention in the Screen Writer, and the editorial in the October, 1946, issue of the Screen Writer was given over to praising the AAA. [redacted]

At a meeting held on August 8, 1946, of the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions Mr. Walter Dunniger of the Screen Writers Guild appeared before the Council members and urged the members to give their support to the American Authors Authority which is being pushed by members of the Communist Party. This information was obtained [redacted] by an agent of the Los Angeles Field Office.

[redacted] confidential informant of the Los Angeles Office, in referring to the Authority has stated that it has not been able to put over its program before the Executive Council of the Authors League of America. [redacted] stated that the action is now pending before the Council and is to be taken up early in 1947.

"YOUR WORLD"

Above is the title for a new magazine sponsored by the American-Russian Institute and to be published in Canada, the first issue was scheduled to come out during the month of January, 1947. The announcement of this new publication was made by Raymond Arthur Davies at a meeting held on November 13, 1946, at the First Unitarian Church in Los Angeles to celebrate the twenty-ninth anniversary of the Russian revolution.

The staff of the magazine was to be composed of the following:

Raymond Arthur Davies, Editor-in-Chief

Norman Corwin, Associate Editor, radio writer

Leo Huberman, Associate Editor, Publicity Department of the CIO, Washington, D. C.

All the above have long records of Communist activities. While this publication was to be issued from Canada, it is evident that Hollywood will direct the material and contents. [redacted]

PEOPLES EDUCATIONAL CENTER

It has been reported that this Communist influenced school for the indoctrination of young persons in the motion picture industry and those aspiring to get into the industry has recently announced its mid-winter courses. It has been reported that its officers and instructors as well as the courses announced are the usual Communist personnel and propaganda efforts. Its courses are said to follow the Communist Party line and the school itself has been reported as being very successful. The Peoples Educational Center has also been referred to as one of the potent factors in propagandizing. Communists and developing individual Communists in the Hollywood picture industry. The director of the school is Sidney Lavison who is reported to be a known Communist of long standing.

ACTORS EQUITY ASSOCIATION

[redacted] The Los Angeles Examiner for November 25, 1946, under the heading "Actors Asking Reds Ouster" under a New York by-line, stated in part that more than 2500 of America's leading actors of stage, screen and radio have signed petitions demanding that the Actors Equity Association clear out the Communists.

The following is a notation from this newspaper article:

"During the past months hundreds of petitions have been circulated on Broadway and in Hollywood by members of the AFL Union, which has been accused of being dominated by followers of the Communist Party line.

"These petitions which demand that all Red Fascists be removed from the council, Equity's governing body, have in many cases been signed by the entire casts of several bit shows on Broadway.

"The present Communist wing of the Equity is visibly concerned with these petitions, it is known, and are retaliating with threats against those who are circulating the anti-Communist statement."

PROGRESSIVE CITIZENS OF AMERICA

(February 14, 1947 to April 22, 1947)

[redacted] The Los Angeles Chapter of the Progressive Citizens of America was formed as a result of the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions going out of existence and being officially replaced by a new organization known as the Progressive Citizens of America on February 11, 1947, according to Confidential Informant [redacted] In a special report submitted by the Los Angeles Office on the Communists in the motion picture industry, the following information was set out as obtained from highly confidential techniques or reliable informants, reflecting the Communists within the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions:

Members of the executive council are William Blowitz, publicist; Sidney Buchman, producer; Abraham Burrows, screen and radio writer; Norval Crutcher, secretary of Film Technicians Local 683; Rex Ingram, Negro actor; John Howard Lawson, screen writer; Jack Moss, producer; William Pomerance, business agent and executive secretary of the Screen Writers Guild; Earl Robinson, composer; Dalton Trumbo, screen writer, and Frank Tuttle, director.

By way of background concerning the formation of the Progressive Citizens of America in Hollywood, Confidential Informant [redacted] reported that on February 11, 1947, the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee did hold a meeting at the Embassy Auditorium in Los Angeles, at which meeting the formal change of name to Progressive Citizens of America took place. This meeting, according to the informant, was authorized by Jo Davidson, one of the co-chairmen of the National Progressive Citizens of America, who was at that time in the Los Angeles area. The call to attend the meeting was issued in the names of the following individuals:

Brig. Gen. Evans F. Carlson, U. S. Marines Commander (retired);
Norman Corwin, writer and radio broadcaster;
John Cromwell, Director and Chairman of HICCASP;
Bartley C. Crum, Attorney at San Francisco, U. S. Government, Palestine Commission member;
Jo Davidson, Sculptor, New York City;
Albert Dekker, actor;
Mrs. William Dieterle, wife of screen director William Dieterle;
Augustus F. Hawkins, member of California State Assembly;
Lena Horne, actress;
Gene Kelly, screen actor;
Robert W. Kenny, Ex-Attorney General, and Honorary President of Mobilization for Democracy, National President of Lawyers' Guild;

[redacted]
Dr. Frank Kingdon, National Co-Chairman of PAC;
Jack Kroll, successor to Sidney Hillman in CIO-PAC;
Thomas Mann, writer;
Frederic March, screen actor;
Carey McWilliams, professional sponsor of front organizations;
Edward Mosk, attorney;
Seniel Ostrow, businessman, furniture;
Dr. Linus Pauling, Professor at Pasadena Polytechnic;
Gregory Peck, screen actor;
Dr. John P. Peters;
Paul Robeson (colored) singer and actor;
Edward G. Robinson, screen actor;
Dr. Harlow Shapley, Harvard University scientist;
A. F. Whitney, Railroad brotherhood; and Bishop R. R. Wright.

Of the foregoing, the following are connected with the motion picture industry in Hollywood:

Norman Corwin, writer and radio broadcaster;
John Cromwell, director of Pictures and Chairman of HICCASP;
Albert Dekker, actor;
Mrs. William Dieterle, wife of screen director William Dieterle;
Lena Horne, actress (colored);
Gene Kelly, screen actor;
Thomas Mann, writer;
Frederick March, screen actor;
Gregory Peck, screen actor;
Paul Robeson, singer and actor (colored);
Edward G. Robinson, screen actor.

[redacted]

The speakers at this meeting held on February 11, 1947, were as follows:

Jo Davidson	National Co-Chairman of the PAC, New York;
Robert W. Kenny	Former Attorney-General of California;
Dr. Linus Pauling	California Institute of Technology, Pasadena;
Bert Witt	Listed as co-director of PAC in the Los Angeles area;
John Cromwell	Screen director;
Edward Mosk	Attorney and sponsor of the Beverly Hills Democratic Committee;
Albert Dekker	Screen actor, formerly State Assemblyman;

[redacted]

Augustus Hawkins	State Assemblyman;
Gene Kelly	Screen actor.

[redacted] According to Informant [redacted] Robert W. Kenny was elected chairman of the new organization, and Senial Ostrow, a Los Angeles businessman, was elected treasurer. This new organization, on February 27, 1947, sent telegrams signed by Robert W. Kenny, chairman, to Senator Sheridan Downey and Senator William F. Knowland urging Senate confirmation of David Lilienthal as Chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission and denouncing the hearings on his fitness as a "most hysterical inquisition." [redacted]

This organization has officially endorsed the following candidates for election to the City Council of Los Angeles at the primary elections to be held on April 1, 1947.

Leland S. Warburton	Incumbent
Lester MacMillan	Assemblyman
Parley P. Christensen	Incumbent
G. Vernon Bennett	Incumbent
Douglas D. Behrend	A Major in the U.S.Army at present. Communists are very active in his behalf .
John R. Roden	Incumbent
George H. Moore	Incumbent

All the above have reportedly followed the political line of the Communist Party, but none is known to be a Communist Party member.

On March 3, 1947, this organization established three additional units in the San Fernando Valley section. A meeting was held at the North Hollywood High School on this date. The principal speaker for the PAC was Fred Rinaldo, a screen writer. Other speakers were:

Russell L. McKnight	Business Agent 683, IATSE
Carleton Moss	Writer (Negro)
Raphael Konigsberg	Known Communist
Walter J. Turner	AFL Pressmen's Union
Dr. H. Calude Hudson	Negro dentist.

A slate of 130 persons, 26 of whom have known Communist Party membership records in the Los Angeles Bureau Office, were placed in nomination by a committee to be elected as the Executive Board unless some of them decline the nomination. [redacted]

During April, 1947, [redacted] again reporting on this organization, indicated that it is the most powerful and effective force working as a front for the Communist Party in the Southern California area. The potency of the o[redacted]tion is mainly due to the clever use of the magic name "Hollywood." The activities of this organization within the last thirty days are the following:

Circulation of protests against the proposed aid to Greece and Turkey in the present international crisis.

Open participation and endorsement of a meeting held in Los Angeles on March 19, 1947, at which time the following persons and organizations were represented:

Robert W. Kenny - Chairman of P.C.A. (local chapter);
Ellis E. Patterson - Ex-Congressman, Co-Chairman of State Legislative Conference (Communist dominated);
Reuben W. Borough - Ex-Los Angeles City employee and professional pamphleteer, Co-Chairman of State Legislative Conference (Communist dominated);
Nemmy Sparks - Chairman of the Communist Party;
William R. Bidner - Director of Mobilization for Democracy and Chairman of the meeting;
Walter J. Turner - AFL Printing Pressmen's Union and recently candidate for Los Angeles Board of Education, endorsed by the Communist Party and followers;
Stanley Moffatt - follower of the Communist Party line for years and local Justice of the Peace;
Clarence Carlson - Legislative director of the Railroad Brotherhoods;
Dr. H. Claude Hudson - Dentist, Negro candidate for the Los Angeles Board of Education endorsed by the Communist Party.

Organizations officially represented in addition to the P.C.A. were:

National Lawyers Guild	Ten delegates from the Communist Party
Fifty local AFL Unions	Eighty-two local Jewish organizations
Forty local CIO unions	Railroad Brotherhoods.
Twenty various youth groups

The results of this meeting were:

Protest against President Truman's policy of sending aid to Greece and Turkey;
Protest against outlawing the Communist Party;[redacted]

Confirmation of a message sent by the Communist Party of Los Angeles County to Eugene Dennis, National Secretary of the Communist Party, protesting the "persecution" of Communists;

Condensed report of this meeting was published in the Daily People's World of March 20, 1947;

Endorsement and sending of delegates Earl Robinson and Dalton Trumbo to take part in a "cavalcade" of protest by Association of Veteran Home Buyers, a temporary paper organization formed under Communist direction. This "march" on Sacramento took place on Sunday, March 23, 1947. Other Hollywood personalities taking part in this venture were the following:

Ben Rinaldo - writer	Herbert Biberman - writer
Carlton Moss - writer	Robert Rossen - writer
John Garfield - actor	Larry Adler - actor
Gale Sondergaard - actor	Paul Draper - dancer

In the local City primary elections, the P.C.A. endorsed all candidates supported by the combined Communist front groups. It did not, however, endorse the openly known Communist candidates such as LaRue McCormick and Elise Monjar, for obvious reasons, caution being uppermost.

On March 17, 1947, the P.C.A. held a meeting at which Dr. Harlow Shapley, Professor at Harvard University, was the principal speaker. This meeting followed the Communist Party line on foreign and local affairs. In addition to Dr. Shapley, Robert W. Kenny and Peter de Lima appeared.

P.C.A. is preparing a propaganda campaign to publish Henry Wallace's speeches and other radio programs along the same lines and are now raising the sum of $15,000 by open appeal for the purpose. Telegrams sent out signed by Bert Witt for the P.C.A. Board of Directors so state.

The national organization of P.C.A. is now publishing a monthly organ called "The Progressive Citizen." This paper is being circulated by the Hollywood Chapter. Hollywood is represented on the staff of the publication by the following:

Herman Shumlin
Norman Corwin - radio commentator
John Cromwell - writer
Lillian Hellman - writer
Gene Kelly - actor
Frederick March - actor
Robert W. Kenny - Ex-State Attorney Ge
Paul Robeson - Negro, singer and actor.

[redacted]

On March 14, 1947, the P.C.A. sent out a circular to all members asking them to write or wire their Senators demanding they oppose President Truman's plan for aid to Greece and Turkey. The plea is signed by Robert W. [redacted], chairman. On March 31, 1947, the P.C.A. took a full-page display advertisement in the Daily Variety, Hollywood Trade Publication, asking for $15,000 to keep Henry Wallace on the air and asking at the same time everyone demand that President Truman cease his war mongering.

From the foregoing list of activities it can be seen that the Hollywood P.C.A. is the spearhead of Communist pressure tactics in the Southern California area.

HOLLYWOOD WRITERS MOBILIZATION

Confidential Informant [redacted] advised that the activities of this organization at the present time are mainly in three directions:

1. Sponsoring and supporting other Communist front organizations such as the HICCASP, Mobilization for Democracy, Conference of Studio Unions, Civil Rights Congress, etc. Organizationally and by the individual acts of its members, it lends what might be called moral support to such groups.

2. Support and pressure efforts for the granting of a radio license for the establishment of a radio station at Gardena, California. This application for such license is made in the name of the "Hollywood Community Radio," a group of Communists and sympathizers connected with the Hollywood film industry for the most part. Hearings on this application have been heard within the last sixty days. The application is still under consideration by the Federal Communications Commission. The Communist character of this application and the records of those interested in the venture was thoroughly exposed by Senator Jack B. Tenney, Chairman of the California Legislative Committee on Un-American Activities, at the hearings.

3. The principal activity of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization is, at this time, the holding of a series of "forums" which it publicizes as "Counter Attack." These so-called forums -- in reality, sounding boards for the Communist Party line -- are held at the El Patio Theater in Hollywood, the latest on January 13, 1947. The list of the speakers for the various meetings are given as:

John Howard Lawson	Dore Schary	Millen Brand
Dalton Trumbo	Franklin Fearing	Peter De Lima

[redacted]

Frances Eisenberg	Howard Koch	W. E. Oliver
Leon Feuchtwanger	Emmett Lavery	Harold Orr
Harry Hoijer	Kenneth MacGowan	William N. Robinson (Robson)
John B. Hughes	Arch Oboler	Paul Stewart

The above individuals have reportedly been affiliated with the Communist movement either directly or through its front organizations.

The last meeting or "forum" was held on January 13, 1947. The subject for discussion was titled "The Attacks on Hollywood." It was described as an "expose of the Rankin-Wood-Tenney smear campaign against the forward-looking picture-makers in Hollywood." The speakers at this meeting were: John Howard Lawson, Ex-Attorney General Robert W. Kenny, and Irving Pichel.

John Howard Lawson's remarks were to the effect that all investigating committees were a curse; that when the Tenney Committee branded the Hollywood Writers Mobilization a "clearing house for Communist propaganda" it was a downright lie. He proposed that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization set up a committee to investigate the investigators, and that all witnesses before any such investigating committee as Tenney, Rankin, or Wood should also be summoned before the Hollywood Writers Mobilization so that they could be thoroughly exposed.

Robert W. Kenny agreed with Lawson, stating that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization should insist upon the right to investigate the investigators. He then went to the legal side of the rights and privileges of "investigating Committees" practically knocking the whole structure over as unconstitutional and un-democratic, etc.

Irving Pichel likewise made an attack on investigating committees, stating that they were for the purpose of preventing Hollywood from making forward-looking pictures that teach and instruct; that these committees were seeking to influence the industry in their direction in order to control the thinking of the American people. He stated that the way for the Hollywood Writers Mobilization and its objectives to succeed would be to influence people to stay away from the theaters in millions and let the producers know why. Mr. Pichel is a director at Twentieth Century-Fox Studios.

The California Eagle for November 7, 1946, under the heading "Hollywood Writers Hit Injunction Against Chases" stated that an encouraging increase in the number of protests against the spread of restrictive covenants in Los Angeles was noted by the Civil Rights Congress as it released to the press a statement signed by the entire Executive Board of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization condemning the use of the injunction against Lillian Chase, well known sports and theatrical figures. The article stated, "In behalf of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization we, the undersigned officers, protest the restrictive covenant injunction which is preventing Jack and Lillian Chase from living in the house they bought and own at 3527 West Adams Street, Los Angeles." The signers of the statement were the following:

Howard Koch, writer - chairman;
Professor Franklin Fearing, U.C.L.A. Professor - 1st vice president;
Sam Moore, writer - 2d vice president;
Abraham Polansky, writer - secretary;
Chuck Jones - treasurer;
Irene M. Bargeman - acting executive secretary.

The California Eagle for November 28, 1946, under the heading "Counter-Offensive against local National Witch Hunters" stated in part that a full fledged offensive against the witch hunting and book burning assault on the basic freedom of the American people has been organized in Hollywood under the direction of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

It stated that many of the nations most distinguished writers, editors, educators, critics and film and radio producers are spear-heading this move against the Rankin, Bilbo, Tenney, Gerald L. K Smith "Fear-Smear technic of thought control."

It further stated that under the general heading "Counter-Attack," the first of a series of forums dedicated to protecting freedom of expression will be held at the El Patio Theater. This forum will identify and analyze the acts of the conspirators against the free exercise of the American Bill of Rights in the film, radio, education and publication fields. Subjects for subsequent forums were listed as follows:

You Can't Teach That;
The Attack on Hollywood;
What is Behind the Rankin-Wood-Tenney Smear Campaign;
Who Owns the Air;
The Story Behind the Blue Book Report of the Federal Communications Commission;
The Book Burners;
The Hurst-Inspired Campaign to Control the Freedom of Literary Expression;
You Can't Hear That;
Thought Control Via the Air Waves;
America's Iron Curtain;
The Restrictions on the Freedom of International Communications;
You Can't Print That: The Suppression of the News;
The Writer Under Attack: The Drive to Control the Written Word.

This article stated that the speakers against the "dangerous thoughts" credo being forced on the American people would be the following persons:

[redacted] Brand, Millen, novelist;
De Lima, Peter, radio commentator;
Eisenberg, Frances R., Teacher at Comosa Park High School;
Fearing, Professor Franklin, professor of psychology, UCLA;
Feuchtwenger, Lion, novelist;
Hoijer, Harry, professor of anthropology, UCLA;
Hughes, John B., radio commentator;
Koch, Howard, screen writer and chairman of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization;
Lavery, Emmett, screen writer and president, S.W.G.;
Lawson, John Howard, screen writer;
MacGowan, Kenneth William, producer and educator;
Obler, Arch, radio writer and film director;
Oliser, W. E., film critic;
Orr, Harold, president, Local 430, American Federation of Teachers;
Robson, William N., radio writer and producer;
Sharey, Dore, writer and motion picture producer;
Stuart, Paul, film and radio director;
Trumbo, Dalton, novelist and screen writer.

The article stated that the Hollywood Creative Talent Club has issued the following statement: "It is a challenge to every American when the Rankin-Wood Committee proposes a radio censorship law gagging news analysis, or questions the right of the theater to present a play dealing honestly with race relations. It is a threat of our heritage of democracy when the freedom of the press is distorted into the freedom to suppress vital news, or when responsible editors are irresponsibly attacked."

The article stated further: "Our right to speak and think as free Americans is at stake. The Hollywood Writers Mobilization has organized this series of forums to expose the plot against our democratic heritage. The Counter-attack forum series will present to the public the result of expert research concerning the effort to subordinate and enslave the minds of the many for the benefit of the few Parts of the forums will be recorded and made available for producing in other areas of the nation."

W R. Wilkerson stated editorially in the Hollywood Reporter for December 4, 1946, that if the turn-out for the Hollywood Writers Mobilization forum in the El Patio Theater was "any indication of the interest in this set up, then the whole thing is a 'bust', as they were less than 200 people in the 700 seat auditorium who listened to a lot of 'clap-trap' that was right down to Party line.

"The discussion was supposed to tie into 'a Counter-Attack'against the plot to control America's thinking." But from that night's forum the idea seems to be an effort to control America's thinking for Sovietism and put the [redacted] of these United States under the finger of Moscow.

The article stated that John B. Hughes, who presided at the meeting confined himself to "Don't believe what you read in the Hurst papers, Col. McCormick's Chicago Tribune, The New York Daily News and the Hollywood Reporter." These publications were termed the "enemies of society." It so happened that these papers are but a few of those in this country that have been attacking the "Commies", which to all evidence, are so dear to the heart of the Writers Mobilization. "The first speaker was Frances Eisenberg, the head of the journalism class and supervisor of the Canova Park High School of this city, who was called before the recent Tenney Committee session here. She ranted and raved about the state of the nation, its down-fall, and while without mentioning it, seemed to give the impression that we should Sovietize this country.

"Richard Collins read Millen Brand's speech because he supposedly is ill. It wasn't so hot but when Howard Koch grabbed the 'mike' things warmed up. Along with Hughes, he warned against the condition of the press, The Reporter, Hurst, McCormick and Patterson attempting to make America Fascist. Koch went into detail about his having been assigned to script Joe Davies' 'Mission to Moscow'; he read and reread the book; then he went into extensive research aside from the book, but declared that the Warners would not let his script, especially as to dialogue, go through in its entirety.

"Peter De Lima talked about the commentators who had been kicked off the airlanes and urged the 200 who were present to attend the Averill Berman hearing before the Rankin-Wood Committee yesterday, 'to get down there and shout.' "

The Hollywood Reporter for December 6, 1946, under the heading "'Counter-Attack' on plot to Control U. S. Thinking Launched," stated that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization unleashed the first of their "Counter-Attacks" against the plot to control American thinking.

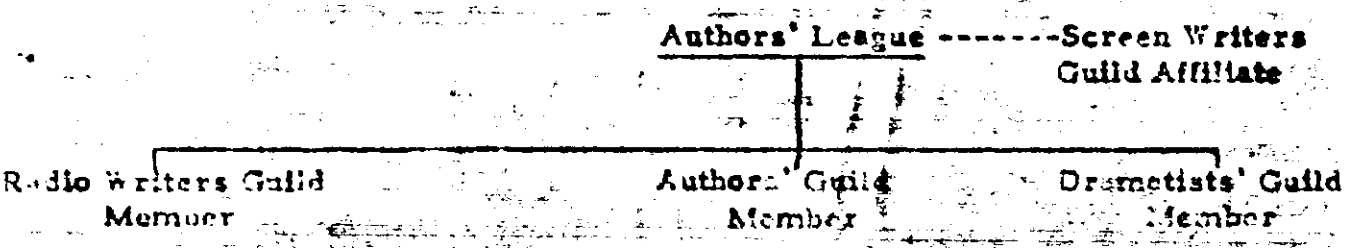
The first "Counter-Attack" forum was entitled "The Conspirators" and was aimed to expose the conspiracy to suppress freedom of expression It was held at the El Patio Theater.

The speakers on the forum included Howard Koch, chairman of the Mobilization; Frances Eisenberg, public school teacher; Peter De Lima, a news commentator; John B. Hughes, broadcaster, and Richard Collins. Koch named the press and radio lords as Hurst, McCormick and Patterson.

AMERICAN AUTHORS AUTHORITY

[redacted] Special Agents of the Los Angeles Field Division were able to obtain the personal papers of Lionel Berman of the Cultural Section of the Communist Party in New York City while he was visiting on the West Coast. Among these papers there was obtained a copy of a document setting forth the Communist cultural policy, which read in part as follows: "That the development of culture is possible only within the most complete freedom, that the mission of intellects is to be heralds and calling for a struggle to establish the writers' control over scripts, for the creation of means of working without falling under the axe of the trusts who control production."

The Joint Fact-Finding Committee of the Un-American Activities in California, Volume 28, pages 750 and 751, reflect that the Communists' objective to exercise control and influence was quite well expressed by John Howard Lawson, screen writer and leader of the Communist movement in the motion picture industry, when he stated that "The best bet is to communize the writers and the producers in Hollywood and eventually control every picture and story produced in Hollywood and perhaps one day (control) every new article in the United States." Admittedly the A.A.A. seeks strong control over all scripts, whether for radio, the theater, the motion pictures or magazines, and it is obviously an excellent apparatus through which the Communists could obtain their objective; however, both Communists and non-Communists who support the A.A.A. deny that it would ever be used for such a purpose and point out that it was originated by James A. Cain, prominent writer, who has never been identified in Communist front activities. It is true that Cain has been widely accredited with originating the A.A.A., but Emmet Lavery testified before the State Committee on Un-American Activities that Cain was erroneously accredited with originating the A.A.A. In response to a direct question as to who started the A.A.A., Lavery testified, "Answer. Oh, that was on the agenda of the Screen Writers Board for a long time. I think, without taking any credit away from Jim Cain, I really kicked the ball off in an article in the Screen Writers called 'Time For Decision,' which was an explanation of the licensing board. But we had a subcommittee which had been considering this project for some time."



The committee to which Lavery referred was apparently the Original Material Committee of the Screen Writers Guild, for in the August, 1946, issue of the Screen Writers, there appears a note on page 37 which states that Ring Lardner, Jr., who has been identified through the records of Elizabeth Benson, membership director of the Northwest Section, Los Angeles County Communist Party, as a member of the Communist Party, addressed a meeting of the Screen Writers on July 29 and told of the inception of the A.A.A. plan through the Screen Writers Guild Original Material Committee.

[redacted]

It has been ascertained that the members of this committee, which met for the first time in January, 1945, are as follows:

Rian Lavery, Jr., Chairman, Communist
Howard Estabrook, identified in Communist front activities
James N. Cain
F. H. Herbert, identified in Communist front activities
Boris Ingster, identified in Communist front activities and the League of American Writers
Arthur Schwartz, identified in Communist front activities
Everett Freeman
Albert Mannheimer

The article to which Lavery referred in his testimony was one that he wrote for the May, 1946, issue of the Screen Writer and it pointed out that the Executive Council of the Authors' League of America had recently endorsed in principle the concept of licensing written material and he called upon the Authors' League to assist the Screen Writers Guild in securing such rights for screen writers. Lavery pointed out that the Screen Writers' Guild was in itself nearly powerless to enforce any licensing ideas, inasmuch as the Guild negotiates with the producers only for conditions of employment and the agreements under which the Guild operates do not apply to material sold to the studios for the screen. The relationship of the Screen Writers' Guild to the Authors' League and to the other guilds can best be reported by the following diagram:

Following Lavery's article there appeared an article in the July, 1946, issue of the Screen Writers written by James N. Cain which set forth the proposal known as the A.A.A. In brief, Cain proposed to set up an authority which would control and coordinate the work of four writer guilds - those of the authors (magazine and feature story writers, etc.), the screen writers, the radio writers, and the dramatists. This Authority would copyright in its own name all material produced by writers and would act in an advisory and legal capacity to lease out the various rights, i.e., radio reprint rights, etc., for each writer who submitted material through the Authority. When Cain first proposed the plan he pointed out that writers all over the U. S. would be forced to join one of the four guilds; however, it is understood that this provision has been withdrawn, due to tremendous opposition which came from writers who are not identified with any union. The Authority would finance itself by a service charge of one per cent of the total take on all transactions and later on another per cent would be levied against purchasers of written material, all of which would be placed into a pool for the benefit of member writers. The outright sale of material would be banned. Obviously this plan proposes great economic benefit for writers but there is also the objection that the material, since it is to be leased and not sold, cannot be changed by a producer or an editor.

Mary McCall, a prominent screen writer, commented upon this provision of the Authority in the August issue of the Screen Writers and stated that if there were an A.A.A. the writer could then say "no to an ad libbing actor and 'behave yourself' to a pencil happy producer."

Under the present set-up in the motion picture industry producers and directors are able to delete any offensive material from scripts but if the A.A.A. were established the complete control over the script would remain with the writer.

Immediately following the proposal of the A.A.A., there was widespread criticism in the press and among a number of prominent writers who labeled the A.A.A. as an apparatus for "thought control." A group of prominent writers such as John Erskine, Eugene Lyons, Dorothy Thompson, etc. formed an organization known as the American Writers Association to compete with the A.A.A.

The Saturday Review of Literature, which is considered one of the most authoritative magazines for writers, describes the A.A.A. as a "blue sky proposal" and states, "This glamorous proposal is written with all the enthusiasm and the confidence of a wild-cat oil prospectus. It is obvious that any all-embracin authority of this nature, owning the copyrights to the works of a majority of American writers, advising them and perhaps controlling their contacts, could, without much difficulty, strangle free speech and free literary enterprise."

Those who objected so vigorously to the A.A.A. did so because they felt that there might very well be discrimination against the writer or the material that he wrote, and it is interesting to note that there has been a "no discrimination" amendment passed by the Screen Writers Guild which reads, "...that there be no discrimination in the rights or treatment accorded by A.A.A. to any piece of written material by reason of its content." It is interesting to point out that this amendment was first proposed by Edwin Bloom, who has been identified in Communist front activities, and it was seconded by John Rexley, who, according to the records of Elizabeth Benson, membership director of the Northwest Section, Los Angeles County Communist Party, is a member of the Communist Party.

At a membership meeting of the Screen Writers Guild, the proposal for the establishment of the A.A.A. was introduced in principle, and the Screen Writers Guild sent its executive secretary, William Pomerance, who, according to Elizabeth Bentley's records, has been identified as a member of the Communist Party, to New York to confer with representatives of the Authors' League of America.

Meanwhile the Screen Writers Guild has set up a so-called overall committee to promote the A.A.A., the membership of which is as follows:

Emmet Lavery - Chairman
Ring Lardner, Jr. - Vice Chairman, Communist

Organization:

James Cain
Ring Lardner, Jr. - Communist
Morris Cohen - identified in Communist front activities
Mary McCall - identified in Communist front activities
Arthur Schwartz - identified in Communist front activities
Arch Oboler
William Pomerance - executive secretary of Screen Writers Guild Communist Audrey Finn - Communist

Relations with Other Guilds:

Samuel Moore - president of Radio Writers Guild, Communist True Boardman - Radio Writers Guild, identified in Communist front activities
Albert Maltz - Screen Writer (Communist)
Philip Dunne
Frances Goodrich
Edwin Belvin
Arthur Arthur

Public Relations:

Everett Freeman
Alva Bessie - Communist
F. Hugh Herbert - identified in Communist front activities
Allen Rivkin - identified in Communist front activities
Adel St. John Rogers.

Since the A.A.A. was first proposed, it has been vigorously promoted by the official publication of the Screen Writers Guild, which is entitled the "Screen Writer." The editorial committee of the Screen Writer is presently composed of the following individuals:

Dalton Trumbo, editor (Communist)
Gordon Kahn, managing editor (Communist)
Stephen Morehouse Avery
Harris Gable
F. Hugh Herbert, identified in Communist front activities
Ring Lardner, Jr. (Communist)
Isabel Lennart, (Communist)
Sonya Levien
Theodore Strauss (Communist)
Paul Trivers (Communist)
Harold Salesmon, director of publication (Communist)

In the December 24, 1946, issue of both the Hollywood Reporter and Variety, there appeared an article stating that the Authors' League of America, while introducing in principle the concept of licensing written material, turned down Cain's proposal for an American Authors Authority. Variety reported the committee of the Authors' League of America as stating that "we recognize many objectionable features in the Authority plan for compulsory membership, assignment of copyrights, and other provisions of complete legality." The report went on to state that they wanted some guarantee which would preclude the possibility of any editorial control over written material or of a dictatorship of a few men over all American writing. The article concluded by pointing out that presidents of the Screen Writers Guild, the Radio Writers Guild, the Dramatists, and the Authors Guild would meet sometime in the next few weeks to determine the steps which must be taken to build upon acceptable plan for leasing rather than outright sale of written material.

Confidential Informant [redacted] who is unusually well acquainted with the Communist infiltration into the motion picture industry, summed up his opinion by stating, "An understanding of the Communist Party line and the tactics used in influencing the entire literary field in the United States and the further fact that the proposal comes from definite Communist sources in Hollywood should show conclusively that the American Authors Authority is meant to be another Communist instrument in the United States."

The individuals listed above in this section as Communists have been identified as such either through reliable informants by the Los Angeles Office

"THE NEGRO'S STATUS IN SCREEN"

The "Daily Worker" for March 30, 1947, in an article entitled "Facts About Discrimination Against Negroes in the Arts" under the section captioned "The Negro's Status in Screen", reflects the following information:

"L. J. Reddick, curator of the Schomburg collection of the New York Public Library, checked over 100 films with Negro themes of Negro characters of 'more than passing significance.' Of that 100, he found 75 must be classified as anti-Negro, 13 as neutral, with the Negro presented both

"favorably and unfavorably in about equal proportions, and only 12 which could be classified as pro-Negro.

[redacted] "The stereotype is hardly mitigated by the few - the very few - pictures in which Negroes were decently presented. In 'Arrowsmith', years ago, there was a Negro doctor with dignity and devotion to duty. In 'They Won't Forget', there was a Negro janitor facing a third degree in a lynch-mad town. Negro participants in the war against fascism were shown with dignity and courage in 'Sahara' and 'Bataan' and 'Lifeboat.'

"Hollywood's stereotypes do have an effect. 'Birth of a Nation' was followed by a resurgence of the Ku Klux Klan. The modern and subtler 'Birth of a Nation' we know as 'Gone With the Wind' contributed to obstructing the growing sentiment for a federal anti-lynching bill.

"There are no Negro technicians in Hollywood, no Negro cameramen, no Negro carpenters, no writers or film cutters or laboratory technicians.

"As for the Negro actor, he's 'lucky' even to get a job caricaturing himself. Gunga Din was played by a white actor.

"One out of every ten Americans is a Negro and Negroes do not appear in crowd scenes, on the streets, in night clubs and theatres.

"There are theatres the Negro does not enter - not because he cannot, or dare not, but because of the very atmosphere of the place, the attitudes of the staff and of the white patrons. In the South, when Negroes are even permitted to pay their way into a motion picture theater, and it is never one of the best, they are relegated to distinctly inferior Jimcrow sections.

"In film theatres Negroes rarely are hired for anything except menial jobs - porters, janitors, washroom attendants. Ticket sellers, ushers, doormen, managers, projectionists - white."

THE MOTION PICTURE ALLIANCE FOR THE PRESERVATION OF AMERICAN IDEALS

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office has informed that this anti-Communist organization which has been quiet for some year or so has now come to life with a program to oppose Communist activities in the Hollywood motion picture industry. It has arranged for a series of lectures by certain nationally known "social democrats." The first of the series took place on the evening of February 11, 1947, at the Knell Club in Los Angeles when Eugene Lyons, author of the Red Decade spoke.

later on the following will be speakers:

Sidney Hook, Professor at Columbia University, New York; [redacted] William Henry Chamberlain, writer and columnist; and Reuben H. Markham, foreign correspondent and authority on the Balkan States.

The "Daily Variety," trade paper of the motion picture business, for April 10, 1947, under the heading "20th To Do Anti-Red Picture", stated in part that "The Iron Curtain," an anti-Communist film inspired by J. Edgar Hoover's speech before the House Committee on Un-American Activities, March 26, 1947, will go into production at 20th Century Fox this Summer. This announcement was made by Darryl Zanuck April 9, 1947, and he also stated that the project is already under way as Jerom Joy, studio contact man, and Anthony Muto, chief of Washington Movietone News Bureau, are now doing preliminary work on the subject in the Nation's Capital. They will be joined by Martin Beckeley, who will write the screen play.

It is stated that the picture will be based on findings of Royal Canadian Commission report of June 27, 1946, detailing facts relating to communications by public officials and others of confidential information to agents of a foreign power, with particular reference to the atom bomb. Zanuck stated, "Russia will definitely be portrayed as that foreign power." Zanuck further stated, "The studio will seek cooperation of the Canadian Government and Mr. Hoover." He also stated that he had not discussed the matter with either the State Department or Motion Picture Producers Association. Zanuck stated he thought it doubtful if State Department approval would be required. He stated: "The film will have no romantic angle."

II. PROGRESSIVE CITIZENS OF AMERICA
(April 22, 1947 - May 24, 1947)

The Los Angeles Office, by report dated May 12, 1947, advised that the Progressive Citizens of America in Hollywood were sponsoring a mass meeting in honor of Henry A. Wallace at the Gilmore Stadium on the evening of May 19, 1947. This meeting was originally scheduled to be held at the Hollywood Bowl. The Directors of the Bowl cancelled the meeting on the grounds that it would be a controversial one. The Gilmore Stadium was then obtained.

Notices were sent out by the Progressive Citizens of America under the signature of Bonnie Claire, coordinator for the Wallace Meeting. Miss Claire has a considerable record of Communist affiliations. In addition to the mailing out from its headquarters of innumerable pieces of literature supporting the stand of Mr. Wallace, the P.C.A. is also backing Mr. Wallace in his attack on the foreign policy of the United States, particularly in the matter of aid to Greece and Turkey.

On April 18, 1947, the P.C.A. sponsored a meeting at which Elliott Roosevelt was the main speaker. On this occasion, he took the same political stand as the Progressive Citizens of America on all matters and most vehemently defended Henry A. Wallace and his political utterances all of which coincided with the position of the Communist Party in the United States.

In addition, Rollin McNitt, Chairman of the Los Angeles Democratic Central Committee; Robert W. Kenny, Chairman of the P.C.A. and formerly State Attorney General; and Bert Witt, Executive Secretary of the P.C.A., addressed this meeting.

The Hollywood Chapter of the Progressive Citizens of America was one of the sponsors of a CIO mass meeting held on the steps of the Los Angeles City Hall on the morning of April 26, 1947, to protest certain labor legislation. The list of organizations sponsoring this meeting were:

American Youth for Democracy
American Veterans Committee
International Workers Order
National Negro Congress
United Negro and Allied Veterans of America
National Association for Advancement of Colored People
Veterans of Foreign Wars (several posts)

Speakers at this meeting which was attended by approximately 6,000 people, were the following:

Phillip M. Connelly, Secretary Treasurer, L.A.I.U.C.
Morris Zussman, President of the State CIO

[redacted] Irvin de Shetler, Regional Director of the CIO
Albert Lunceford, Chairman, President, L.A.I.U.C.
George B. Roberts, Director of the N.C.P.A.C.
Herbert K. Sorrell, Communist leader of C.S.U.
Carl B. Read, Labor leader
Robert W. Kenny, Attorney and formerly State Attorney General
Dr. H. Claude Hudson, Negro Dentist, F.E.P.C.
Father George H. Dunne, Loyola University teacher
Dan Marshall, Catholic Interracial Group
Michael Fanning, Postmaster of Los Angeles (sat on platform)
Helen Gehagan Douglas, Congresswoman, sent a telegram of sympathy with the objectives of the mass meeting.

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office reported that the Hollywood Progressive Citizens of America joined with the Mobilization for Democracy and the Civil Rights Congress in protesting against the refusal of the City authorities of Peoria, Illinois, and Albany, New York, to permit Paul Robeson to speak in the Public Schools. This protest was sent on April 29, 1947.

The Hollywood Progressive Citizens of America sponsored a "Youth Pilgrimage" to the City of Sacramento to protest the activities of the Joint Legislative Committee on Un-American Activities in the State of California (Tenney Committee) in its investigation of Communists. Other organizations sponsoring and taking part in this demonstration were the following:

American Youth for Democracy
Junior Hadassah (Jewish Youth Group)
Hillell Young Progressives of America (Jewish organization)
American Veterans Committee
Los Angeles Youth Council
Fellowship Church
CIO UOPWA
CIO Marine Cooks and Stewards

On May 9, 1947, the Hollywood Progressive Citizens of America issued an ultimatum printed in the Daily Variety, Hollywood trade publication, protesting the investigation by the House Committee on Un-American Activities and defending the rights of the Communist Party in the United States. In addition, they protested any censure of the following persons, which censorship they termed as a "gag" on free speech:

Henry A. Wallace
Paul Robeson
William L. Shirer
Norman Corwin
Dr. Harlow Shapley

This ultimatum was signed by the following people:

Robert W. Kenny, Chairman
Mrs. William Dieterle, Secretary
Robert S. Morris, Jr., Treasurer
John Cromwell, Writer, Vice Chairman
Edward Mosk, Attorney, Vice Chairman
Howard Koch, Writer, Vice Chairman
Dr. Linus Pauling, Professor at Cal-Tech (worked on Atomic Bomb) Vice Chairman
Lena Horne, Negress singer and actress, Vice Chairman
Daniel Ostrow, Manufacturer (Seeley Mattress Co.), Vice Chairman
Gene Kelly, Actor, Vice Chairman.

MOTION PICTURE ALLIANCE

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office related that this anti-Communist organization held a meeting on April 29, 1947, at which time Dr. John R. Lechner, the recently selected Executive Director of the organization, mentioned a list of pictures in which there was Communist propaganda. Dr. Lechner also suggested a boycott on pictures of this type in which Communists were employed. This statement, according to this source, raised a storm of protest and the producers, speaking through Samuel Goldwyn, took violent issue through the press with the Motion Picture Alliance and the Chairman of its Executive Board, Ralph Clare, stating that this organization was irresponsible as were Mr. Lechner and Mr. Clare. This tirade was published in the Hollywood Reporter on May 7. It is entirely possible, in view of the fact that most of the members of this organization are highly paid writers, directors, etc. who work for the producers, that this dispute may develop into the death knell of the Motion Picture Alliance. The ten motion pictures which Lechner asserted contained propaganda are the following:

The Best Years of Our Lives
Boomerang
Margie
The Strange Love of Martha Ivers
A Medal for Benny
The Searching Wind
Watch on the Rhine
Pride of the Marines
North Star
Mission to Moscow

Lechner further stated that the Screen Writers' Guild contained a large number of Communists and fellow travellers. He named John Howard Lawson as having Come to Los Angeles to show how to inject Red propaganda into motion pictures. Lechner introduced William H. Chamberlin, foreign correspondent who has resided for twelve years in the Soviet Union. Chamberlin told at the meeting that he advocated a policy of close cooperation between the United States and the States not yet under Soviet influence or control.

Communist Political Association

[redacted] During the period December 11-15, 1944, John Williamson, national secretary of the Communist Political Association, visited Los Angeles, California and there conferred with officials, functionaries, and members of the Communist Political Association in the Los Angeles area. During his stay in Los Angeles he spoke before and gave instructions to a number of committees of the Communist Political Association in the Los Angeles area. From information available it was clear he dictated the Communist line as it then existed. On December 14, 1944, he addressed a regular weekly meeting of the Los Angeles County Communist Political Association Organizational - Education Committee. Among other things he referred to the "set-up" of the Hollywood motion picture Communists, saying that they are very important and should be emphasized. Williamson also stated that certain people in Hollywood should not be attached to any community club, even in a paper community club. He said that the experiment of the Communist leadership has shown that these people cannot be fused into these clubs but that they should be given guidance in their special activity in which they can be effective.

Williamson cited as an example the Cultural Section in New York City with which writers, radio artists, and similarly allied cultural people were affiliated. He stated he knew these people would never have come into community clubs; however, in connection with their membership record, he said that all Communists should be attached to a club from a technical standpoint in order that there would be no double bookkeeping.

Williamson then went on to say that his remarks concerning New York City also applied to professional people in Hollywood.

COMMUNIST PARTY MEMBERS IN HOLLYWOOD

A review of the Communist Party charts as submitted by the Los Angeles Field Division for September 1, 1946, reflects that the Hollywood Section is under the leadership of the following individuals:

John Stapp, Section Organizer
Charles Glenn, Organizational Secretary
Naomi Robinson, Recording Financial Secretary
David Robinson, Finance Director
Adolph Heller, Educational Director
Jack Flier, Literature Director
Waldo Salt, Press Director.

In line with the present program of the Communist Party the former large clubs in the Hollywood area have been broken down into twenty-three small-community and industrial clubs. These clubs are set out as follows:

Harry Potenkin Club
Charles Flam Club
David Quest Club
Norman Bethune Club
John Brown Club
Hollywood S.S. Club
Elizabeth G. Flynn Club
Ira Eldridge Club
Ralph Fox Club
Holly-Smolan Club
Art Young Club
Jack London Club
Lincoln Club
Sam Adams Club
Bob Meltzer Club
Joe Hecht Club
Carver Special Club
Merry Club
Rose Pastor Stokes Club
John Reed Club
Dick Fiske Club
Hollywood "S" Club
Special Professional Club

It was noted in the Los Angeles Times for October 1, 1946, under the heading, "Hollywood Had Two Reds Charged," which stated in part that a Matthew

Woll, Vice-President of the International Photo Engineers Union, as well as of the AFL, it was charged that many Hollywood stars and script writers were supporting Communist front organizations. He warned that unless they cease, the public may picket film houses on a nationwide basis. The article stated that the threat was made in a signed editorial in the "American Photo Engraver," a Trade Unions publication. It stated, "A few years ago, the League of Decency was formed as part of a nationwide protest against immoral movies" but he said, "Motion picture houses in a score of cities were picketed, box office receipts dropped and the Hays Office stepped in to clean up a disagreeable situation."

Woll wrote that unless the film industry takes immediate steps, a similar public reaction may this time be directed "against many high-salaried stars and script writers who are part of the Communist Fifth Column in America."

Woll further charged that Hollywood today is "the third largest Communist center in the United States." He also said that "playing at revolution seems to justify the possession of a swimming pool and improves the taste of astrakhan, caviar and the feel of Russian sables."

Woll urged that Eric Johnson, Chairman of the Motion Picture Producers Association, take steps "to root out all Fifth Columnists and fellow travellers from the capital of America."

(November 14, 1946, through February 14, 1947)

[redacted]

According to [redacted] confidential informant of the Los Angeles Field Division, the last 90 days has indicated a noticeable change taking place in the tactical lines and methods of all operations of the Communist Party and Communists in the United States. He indicated that apparently because of the wave of exposures of individual Communists, Party line followers in governmental and other circles, the broad campaign of attack on Communism, the work of Communists in the press, other means of public information, and anticipating and recognizing the results the Communist Party is changing its method of operations and tactics to meet these conditions. Some of the former out-spoken leaders of the Communists and Communist sympathizers, according to [redacted] have been drawn back to less important positions and have less to say openly in Communist affairs while those who have not been so active or so well known are being forced to the front to carry on the programs, not as Communists but camouflaged as "liberals" and "progressives."

[redacted] indicated these Communists and trusted sympathizers are even "boring within" the Anti-Communist movement with the object in view of taking over that movement and directing it to the less harmful channels. The result is that Communists are attacking themselves but not sufficiently vigorous enough to be basically harmful to themselves or their movements. He has advised that these tactics which permit Communists to attack themselves to a limited extent, are laid down in the Leninist School of "Strategy and Tactics."

[redacted] states that as this new line is adopted the Communists in the Hollywood Motion Picture Industry are entrenching more and more into the Industry in high positions. Instant Communists and sympathizers are being elevated to positions where they can wield influence on content of pictures and employment of individuals. These parties are put into these positions with the knowledge of their previous activities and they are put into these positions by the top producers themselves.

[redacted] also related that it is becoming more and more apparent that the Communists are using permanent sympathizers in the motion picture industry to further the policies of the Communist Party. He stated that by using persons of high standing and influence it hoped to cover up their real Communist connections [redacted] indicated that the following top producers have over a period of years not only employed Communists, some of which were notoriously known Communists, but have protected them whenever their names or reputations have been exposed to public notice:

Walter Wanger
David Selznick
Samuel Goldwyn
Charles Chaplain
Warner Brothers

[redacted] indicated that the foregoing producers, of course, exercise a tremendous influence on the trend of the motion picture industry. In addition, [redacted] stated that there are several outside organizations financed by large contributions from the Hollywood motion picture industry which cooperates in this support and protection. Those organizations are:

Southland Jewish Organization
B'Nai B'rith
International Workers Order
Jewish Labor Council
Mobilization for Democracy
Los Angeles County Democratic Central Committee
Beverly-Westwood Democratic Committee

He stated that there are also other small groups of the same nature which are controlled by the same type of individuals. This combination of the inside of the motion picture industry with these outside influences, both of like character, according to [redacted] is most successful in protecting the work of the Communists in the film industry and the use of that industry's prestige and influence for their purposes.

He related that the evils of this situation are becoming so apparent that comment thereon is becoming noticeable even within the industry itself by those who are opposed thereto. Evidence of this is a recent editorial, December 3, 1946, appearing in the "Hollywood Reporter," a daily publication and trade paper. Excerpts from this editorial are as follows:

> "We don't think that any one of you would accuse any of our studio heads or their direct executive assistants of being 'Commies.' Still, on the other hand, they are not only employing but actually pampering 'Commies' in their studios, particularly those writers who are out-and-out members, party-liners or fellow travellers. They are entrusting to those writers the creation of their scripts, KNOWING that those babies will do ANYTHING at ANY TIME to put over a point in their creations to further the cause of Moscow in this country or any other place where our pictures are shown - meaning the whole world...
> "Why are our studios hiring so many 'Commies' who are known party members? We asked a prominent studio head that question today and this was his reply: 'We need writers, good writers. I don't care if the fellow is a "Commie" or not; if he can write, if he can do the job we want, I'll hire him. If I don't, some other studio will grab him and give him an assignment.'"

In referring to this article quoted above, in particular the statement of the unknown studio head, [redacted] stated that he believes that the statement is most questionable relating that the fact is there are many capable writers in Hollywood who are not given an opportunity because they are not a part of the Communist combine or because they have opposed Communist influence. The Screen Writers Guild is completely dominated by Communists and Communist sympathizers and to a large extent determines who works when and where; and the motion picture producers are not only aware of this situation, but do not oppose it.

The whole situation boils down to this: The producers of motion pictures in Hollywood could clean up these conditions whenever they see fit. They just do not do so. There is no recorded instance where the Hollywood motion picture industry or any of its top influential individuals have ever denounced Communism or Communists. Basically, they are "internationalists." Because of this, according to [redacted] the activities of the Communists and their sympathizers who do the real work for the cause, increase day by day with added influence in all departments of the motion picture industry.

[redacted] reported that the following individuals have heretofore been extremely active in Communist circles and front activities but are now being slipped into the background in line with the program. He related some of them are: John Howard Lawson, Helmer Bergman, Robert Rossen, Lester Cole, Harold Buchman, Edward Mussa, Frances Millington, and Herbert Biberman. Herbert K. Sorrell, the Communist leader of the Conference of Studio Unions, is still in that position as shaking his power with an unknown name at this writing.

[redacted]

As a result of a specific request made of the Los Angeles Field Division to furnish the Bureau with an up-to-date report on the Communists active within the motion picture industry, the following information was obtained, which information was secured by the Los Angeles Field Division through confidential informants [redacted]

[redacted]

I. COMMUNIST ORGANIZATION IN THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

Prior to the dissolution of the CP-USA nearly all of the Communists who were employed in the motion picture industry (as well as the radio industry) were members of what was known as the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party, which for the most part was organized on a craft or industrial basis. Thus, employment determined the branch to which a particular Communist was assigned. However, provision was made for the wives and husbands of those employed in the radio or film industry to be included in the Northwest Section and thus the total membership of the Northwest Section did not at all times accurately measure the Communist infiltration into the motion picture industry.

Although the Northwest Section was reorganized at various times the branches within the section together with a short description of them are as follows:

Branch A	Writers' branch	This was divided into A1, A2, and A3 to accomodate writers in three different geographical areas.
Branch B	Community branch (Hollywood vicinity)	There were at first several directors in this branch; however, they were later transferred to Branch A.
Branch C	Commuters branch	Beverly Hills and Westwood area.
Branch D	Radio branch	Composed of actors, directors, etc. employed in the radio industry.
Branch E	Cartoonists, designers,
Branch F	Actors and actresses
Branch G	Community branches
Branch I	Community branch
Branch K	Community branch
Branch L	Writers' branch	Composed of those Communists who are employed in the motion picture studios, as screen story analysts.
Branch M		This was composed chiefly of members of the Screen Office Employees Guild which was organized to bargain collectively for secretaries, stenographers, etc. in the studios and which has since been succeeded by the Office Employees' International Union.

Branch O	Musicians Hollywood branch	(Community branch) This branch was composed of people who had been active in the Russian War Relief and other Russian groups.
Branch ?
Branch		This branch is the so-called "paper" branch which was composed of Communists in the motion picture industry who were either out of town or unavailable or unwilling to risk membership in other branches. This contained numerous prominent directors and producers, and unlike other branches did not have regular meetings and did not have delegates and officers sent to such affairs as the County Convention.

In December 1944 the Northwest Section was dissolved and a number of Cultural Groups in what was then the CPA were set up. These groups were known as:

Wilshire-Fairfax Cultural Group
Beverly-Franklin Cultural Group
Hollywood Cultural Group
59th A.D. Cultural Group
Westwood Cultural Group
East Hollywood Cultural Group
North Hollywood Cultural Group
63th A.D. Cultural Group
Special Hollywood Miscellaneous Cultural Group
59th A.D. Miscellaneous Cultural Group
North Hollywood Miscellaneous Cultural Group
Miscellaneous (which corresponded to Branch ? in the old Northwest Section)

There were also a number of Communists in the motion picture industry who during the days of the CPA were assigned to the Ben Franklin Group, which was organized in the 16th Congressional District, which is the Beverly Hills, Westwood, and Brentwood district.

These groups were also known by number and thus the Wilshire-Fairfax Cultural Group was known as Group Number 1, etc.

When the CP, USA, was reorganized the Party apparatus in the LA Field Division consisted of 10 sections, one of which was the Hollywood Section. For a few months following the reorganization of the CP, USA, the Communists in the motion picture industry were not identified with this Section, inasmuch as it was a Community Section and the Communists in the motion picture industry were organized into various groups such as the Duclos Club, the Davis Club, etc.

However, in October 1945 for "security and efficiency of operation in furthering the Party progress" all Communists in the Hollywood area, regardless of where they worked, together with all Communists employed in the motion picture and radio industry, regardless of where they lived, were organized into one over-all Section known as the Hollywood Section. Apparently the risk of exposure became too great because in July 1946 the Hollywood Section was again reorganized for the purpose of security and is presently in three sub-sections; Community, Industrial, and Cultural Sub Sections. The Community Sub Section is composed of Communists residing in the Hollywood area but who are not employed in the motion picture industry. The Industrial Sub Section is composed of those employed in the motion picture industry in a craft or trade. The Cultural Sub Section is made up of those Communists in the Hollywood Section who are creative. These are known as the cultural workers in the Communist Party.

On October 30, 1946 the entire Hollywood Section had 723 members and inasmuch as there were approximately 350 members in the Community Sub Section there are thus approximately 375 Communists who are identified in the motion picture and radio industries.

The Hollywood Section is broken down into 24 groups, 5 of which are in the Community Sub Section, 4 of which are in the Industrial Sub Section (there are 3 industrial or industry-wide groups and 5 shop units at various studios), and 15 Cultural Groups. For security reasons there is no over-all Section Council but there is a Hollywood Section Committee composed of members of the three sub sections and each sub section has in turn a sub section Chairmen's Council which meets bimonthly. Thus there is only a limited amount of association between the members of the various sub sections.

Recently a confidential source who had access to the records of the Communist Party made available a diagram of the Party structure in the Hollywood area, which is reproduced as follows:

COUNTY ORGANIZATION

LIAISON

The Hollywood Section Organizer - JOHN STAPP

HOLLYWOOD SECTION COMMITTEE
Composed of the organizer and organizational secretary of each sub section - 6 members

Community Sub Section			Industrial Sub Section			Cultural Sub Section
clubs	clubs	clubs	clubs	clubs	clubs	clubs	clubs	clubs

The Community Sub Section is largely made up of people residing in the Hollywood area and has a membership of approximately 350. The Industrial Sub Section of the Party is open for membership to the craft groups (painters, electricians, etc., cutters, cameramen, property men, union functionaries in Hollywood unions, analysts, publicists, assistant directors, office workers, musicians, and cartoonists.)

The basic structure of the Cultural Sub Section is the Craft Branch. There is a Radio Branch, an Actors' Branch, four geographical sub divisions of a Writer-Director-Producer Branch, and a branch for entertainers and their wives or husbands of Communists employed in the motion picture industry which are handled on an "individual basis, first upon their interests and secondly upon their work." There is to be no mechanical placement. Therefore, even the Cultural Sub Section of the Party has some members in it who are not employed in the motion picture industry. Many of the lesser people in the motion picture industry have been transferred into the various Community Groups wherever they reside and some still meet as a separate group attached to the Community Branch in the neighborhood in which they live. It is believed that there are approximately 350 members in the Industrial and Cultural Sub Sections. Thus far the Communists have been able to establish shop units at Universal, Paramount, MGM, RKO, and Columbia Studios.

II. IDENTITY AND EMPLOYMENT OF [illegible] TO COMMUNISTS IN THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY.

The following list of Communists is limited to those directly employed in the motion picture industry and does not include the husband or wife of one so employed, Communists in the radio industry, Communist labor leaders in Hollywood, and industry publicists, agents, business managers, etc., most of whom, although not directly employed in the motion picture industry, are members of either the Industrial or Cultural Sub Section of the Hollywood Section of the Hollywood Communist Party.

However probable it may be that actors such as Charles Chaplin and John Garfield, with alias Jacob Garfinkel, and writers such as Clifford Odets and Ben Hecht may be members of the Communist Party, they have not been identified as such in this report, inasmuch as there is no documentary evidence to support the identification. It should be emphasized that for each person identified in this section as a Communist the identification is based upon documentary evidence which is highly reliable, although probably inadmissible, or the identification is based on the word of a reliable informant.

It is difficult to list accurately the employer of each Communist in the motion picture industry, since most of the Cultural workers in the industry change from studio to studio, and it is not at all uncommon for an actor to be employed by three or four different studios in one year.

[redacted] It should be noted that the branch affiliation of each Communist is not being set forth, inasmuch as paid informant [redacted] has recently advised that the names of the various branches have been changed and although the LA office is in possession of a complete list of these branches the exact branch of each Communist in the motion picture industry is not immediately available.

[redacted] agents of the Los Angeles Field Division provided the records of Elizabeth Benson, Membership Director of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party. Through this technique an analysis has been made available of the occupations of the Communists within the motion picture industry. It is believed that this analysis was nearly complete at the time the source made it available and it reflects an occupational breakdown as follows:

Producers - 5
Directors and Assistant Directors - 10
Writers - 82
Actors and Entertainers - 44
Musicians - 31
Story Analysts - 5
Film Cutters - 4
Miscelleneous Professional and Crafts (painters, electricians, office workers, etc.) - 40

Set forth in the following alphabetical list as obtained through a highly confidential technique or a reliable confidential informant are:

Producers - 5
Directors and Assistant Directors - 11
Writers - 119
Actors - 71
Musicians - 37
Analysts - 12
Artists - 7
Publicists - 6
Film Editors - 2
Cameramen - 2
Miscellaneous professional and crafts (painters, electricians, office workers, etc.) - 16

In March of 1947, informant [redacted] reported that the general trend in the tactical line of the Communist Party in the United States, which began in July, 1945, when the Communist Political Association was dissolved and the Communist Party, U.S.A. was re-established continues, and according to informant [redacted] this tactical line directs that all Communist Party functionaries and publicly known Communist Party members come forth publicly as the representatives of Communism in this country and all Communist sympathizers, fellow travellers, and followers of the Communist Party line concentrate their activities in so-called "liberal" organizations, camouflaged as "progressives." This source further states that they are permitted to slightly denounce Communism and pretend at the same time to stand for a progressive United States seeking to cooperate with the Soviet Union. In short, their position is to a slight extent anti-Communist, but always pro-Russia.

They are instructed to work within all organizations to help create race and class divisions by sponsoring the so-called "minority groups", to make demands which practically amount to special privileges; to work within labor unions to bring about strikes and unreasonable wage demands; to support candidates for public office who favor the Communist program. In fact, to do everything possible to bring about confusion and cross purposes in all walks of life.

Confidential informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles office between April 9 and 11, 1947, reported that the activities of the Communists and sympathizers in the Hollywood motion picture industry have not been dampened to any noticeable extent by the nationwide attacks and exposures of the Communist Party and Communism and its international connections in the press, over the radio and by other means. The only noticeable effect is that those involved are more careful in their operations and more vehement in their denials of any connections with the Communist movement. However, there is no diminution of "front" activities all of which they cloak behind the terms "democratic" and "progressive."

With one slight exception, so far there has been no statement made, or stand taken, by the heads of the industry, the producers themselves, on this controversial question which now rages all over the United States. The one exception was a statement made by Eric Johnston, representing the motion picture industry, made before the House Un-American Committee in which he stated that Hollywood had defeated the Reds and that, by implication, there was nothing serious about the Communist penetration of the film industry.

Informant [redacted] further revealed that while the Communists have lost ground to some extent within the trade unions because of the failure of the strike of the Conference of Studio Unions, they have more than made up for this by having many of their sympathizers placed in higher executive positions, as directors, writers, actors and in some executive positions. The latter type of penetration is more insidious, however, because of the reputations and influence gained by those elevated in this manner. One outstanding example is the appointment of Dore Schary to be director of all production at M-G-M studios. Mr. Schary has followed the political line of the Communist Party for many years, has engaged in, and supported, a multitude of Communist fronts and has been an influential tool of the Communists for years. His important position at the present time affords him complete protection against any charge by anyone that he has been so involved. This pattern is being followed closely at the present time, extending all through the industry and tending to make it as a whole somewhat sacred from any criticism of a definite or specific nature.

Other individuals of this type, according to Informant [redacted] have been recently elevated to key positions in the industry. They are, in part, the following:

MacDougall, Ranald, made producer by Warner Bros.

Marquis, Harry, Associate Producer with Mary Pickford and Lester Cowan

Manin, Carson, producer with Universal-International

Caspary, Vera, long-term writer with Eagle-Lion

Sparling, Milton, producer, Warner Bros.

Kazan, Elia, director, signed by Darryl Zanick, Twentieth Century-Fox

Traube, Shepard, signed as director for RKO

Rossen, Robert, director RKO

Herbert, F. Hugh, Director Twentieth Century-Fox

Koenig, Lester, Producer, Liberty Films, William Wyler Productions

Kelly, Gene, MGM Studios announced that he will soon be made a director for that firm.

IX. COMMUNIST INFLUENCE IN CURRENT MOTION PICTURES

The entire purpose of the Communist penetration of the motion picture industry has been directed to the control of the ultimate product, that is, the motion picture which is produced. The Communist Party has indicated as its opinion that to control the motion picture would be to control a splendid propaganda outlet. With the change in the Communist Party line at the time of the invasion of Russia by the Nazis in June, 1941, there commenced an unprecedented period of Communist influence in the motion pictures themselves. This may be accounted for in part by the fact that the aims of the Communist Party through circumstance are coincidental with the aims of the United Nations. Therefore, under the guise of patriotism the Communist Party is able to inject its views into the motion picture field. Examples of motion pictures which are reported to be subject to Communist Party influence or to reflect Communist Party or Soviet propaganda are set out below.

Mission to Moscow

This picture was released by Warner Brothers in May, 1943. The producer was Robert H. Buckner. During 1934 and 1935 Buckner was located in Moscow, Russia, as a correspondent for the London Daily Mail. He was brought to Hollywood by Warner Brothers in 1935 as a screen writer. Buckner personally selected Jay Leyda to act as Technical Director for "Mission to Moscow." Leyda had been in Moscow at the same time as Buckner, where he had been connected with the Bureau of Revolutionary Literature and the Soviet Motion Picture Industry. Leyda is known to be a member of the Communist Party of the U.S.A. and confidential sources have furnished a copy of the transfer paper transferring Leyda from New York City to the Los Angeles, California, organization of the Party. Leyda is active in the League of American Writers and lectures at the Hollywood Writers School mentioned above. The actual writer of the screen play "Mission to Moscow," was Erskine Caldwell. Caldwell has been a member of the League of American Writers for many years and has made several trips to the Soviet Union. Caldwell has been an associate editor of "Soviet Russia Today," published by the Friends of the Soviet Union, a Communist controlled organization. Prior to August 23, 1939, Caldwell was in favor of collective security. During the life of the Hitler-Stalin Non-Aggression Pact, Caldwell supported the program of the American Peace Mobilization and opposed openly the Lend-Lease Act and the Selective Service Act. After June 22, 1941, Caldwell called for all-out aid to Britain, the Soviet Union and China. The picture is based upon the book, "Mission to Moscow" written by Mr. Joseph Davies, former U. S. Ambassador to Russia. It is said that the picture contains pro-Soviet propaganda and numerous newspapers have criticized the picture severely on these grounds, stating that many of the incidents related are so highly colored as not to represent a true picture of the facts. [redacted]

Action in the North Atlantic

This picture was also released by Warner Brothers and deals with [redacted]tivities of the Merchant Marine on the Murmansk run. It is reported that the picture is very favorable to the National Maritime Union of America, CIO, a Communist controlled union. According to David Platt, Communist motion picture reviewer for "The Worker" for July 4, 1943, "Action in the North Atlantic" is being used as a training film in the Merchant Marine Training Schools of the War Shipping Administration. The screen play was by John Howard Lawson, member of Branch K, Northwest Section, Communist Party. Lawson received technical assistance and advice from James Drake, Port Agent of the National Maritime Union, San Pedro, California, a known member of the Communist Party.

Keeper of the Flame

This picture is an MGM production, adapted from a popular novel by I. A. R. Wylie. The novel was adapted to the screen by Donald Odgen Stewart, a reported member of the Communist Party and husband of Ella Winter, a Communist Party member of long standing. The picture is said to have varied from the book in that the book was made in the nature of a mystery story, whereas Stewart in the screen version emphasized the content of the picture as anti-Fascist.

Hangmen Also Die

This picture is a United Artists production released approximately April 1, 1943. It is a war melodrama dealing with present-day conditions in Czechoslovakia under Nazi rule and the hangings by Heydrick, the hangman, and the German Gestapo. The picture was directed by Fritz Lang, who is reported to be active in numerous Communist front organizations. Included in the cast were Lionel Stander, member of the Communist Party, and Virginia Farmer, also said to be closely affiliated with Communist groups. The screen play was by John Wexley, a member of Branch C. of the Northwest Section of the Communist Party.

Our Russian Front

This picture was made originally in Russia as a documentary film. It was reassembled in Hollywood under the auspices of Russia War Relief, Inc., and it was adapted to American audiences by use of a commentary delivered by a narrator, who in this instance was Walter Huston. The commentary was written by Elliot Paul, a member of the League of American Writers, a contributor to numerous Communist Party publications and an active member of recognized Communist front groups. Assisting in the production were Lewis Milestone, Director; Joris Ivens and Dimitri Tiomkin. Both Milestone and Ivens have been identified with numerous Communist Party front organizations.

Edge of Darkness

This is a Warner Brothers production released in April, 1943, dealing with a situation in Norway under Nazi occupation. It is the usual war drama about Nazis and fascist liars. The screen play was written by Robert Rossen, past president of the League of American Writers and a member of Branch C of the Northwest Section of the Communist Party. The Director was Lewis Milestone, a native of Russia who has long been active in numerous Communist front organizations. The cast included Walter Huston, Helmut Dantine, Roman Bohnen and Morris Carnovsky, all of whom are reportedly closely associated with Communist Party members in the Hollywood area.

[redacted]

This Land is Mine

This is an RKO production released June 10, 1943. It is a war drama dealing with conditions in occupied territories under Nazi rule and the reaction of different types of citizens under oppression. The screen play was written by Dudley Nichols, who was co-producer with one Jean Renoir, a French motion picture director. Nichols has been a member of the League of American Writers since its inception and was a member of the John Reed Club in Hollywood, a Communist front organization which included in its membership such known Communist Party functionaries as Dr. V. A. K. Tashjian, Nora Hellgren, John Howard Lawson and Mayer Baylin. Nichols was also an endorser of the American Peace Mobilization, a Communist Party front.

[redacted]

The City that Stopped Hitler

This is a documentary film released by Paramount. It was assembled in the United States from film shot in the Soviet Union. The English narration given with the picture was written in Hollywood by John Huxley, member of Branch C of the Northwest Section of the Communist Party in Hollywood. The picture was produced by Artkino, Russian picture organization in the United States, and was edited by one Leonid Varlamov, a member of the Artkino concern. The picture is highly recommended by the Communist press.

[redacted]

Black Sea Fighters

This picture was made from Russian news reel shots assembled in the United States and released in North and South America by Artkino, Soviet motion picture organization in the United States. The commentary in the United States was written in Hollywood by Clifford Odets, who is known to be a member of the Communist Party. The narration is given by Frederick March, Hollywood screen actor and member of the Communist Party.

[redacted]

North Star

This picture was produced by Samuel Goldwyn productions. The Director was Lewis Milestone, who was born in Russia and has been sponsor of and active in a great number of Communist front organizations. The writer of the script was Lillian Hellman, known Communist Party member and active in numerous Communist front organizations. Jay Leyda was technical director of this picture. He is a Communist Party member assigned to Branch A, Northwest Section, Communist Party of Los Angeles. The film deals with life in a small town in Soviet Russia prior to the time of the Nazi invasion and subsequent to that invasion. The picture has been severely criticised by some newspapers as being Communist or Soviet propaganda in that it presents a picture of life in the Soviet Union, which is not consistent with the facts.

Watch on the Rhine

This is a Warner Brothers production released in the fall of 1943. The producer is Herman Shumlin, a member of numerous Communist Party front organizations. Dashiell Hammett, writer of the screen play, is president of the League of American Writers and is described as a fanatical Communist by informants. The original play from which the screen play was taken was by Lillian Hellman, Communist Party member and active in numerous Communist front organizations. This picture dealt with the activities of anti-Fascist refugees in resisting Fascist oppression. It received glowing commendation from the Communist Party press.

Hostages

This picture was produced by Paramount Studios and is a war melodrama. The Director of the picture is Frank Tuttle, who is a member of Branch E of the Communist Party, Northwest Section, Hollywood, California. One of the writers of the screen play was Lester Cole, a member of the Sunset Branch of the Communist Party, Northwest Section, Hollywood, California. Among the actors in the picture is Luise Rainer, formerly the wife of Clifford Odets, Communist Party member. Other actors included Arturo de Cordova, Spanish actor; Katina Paxinou, Greek refugee actress, and Oscar Homolka, Russian actor who has been a guest of the Russian Embassy. The picture has been described as a propaganda picture in every sense of the word.

Sahara

This picture was produced by Columbia. It was directed by Zoltan Korda, a brother of Alexander Korda, English motion picture producer. Zoltan Korda is reported to show strong favoritism for persons of Communist sympathies. John Howard Lawson, member of Branch A-3 of the Communist Party in Los Angeles, is the writer of this screen play. The picture is adapted from the Soviet photoplay "The Thirteen." Among the actors are Humphrey Bogart, Rex Ingram, a Negro, and J. Carol Naish, all of whom are reported to have been affiliated with Communist front groups in the past.

[redacted] has further informed that Sherman made several trips to Russia, and at one time referred to the United States as the "middle-class crazy world." He directed "Waiting for Lefty" and "Paradise Lost", both of which were written by Clifford Odets. He signed "the letter of 350", justifying the Moscow purges in 1937. He protested against the release of "Tennessee Johnson" picture. He is also a lecturer at the Hollywood Writers School run by the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

Don Hartman is an Associate Producer, and according to [redacted] he was a member of the League of American Writers, and is presently active in the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, the successor to the League, both of which are Communist controlled. This informant has advised that Hartman has also been active in the Hollywood Democratic Committee which is also a Communist controlled group.

David Hempstead. According to [redacted] Hempstead is a former screen director who has followed the line of the Communist fraction in the Screen Directors' Guild. [redacted] describes Hempstead as a sympathizer with the Communist movement and advises, however, that he has no evidence of actual membership on the part of Hempstead in the Communist Political Association. The informant could not advise of any organization under Communist control in which Hempstead has been active.

Nunnally Johnson. According to [redacted] Johnson was active in the Contemporary Theater during the years 1936 and 1937, which the informant has stated was organized and controlled by the Communist Party. He believes also that Johnson was active in the New Theater League also under the domination of Communists. [redacted] termed Johnson as one who, by his activities, has shown sympathy for the Communist movement, but described Johnson as having a "spotty" record, i.e., active only occasionally.

William Cameron Menzies. [redacted] has advised that Menzies was a former instructor at the League of American Writers' School for Writers in Hollywood, and is presently teaching at the People's Educational Center, Hollywood Extension, which is the successor to the School sponsored by the League of American Writers. Both groups have been described as being under Communist control. The informant does not know whether Menzies has been a member of the Communist Political Association.

Henry Myers and Jay Gorney, writers of the original play and known Communist Party members also worked on the script. The producer and director is E. [redacted] Harburg who has been identified as a sponsor and member of numerous Communist Party front organizations including the League of American Writers. The star of the picture is Lucille Ball who has been a registered Communist Party member since 1935. In that year, she was also a member of the Central Committee of the Communist Party for the State of California. [redacted]

Government Girl

This is an R. K. O. release, produced and directed by Dudley Nichols, an active member of the League of American Writers, the American Peoples Mobilization and numerous other Communist front organizations. The writer of the picture is Budd Wilson Schulberg, a former member of the Young Communist League. Schulberg is said to have a long record of Communist activities following a trip to the Soviet Union in 1934. The star of the picture is Olivia de Havilland, who is reportedly associated with Communist front organizations including the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee and various Russian relief groups. [redacted]

Destination Tokyo

This is a Warner Brothers production written by Albert Maltz, a member of the Northwest section of the Communist Party in Hollywood. It was produced by Jerry Wald and directed by Delmer Daves, both of whom are reported to have shown sympathy for Communist causes. The stars of the picture are Cary Grant and John Garfield (Jacob Garfinkel) both of whom are said to circulate in Communist Party circles in Hollywood. [redacted]

Three Russian Girls

This is a Gregor Rabinowich production for United Artists. The screen play was written by Lon James, a known Communist Party member assisted by Aben Kandel, who is reported to be a member of numerous Communist front groups. Maurice Clark and Victor Trivas made the adaptation from the original story. Both Clark and Trivas are said to be active in Communist front groups. [redacted]

Tender Comrade

This is an R. K. O. production, written by Dalton Trumbo, a member of the Northwest section of the Communist Party in Hollywood. It was produced by [redacted] and directed by Edward Dmytryk, both of whom are said to be members of Communist front groups.

The star of the picture is Ginger Rogers. During production, it is reported that Mrs. Lela Rogers, mother of the star, objected to certain alleged propaganda lines to be spoken by her daughter and refused to let the star deliver these lines. Mrs. Rogers complained of the Communist propaganda type of line

[redacted] writer, Dalton Trumbo. Trumbo allegedly arranged the permit to [redacted] another girl in the cast. [redacted]

[redacted]

This is a Universal production, produced and directed by William [redacted] an alleged member from Hollywood [redacted] numerous Communist front activities [redacted] Communist Party, formally, [redacted] front groups including [redacted] Hollywood Writers Mobilization. [redacted]

[redacted]

[redacted] type of picture [redacted] is not limited solely to injecting Communism into pictures but is also directed toward preventing all that the Party might consider objectionable to its Party line. It is reported that in several instances, the Communist element is actually preventing the making of certain types of pictures. Among these is the picture, "Uncle Tom's Cabin" from the book by Harriet Beecher Stowe. The production of this picture was bitterly attacked [redacted] as being [redacted] pro-Negro. [redacted] picture did not reflect a number of things in the South. [redacted]

[redacted]

As of May, 1944, another picture, "The Life of Eddie Rickenbacker", was met similar pressure. Although Rickenbacker is a national figure and a hero of the First World War, the Communist Party objects to him because of his expressed political opinions regarding labor. He has been labeled a fascist, a capitalist, a reactionary and an isolationist. [redacted] [redacted] [redacted] [redacted] [redacted]

[redacted] The Lonely Heart

This is an R. K. O. production directed by Clifford Odets, a known [redacted] Communist Party member who also wrote the screen play from the original book of [redacted]. The picture is produced by David Hempstead, said to be a member of [redacted] Communist Front groups. The male star is Cary Grant, who is said to be [redacted] Russian sympathy and Communist feeling for [redacted] Soviet Union. [redacted] entered the film also interested in "Russian to screen."

[redacted] The Master Race

This is an R. K. O. production written and directed by Herbert Biberman. Biberman was a national officer of the American [redacted] Communist party front group and is reliably the subject [redacted] of the picture is this effort to [redacted] Communists in the United States.

As of August, 1944, informants have advised that there have been no pictures released for general public presentation within the last thirty days which could be classed as propaganda for the Communist cause, either directly or indirectly, or which could be said to be pictures following the Communist Party line. It was reported that the entire industry has become acutely sensitive to criticism in this respect because the issue has been raised publicly in several directions.

However, as noted in Section II under the subhead "Hollywood Writers' Mobilization," a program was effected whereby the WMC would cooperate with the Office of War Information in producing a number of documentary films. The Hollywood "Daily Variety" for August 7, 1944, reported that the following pictures are planned for early production:

It's Murder

This picture will be produced at Columbia Studios from a script by Henry Blankfort for the Security Branch of the United States Army, Navy, and FBI. Blankfort is a known member of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Political Association.

The Story with Two Endings

The "Daily Variety" article states this picture is for the prevention of postwar inflation. It is to be written by Harold Buchman and Lou Solomon; both Buchman and Solomon are members of the Northwest Section, Los Angeles County Communist Political Association.

When We Comes Home

This picture reportedly is to be made by Darryl F. Zanuck, working with the screen writer Paul Trivers. Trivers was a member of the Los Angeles Communist Party, U.S.A., in 1943 and held 1943 Communist Party book #36264. The film is said to treat the problems of returning wounded soldiers.

So Far So Good

This film allegedly will describe the nation's progress to date on international relations. It is also written by Henry Blankfort described above as a member of the Communist Political Association.

Air Transport Command

This film allegedly deals with military transport forces and is to be written by Oscar Saul, presently a member of the Northwest Section, Los Angeles County Communist Political Association.

World Peace Through World Trade

This film reportedly will be written by Edward Eliscu who was a member of the Northwest Section of the Communist Party in Los Angeles in 1943 and held 1943 Communist Party book #25115. [redacted]

During the latter part of August and early September, no pictures with propaganda content have been released. The following two pictures are planned for early release:

The Seventh Cross

This film, written by Anna Seghers, a Communist propagandist now in Mexico, reportedly will be released for public showing almost immediately.

Citizen Tom Paine

This picture has not been produced heretofore due to its alleged "revolutionary content;" however, Walter Wanger, Hollywood producer, has now purchased the story and it reportedly will be produced in the near future. Informants advised that Communists are already hailing Mr. Wanger's courage in making this type of picture and it is noted that Wanger has showed considerable sympathy for the work of Hollywood Communists in attacking the Motion Picture Alliance. [redacted]

"Tomorrow, the World"

The Worker for November 26, 1944, on page 6 of the Magazine Section, carried a considerable sized spread on this film which, according to the article, raises the question "in popular forum", what to do about Germany after the war. It is stated that this film was produced by Lester Colton from a screen play by Ring Lardner, Jr., and Leopold Atlas. It might be noted that Ring Lardner, Jr., is a known Communist. The three adult principals are Frederick March, Agnes Moorehead and Betty Field. March is known for his affiliation with a number of Communist controlled groups.

In January, 1945, the Hollywood Writers Mobilization was responsible for a closed showing of this motion picture which was written by Ring Lardner, Jr. and Leopold Atlas. Both have been members of the Communist Party. At the private showing there was a discussion by one Dr. James T. Shotwell who was introduced as a State Department Consultant to the Office of War Information. Shotwell spoke at the meeting and stated the motion picture was more powerful than the radio or printed word in "moving the spirit of mankind." Other speakers at the showing included Albert Maltz, Ruth McKenney, Vladimir Pozner, Dr. Thomas Mann, a German refugee writer, Dr. Franklin Fearing, Albert Lewis, actor and California State Assemblyman; Lou Harris and Everett Lavery. Of the above, the known Communists are Albert Maltz, Ruth McKenney, and Lou Harris. Pozner, Lavery and Dr. Mann and Fearing are known for their close cooperation with Communists in the past.

"Counter-Attack"

The "Daily Worker" for May 17, 1945, characterizes this picture as "one of the very best of war films as well as a significant contribution to American-Soviet friendship on a par with 'The North Star', 'Battle of Russia', and 'Song of Russia.'" The "Daily Worker" article continues, "Deeply moving and sincere, 'Counter-Attack' rings bells for an anti-fascism and dynamic Soviet strategy against the fascist curse. For this give thanks to the brilliant Columbia team of John Howard Lawson, screen writer, Zoltan Korda, director, James Wong Howe, photographer, Louis Gruenberg, composer and Paul Muni who plays Kulkov, the part Harris Carnovsky created in the stage play."

Of these individuals, Lawson is the leading Communist in Hollywood; Korda is reported to show strong favoritism for persons of Communist sympathies; and Howe, an instructor in the People's Educational Center, currently lives with Sonora Babb known to have held 1944 CPA membership book 46324.

"The Town I Live In"

"The Worker" for June 3, 1945, announced that a featurette length movie by this title was being made on a non-profit basis by MGM Studios.

The film was produced by Frank Ross, directed by Mervyn LeRoy, written by [illegible] and starred Frank Sinatra. Albert Maltz is a [illegible] who figures in the two previous cases.

According to an account in the Los Angeles "Daily News", Frank Ross proposed a dramatization of the problems of religious tolerance and then Maltz agreed to write the script. The action takes place in a stage door alley where Sinatra, after having appeared on the stage comes out for a smoke and is confronted by a frightened youngster who has run into the alley to escape his tormentors. As the gang comes after the youngster, Sinatra takes charge and talks sensibly to these boys, concluding the picture by singing Earl Robinson's "The House I Live In", from which the short subject has been named.

Earl Robinson on the occasion of an anniversary meeting on October 29 1944 of the American Youth for Democracy, successor organization to the Young Communist League, lent his name to the group as a sponsor for use in publicizing the rally.

"FREEDOM ROAD" FILMS

This is a new organization incorporated in the State of New York [redacted] production of independent pictures in Hollywood. The first picture to be made is stated to be "Freedom Road." This picture will be adapted from a book of the same name written by Howard Fast who has a long record of Communist activity. He is an associate editor of "New Masses," special writer for the "Daily Worker" and "Peoples Daily World" and many other Communist publications.

The picture "Freedom Road" will undoubtedly carry the Communist Party line. Others composing this group, incorporators of the company, are:

Paul Robeson, actor
Leo Hurwitz
Waldo Salt, writer
Joe Gould

Paul Robeson is to be the star of the picture. The finances for the venture have been raised by Mrs. Leo Spitz, wife of Leo Spitz, one of the major producers in Hollywood. Mrs. Spitz supports Communist front groups.

"KANIN PRODUCTIONS"

According to confidential informant [redacted] the foregoing is the name of a newly formed organization to produce motion pictures in the independent field. No announcement of program has been made but the following persons with Communist records compose the organization:

Garson Kanin
Ruth Gordon (wife of Garson Kanin)
Donald Ogden Stewart - writer
Michael Kanin - writer

Arrangements have been made to release any production through Universal-International Pictures affiliated with the J. Arthur Rank interests outside the United States. [redacted]

NEGRO PICTURES

David Hanna in the Los Angeles Daily News for August 22, 1945, stated in part that from New York comes an announcement of the formation of a new firm,

Harold Pictures, which is expected to have an important influence on the production and distribution of all Negro pictures.

Hanna stated in substance that a company headed by Jack Goldberg, an old hand in the Negro field, will turn out twelve pictures a year at the rate of one per month. The first is to be "Boy! What a Girl!", which will be distributed by Arthur Leonard. Some $50,000 will be spent on the film.

V. SOVIET ACTIVITY IN HOLLYWOOD

The chief Soviet activity in Hollywood at the present time centers around the representative of Artkino, the Soviet film concern. The Soviet film industry maintains an official representative in Hollywood in the person of Mikhail Kalatozov.

Mikhail Kalatozov

This man arrived in Hollywood in August, 1943. According to press items his duties were to be comparable to that of an Ambassador in diplomatic circles with the additional function of advising on the purchase of American films. Among his announced aims were to "strengthen the artistic and commercial ties between the cinema people of the United States and those of the Soviet Union." Kalatozov has been in contact with known Communist elements in Hollywood and shortly after his arrival a reception for him was sponsored by the National Council of American Soviet Friendship, a Communist controlled group. Charlie Chaplin, Hollywood actor, acted as master of ceremonies at the reception and introduced Kalatozov. Kalatozov's duties are said to operate in conjunction with the Soviet Committee, the special representative of which is Leonid A. Antonov, whose headquarters are in New York City.

Leonid A. Antonov

Antonov is one of the largest film producers in Russia and reportedly was sent to the United States to act as liaison agent to get Russian pictures released in this country. He is also charged with the duty of reading scripts of films produced in the United States to see that they are favorable to Russia, and it is said that whenever any Russian film is desired for stock shots, the picture must necessarily not be anti-Communist. It is said that it is not necessary for the picture to be Communist to obtain the Russian films, but that the picture must be at least neutral on the subject of Communism. The local representative for Antonov in Hollywood is Ben Goldstein, with whom all arrangements must be made for the purchase or use of Russian films. Goldstein is American born and works at Technicolor Laboratory in Hollywood.

Soviet Films

Several films depicting Russian activities have been made in Hollywood through the assistance of Artkino. Among these are: "Russia," which will soon be released through Metro Goldwyn-Mayer Studios. Jay Leyda, Communist Party member, was technical director for this picture and stock shots taken in Russia are utilized as background and were purchased from Artkino. V. V. Pastoev, Soviet Vice Consul at Los Angeles appeared on the MGM lot at least three times to observe the shooting of this picture. "The Russian People" is being made by 20th Century Fox. The producers are Boris Morros and his business associate Sam Spiegle, alias S. P. Eagle. This film also uses stock shots of Russian backgrounds purchased through contact with Artkino. It is based on a play by the Soviet writer Siminov and was adapted to the screen by Clifford Odets, Communist Party member.

Boris Morros

Morros, who is associated with the film, "The Russian People," is a naturalized Russian who at the present time is a musical director in the Hollywood motion picture colony. Morros has been contacted by Vasilli Zubilin, reportedly the head of the NKVD for the Western Hemisphere and was given a brief case containing unknown documents by Zubilin. According to an unidentified informant, Morros acts as an agent of Zubilin in transferring information to German espionage agents. Morros is a close contact of members of the Soviet Consulate staff in Los Angeles, California.

Although Morros has been and still is the subject of vigorous investigative attention in connection with the Comrap case, no additional information identifying him as an active Soviet agent has been developed as of the present time.

Awards to Persons Prominent in the Motion Picture Industry

The Los Angeles Herald for June 9, 1944 stated that Charles Chaplin and John Ford have been accoladed in the past by the Soviet Film Committee. It further stated that Louis Milestone will be honored by the Soviet Union Film Committee in July, 1944 when four of his pictures will be shown at the Cinema Theater Building in Moscow. The subjects selected as being most expressive of Milestone's technique are reported to be: "The Front Page," "Of Mice and Men," "The Purple Heart," and "North Star."

Selection of American Films by Kalatozov

Among the films which have been purchased by Mikhail Kalatozov, a Soviet motion picture representative on the West Coast, and showing in Russia as representative of United States films are "The Little Foxes" and "The Earl of Chicago." The first of these pictures depicts a degenerate Southern family and the latter is the story of a Chicago gangster in England. Informants have reported that it is particularly unusual that Kalatozov should have selected "The Earl of Chicago" since this picture was never particularly successful in the United States and is several years old. It has been suggested that it may be part of Kalatozov's plan or propaganda technique to obtain such pictures in order to exhibit American life at its worst to the Soviet people.

Russian-American Club

In August, 1944, this club reportedly was created in the Hollywood district with the announced purpose of raising money for the people of the Soviet Union through the Russian-American Society for Medical Aid to Russia. The Russian Vice Consul, V. V. Pastoev, attended the opening session as one of the principal speakers. Included among those active in the affairs of the club are Leonia Kinsky, an associate of the Russian Consul, and Michael Walden who is also reported to be connected with the Russian Consul. Included among known Communist Party members active in this club are Frank Tuttle and his wife Tatiana Tuttle, Michael Walden, and Dr. Murray Abowitz. Olivia DeHavilland, Louis Milestone and George M. Day are also active in the organization.

Mikhail Kalatozov [redacted]

Kalatozov and his associates reportedly have continued to contact known Communist elements in Hollywood and to have visited nearly all the major studios, allegedly to seek desirable films for purchase by the Soviet Government. It is reported that he has presented to the State Department a proposal whereby the Soviet Union will confer decorations on the following prominent personages: Jack Warner, Sam Goldwyn, Edward G. Robinson, Walter Huston, Oscar Homolka, Victor Francen, Jay Leyda, Mannart Kippert, and Joris Ivens. These awards reportedly are being made to the listed individuals for their participation in the films "Mission to Moscow" and "North Star."

It is reported that Kalatozov has had numerous meetings with Gregori Khcifets, principal suspect in the COMRAP investigation, when the latter has been in Los Angeles.

Exchange of Films with Soviet Representatives

[redacted]The Hollywood Reporter, a trade paper, on August 2, 1944, stated that plans are being formulated for cultural exchange of motion pictures between the United States and the Soviet Union and Britain and the Soviet Union. It was reported that the USSR Film Committee has approved certain plans and recommended them for acceptance of United States Ambassador Harriman and the British Ambassador at Moscow. The original plan was to have one theatre in Moscow to show only American and British films, but this did not materialize as no suitable theatre was available. The present proposal is that two American and two British films each month be presented for closed showings to cinema clubs, actors, composers, writers, and scientific organizations, and the showing would be for one day only in screening rooms accommodating between 300 and 500 persons. The Russians reportedly would expect similar arrangements to be made in the United States and Britain for the showing of their films. It is reported the State Department and OWI will recommend acceptance of the plan by the Hollywood industry.

"RKO Soyuzintorkino Deal"

The October 9, 1944, issue of "News Week" (page 24), carried the following item:

> "In Hollywood's current scramble for the post-war foreign film market, RKO has out-sprinted the other studios by signing a two year contract with Soyuzintorkino (Soviet Movie Trust). Under the deal, RKO will distribute, in the United States and elsewhere as agreed upon by the trust, a yearly minimum of five Soviet films purchased at $50,000. In return for every Russian picture the U. S. studio handles, Soyuzintorkino will purchase an RKO movie at the same price for distribution with the U.S.S.R. To facilitate these business deals, a new corporation soon will be set up with RKO and the Russian film trust, each holding a 50% interest. The Soviet Union's determination to cut its own slice of the world film market is seen in the trust's refusal to name RKO as sole global distributor of Russian films."

The following reply was received from the Department in May, 1945.

> "The story concerning a contract between these organizations, which appeared in News Week, appears to have been premature. Tentative proposals along the general lines reported in this news story were made by RKO, and were sent, in the form of a draft contract, to the Soviet Union for ratification. Mr. Knapp, of the Foreign Agents Registration Section, has been informed by Mr. Charles Recht, attorney for Soviet organizations in this country, and by Mr. John Whitaker, of RKO, that the Soviet film industry authorities have not accepted the NKVD proposals, or made any counter-proposals. Both sources imply that, although the Soviet authorities have definitely terminated negotiations, they did not expect them to lead to an agreement along the lines first discussed and thereafter embodied in the draft agreement, a copy of which is contained in Division of Records file 14-19/C. If any further information is received by this Division, it will be transmitted to the Bureau."

Soviet Propaganda in the Motion Picture Industry

Information is being compiled by the Los Angeles office [illegible] whether through propaganda agents or otherwise, the Soviet Union is attempting to place Russian propaganda in documentary war films made by Government agencies for exhibition by the Armed Forces, or whether through influencing local writers, technicians, directors and producers Soviet propaganda is being incorporated in films made for general release to the public.

In this connection the inquiry has disclosed that several official Soviet representatives have acquired contacts in Hollywood, which might enable them to influence American produced moving pictures along Soviet propaganda lines.

Mikhail Konstantin Kalatozov was the first representative of the Soviet Government assigned to the motion picture industry in Los Angeles. He arrived in Los Angeles in August, 1943, and departed for Russia on November 11, 1944. The duties of Kalatozov, a prominent Russian motion picture producer and director, during his stay in the United States were to encourage cultural relationships between this country and the Soviet Union, and to act as an advisor for the Soviet Cinema Committee on the purchase of American films for distribution in Russia. He maintained close contacts with the Soviet Vice Consulate in Los Angeles and with Gregori Kheifets, the Soviet Vice Consul in San Francisco and a prominent subject in the Gorin case.

Kalatozov's social and business associates in the movie industry were predominantly among persons of left wing tendencies. He was given a reception by the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship sponsored by such persons as Herman Cowen, George Cukor, John Garfield, Lillian Hellman, James Wong Howe, Lewis Milestone, Paul Robeson, Franchot Tone, Frank Tuttle and Orson Welles. These individuals were typical of Kalatozov's contacts in Hollywood.

[illegible] activities were felt in the industry and were [illegible] by numerous items appearing in motion picture trade journals, local newspapers and national magazines. Anti-Communist spokesmen attempted to expose his propaganda efforts and "Time" magazine described him as "an enigmatic, uncommunicative Soviet official, (who) went about his business with aplomb and solemn placidity, abetted by the fact that he spoke no English when he arrived."

Information was received that Kalatozov's functions were to be taken over by the Soviet Vice Consul in Los Angeles when he departed and no successor was appointed. Investigation of the Soviet Vice Consul since that time reflects that the Consulate has been relatively inactive in the motion picture industry. The present Vice Consul, Eugene P. Tumentsev, has few contacts in the Hollywood movie colony. Contacts maintained by the Vice Consulate with the Motion Picture Arts and Sciences Academy, the organization closest to the members of the Consulate as far as motion picture interests are concerned, are largely confined to inquiries regarding pictures being made or released. Business conducted by the Russian Government in the motion picture industry including purchases of American films for release in Russia are handled by the Soviet Government Purchasing Commission in Washington, D. C.

The West Coast representative for Artkino Pictures, Inc., the U. S. Soviet Film Agency, is Benjamin Bernard Goldstein who resides in Los Angeles. Goldstein handles the assignment, booking and showing of Russian pictures on the West Coast, and is also employed by Technicolor Pictures, Inc. as a film reviewer. Goldstein reportedly is a member of the Communist Party and is said to have been expelled from the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences several years ago for agitation against America's participation in the war. He has been in frequent and close contact with the Soviet Vice Consulate in Los Angeles over a long period of time.

In May, 1944, Gregory L. Ivsky, formerly of Artkino Trading Corporation, together with Leonid Kosmatov, a film cameraman, and [illegible] Tolstoppenov, a film technician, arrived in the United States from the Soviet Union on a commission to study scientific techniques on behalf of the Soviet Government, to arrange for the purchase of cinematographic equipment and to negotiate for technicolor assistance in the motion picture field. From confidential sources, it was learned also that Ivsky was charged by the Soviet Government with the organization of public opinion in Hollywood, and the finding of technical assistance for the establishment in Russia of film studios destroyed in the war.

Ivsky carried letters from a leading Russian motion picture director to Walter Wanger and Charlie Chaplin. Ivsky and his friends were entertained at parties by Solomon Lessing, an employee of 20th Century Fox and a close friend of Kalatozov, and by William Dieterle, a left wing motion picture director, at whose party Gregori Kheifets, Soviet Vice Consul at San Francisco, was also present. Irsky was a frequent contact of Benjamin Goldstein, identified above. It has been reported that Irsky at a function held at the Russian Consulate in Los Angeles in September, 1941, broached the plan of obtaining prints of Russian films, such as had just been presented on the program of the Consulate function that evening, for distribution free of charge to American schools and colleges.

Visit of Konstantin Simonov to the United States

On May 23, 1946, from a technical surveillance maintained on John Howard Lawson, it was learned that he telephonically communicated with Bert Bargeman, a Communist employed as a secretary by the Hollywood Writers Mobilisation. During the course of this discussion, Lawson stated that he had written most of Konstantin Simonov's speeches that he had delivered in Los Angeles. As you will recall, Konstantin Simonov is a noted Russian writer who visited Los Angeles in May of this year. Bargeman told Lawson that she felt that Simonov's possibilities had not been fully exploited and that many of Simonov's speeches had "watered down" to a mere drivel of "Russian and the United States should be friends." Bargeman felt that this was a "milk toast" attitude and that it should be stopped. Also, that the Communists start fighting Fascism which she claimed flourished most successfully in the United States. To this Lawson agreed but cautioned that it would be necessary to start off very gradually in changing the peoples' beliefs and that he felt the "best bet is by Communizing the writers and producers" in Hollywood and eventually controlling every picture and fiction story produced in Hollywood. He also stated that perhaps one day every news article in the United States might also be controlled.

The Los Angeles Herald for May 28, 1946, under the heading "Probe Russ Ship Parties as Chaplin and Garfield Fated," stated in part that Actor John Garfield and wife, Charlie Chaplin and wife, Lewis Milestone, Russian born film director, and Mr. and Mrs. C. Pumantze were entertained aboard a Russian ship anchored in the Los Angeles harbor. This article further stated State Senator Tenney, chairman of the Un-American Activities Committee, announced that he was sending two investigators to get the facts to report to the committee at its next meeting. It is reported that the guests were on board this ship at the invitation of Simonov.

The Los Angeles Herald for May 31, 1946, under the heading, "Russ Writer Lists Chaplin, Bette Davis as Soviet Friends," stated in part that Konstantin Simonov, Russian journalist, reported from New York that Bette Davis, Charlie Chaplin and Hollywood writers speak, "in deep contempt of the slanderous campaign raised by the reactionary press — particularly the Hearst press — against the Soviet Union." Simonov described Miss Davis as an actress "whom our film goers know from the 'Little Foxes'", and said he was amazed to find Chaplin rehearsing five rolls for a forthcoming picture. Simonov further stated he visited the "Actors Lab" in Hollywood where a great interest in the Soviet Union was displayed. At the Writers' Association Simonov said, "The American writers displayed a sincere and profound interest in Soviet culture." He also stated the friendly attitude of the progressive American intellectual workers is a guarantee for broad cultural relations between our two countries.

The article in the Los Angeles Herald for May 28, 1946, which referred to Mr. and Mrs. John Garfield, Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Chaplin, Mr. and Mrs. Pumantze and Lewis Milestone, Russian born film director, being the guests of Konstantin Simonov, Russian journalist, on a Russian ship anchored in the Los Angeles harbor, also contained information that State Senator Tenney, Chairman of the Un-American Activities Committee, had sent two investigators to get the facts to report to the Committee at its next meeting concerning this gathering. Then he stated that he was interested in learning more about Milestone and his Russian connections and to question John Garfield. Tenney also stated that he intended to summon Chaplin, who is not a citizen, as well as Garfield and Milestone, along with a score of others. He also indicated that the Committee would like to know Milestone's and Garfield's names at birth. The article stated, "The elaborate banquet served to the guests — while millions are starving in Europe — provided an ironic touch to the celebration honoring the proletariat."

It was stated that the Soviet film viewed by the party aboard the Russian ship was "The Bear" in which the decadence of the Czarists was pointed out by their predilection for champagne parties. Its climax is a scene in which hundreds of bottles of the sparkling wine are smashed. The article stated that Alexander P. Orochev, representative of the Soviet Purchasing Commission in the United States, arranged the banquet preceding the showing of the picture.

This article also reflected that John Garfield said, "We felt it was an honor to be invited aboard as a guest of Simonov because he is here on invitation of the State Department and because he is the author of the best seller 'Days and Nights.' We had been showing him around Hollywood and he felt he ought to return the entertainment and buy a drink in the Russian manner."

Charlie Chaplin, another Hollywood guest at the party, repeatedly referred to the United States Customs men as the "American Gestapo."

SOVIET ACTIVITY IN HOLLYWOOD
(July 23 through November 14, 1946)

[redacted]

In connection with the visit of Konstantin Simonov, the Russian writer, to this country, there appeared in the June issue of the Screen Writer, which is the official publication of the Screen Writers Guild, an edited transcript of an informal discussion held under the auspices of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization between Simonov and members of the Screen Writers Guild. This forum was presided over by Screen Writer, Dalton Trumbo and was interpreted by Bernard Koten. This discussion was in question and answer form and the following were some of the more important questions, with answers, given by Simonov.

"Q: I want to know about such things as the Motion Picture Institute in the Soviet Union and similar institutions.

A: The Film Institute works under the Ministry of Cinematography, situated in Moscow, and it has the following sections: a school for directors, one for film actors, script writers, stage set designers and a section on the history of the film. Students are accepted into the Institute on the same basis as other institutes of higher learning, but for entrance into the actors' division, directors', script writers' and set designers' divisions there are additional tests of the applicants' creative abilities. The Institute itself gives a general education in the humanities. The specialized work in the acting, writing and directing fields is conducted through small groups and work shops, which are led by well-known, important people in the field. The course is a five-year one, and on completion the students take the regular state final examinations in addition to special examinations. The set designers, for instance, in their final year produce a film. If the sets are considered good, they pass their final test. For the actors this final test is playing an important featured role in a film. For the director this final test consists of either a short which he will direct by himself or working under another director as a creative assistant on a full-length film. For the script writers it is a full-length feature script accepted for production. That describes in general the organisational work of the Institute . For instance, a film just finished, a full-length color film based on a Ural folk tale, had in its case a young girl who played the feature role, who was playing this role as her diploma project for the term; the sets were designed by a young set designer who was also offering this as his diploma project.

Q: From a practical point of view, is it so that this writers' organisation mostly determines what subjects shall be filmed for the coming year? (Note: This organization is discussed in a previous answer by SIMONOV and was described as a writers' organization responsible for approximately 75% of the scripts written and used by studios in Russia.)

A: The Council at the head of the script writers' studio prepares the yearly plans which are presented to the council attached to the Ministry of Cinematography. About half the members of the council are attached to the Ministry of Cinematography. In addition, there are many other members of this latter council—about twenty-one members. They are the most important figures in their fields in the country. This council approves and widens the script writers' plan. In such cases as an argument over whether or not a script which the writers' studio thinks is good and is not wanted by any of the film studios, or arguments over construction of the script, the final decision rests with the council attached to the Ministry of Cinematography. That only happens in very serious cases. The main work of the council attached to the Ministry, which meets weekly, is the discussion of films already produced or being produced. About ninety percent of any of the script problems or questions are decided upon by the script writers' studio....

Q: What about rights of the writer in other use of his material? Does he sell only the film rights? Can he sell the film again as a novel or short story?

A: (Note: In this connection, there is presently a strong move under way within the Screen Writers Guild to license rather than sell screen plays, and this move has been promoted by Communists within the Guild presumably in order that they may then exercise complete control over the script.) He sells only the right for screening.

right for publishing remains his. But sometimes they make the condition in the contract that the author does not have the right to have it printed or published until the film has been screened or issued. That happens very rarely. Most of the studios are not much concerned whether or not the script is published.

Q: How do writers get paid; by salary or percentage?

A: The script writer is paid for each film. He does it by contract. He gets from forty to eighty thousand rubles for a film.

Q: I am interested in the compensation of people employed by the studios--the actor, director, writer and cameraman; what is the comparative pay?

A: The director gets a monthly salary. There are four categories of directors (Simonov then goes on to explain these categories.) There are two types of acting personnel. The first is the so-called staff actors who get a regular salary. They are required to work a maximum number of days a year, let us say, perhaps ten shooting days a month. For all work beyond that they get overtime. But most of the important actors work in the theatre, too, the greatest number, and they work on contract.....

Q: These technicians, cameramen, etc.; who sets their salaries and what can they do about it if they consider their salaries unfair?

A: They get a two-week testing out period. After this period they are told they will be hired at such and such a salary. If they agree, they stay on; if not, they go to another place. With the set designers, the artists, their qualifications and art ability decide their salaries and that is decided upon by the various art organizations.

Q: What about trade unions as they exist in America which set working conditions and wage scales?

A: The principle is the same. I will explain from the point of view as it is worked out in the theatre. In the theatre there is a well defined norm for the actors' salaries. In a given theatre, ten actors could be of the highest category, fifteen of the next, twenty of the next, forty of the lowest category. And on this basis theatres accept actors for any openings. And if all ten places in the highest category are filled, for instance, and some important actor of the highest category asks to be taken into the group, he will be told, 'We would like to have you, but there is no opening, only one in the next category.' The actor must decide this himself. If it is especially good theatre, and the actor wants to come to the theatre just to work there, he will come despite this. These categories are not static; they continually change; an actor can promote himself from one to another. In the case of any misunderstanding or quarrel, say, when an actor might consider that he should be promoted to a higher category but is not being promoted, he has two ways out. He might apply to the trade union for help. The trade union would have to appoint a qualified commission to examine the whole question. Into this commission would go representatives of the theatre, representatives of the whole director force of the theatres and representatives of the actors' social organizations. This decision will be a compulsory one for the theatre because if the theatre does not follow the decision made by the trade union, the union takes the theatre to court.

But that is rarely necessary. The actor has another avenue of complaint. There is a union, a theatrical society which is purely an arts organization and not a trade union. At its head are the most important directors and actors. If the actor thinks he has been treated unjustly, he can apply to this organization of theatrical workers, asking them to comment upon his treatment. If the organization decides to defend the actor, its authority is so high that usually it will be listened to.

Q: What is the procedure in the event of dissatisfaction with wages? For instance, take the actors in the lowest category; suppose they are dissatisfied with the rate. What appeal do they have?

A: Take the theatre, for instance. At the head are two people — the Administrative Director and the Arts Director. In deciding any hotly-contested questions, the last word remains with the Arts Director, since in these positions, usually, there are the most important actors, etc., and if there is any argument, certainly the Administrative Director must accept the decision the Arts Director makes. So, if an actor in this lower category considers his salary too low, he will apply first of all to the Arts Director and if the Arts Director decides that his salary should be increased, and if it is possible to increase it, in that theatre, then it is raised. However, if they don't come to an agreement, the actor can then apply to the trade union and if the union agrees, the actor should get a higher salary, they then take the Arts Director to court. But those cases are rare because the life of the theatre depends on agreement.

Q: I am still trying to tackle the problem of a group action. Suppose not one, but all of the stagehands became dissatisfied. What is their approach toward reaching a higher wage?

In cases where it would be generally conceded that a whole group is being underpaid this question would be raised in government circles and they would raise the salaries on government decision. To take a concrete example: the writers decided their fees for work in magazines and books were not high enough. They continued discussions on that for two years in the trade unions. The Union of Soviet Writers, on its decision that the salaries were too low, together with the publishers, appealed to the government for raising of their salaries and fees. A commission was established by the government with representatives from these fields and the decision was to double the fees. You will excuse me if I say something that is quite primitive, but I must say it.

The whole state budget is organized in the interests of the entire population of the country. Therefore, we cannot always give people the salaries that their work might deserve, and we cannot always give people the salaries which would secure good life for them. This, of course, is regrettable, but it does not provoke any opposition among the people because no one is putting their money into hisppockets. At this given moment the government is not able to pay more. It is more important to build and restore at present. For this a tremendous amount of money is needed in capital. Therefore, in the interest of the government's needs, the people reconcile themselves to the conditions. The question of raising salaries is very often put, and if you were to examine Soviet newspapers, you would notice often decrees calling for raising of salaries in tens of different categories, but the question is NEVER categorically put: 'Either you raise my salary or I won't work.'

Q: Do you get many American films in the Soviet Union?

A: There are the films that are received to acquaint the small circle of people in the arts with American films, and then the films that are received to be distributed throughout the country.

Q: Then is there that separation?

A: The smaller circle of people decides which films ought to be bought and distributed. In recent times there were a greater number of American films on the screens in the Soviet Union. Unfortunately, now we have adopted the system of dubbing in voices. I don't like this system. I prefer sub-titles. This dubbing in holds up distribution for a long time; it usually takes six-to eight months to dub in a film because the attitude toward dubbing is quite a serious one and great actors are hired to dub in the voices. They do a very good job but take a very long time at it. I think that the number of American films on our screens will be greatly increased; the whole tendency is to take on more and more of them.

Q: What is the basis for a selection now?

A: The question of the creative worth of a film, the question of business relations between ourselves and Hollywood. Often when it is felt that there is a great desire for comedies by the Soviet audiences, comedies are bought and put on the screen. Much depends on our own production. It is important to intelligently establish a proportion between the type we are doing and the type we put on the screen from other countries.

C: I am interested in the exchange of people in larger numbers than is now taking place and would like to know what hurdles have to be overcome.

A: I am very happy this matter has come up. I have talked with several people already and I think it would be very desirable to have some sort of American-Russian Film Committee established, which would concern itself with these exchanges. I think such a committee should consist of people from all the fields—cameramen, writers, actors, directors, producers—so it could deal with all questions concerned with cultural and administrative problems and the creative arts. If such a committee were established I think that we would then be able to turn from these fruitless discussions of exchange to practical exchanges. We could concern ourselves with the exchanges of workers, with trips, with the exchange of information, sending over apprentices both here and there. It would make possible the organizing of Periodical-film festivals and in addition aid in the more intelligent and more rapid exchange of good films between both countries. I am going to insist on such a committee when I get back to Moscow."

[redacted] Paramount Studios, advised an Agent of our Los Angeles Office that no contact has been made by personnel of the Soviet Vice Consulate in Los Angeles with Paramount Studios during the past six months. He stated that it was entirely possible that unofficial contacts had been made but that nothing had passed through his office which would indicate any attempt on the part of Soviet diplomatic officials to contact this studio.

[redacted] This interview, which was conducted on August 13, 1946, also provided information that the Paramount Studios had recently discharged several writers who had Communist inclinations. [redacted] indicated that although Communists and Russians were an active minority in the motion picture industry, he did not believe that they would ever have any real influence in the industry until they learned how to make pictures properly and stop trying to convey a social message. He indicated that he did not think the average American theatre-goer was interested in this sort of picture.

[redacted] also advised that he recently returned from a four months tour of Europe which took him to Finland, Norway, England, Italy and occupied Germany. He advised that he visited the Russian zone while in Berlin and learned that the Russians were at that time producing twelve pictures, using the facilities of a German film organization and German actors. He stated that these films were all Communist propaganda and were being prepared for release to Central Europe. He indicated that there was no doubt in his mind that the Russians were extremely motion picture conscious. He recalled one incident when one American studio had several prints in a warehouse in the Russian controlled zone. Efforts to get these prints back have been negative and the Russians have claimed that they were destroyed by fire. However, he stated that affidavits are available to the effect that the Russians stole the prints and are using them in the production of their own pictures.

[redacted] also stated in this interview that the Johnston office was aware of the Soviet and Communist attempts to infiltrate the motion picture industry and is taking measures to combat propaganda of this type.

[redacted] of the MGM Studios, stated on August 15, when interviewed by a representative of this Bureau, that officials of the Soviet Union had been very inactive and that no contact had been made with his studio by the Soviet Vice Consulate in Los Angeles since May 15, 1945.

[redacted] Universal International Studios, advised that on August 8, 1946, a party of seven Russian engineers, including an interpreter, visited Universal International Studios. The interpreter's name, according to [redacted] was Alexander Arkator, of 156 North Arden Boulevard, Universal City, Los Angeles, California.

The activities of this group of Russian engineers were followed by this Bureau in the case entitled "Igov Nikolaevich Murovin. These individuals were in this country with the approval of the State Department to inspect municipal facilities such as water plants, gas plants, bridges, railway and streetcar installations. Their tour included the major cities in this country, during which time they gathered information, photographs and blueprints.

They were also interested in production figures and new techniques developed. The visit of these individuals to the studios was the result of a request received from Mr. Albert Kriz, who is a Los Angeles architect, who made the request for the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

[redacted] of Columbia Pictures International Corporation of New York City, advised that Columbia Pictures had no contractual relations with the Soviet Government and that this corporation cannot sell pictures to the Soviet Government as it (the Soviet Government) will not pay for them and that Columbia Pictures has purchased no Russian pictures.

[redacted] of Paramount International Films, Inc., also advised that Paramount had no contractual relations with the Soviet Government. He advised that in 1943 Paramount Studios had purchased "The City that Stopped Hitler" from the Russians for distribution in the United States. This film was a factual war picture concerning the siege of Stalingrad with narration by John Hexley. He stated that approximately one year ago Paramount Studios through Nicola Napoli, of Artkino Pictures, Incorporated, sent prints of the pictures "Hitler Gang" and "The Hostages" to Moscow for the approval of the Soviet Government. He explained that if the Soviet Government approved the pictures then a deal would be made for their purchase. However, he stated that he has tried unsuccessfully to obtain the return of said pictures from the Russians. He stated that since this time Napoli has indicated an interest in the picture "The Searching Wind," which was written by Lillian Hellman, reported as a well-known follower of the Communist line, which depicts the story of diplomacy in Europe leading up to the second World War. However, [redacted] advised Napoli that in view of the fact that any dealings with Artkino and the Russians were far from profitable, he consequently refused to have any further dealings with him, citing the fruitless attempt to regain the prints "Hitler Gang" and "The Hostages" from the Russians.

[redacted] an official of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures in New York City, also advised that his company had no contractual relations with the Soviet Government and that further it did not wish to deal with the Soviet Government, as the Soviet Government would offer to pay only about $5,000 for a picture, which is a very low figure, according to Mr. Spring. It was Mr. [redacted] opinion that the Soviet Government wished to purchase pictures derogatory to the American way of life. For example, the film, "Johnny Eager," which was a gangster picture. He advised that his company would not permit the sale of such type pictures to the Soviets. Mr. Spring also advised that approximately two years ago, the Soviets attempted to make a deal with his company whereby they would purchase pictures from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for showing in Russian theatres if MGM would guarantee certain running time of their pictures, in American theatres. However, he advised this deal was not consummated. He stated that during World War II, the following pictures were sold by MGM to the Soviet Government: "Edison the Man" and "Song of Russia."

[redacted] of Twentieth Century Fox Film Corporation, advised that his company had no contractual relations with the Soviet Government and that he could not remember that his company had sold any pictures to the Soviet Union within recent years. He advised that the Soviets wanted to purchase the film "Grapes of Wrath" and were even willing to pay approximately $150,000 for the picture. However, he stated that this offer was turned down as he believed the Russians wished to show this picture for propaganda purposes. He also stated that "Grapes of Wrath" was not the type of picture typical of our American way of life.

[redacted] of RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., advised that his corporation had no contractual relations with the Soviet Government. He stated that the Soviets had purchased the picture "North Star" and the picture "Bambie," approximately a year and a half ago, "Bambie" being a Walt Disney production and the story of a little deer and other animals. "North Star" is an American picture described as being one of several specific propaganda films tending to show American sympathy to Russia. He also advised that 8 major motion picture companies had arranged to form a motion picture export association and assign their rights to sell pictures in certain foreign areas to this motion picture export association. This was done for the commercial protection of the major companies. These companies are as follows:

RKO RADIO PICTURES
WARNER BROTHERS
PARAMOUNT
METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER
20th CENTURY FOX

He explained that under this arrangement if a picture made by one of the major studios was sold to Russia or certain other foreign countries, all the major companies would obtain a percentage of the sale price. It was his opinion, as it was the opinion of other motion picture executives, that the Russians had been interested in purchasing American pictures not truly depicting our American way of life and pictures which would show our American way of life in a bad light. He stated this association, which was formed October 4, 1945, is known as the Motion Picture Export Association, Inc., of New York City.

[redacted] of the Motion Picture Export Association, Inc., was interviewed and stated that his association was a Delaware corporation and had no contractual relations with the Soviet Union. He advised that his company distributed pictures of the aforesaid eight major companies in the following 13 foreign countries:

Japan
Korea
Holland
Austria
Bulgaria
Czechoslovakia
Hungary
Netherlands (East Indies)
Poland
Rumania
USSR
Yugoslavia
Germany (probably American Zone)

He stated that the association was also formed to promote harmony in the distribution of these pictures among the various companies. He stated that so far American pictures are being distributed in Japan, Korea and Germany (American Zone). He stated that his association was sending representatives to all thirteen countries in an attempt to sell American pictures. He advised, however, that no dealings with the USSR have been consummated up to this time.

RUSSIAN FILMS

The Hollywood Reporter for October 28, 1946, under the heading "Reds Admit Their Pictures are Tops" stated in part as follows:

> "Film critics 'can arrive at one conclusion only, that Soviet cinema art ranks first in importance and profoundness,' V. Polporatsky, Correspondent for Izvestia, wrote in a story on 'The Cannes Film Festival,' released here last week by the USSR Embassy. Praising the French films and the 'great craftsmanship of Disney's films,' the Russian writer held that the impressive record of awards to Soviet films was justified by their 'vitality, faith, in the future and the struggle for it.'"

The article stated that the American films tend toward standardization. One critic remarked that films are stamped in Hollywood just like automobile parts in Detroit. "Many of the films shown demonstrated the moral degradation of much of the world's cinema art. The majority of the non-Soviet films which were shown in Cannes were devoted to the decadence of the human mind. Drug addiction, dipsomania, and mysticism under the guise of psychology. Such was their essence." "A direct contrast is supplied by the Soviet films. Even the other contestants admitted the superiority of the Soviet films."

JOHN HERMAN DIERKES

[redacted]

In connection with this investigation the Los Angeles Office developed information that Dierkes is presently acting as technical advisor for Jay Richard Kennedy, an independent motion picture producer in Hollywood. Dierkes was assigned to Kennedy's picture "Assigned to Treasury" and to a projected follow-up picture tentatively titled "Secret Service."

Investigation of Kennedy reflects that he is a business associate of Sidney Buchman, an alleged Communist figure in the Los Angeles area and a producer at Columbia Studios. Kennedy reportedly came to Los Angeles approximately one and one-half years ago from New York to confer with Sidney Buchman about a screen story which he subsequently sold to Buchman. This story was based on material taken by Kennedy from the confidential files of the Treasury Department and is being made into a picture by a joint production unit of Kennedy and Buchman. This picture is to star Dick Powell and is entitled "Assigned to Treasury."

The Los Angeles Office reports that from a source close to Buchman it ascertained that Kennedy was a member of the Communist Party, although the New York Office was never able to identify him as a member of the Cultural Section. It is reported by the Los Angeles Office that Kennedy's importance in Party circles was evidenced by the fact that his leadership was being reviewed at the same time as was the leadership of John Howard Lawson, a top motion picture alleged Communist figure.

The Los Angeles Office also reported that there are various references in its files to liaison missions carried by Kennedy in contacts with Carl Winter, former Chairman of the Los Angeles County Communist Party in the past few years.

In the latter part of February, 1947, there appeared an article in the Los Angeles "Examiner" stating that the Roosevelt family had abandoned their former policy of refusing to allow a motion picture to be made on the life of the late President and had agreed to a film based on the life of F.D.R. which will be in the charge of writer producer Jay Richard Kennedy. The news item pointed out that James Roosevelt was to be technical advisor on the film and would assist Kennedy in selecting the material and snaring in the financial interests of the picture. James Roosevelt added in this article that Kennedy would soon meet with Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and stated that he had obtained her permission for Kennedy to write and produce the film.

A further article appeared in the Los Angeles papers carrying a date line of February 27, 1947, at New York, in which Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt stated that while her mind was not changed on the subject of pictures of the late President, her son James took the position that since there was no way to stop such pictures, it was better for the family to cooperate and thus obtain as accurate a presentation as possible.

On March 19, 1947, the Los Angeles Office reported that the status of Dierkes with this projected picture was not clear as of that date. They further reported that Dierkes was on a status of leave without pay with the Treasury Department until March 24, 1947, and that he had given no indication as yet as to what his future plans would be. The Los Angeles Office further reported in this connection that Dierkes has had an offer to return to the Treasury Department for active assignment, that his position with Jay Richard Kennedy could be extended at his option and, further, that he received an offer of Liaison Agent in Hollywood for the Jay Arthur Bank, Motion Picture Interests of Great Britain.

COMMUNIST INFILTRATION OF RKO STUDIOS

INTRODUCTION

Under the following designated sections there is incorporated herein the latest information available concerning the above entitled matter:

I. RKO Executive Organization and Staff.
II. RKO Producers
III. RKO Directors
IV. RKO Writers
V. RKO Actors and Actresses
VI. RKO Feature Pictures Containing Communist Propaganda.
VII. RKO Contracts with Soyuzintorgkino (Soviet Movie Trust) for Sales of Films.

As will be noted, much of this memorandum is devoted to digests of information concerning the leanings of persons affiliated with RKO. These descriptions are incorporated according to the categories in which they are employed at RKO Studios.

At the outset it may be stated that RKO ranks sixth in size and importance in the motion picture studio group in Hollywood. Since January 1, 1942, RKO has produced or released approximately ninety full length pictures, and in addition has produced and released many short subjects.

1. RKO Executive Organization and Staff.

RKO Radio Pictures has an executive office in New York City, which is responsible for the financing and management of the national and international aspects of the business. The studios are located in Hollywood, where the active production of the pictures takes place, and in addition, there is a motion picture exchange also located in Los Angeles where all pictures produced are marketed. This summary deals only with the production end of the business.

Personages [redacted]

Charles W. Koerner. According to [redacted] a reliable paid informant, Koerner, Executive Vice President in charge of production for RKO, must be aware of the Communist situation in this studio. The informant has advised that Koerner is a member of the Motion Picture Producers Association which has discussed the Communist situation in the motion picture industry on many occasions. [redacted] recalled that Congressman Martin Dies discussed this situation with the Executive Board of the Association some time ago. [redacted] has advised he does not believe that Koerner is sympathetic with the Communist movement, although he cannot be moved to take action against it. [redacted] has pointed out that the chief interest of Koerner, as head of production at RKO, is to release motion pictures with box office appeal in order that RKO may be financially successful, and that he is not interested in fighting Communism.

C. Bakaleinikoff. This person is Musical Director for RKO, and according to [redacted] the informant, Bakaleinikoff is Russian born and is affiliated with the Russian-American Club in Los Angeles, which was reportedly organized by Michael and Clara Walden, who are members of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Political Association. [redacted] has described Bakaleinikoff as a "careful sympathizer," one who is not particularly active in political affairs, but who has provided music for meetings sponsored by such organizations as the Los Angeles Council of American-Soviet Friendship and the Russian-American Club, both Communist groups.

James Crow is the assistant to William Dozier, General Production Aide to Koerner. According to [redacted] Crow was formerly President of the Los Angeles Newspaper Guild. He has advised that prior to the "Hollywood Citizen-News" strike in 1938, Crow cooperated with the Communist fraction in the American Newspaper Guild, although during this strike Crow was critical of the Party program. [redacted] states, however, that Crow still socializes with Communists, and that while Crow will follow the Communist program in some of its aspects he will not follow the Communist line completely.

William Dozier is the General Production Aide to Charles K. Koerner. [redacted] has advised that Dozier was formerly the head of the Story Department at Paramount Studio. In this capacity he hired such known Communists as [redacted]is, Bernard Gordon and Don Gordon. [redacted] states that there has been an affair between Meta Reis and Dozier of many years standing. Meta Reis, by way of identification, is a member of Club A-3 of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Political Association. The stage and screen magazine "Variety" of July 21, 1944, advises that Dozier had been made Aide to Koerner and that Dozier would act as General Production Supervisor for Koerner, supervising all story purchases as well as being in charge of writers and writers' assignments in addition to producing a number of important pictures. According to [redacted] Dozier, though not known as a Communist Political Association member, has been active in Communist affairs during the past year and one-half. The informant has also advised that Dozier was active in the 1943 Writers' Congress sponsored by the Communist controlled Hollywood Writers Mobilization. At this Congress he was a member of the Advisory Committee, as well as a member of the Feature Film Panel, which was chaired by Richard Collins, known member of the Communist Party. The informant has further reported that Dozier, while at Paramount Studios, elevated Adrian Scott, known Communist, from the rank of writer to the rank of Associate Producer. When Dozier left Paramount and came to RKO Scott followed him and is now with RKO. [redacted] has pointed out that in his capacity as Aide to Koerner, Dozier is the highest executive in the Hollywood RKO Studios, next to Koerner, and that in his capacity as a supervisor of the Writing and Story Departments, Dozier is in a position to pass on all Communist propaganda which might be injected into any film made by RKO, subject to revision only by Charles Koerner.

II. RKO Producers

Prior to setting forth the various people in this category with Communist affiliations at a varying degree, the following observations are made concerning the general capacity of a producer as based upon information of general knowledge and that supplied by [redacted]

The producer in a studio is the official responsible for and in charge of the actual production of a picture. In many cases producers are the heads of production companies or units which are almost independent of studio management, although the completed picture might bear the label of the studio releasing it. This is true with respect to RKO.

Producers are principally interested in completing a picture for profit and might neither be aware nor interested in any disguised Communist [redacted] injected into a given picture by the writers or directors, so long as the picture as a whole has box office appeal.

The producer is the final arbiter of what the picture is to contain when it is completed. Therefore he is in a position to cut out all Communist propaganda when he recognizes it or when he cares to take this action. Similarly, if a producer desires to inject Communist propaganda into a picture, he being in charge can do so; then the only person who can override the producer is the executive head in charge of production.

As of November 1, 1944, RKO had fifteen producers, fourteen associate producers and one short subject producer. Following are listed those RKO producers who have Communist affiliations or connections indicated:

Niven Busch has been described by [redacted] as one who appears to be sympathetic with the Communist movement and one who is supported by Communists because of his writings. The informant knows of no organization of a Communist character to which Busch has belonged, nor does he recall any specific pictures for which Communists have expressed their likes. He described Busch as a "liberal" writer.

Harold Edgar Clurman is said to be a native-born citizen. He is a director-producer and writer for RKO Studios. His father and mother are said to have been born in Russia. [redacted] states that Clurman claims to have directed twenty-five Broadway successes, including "Men in White", "Awake and Sing", "Gentle People", "Golden Boy", and "Deadline at Dawn."

[redacted] further advised that Clurman is a personal friend and associate of Franchot Tone, John Garfield and Clifford Odets, all of whom are said to be connected in the Communist movement. His wife is Stella Adler, an actress. While there is no definite record available to show Clurman is a member of the Communist Political Association, [redacted] has advised that Clurman has been active in the following Communist influenced or dominated groups:

Group Theater - a leader
Director of Marxist plays
International Union of Revolutionary Writers
Member of New Theater League
Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee - active worker.

[redacted] has further informed that Clurman made several trips to Russia, and at one time referred to the United States as the "middle class [redacted] world." He directed "Waiting for Lefty" and "Paradise Lost", both of which were written by Clifford Odets. He signed "the Letter of 150", justifying the Moscow purges in 1937. He protested against the release of "Tennessee Johnson" picture. He is also a lecturer at the Hollywood Writers School run by the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

Don Hartman is an Associate Producer, and according to [redacted] he was a member of the League of American Writers, and is presently active in the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, the successor to the League, both of which are Communist controlled. This informant has advised that [redacted] has also been active in the Hollywood Democratic Committee which is also a Communist controlled group.

David Hempstead. According to [redacted] Hempstead is a former screen director who has followed the line of the Communist fraction in the Screen Directors' Guild. [redacted] describes Hempstead as a sympathizer with the Communist movement and advises, however, that he has no evidence of actual membership on the part of Hempstead in the Communist Political Association. The informant could not advise of any organization under Communist control in which Hempstead has been active.

Nunnally Johnson. According to [redacted] Johnson was active in the Contemporary Theater during the years 1936 and 1937, which the informant has stated was organized and controlled by the Communist Party. He believes also that Johnson was active in the New Theater League also under the domination of Communists. [redacted] termed Johnson as one who, by his activities, has shown sympathy for the Communist movement, but described Johnson as having a "spotty" record, i.e., active only occasionally.

William Cameron Menzies. [redacted] has advised that Menzies was a former instructor at the League of American Writers' School for Writers in Hollywood, and is presently teaching at the People's Educational Center, Hollywood Extension, which is the successor to the School sponsored by the League of American Writers. Both groups have been described as being under Communist control. The informant does not know whether Menzies has been a member of the Communist Political Association.

Dudley Nichols is said by [redacted] to have been born in Ohio and educated at Oxford University, England. [redacted] has reported that Nichols came to Hollywood in 1933, and soon became a member of the John Reed Club, [redacted] writers club, and that in 1934 he was associated with John Howard Lawson, John Wexley, Robert Tasker and others, in organizing the Hollywood Motion Picture Writers Union, which is now known as the Screen Actors Guild. In 1936 the Communist gained complete control of this Guild. In addition, Nichols was very active in the following alleged Communist and Communist front organizations:

Screen Writers Guild
League of American Writers
Hollywood Writers School - teacher
American Peace Mobilization
North American Aviation, Inc. Wildcat Strike - June 1941 - supporter.
A chief speaker at Writers' Congress at UCLA, October, 1943.
Active in American League for Peace and Democracy, 1938-1939.
Sponsor of and active in Hollywood Anti-Nazi League. (Elected member of this group after culmination of "Stalin-Hitler Pact").
Supporter of "The Yanks are Not Coming" program.
Contemporary Theater.
New Theater League
International Union of Revolutionary Theaters - Moscow, 1932.
Signed protests against investigation of Moscow trials requested by John Dewey in 1937.
Supported Loyalist cause in Spain in 1937.
Member of reception committee for Andre Malraux - French Communist at time of visit in Hollywood, August 16, 1937.
Member of Sleepy Lagoon Defense Committee
Sponsor of Los Angeles Council of American Soviet Friendship.
Member of Citizens Committee for Harry Bridges.
Member of Screen Writers Guild
Member of Hollywood Writers' Mobilization.

Adrian Scott was formerly a writer at Paramount Studios and was [redacted] to the rank of producer at Paramount by William Dozier, described hereinbefore. Scott was subsequently made producer at RKO. According to available records pertaining to the membership list of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party of 1944, Scott was a member of Club A-1. These same records reflect Scott is presently a member of Club A-1, Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Political Association holding 1944 Communist Political Association Book Number 46832. Pearl Kann, the secretary of Scott, according to the same records, has acted as group membership director, as well as labor chairman in two clubs of the Northwest Section of the Communist Party, Los Angeles.

Orson Welles was born in the State of Wisconsin in 1915. He has been a director, actor and writer, and was formerly employed by RKO as a director. Positive proof of his affiliation with the Communist Political Association is not available. However, [redacted] has reported Welles has been affiliated over a period of time with the following organizations, either Communist controlled or influenced:

New Theater Alliance
League of American Writers
Attended 4th Writers' Congress -
University of California, Los Angeles, October 1-4, 1943.
Member of Bridges Defense Committee
Member of American Peace Mobilization
Member of Theater Arts Committee "TAC"
Sponsor of Rescue Ship Mission to Spain
Member of and active in Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee.
Sponsor of Los Angeles Council of American Soviet Friendship.
Member of Hollywood Democratic Committee.

III. RKO Directors

Prior to listing the various directors, the following observations are made as based upon information of general knowledge and that supplied by [redacted]

The director of a motion picture is in charge of the actual making and filming of the picture. He is in turn directly responsible to the producer. He has complete charge of the set, the actors, cameramen and other employees on the lot. He is in a position to inject Communist lines in a motion picture, subject only to revision by the producer.

As of November 1, 1944, there were eighteen directors on the payroll at RKO Studios. Following is a list along with descriptive data of [redacted] who have Communist affiliations:

Herbert Joseph Biberman is presently employed by RKO as a director and writer. According to membership records available of the Northwest Section, Los Angeles County, Communist Political Association, Biberman is presently attached to Club A-3. He was formerly organizer of Branch - B, Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party in 1943. He was the former West Coast director of the American Peace Mobilization, renowned Communist front. According to [redacted] Biberman at one time was the leader of Communist activity in the motion picture industry, but since June, 1941, when the Communist line changed to advocating all-out aid for the war effort he has been superseded by John Howard Lawson, movie writer. He has always been active in such groups as American Council on Soviet Relations, League of American Writers, Hollywood Writers Mobilization and Hollywood Democratic Committee.

Frank Borzage. According to [redacted] Borzage is mildly sympathetic to the Communist cause but [redacted] does not know any Communist organizations to which Borzage has belonged. The informant described Borzage as one "who goes along" with the Communist fraction in the Screen Directors League.

Danny Dare is a director of the dance and directs in all studios in Hollywood, according to information available. [redacted] states that Dare was a member of the New Theater League and the Hollywood Theater Alliance, and that he has been a teacher in the Actors Lab, described as a Communist controlled group to train actors and actresses. His last directing job, according to records available, was in "Meet the People", produced by M-G-M.

Edward Dmytryk. According to available records of the Northwest Section membership of the Los Angeles County Communist Party, Dmytryk in June 1944, was a member of Club A-3 (Writers). He is an instructor at the Peoples' Educational Center, a Communist group. According to information received, Dmytryk admitted to Mrs. Lela Rogers, RKO associate producer, that he is a Communist.

Howard Estabrook is not a known Communist membership book holder. [redacted] however, according to [redacted] he is a member of the League of American Writers, a Communist front and was a teacher at the League of American Writers School in Hollywood. He is presently an instructor of motion picture direction at the People's Educational Center, Hollywood Extension, which is the successor to the school sponsored by the League of American Writers. Estabrook has been affiliated with the Hollywood Writers' Mobilization, Communist successor group to the League of American Writers. He has recently been named secretary of the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions which, according to [redacted] was set up at the instigation of Communists to combat the Motion Picture Alliance for the Preservation of American Ideals, and anti-Communist organization. Estabrook is a member of the Executive Council of the Hollywood Democratic Committee in which organization he has been active. This organization is indicated to be a Communist controlled group. He is also a California sponsor of American Youth for Democracy, successor to the Young Communist League.

Fritz Lang. According to [redacted] Lang is a German refugee who came to the United States in 1936. He produced "Fury" and became a hero of the former Communist New Theater League as a result of this production. He has been currently active in the Free Germany Movement.

Lewis Milestone, according to [redacted] was born in Russia and claims that he was naturalized in New York City. The informant states that Milestone came to Hollywood in 1919 and that in 1936 he was active in the former Communist groups, the New Theater League and Contemporary Theater. Milestone, according to [redacted] served on the Committee to Honor Andre Malraux, French Communist who came to Hollywood in 1937 to collect funds for the Loyalist cause in Spain. He signed protests against the investigation of the Moscow trials requested by Professor John Dewey in 1937. He is an active member of the Communist Hollywood Democratic Committee and he sponsored the reception for Mikhail Kalatozov, Russian film director at the Mocambo Cafe, Hollywood, on August 12, 1943.

Leonide Moguy. According to [redacted] Moguy is a Russian refugee who mixes socially with Hollywood Communists. The informant knows of no Communist organization to which Moguy belongs, although he has stated that the Communists like Moguy.

Clifford Odets, according to [redacted] is a native-born citizen. He has been a writer and is now characterized as a director and a producer. He recently produced "None But the Lonely Heart" for RKO (described hereinafter). The plays "Waiting for Lefty", and "'Till the Day I Die" are attributed to his authorship, having been written during the years 1934 and 1935. According [redacted] these two plays are considered Communist propaganda since they glorified the role of the Communist Party in underground work and in trade union work.

[redacted] has advised that Odets has been active in the following Communist fronts and organizations and groups having Communist influence:

Member of the New Theater League - (Member of National Advisory Council of League in 1935 which was then affiliated with the International Union of Revolutionary Theaters with headquarters at Moscow.

Teacher in the New Theater School in New York.

Member of the Theater Arts Committee (TAC) - (Also member of National Advisory Council for organization).

One of the original organizers of the League of American Writers.

Chairman of the Delegation of Young Communists, who reportedly went to Cuba in 1936 to protest arrest of workers. (He is said to have been arrested in Cuba with other members of the group - wrote booklet "Rifle Rule in Cuba" in conjunction with Carl Stone Beals, which work has been described as pure Communist propaganda).

Sponsor of benefit in 1939 for Anti-Nazi Writers and the Abraham Lincoln Brigade.

In attendance at Fourth Writers Congress, New York City, June, 1941. (Then elected member of National Executive Board of the League).

On reception committee Honoring Mikhail Kalatozov, Russian film director - (At Mocambo Cafe, August 21, 1943).

John G. Honeycombe, a former Communist Party member, has stated that he was in attendance at Communist Party meetings with Clifford Odets.

[redacted] Communist [redacted] and later a writer [redacted] Communist groups in the motion picture industry. [redacted] has been active in the Hollywood Writers' Mobilization and was [redacted] of the panel entitled "Humor and the War" in the 1943 Writers' Congress sponsored by the Hollywood Writers' Mobilization, a Communist front. According to [redacted] he collaborated with Howard Koch in the preparation of the [redacted] play "Heavenly Days".

Jean Renoir [redacted] came to the United States sometime during [redacted] 1940 as a refugee from France. He is not a citizen.

[redacted] advised that Renoir directed "Our Native Land" which was written by Dudley Nichols, who is described hereinbefore as having numerous Communist connections. "Our Native Land" has been described as a propaganda picture depicting the middle-class as not being dependable in the defeat of Fascism and that only "the workers" can be trusted. The April 30, 1940 issue of "Peoples World" stated Renoir directed the French movie "People of France" which, according to [redacted] was done in conjunction with the Communist Party of France. Appearing in the picture was Maurice Thorez, the Earl Browder of France, and Marcel Cachin, who is said to have been one of the leaders of the Communist Party in France and editor of "Humanite". [redacted] has also advised that Renoir moves in Communist groups in Hollywood, although he is most careful about his activities, inasmuch as he is not a citizen.

William A. Seiter. According to [redacted] Seiter was active in 1943 in the Writers' Congress held under the auspices of the Hollywood Writers' Mobilization. The informant has stated that Seiter is a newcomer and appears to be developing in the Communist movement. However, he has no information that Seiter is actually a member of the Communist Political Association.

Jacques Tourneur. According to [redacted] Tourneur is a French refugee who socializes with Hollywood Communists.

[redacted] Writers

Prior to listing the various writers the following observations are set forth as based on information of general knowledge and that supplied by [redacted]

There are two types of writers in the studios, the original story writer and the scenario writer. The scenario writer writes dialog from an original story and consequently propaganda might be injected either into the original story or by the scenario writer. It is certain, however, that it is the writer who actually injects Communist propaganda into a picture because it is he who writes the script upon which the production of the picture is based.

It is to be noted that in the motion picture industry in the Los Angeles area, the Communists are the strongest nucleus of the writers' group. From information available as developed in connection with the case entitled "Communist Infiltration of the Motion Picture Industry", there are approximately eighty-five screen writers in the two writers' clubs of the Northwest Section of the Communist Political Association. According to [redacted] Communists have recognized the basic value of the writer in the production of the picture.

As of November 1, 1944, there were fifty-three writers at [redacted] sixteen of whom are contract writers, the remainder being hired only for individual pictures. Following is a list of those writers who have Communist records of affiliations as noted:

Zoe Akins in 1942 acted as an official of the Pasadena Book Panel for Allied Relief which group, according to information developed in the investigation of Communist activities, was organized by known Communists.

Benjamin Frank Barzman was born October 12, 1910 at Toronto, Canada and admitted to citizenship in this country, November 13, 1942, at Los Angeles, California. He has been a free lance writer and, as of June 1944 he was employed at RKO Studios. According to available membership lists of the Communist Party in Los Angeles, Barzman has been a member of Group A-2, Branch A, (Writers' Branch), Northwest Section, Los Angeles County Communist Party. His wife, Norma Barzman, is a writer who has been employed at the Los Angeles Examiner, and who has been a member of Branch A, Northwest Section, Los Angeles County Communist Party.

Vicki Baum who is the novelist, was born, according to [redacted] in Austria. [redacted] has stated she has signed many petitions sponsored by Communist controlled organizations, and has been a follower of the Communist program continually. The informant has no evidence that she is an actual member of the Communist Political Association.

Herbert Biberman. (Biberman was described previously under "RKO Directors").

Allen Boretz. According to Communist Party membership lists available Boretz was recently a member of Club A-1, Northwest Section, Los Angeles County Communist Party, holding 1944 Communist Party Book Number 43621. There is no record of his current activity in the Communist Political Association.

Harold Buchman. According to available Communist membership lists of the Northwest Section, Los Angeles Section, Communist Political Association, Buchman is literature director of Club A-1, Northwest Section, holding 1944 Communist Political Association Book Number 46302. Buchman has been active in the Hollywood Writers' Mobilization and in the Hollywood Democratic Committee. He was a member of the Executive Board of the West Coast American Peace Mobilization during its existence.

Val Burton. According to available membership lists of the Los Angeles Communist Political Association, Burton is a member of Club A-3, Northwest Section, holding 1944 Communist Political Association membership card number 46803. He is active in the Hollywood Democratic Committee and the Hollywood Writers' Mobilization.

Edward Chodorov. According to available membership lists of the Communist Party, Northwest Section, Los Angeles, Chodorov was a member of Branch Y., (composed of people out of the city), and was scheduled to be transferred to the New York Cultural Section of the Communist Party on April 28, 1944.

[redacted] has advised that Chodorov was a member of the League of American Writers. [redacted] further informed that Chodorov signed the call to the Fourth Congress of American Writers in 1941.

Jay Dratler, according to [redacted] was one of the editors of "Communique" published by the Hollywood Writers' Mobilisation in 1942. The [redacted] of this publication followed the Communist Party line. According to [redacted] Dratler has been active in the Hollywood Writers' Mobilisation, the Hollywood Democratic Committee, and the Screen Writers' Guild, all of which are controlled by Communists.

Howard Estabrook. (Described previously under Section "RKO Directors").

John Fante, according to [redacted] is an Italian by birth and is believed to be a naturalised citizen. He was a member of the League of American Writers and is close to Orson Welles, collaborating with him in scenario writing.

Anne Froelich. According to available membership lists of the Northwest Section, Communist Party, Los Angeles, she was a member of Club A-3, having 1944 Communist Party membership book #48673. Her 1944 Communist Political Association membership book is not available, although she was recently observed in attendance at a Communist Political Association meeting (Club A-3) by Bureau Agents.

Oliver H. P. Garrett. According to [redacted] Garrett is a former novelist. [redacted] has advised that Garrett is a member of the League of American Writers, the Hollywood Writers' Mobilization, and has been active in the Hollywood Council of Guilds and Unions which was formed to combat the Motion Picture Alliance for the Preservation of American Ideals, a group organized to combat Communism. According to [redacted], a reliable paid informant until recently in the Communist Political Association, Garrett was one of the principal speakers at a meeting on June 28, 1944, of the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions, at which time Garrett gave what the informant described as the most settled Communist speech of the evening before nine hundred people.

Sheridan Gibney. According to [redacted] Gibney was formerly President of the Screen Writers' Guild and is currently active in the Hollywood Writers' Mobilization. He participated in the 1943 Writers' Congress sponsored by the Hollywood Writers' Mobilization. According to [redacted] in 1943 Gibney held a reception at his home for Paul Robeson and Max Yergan, both Negroes, at which the Communist element in Hollywood was well represented. Yergan and Robeson are well known for their Communist affiliations.

Frances Goodrich. According to [redacted] she is very sympathetic with the Communist program. Her husband is Albert Hackett, described hereinafter.

Morton Grant. According to membership records available of the Los Angeles County Communist Party, Grant held 1944 Communist Party membership book #50542 and was a member of Club A-3. According to [redacted] was a member of the League of American Writers and participated in the 1943 Writers' Congress sponsored by the Hollywood Writers' Mobilization, in which group he is also active. His home has been a meeting place for Communists.

Albert Hackett. According to [redacted] Hackett has long been active in the Communist movement in Hollywood and was a member of the League of American Writers. He was elected to the Executive Board of the Screen Writers' Guild in October, 1944. The informant has advised that Hackett was never a leader in any other movements, nor does he have any proof that Hackett is actually a member of the Communist Political Association.

Don Hartman. (Previously described under Section "RKO Producers").

Lillian Hellman. (Mrs. Arthur Kober). This person has a long record as a sympathizer with the Communist movement. According to [redacted] she has been officially connected with the National Headquarters of the Communist Party, New York City. She is the author of "Watch on the Rhine" and she wrote "North Star". Both have been made into pictures which are considered to have a strong propaganda content. The records of the Bureau reflect her to have connections with innumerable known and reported Communists, as well as Communist front groups.

Nunnally Johnson. (Previously described under Section "RKO Producers").

Aven Kandel. [redacted] has described Kandel as a "mild" Communist sympathizer. The informant has stated that Kandel rationalizes a great deal and does not follow the Communist line completley.

Herbert Kline. According to Los Angeles County Communist Party records made available in 1943, Kline was a member of the Newspaper Unit of the Los Angeles County Communist Party in 1938. On July 16, 1944, his car was observed at a "People's World" benefit party at the home of E. Y. Harburg, 191 North Bentley Avenue, West Los Angeles. The "People's World" is the West Coast Communist news organ. According to [redacted] Kline has been an instructor in the League of American Writers School for Writers, and [redacted]ly teaches at the People's Educational Center, successor to this school.

She is further reported to [redacted] as having been a member of the League of American Writers and the American Peace Mobilization. The informant has no information on the specific activities of Landau.

S. K. Lauren. [redacted] advised that Lauren has been active in the Hollywood Writers' Mobilization and in the Hollywood Democratic Committee. The informant further advised that while he did not know whether Lauren was a member of the League of American Writers, he did recall that Lauren was very closely associated with it.

Emmet Lavery was recently elected President of the Screen Writers' Guild and also Chairman of the Hollywood Writers' Mobilization. According to [redacted] Lavery, himself, is not a known Communist, although he is sympathetic with the movement and the Communists are using him as a front because he is not known as a Communist at the studio [redacted] advised Lavery is comparatively new and in his opinion the Communists can use him successfully. Lavery was active in the 1943 Writers' Congress as sponsored by the Hollywood Writers' Mobilization and has been active in the past year in the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions, which group it is recalled was established to fight the Motion Picture Alliance for the Preservation of American Ideals - an anti-Communist group. According to technical sources close to John Howard Lawson, who is regarded as the real Communist leader in Hollywood, when Lester Cole, former President of the Screen Writers' Guild, was nominated for reelection, Cole withdrew in order that Lavery would have no opposition. According to the same sources the reason for this move was that the Communists did not want to split the progressive vote and, accordingly, backed Lavery in the election. It is to be noted that he had no opposition since he was the only one nominated for the position.

Arnold Manoff. According to available Communist Party membership records, Manoff was formerly Educational Director of Club A-3, Northwest Section, Los Angeles County Communist Party, holding membership book #10909. According to dispatches in the "People's World", he made a trip to Europe and was in Russia, but returned around the first of November, 1944, at which time he was discharged from the United States Army.

V. R.K.O. Actors and Actresses

R.K.O. has no contract "star players" although it employes what are known as "stock players", generally hired for a period of six months, and consequently, the players roster is continually changing.

The "star players", when used in an R.K.O. release, are signed only for the picture and are not under regular contract. Since January 1, 1942, approximately 160 different actors and actresses have had leading roles in R.K.O. feature pictures. As of November 1, 1944, R.K.O. had fifty-five "stock players" on its roster. Listed below are those actors and actresses who, since January 1, 1942, have taken a leading part in pictures produced or released by R.K.O. and who have Communist connections as indicated. There are listed also those "stock players" with Communist connections who are presently on the R.K.O. roster.

Lucille Ball, motion picture actress. According to [redacted] she is a member of the Screen Actors' Guild and to his personal knowledge, she has taken an active part in and supported Communist-controlled fronts in the Hollywood area over a period of six or seven years. She was registered as a Communist voter in 1936. [redacted] has also stated that in 1936, Lucille Ball was appointed as a member of the state-controlled committee of the then Communist Party of Los Angeles County. The official records of the Registrar of Voters reflects that she sponsored Communist candidates for office in 1936 (When a voter sponsors a candidate, the voter must state that he or she is a member of the party to which the candidate being sponsored belongs). According to Rene Valle, former Communist Party member and subsequent witness for the California State Legislative Investigative Committee, she, Rene Valle, attended over a period of time, Communist Party new members' classes at the home of Lucille Ball on North Ogden Drive. This informant also stated that since Lucille Ball has become prominent, she has not been taking an open stand in Communist activities.

Lloyd (Bud) Bridges. According to available Communist Political Association membership records, Bridges joined the then Communist Party in 1943, and was assigned to Branch K of the Northwest Section and now holds 1944 Communist Political Association Card No. 46950. Bridges is also active in the Actors' Laboratory, Communist Actors' Work Shop.

According to [redacted] she was a member of the Emergency Committee of the Communist Anti-Nazi League to save that organization at the time many deserted [redacted] organization because of the pact between Stalin and Hitler. She has also been a member of the American Peace Mobilization and the Motion Picture Artists' Committee for Spanish Aid. Proof of her membership in the Communist Political Association is not available.

Morris Carnovsky. According to available membership records of the Communist Party in Los Angeles, Carnovsky and his wife, known professionally as "Pheobe Brand", were transferred from New York to the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles Communist Party in early 1944. Carnovsky now holds 1944 Communist Political Association membership card No. 46952. He is attached to Branch F, Northwest Section.

Aaron Copland is a musician and according to [redacted] was a member of the League of American Writers and a former instructor at its school. [redacted] has also advised that Copland was active in the 1944 Musicians' Congress reportedly organized and controlled by Communists. He was also active in supporting the Harry Bridges Defense Committee.

Joseph Cotton. According to [redacted] Cotton is a member of the Executive Board of the Screen Actors' Guild and is a sympathizer with Communist aims, but is not a member. [redacted] has advised that Cotton supplied his name to many front organization [redacted]es and is a member of the Communist Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee. He is a product of the Actors' Laboratory, Communist actors' workshop and is currently active in the Hollywood Democratic Committee.

Olivia De Havilland. [redacted] has informed that to his personal knowledge, this person began exhibiting sympathy for the Communist cause in Hollywood in 1942, and since that time, has taken an active part in various Communist front activities such as the Hollywood Committee for Writers in Exile and the Free People's Dinner honoring Paul Robeson. She is a sponsor of the Communist Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee. She signed a protest sent to the State Department, protesting the detention of Jesus Hernandes Tomas, Spanish Communist who was temporarily held by Immigration authorities at Seattle, Washington in 1943. She attended the reception of Mikhail Kalatozov, Soviet motion picture representative, at the Mocambo Cafe, Hollywood, on August 22, 1943. She is a sponsor of the Los Angeles Council of American-Soviet Friendship and a member of and active in the Russian-American Club.

John Garfield, Alias Jacob Garfinkel. According to [redacted] Garfield is a citizen and has had his name officially changed to John Garfield. He is a member of the Screen Actors' Guild. The informant has advised that Garfield has been very active in Communist front activities for the past seven years and further, that Garfield teaches at the [redacted]ood Writers' School, a Communist organized school. [redacted] advised that Garfield returned home on or about May 1, 1944, from the Italian front where he had been on an entertainment tour. At this time, Garfield advised he had interviewed Marshal Tito while in Europe and eulogized Tito for his great efforts. According to available Communist membership records, Garfield's wife, Roberta, was active in Branch H, Northwest Section, Los Angeles Committee of the Communist Party and has been a member of the Communist Political Association.

Ira Girshwin. According to [redacted] Girshwin is a member of the League of American Writers and a former instructor in its school. He has been active in the Musicians' Congress, the Hollywood Democratic Committee and has been a sponsor of the Harry Bridges Defense Committee.

Cary Grant. [redacted] has advised he knows Grant to be a Communist sympathizer, although he knows of no Communist organization with which Grant has been affiliated. The informant stated that Communists make a great deal over Grant, although he does not know whether Grant fraternizes with them.

Paul Guilfoyle. According to [redacted] he is an Actors' Lab product who was formerly active in the Hollywood Theater Alliance. Guilfoyle was an actor in the stage musical, "Meet the People", a 1940 anti-war show, reportedly produced by Communists. The informant does not know whether Guilfoyle is actually a member of the Communist Political Association.

Paul Henreid. According to [redacted] Henreid was born in Austria and is a product of the Actors' Lab, Communist Actors' Workshop and a sympathizer with Communists. He is not known as a Communist and the informant knows of no other organization of a Communist nature to which Henreid has belonged.

James Wong Howe was a former instructor in the Hollywood League of American Writers' School for Writers and is presently an instructor in the People's Educational Center, successor to the Writers' School. He currently lives with Sonora Babb, who holds, according to available membership records, 1944 Communist Political Association membership card No. 46824.

Walter Houston. [redacted] informs that information on Houston's membership in the Communist Political Association is lacking but that to his [redacted] personal knowledge, Houston has supported Communist and Communist-controlled activities. He is a member of the Executive Board of the Hollywood Democratic Committee. [redacted] advised that Houston is a close friend and associate of Jay Leyda and Joris Ivens, Communists who are important in the production of documentary propaganda films. Houston was attached to the League of American Writers and the Hollywood Writers' Mobilization. According to [redacted] Houston has met many times with leading Communists at open meetings.

Dean Jagger. According to [redacted] this person is sympathetic with the Communist movement, although not active therein.

Ruth Nelson. According to available Communist membership records, Ruth Nelson was recruited into the then Communist Party in 1943, and now holds Communist Political Association membership card No. 41773. According to [redacted] she is a product of the Actors' Lab, a Communist Actors' Work Shop. Further, according to this informant, Ruth Nelson is considered by Communists to be one of their best developments and is receiving the Communist "build up". It is to be noted she plays an important part in the motion picture "Wilson".

Rosalind Russell. According to [redacted] she has been a member and a sponsor of a large number of Communist fronts, among which have been: Hollywood Anti-Nazi League; Hollywood League for Democratic Action; "Committee of Fifty-Six" - an organization advocating the severance of relations with Germany prior to the Stalin-Hitler Pact; Motion Picture Democratic Committee; Free World Association of Hollywood; and Hollywood Democratic Committee (Executive Board).

George Sanders. According to [redacted] he is an Actors' Laboratory product. He is a member of the Screen Actors' Guild and is described by the informant as a Communist sympathizer, although the informant cannot advise of any Communist front group connections of Sanders. He added that Sanders is definitely not a leader and that he has no evidence of his actual Communist Political Association membership.

Tamara Toumanova. According to [redacted] she is the wife of Casey Robinson, producer at R.K.O. She is a Russian-born dancer who is the product of the former New Theater League, a Communist-controlled organization.

Orson Welles. (Described hereinbefore under Section "R.K.O. Producers").

VI. R.K.O. Feature Pictures Containing Communist Propaganda

At the outset, Informant [redacted] has stated that the "western" or "mystery" type of escapist film are not a suitable vehicle for Communist [redacted]anda and that Communists do not expect that every picture or even a majority of pictures produced by a studio, be a Communist vehicle. The informant has advised that from his experience in the Communist movement, Communists consider themselves successful even if one of twenty-five motion pictures contain important Communist propaganda. He stated this propaganda may consist of the spoken words, the actions or even the implications in sequences.

Communist propaganda has varied over a period of years and it is to be remembered that prior to June 1, 1941, Communists declared the present war to be an imperialist war, but since that time and continuing to the present time, Communists have completely reversed themselves and in varying stages have fallen in line with the Government's program of "win the war and win the peace", proclaiming themselves to be "super-patriots". This pretended position, according to [redacted] is merely a pretext and in fact, the Communists have so cloaked themselves in order to deceive the public and gain prestige and leadership.

The informant has advised that the present tactics of the Communist movement in the use of the motion picture as a propaganda medium are to refrain from directly advocating Communism, but to create sympathy for the Soviet Union and picture the Communist, either national or international, as a patriotic, loyal supporter of democratic processes. It is for these reasons Communist propaganda in motion pictures may be extremely difficult to detect. Further, the "patriotic" role of the Communists is being utilized to the fullest extent to further penetrate the industry. The informant states that the purpose of this intensive penetration is to prepare for the future so that the powerful influence of the motion picture may be used in the interests of internationalism, according to the Marxist-Lenin philosophies.

Recently two articles have appeared in the press, one in PM and the other in the Daily Worker, which have indicated feelings that R.K.O. cooperates with "Fascists". In the July 28, 1944, issue of PM, in the column by McManus, entitled, "Speaking of Movies", R.K.O. is referred to in the following manner:

> "Most recently, however, it has accepted the unique and unenviable stigma, being the only American film company willing and anxious to distribute Fascist-made films in the U.S.A. It is distributing (or trying to distribute) the Franco-made Spanish film, Goyescas, in the U.S.A. as a tribute for the privilege of distributing its Hollywood product in Fascist Spain. Goyescas is the film Winchell attacked on the radio Sunday night."

It was further stated in this article:

"Apart from a mounting indignation and disgust with this sort of trading with the enemy's agents, there has also been a growing concern over how such a reciprocal trade agreement with a Fascist country might affect a Hollywood studio's own production quality. Obviously anti-Fascist films would not be permitted on the market in a Fascist land. Obviously too, no business-like Hollywood studio can afford to produce films for export only. The inescapable conclusion therefore is that all its productions must be acceptable to all its markets which, logically means an end to anti-Fascist film-making by studios aiming to trade with Fascists."

The article then refers, however, to the fact that R.K.O. had, in the past, produced anti-Fascist films, such as "This Land is Mine" and "Tender Comrade".

With regard to its future releases, the article states that R.K.O. promises fifty or more feature-length "escapist and comedy themes" predominately, with the exception of one or two "prestige pictures". The article states,

"Otherwise, for the great burden of the way, the going will be intrigue, bang-bang, and technicolor kisses, the same old messy misrepresentation of America and its tastes that characterized most Hollywood film production in the prewar years."

In the other article referred to previously, the one appearing on page fifteen, Section I of the September 17, 1944, Daily Worker, was entitled "Warner Brothers Respect Franco". This article refers to a West Coast article describing how Hollywood has responded to Franco's summons to do business with him and his silent Axis partners. It is stated:

"R.K.O. and Universal are already doing business with him. Paramount and 20th Century-Fox are reported interested, but Warner Brothers has unofficially let out the word that they will not take part. 'Unofficially' perhaps because our State Department is involved to the extent that it is encouraging this exchange of business between the countries. Yet no anti-Axis sentiments are permitted in any of the pictures accepted by Franco. This is bound to have some influence on the content of films. Does it account for the fact, or is it just coincidental, that Universal acknowledges a present schedule of chiefly 'escapist' musicals?"

The reported exchange of films between this country and Spain is attacked in the article and Warner Brothers is set up as the "consistent" studio since it will reportedly not do business with Spain.

Within the past year, several movies which, according to the informant, contain Communist propaganda, have been produced by R.K.O. These are listed hereinbelow with a brief description of each.

"The North Star" - a Samual Goldwyn production released by R.K.O. [redacted]irector of this picture was Lewis Milestone, a sponsor of and active in a large number of Communists fronts. The writer of the script was Lillian Hellman, a reputed Communist and a close associate of known Communists. Jay Leyda who was Technical Director is a known Communist Party member. The film deals with life in a small town in Soviet Russia prior to the time of the Nazi invasion and subsequent to that invasion. The picture has been attacked viciously in the press as Communist propaganda of the Soviet Union and as a picture of life in the Soviet Union which is not consistent with the facts.

"This Land Is Mine". This was released in June, 1943, and is a war drama dealing with conditions in the occupied territories under Nazi domination. The screen play was written by Dudley Nichols who was co-producer with Jean Renoir, both of whom have been described hereinbefore.

[redacted] has advised that this picture conveys the idea that the middle-class cannot be trusted to fight against dictatorship, but that only the working class can be relied upon to fight Fascism and that it follows the principle of class opposition as advocated by Marxist ideology. In its cast are George Sanders, Phillip Merivale and Walter Slezak, all of whom, according to [redacted] have cooperated with persons favoring the Communist Political Association line.

"Government Girl". This was produced and directed by Dudley Nichols, described hereinbefore. The writer of the picture was Bud Wilson Schulberg, described hereinbefore. The star of the picture was Olivia De Havilland who, according to [redacted] has been in frequent contact with Communist elements and has been associated with the Communist-controlled Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee.

"Tender Comrade". This was written by Dalton Trumbo, described hereinbefore. It was produced by David Hempstead and directed by Edward Dmytrik, who has been described hereinbefore. [redacted] claims that lines in this movie were of the Communist propaganda type.

"None But The Lonely Heart". This was directed by Clifford Odets and produced by David Hempstead who, according to [redacted] has shown decided sympathies for Communism over a period of years. The male star is Cary Grant, who has been alleged by [redacted] to move socially in Communist circles.

VII. R.K.O. Contracts With Soyuzintorgkino (Soviet Movie Trust) For Sale Of Films

It has been learned from the Foreign Agents Registration Section of the War Division, Department of Justice that on July 13, and July 17, 1944, conversations were had with [redacted] one of the Vice-Presidents of R.K.O. studios relative to the matter of establishing a corporation composed of stock holders from R.K.O. and Soyuzintorgkino, the Soviet motion picture combine. [redacted] pointed out to the Foreign Agents Registration Section that R.K.O. and Soyuzintorgkino were contemplating dividing the profits equally. No further progress at that time was indicated. However, the October 9, 1944, issue of the "News Week" Magazine carried an article to the effect that R.K.O. and Soyuzintorgkino had entered into an arrangement whereby R.K.O. will distribute five films each year which cost $50,000 each to produce, and in turn, Soyuzintorgkino is to release a like number for R.K.O. in Russia. R.K.O., according to the article, was not made the sole global distributor of Russian films.

To date, no additional information has been received with regard to this arrangement or with regard to the character of the movies to be released. Undoubtedly, however, the Soviet films which will be furnished to R.K.O. will be highly propagandistic if the previous policy of the Soviet Union in the making and distribution of its films is followed. Furthermore, any film made by R.K.O. for distribution in the Soviet Union will undoubtedly be censored most carefully by the Soviet Union.

"RKO Soyuzintorgkino Deal"

The October 9, 1944, issue of "News Week" (page 24), carried the following item:

> "In Hollywood's current scramble for the post-war foreign film market, RKO has out-sprinted the other studios by signing a two year contract with Soyuzintorgkino (Soviet Movie Trust). Under the deal, RKO will distribute, in the United States and elsewhere as agreed upon by the trust, a yearly minimum of five Soviet films purchased at $50,000. In return for every Russian picture the U. S. studio handles, Soyuzintorgkino will purchase an RKO movie at the same price for distribution with the U.S.S.R. To facilitate these business deals, a new corporation soon will be set up with RKO and the Russian film trust, each holding a 50% interest. The Soviet Union's determination to cut its own slice of the world film market is seen in the trust's refusal to name RKO as sole global distributor of Russian films."

(November 14, 1946, through February 14, 1947)

[redacted]chary

Dore Schary has been elevated to the vice presidency of RKO pictures and put in charge of all production of pictures under a five-year contract. This company, Radio-Keith-Orpheum (RKO), is one of the major companies in the motion picture industry in Hollywood. The appointment of Mr. Schary was made by David Selznick, the head of the company.

Mr. Schary, as director of all production, would determine the type of picture produced, the personnel employed in the cultural preparation and direction of the picture; in fact, his power would determine the entire trend of the production of that major producting company.

Mr. Schary has a long record of activity as a strong Communist sympathizer. Some of his activities are as follows:

Former member of the League of American Writers,
Teacher in the Hollywood Writers School conducted by the League of American Writers. This League of American Writers was affiliated with the International Union of Revolutionary Writers, headquarters, Moscow, Russia. This school is now known as the Peoples Educational Center and is still under Communist control,
Was a member of, and extremely active in, the Hollywood Writers Mobilization,
Member of the "advisory committee" of the Fifth Writers Congress,
Member Executive Council of the Hollywood Democratic Committee,
Member Executive Council of Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions. Was also vice president of this organization.
Member of the Russian-American Club of Hollywood, and Supported the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions, an organization set up to defend Communists in the motion picture industry.

VII. INVESTIGATION OF COMMUNIST ACTIVITIES IN THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY BY THE COMMITTEE ON UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

The House Committee on un-American Activities announced to the public on June 20, 1945, that it had voted to investigate subversive activities in Hollywood to determine whether film stars and producers were involved in a plot to overthrow the government. John E. Rankin of Mississippi, Acting Chairman of the Committee, made the announcement, stating that so much mail had been received about a dangerous plot to overthrow the government centering around Hollywood that the Committee had voted to send investigators to the west coast at once. Mr. Rankin did not elaborate in his statement to the press on the persons involved in the alleged plot or its nature but indicated that before the investigation was finished some "big names" would enter into the inquiry.

REASON FOR THE PROPOSED INVESTIGATION

The decision of the House un-American Activities Committee to inquire into Communist infiltration of the motion picture industry appears to have been prompted by articles originating in Los Angeles newspapers following a meeting in that city on June 8, 1945, which was sponsored by "New Masses" magazine and held in honor of William Gropper, cartoonist for that publication. This meeting was arranged by Doretta Tarmon, field director for "New Masses." The principal speakers were Richard Bransten, also known as Bruce Minton, who is contributing editor to "New Masses;" Ruth McKenney, wife of Richard Branstan, who is also a contributing editor for "New Masses;" Joseph Foster, film editor for "New Masses;" and William Gropper.

Clippings from Los Angeles papers which were made available at the time stated that speakers at the meeting indicated that Communist propaganda and activities would in the future become centered around Hollywood; that Communists were seeking to strengthen their ties with the White House; that relations between the United States and the Chiang Kai-Shek Government of China must be broken in order to further the plan of Sovietizing all of Asia; that pressure must be exerted to continue lend-lease aid to Russia; and that pretty young girls in the Communist Youth movement should be used to favorably influence men in the armed forces. The Los Angeles "Examiner" published a story setting out the reaction of several civic organizations and civic leaders to the reported disclosures made at the meeting, all expressing indignation and demanding action to counteract the alleged Communist program.

The Los Angeles Office reported that information regarding the meeting on June 8, 1945, had been received from informants prior to the time it was held and that inasmuch as it was indicated information of some significance could be obtained from coverage of the meeting, which was a public one, agents of the Los Angeles Office were in attendance.

According to the agents, the meeting had as its Chairman, Joseph Foster and the first actual speech was delivered by Ruth McKenney who opened by offering some rather humorous and not particularly serious observations regarding her experiences at the San Francisco United Nations Conference. The agents advised that McKenney did, however, during her address, find occasion to praise the position of the U.S.S.R. and to ridicule the attitude of the United States State Department.

Richard Branstan in addressing the meeting also spoke regarding the United Nations Conference, stressing particularly the need for exerting pressure upon the State Department to induce its return to the foreign policy of the late President Roosevelt and to carry out the provisions of the Yalta agreement. Branstan is said to have particularly ridiculed former President Hoover and Senator Vandenberg; to have repeatedly emphasized throughout his speech the need for strengthening "Big Three" unity; and to have stressed the necessity of putting an end to the growing trend toward "Soviet baiting."

According to the agents, the speech made by William Gropper dealt only with the history and policies of "New Masses" magazine. Each of the speakers found occasion to appeal for support of "New Masses" in the form of subscriptions and contributions.

The Los Angeles Office has advised that the "Examiner" in its newspaper stories regarding the meeting had to some extent embellished the statements of the above-named speakers whose alleged remarks appeared in quotation marks in newspaper articles. The agents who covered the meeting were of the opinion that some of these quotations were not correct, although the nature of the meeting was such that the Agents could not take notes.

One particular inaccuracy pointed out was the statement quoted in the Los Angeles "Examiner" that "the thousands of pretty young girls in our Communist Youth movement must volunteer as hostesses in USO's, canteens, churches, social groups--wherever the soldiers, sailors and marines seek recreation and are prone to listen to pursuasive voices." The agents pointed out also that although the "Examiner" made the statement that the program presented had been "carefully blueprinted in New York City by Earl Browder and other American Soviets," no such statement, in fact, had been made at the meeting.

The reaction of the Agents present at the meeting as to what was said and outlined by the speakers was generally at variance with the conclusions reported in the Los Angeles "Examiner." They have stated that nothing was said by the speakers or suggested during a question and answer period to indicate any change in the policies of the Communist organization. They have advised that nothing was said from which the conclusion could be drawn that the Communist Political Association was transferring its center of operations from New York City to Hollywood. Furthermore, nothing was announced or said at this meeting, according to the agents, to indicate a plan had been formulated by the CPA to win over the armed forces to a sympathetic viewpoint.

According to the Los Angeles Office, there is no question but that the meeting held on June 8, 1945, was a completely Communist dominated gathering. Two of the principal speakers, Richard Branston and his wife, Ruth McKenney, are contributing editors to "New Masses" and both are known by the Los Angeles Office to have been members of the Communist Political Association assigned to the 59th Assembly District Club in Los Angeles. The meeting was held for the purpose of honoring William Gropper, cartoonist for "New Masses," and to increase interest in that publication as well as to obtain donations and subscriptions therefor.

Information was received from confidential sources subsequent to the date of the meeting indicating that Communist leaders in Los Angeles were considerably aroused at the manner in which the function was treated by the press. According to the Los Angeles Office, there were indications that Branston and his wife would protest to the "Examiner" and demand a retraction of the story. It was also indicated that Branston might possibly seek legal advice as to whether he had a libel case against the newspaper for the publication of the stories. No information has been received, however, that a protest was made directly to the "Examiner" or that any legal proceedings were instituted.

REACTION OF THE CPA TO THE NEWSPAPER CLIPPINGS

The reaction of the national office of the Communist Political Association to the newspaper publicity referred to above was indicated by a letter dated June 13, 1945, from John Williamson of the CPA national office in New York City to William Schneiderman, State Secretary in California. A photostatic copy of this letter which is set out below was furnished the San Francisco Office by a highly confidential source of information.

"June 13, 1945

"Mr. SCHNEIDERMAN,
San Francisco.

Dear BILL: Copies to RED SPARKS and JOE NORTH.

"A number of districts have sent in to me copies of newspapers carrying a long news item from Los Angeles.

[redacted] this memo tells there are made alleged quotations from [redacted] MIRICH, [redacted] McKENNEY and JOSEPH FOSTER at a Hollywood meeting sponsored by the New Masses.

"The sort of things that are attributed to these 3 speakers are so grotesque as to be unbelievable. I just cannot imagine that any Communist in his right mind would say such politically incorrect, not to speak about provocative, things which have nothing in common with the program or policies of the CPA.

"I feel confident that there must be some distortion, although all of the things are in quotation marks.

"We would like to get an immediate reply dealing specifically with this question.

"Fraternally,

JOSHUA."

STATEMENTS OF PRINCIPAL FIGURES INVOLVED REGARDING THE NEWSPAPER PUBLICITY

Walter Wanger, who shortly after the publication of the newspaper articles mentioned above attempted to secure a statement from the Director that no plot to overthrow the government as had been alleged existed, submitted to the Bureau copies of affidavits which had been prepared by the following persons, all of whom had reportedly participated in the "New Masses" meeting on June 8, 1945: William Gropper, cartoonist for "New Masses;" Richard Branstem, also known as Bruce Minton, west coast representative for "New Masses;" Ruth McKenney, wife of Richard Branstem, now under contract with Paramount Studios; and Joseph Foster, film editor for "New Masses."

William Gropper in his affidavit deposes that none of the statements attributed to him by the Los Angeles "Examiner" resembled in any way, in whole or in part, the remarks made by him at the "New Masses" meeting. Richard Branstem, Ruth McKenney, and Joseph Foster likewise in their affidavits denied that they had made the statements attributed to them regarding the Communist Party and its principles. They expressed the opinion that the newspaper stories were complete fabrications for the purpose of smearing the progressive movement in Hollywood and furnishing a springboard for an investigation of the movie colony.

[redacted] Attorney in the June 30, 1943 issue of the "New Masses" published an article in which she denied the statements attributed to her and characterized the entire matter as a "[illegible]"

STATEMENTS AND REACTIONS TO THE CONGRESSIONAL INVESTIGATION

[redacted] a confidential informant regarding Communism in the motion picture industry, advised that the immediate reaction in Hollywood to the "New Masses" meeting and to the publicity afforded it was that many persons connected with the motion picture industry issued statements denying that there were any Communist activities in the various studios, claiming that the entire commotion could be laid to publicity-seeking individuals. The informant stated, however, that motion picture producers were very much perturbed by the developments. The film industry and all interests allied thereto were generally violently opposed to the Congressional investigation.

The July 2, 1945, issue of "Variety," movie trade paper, under the heading, "Accuse Rankin of Trying to Bust Page One" stated in part that the new Hollywood smear investigation was just an effort by a "flop" committee to crash the front pages. The story continued that Los Angeles congressmen had accused Representative John Rankin and the House Committee on Un-American Activities of following the well-recognized technique of trying to bust the front pages by working through the motion picture industry.

The article quoted Congressman Ned R. Healy of Los Angeles as stating: "This move is typical of sort of Rankin's activities. He obviously is following in the footsteps of his predecessor, Martin Dies. This is an attempt to drive underground all members of the motion picture industry. It is the old Red smear."

Congressman Ellis E. Patterson of Beverly Hills, California, was quoted as saying: "The whole thing is an attempted smear of Hollywood in order to hurt the film industry and to get a lot of publicity..... It's the old Red herring drawn across the band of freedom of speech and thought."

Congresswoman Helen Gahagan Douglas charged: "It is a plan to get publicity through a smear of the film industry. It is an effort to crush liberalism among the Democrats of the area."

Gordon L. McDonough of Hollywood, the only Republican representative from the area, also joined the denunciation of the Rankin investigation as an effort to "smear the motion picture industry."

[redacted] has reported that a [redacted] survey by investigators for the Congressional Committee [redacted] activities has been started. This reports the investigators did not consider the strike or the agitation within the trade unions, but devoted most of their investigations to the so-called cultural groups and to writers, directors and actors. They reportedly paid particular attention to the connections between the Office of War Information and the Hollywood Writers Mobilization and the Screen Writers Guild. According to the informant, the investigators also took into the matter of various schools of indoctrination, specifically the Abraham Lincoln School, the Citizens Training Laboratory and the People's Educational Center, both of which are under Communist supervision and influence.

(November 14, 1946, through February 14, 1947)

This Congressional Committee has been giving some attention to Communist activities in Hollywood film industry over a period of several years. On December 3, 1946, Chairman Wood and Chief Investigator Adamson held a short hearing in Los Angeles on this subject. Only three witnesses were called and the hearings were superficial. However, the Committee announced that it would return in January and conduct extended open hearings into all phases of this type of activity in Hollywood. [redacted]

VII. INVESTIGATION OF COMMUNIST ACTIVITIES IN THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY BY THE COMMITTEE ON UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES (April 22, 1947 - May 24, 1947)

As you will recall, you testified before the House Committee on Un-American Activities on March 26, 1947, at which time you referred to the Communist infiltration into the motion picture industry. You pointed out that the Communists launched their attack in Hollywood in 1935 directing their activities at the infiltration of labor unions and the so-called intellectual, and creative fields. You pointed out that the Communist activity in Hollywood was effective and was furthered by Communists and Communist sympathizers who use the prestige of prominent individuals in the motion picture colony to further their cause. You also pointed out that the Communists endeavor to insert into the motion pictures Communist propaganda or to keep out of motion pictures anti-Communist propaganda.

Following your testimony before the Un-American Activities Committee, you will recall that Eric Johnston of the motion picture industry testified before this Committee after he made a trip to Hollywood where he conferred with studio and union heads. The Washington Post on April 13, 1947, in referring to Johnston's appearance before the Committee quoted Johnston as stating:

> "As for there being Communist influence in the movies, such an accusation is absurd. If Hollywood were a Communist network, I should not be attacked every morning in the Daily Worker—as I can assure you I am. And some of the people out there who are attacked as Communists are no more Commies than I am. They have a right to their convictions, and while some of them may be critical they have a perfect right to be".

As you will further recall, Father Cronin telephonically advised Mr. E. A. Tamm that Eric Johnston had requested him to draw up a program for the elimination of Communists from the motion picture industry. Father Cronin stated he had outlined a program which he was going to submit to Eric Johnston in which each of the studios would have three specialists in the script department of the studio who would review all script prior to the time that the pictures were actually made. One of these men will be an expert on the labor aspects of Communism; the second an expert on propaganda aspects of Communism, and the third another type of an expert. Father Cronin's program also will recommend that there be assigned to the "brain office" of each studio one man who will have the responsibility of enforcing a program of easing the Communists out of the various jobs in the company and of directing the screening of all applications so that Communists will not be hired. As you have noted, the statements of Johnston as quoted in the Washington Post and his activities with Father Cronin do not follow the same line and apparently Johnston has changed his mind concerning the Communists in Hollywood.

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office advised that members of the Un-American Activities Committee arrived in Hollywood on May 8, 19[redacted] with a great fanfare of press releases and headlines. The Committee stated it would get to the bottom of the Red issue in studios and that, specifically, it was in Hollywood to investigate the activities of Hanns Eisler, the brother of Gerhart Eisler. It indicated that hearings were to be conducted in secret at the Biltmore Hotel in downtown Los Angeles. The Committee in Los Angeles was represented by the following individuals:

J. Parnell Thomas, Representative from New Jersey, Chairman
John McDowell, Representative, Pennsylvania
John Wood, Representative, Georgia
Robert Stripling, Chief Investigator

Novelist Rupert Hughes testified before the Committee on May 15, 1947, at which time he stated, according to the Los Angeles Herald and Express for the same date, that Communists dominated Hollywood to a large degree and mentioned two individuals, John Howard Lawson and Charles Chaplin. He said that Charles Chaplin called for a second front in a speech in New York shortly after Hitler turned on Stalin although "we only had a few men in Europe at the time". He said that the Communists control the Screen Writers' Guild and that they had tried to kick him out of the Authors' League. He stated John Howard Lawson, head of the Authors' League, had tried to drive him out of the Authors' League and would have been successful if it had not been blocked by a few of his friends. He said that Lawson was a notorious Communist and "I deplore the fact that he at present is the publisher of the Hollywood Quarterly at U.C.L.A., and on the editorial board are members of the U.C.L.A. faculty".

Hughes stated that the Communists in the Hollywood film industry gang up on anyone opposing them and have caused those in opposition to them to be fired. He recalled a lot of names that the Communists had directed at him when he fought them and he also told of being booed at U.C.L.A. by the Communists while making a speech against Hitler and his totalitarian gang. He stated,

"But that was the time when the Communists opposed conscription, preparedness and lend-lease--because Hitler and Stalin had a non-aggression pact.

"As soon as Hitler turned on Stalin, these same people became the greatest prepareders and that was when Charles Chaplin made his second front speech in New York.

"They call anyone who opposes them a Fascist, yet I, who believe in free enterprise, am a Fascist to them while they, who are believers in totalitarianism, are benefactors.

"Take some of these Red $3,000-a-week boys in Hollywood who do nothing for humanity—they consider themselves benefactors of humanity. But a Henry Ford, who employs hundreds of thousands and gives everyone a cheap car—they say he is a Fascist and an enemy of mankind and should be wrecked."

Hughes called Stalin "the foulest brute in history" and appended this comparison:

"One of their favorite policies is to start hostility among the Negroes. They do not care to help the Negro, and actually hurt him. Now there are many abuses in this country and these I oppose, and have opposed.

"There are 13,000,000 Negroes in all the United States. But there are 15,000,000 Russians in slave camps in Russia; work-slaves, and their slavery is far more deadly than any we know of. They work in temperatures as cold as 85 degrees below zero; in many cases they work with their feet in ice water; they get 12 ounces of bread a day--and die like flies".

A Communist, in Hughes' view, need not be a member of the Party, he explained, adding:

"A man who says he is not a Communist but who defends Russia in everything; who says he is a friend of the Russians, who defends their policies, and is never critical of Stalin--he may call himself a hypochondriac or a Zulu or any odd name, but he is as much a Communist as an avowed Party member."

Jack Warner, Vice President of Warner Brothers Studios, according to this same article, complimented the Committee and promised his full support. Warner, who appeared before the Committee for an hour with his Plant Production Director, Blayney Matthews, said:

"The Committee is doing an excellent job and I am happy to cooperate.

"If any persons are undermining the American system--the American way of life--I want to be one of those to be of aid in stamping it out.

"I told the Committee everything I might have known of subversive activities in the film industry".

Chairman Thomas, according to this article, complimented Adolf Menjou on having made the most enlightening presentation before the Committee to date. He invited the actor to appear at the Committee's hearings in Washington at some later date. Highlights of Menjou's testimony, according to Thomas, were as follows:

"1. He charged that the 16 men who control the Soviet Union wanted to take over America as 'they could never feel safe as long as there was one free spot in the world such as the United States'.

"2. He predicted that the Communist Party, if unchecked, would 'soften up this country as the Nazis did in Norway' and take it over within 15 years.

"3. He defended the capitalist system in America, asserting he was proud of it and that 'if it did half as much for the happiness of the world in the next 50 years as it had in the past 50 years,' he would feel satisfied.

"4. He charged that many millionaires in Hollywood and elsewhere were Communists or pro-Communists.

"5. He charged that 'the Communists in the film industry are so powerful that many of the "little people" are afraid to move against them'."

This same article reflected that Menjou stated prior to appearing before the Committee that he had made 36 talks against Communism and expressed the belief that the Communist Party of the United States should be outlawed. It quoted Menjou as follows:

"My good friend Edgar Hoover, the F.B.I. head, feels they should not be outlawed—that it would drive them underground. But I ask where are they now? They all hide. This is a wonderful country. It has its faults which we should correct. But I like it the way it is.

"I would recommend that the 16 rulers of Russia be treated exactly the way they treat us.

"They twist what we say to fit their purposes. Any films that we make that show some of our defects, they twist around and change to make it appear that the defects portray America while actually they are exceptions to the rule.

"I would shut all of them out of the country as they shut our people out of Russia. I would distort everything they say.

"As some of my friends say: 'You can't do that'. I answer: 'You can because they do it'.

"With class distinction, the profit system and American capitalism the Communist's particular targets in the United States, what I can't understand is how there are so many millionaires for it. There [redacted] lots of them in Hollywood; at least half a dozen Red directors and some Red actors.

"I have always opposed boycotting films, when such action was suggested, to combat the films directed by these Reds or with the Reds starring in them because too many little people would be hurt. The little people are afraid--in fact it's surprising to find some of the bigger people also afraid of the Communist organization".

* * * * * *

"A lot of people who fall for the Commies class distinction and anti-capitalism bunk, don't realize that the Communist leaders in Russia, four months after they had obtained control of that country, abandoned Karl Marx and the favorite Russians now profit by the profit system, can leave property and wealth to their children, while many other Russians just live in a slave state."

"The chief fear of the Communists in the United States is the American middle class. In other countries such as France and Italy where the Communists have gained strength, they have done it primarily by lying to the workers".

"The Little Red School House" of Hollywood was brought into evidence by Mrs. Leila Rogers, mother of film star Ginger Rogers, according to this same article. She attributed the strong influence of Communists in Hollywood to the writers and charged that the Communists trained them "in 'The Little Red School House' as we know it". She identified this school as the "People's Education Center in Hollywood". Mrs. Rogers revealed in one picture, "Tender Comrade", her actress daughter Ginger had refused to say the following line, "Share and share alike--that's democracy". Mrs. Rogers said "I think that's definitely Communist propaganda inspired by the Little Red School House.

"Ginger refused to read the line. So it was given to a sweet and unquestionably loyal youngster, Kim Hunter, to read". She said that the author of the script was Dalton Trumbo.

The Los Angeles Examiner for May 15, 1947, reflected that screen actor Robert Taylor also testified before the Un-American Activities Committee on May 14. On this occasion, Taylor advised that he was forced by a former Aide of the late President Roosevelt into starring in a motion picture which favored Russian ideologies over American. According to the article, the pressure was from a former White House adviser and the Office of War Information official who came to Hollywood for the express purpose of overruling Taylor's objection to appearing in the 1943 release, "Song of Russia".

Representative Thomas stated, according to the article, that this individual was Lowell Mellett, Administrative Assistant to the late President

[redacted]lett. The article reflected that Mellett, as Director of the Motion Picture Division of the O.W.I., had publicly declared they wanted "no censorship of motion pictures". The article also reflected that Mellett, when contacted in Washington, D. C., concerning Taylor's testimony, referred to the accusations as "too silly to deny". He stated "I certainly didn't compel Robert Taylor or anyone else to do anything". He continued, "If Thomas wants to know what I know about this matter, I will be glad to tell him when he gets back to Washington."

Other individuals prominent in the film world who sought to aid the Committee in its probe were Actor Richard Arlen and Henry Ginsberg, Vice President in Charge of Production at Paramount Studios. After hearing Taylor and Arlen, Mr. Thomas commended both actors who were very cooperative in appearing before the Committee. He stated, "They showed especial courage in accepting our invitation. It could affect their careers." This article reflected that Arlen told the reporters that "the Communists are very influential beyond their numbers in Hollywood".

The Los Angeles Examiner for May 17, 1947, reflected that a surprise witness, Viktor Kravchenko, an estranged Soviet official, had appeared on subpoena before the Committee--one day after his life was threatened in a Beverly Hills home where he was a guest. Representative Thomas told reporters, according to the article, that because of this threat received by Kravchenko, the author of "I Chose Freedom", he was placed under the protection of the FBI. This same article reflected that Kravchenko told the Committee:

> "Hollywood is a serious intellectual front in the United States. It is necessary to clear Hollywood of Communists and sympathizers--in the writers' circles and in the artists' circles.
> "Today few companies in Hollywood want to make pictures that show the Soviet Union as it really is. Take for example the picture, 'Red Danube', which is pure fantasy.
> "Why don't they make a picture on Russia which would show what it means to live there, what the Soviet means and show the concentration camps? Show everything as it really is."

The New York Times of May 17 under a Los Angeles dateline of May 16, quoted Chairman J. Parnell Thomas of the House Committee on Un-American Activities as asserting after a week of hearings on subversive activities in Hollywood, that "90 per cent of Communist infiltration" was in the screen writing field, but that the Federal Government also had abetted the work. He stated that in the testimony of the fourteen actors, writers and producers, "a very outstanding point that came up (not once but many times was the influence of the Government in aiding the Communist conspiracy". Mr. Thomas said:

"We have recorded testimony that even the White House exerted [redacted] influence on certain people in Hollywood to have certain pro-Russian motion pictures filmed during the regime of the late President Roosevelt.

"I don't refer to just the Robert Taylor disclosure, but to others by actors and producers themselves who told how the Government had wielded the iron fist in order to get the companies to put on certain Communist propaganda"

Mr. Thomas also related that the sub-committee had "been amazed at the revelations made by the witnesses and their frankness in naming names, places, dates, Communist card numbers, etc." He added:

"The insidious propaganda of the Communist has no place in the movies which entertain millions of Americans, but it seems to me that the quickest and most effective way of eliminating it would be for Hollywood to clean its own house and not wait for a committee to spotlight this sorry spectacle".

This article also reflected that Mr. McDowell left on May 15 to inspect the Texas border stations on his way East. Mr. Thomas indicated, according to the article, that he planned to go to San Francisco to continue his inquiry. The article also reflected that Mr. Thomas' statement caused little stir among screen writers. Emmert Lavery, President of the Screen Writers' Guild, said:

"If Mr. Thomas has discovered anything worth investigating, the place to investigate it is through the FBI. I personally doubt very much that subversive circles in the city are likely to be trapped by punches telegraphed in advance by eight-column scare headlines."

VIII. MISCELLANEOUS
(April 22, 1947 - May 24, 1947)

[redacted]

The Los Angeles Office has advised that [redacted] who is a [redacted] California, contacted Special Agent [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office and disclosed the following information concerning [redacted]

It should be noted that [redacted] has been used as a source of information on various matters by Agents of the Los Angeles Office. [redacted] to the present time. [redacted] advised the Los Angeles Agents that [redacted] had been attempting to secure her citizenship through the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization in Los Angeles and has been completing the necessary requirements for the same before an examiner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Los Angeles. According to [redacted] the examiner advised [redacted] that all of [redacted] requirements for United States citizenship had been fulfilled except for the FBI check concerning her record.

Shortly after this hearing, [redacted] advised that the above four individuals engaged in a conversation concerning the probability that the FBI might be in possession of information reflecting that [redacted] was affiliated with certain leftist or Communist groups in Hollywood and therefore would block [redacted] citizenship. [redacted]

[redacted]

[redacted]

On the occasion of this interview, Special Agent [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office did not attempt to question [redacted] but merely let her talk and make any statements that she desired.

[redacted]

[redacted]

On May 3, 1947, [redacted] again contacted Agent [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office and related the following additional information which had obtained from [redacted]

[redacted] The Agent obtaining the information was, of course, non-committal.

[redacted]

On May 6, 1947, arrangements were made for [redacted] to be interviewed for a brief period in the Los Angeles Office. On this occasion, an attempt was made to consider the possibilities of using [redacted] as a source of information on Communist activities in the motion picture industry. This interview was conducted for the most part by Assistant Special Agent in Charge [redacted] and Special Agent [redacted] She was also interviewed by Special Agent in Charge R. B. Hood and briefly by Special Agents [redacted] Supplementing the information previously given to the Los Angeles Office, [redacted] stated as follows:

[redacted]

[redacted]

[redacted]

[redacted]

Writers known to [redacted] as having definite Communist tendencies are Dalton Trumbo; Albert Maltz; and Donald Ogden Stewart.

[redacted]

[redacted]

Special Agent [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office ascertained by contactin[redacted] and [redacted] examiners of the Los Angeles Office of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, that [redacted] had, in fact, been informed that all immigration cases are cleared through the FBI. It was further learned that [redacted] case had been held up pending additional investigation by Immigration and Naturalization's own investigative unit and it had apparently been assumed by [redacted] that her case had been held up pending receipt of FBI clearance. A review of [redacted]s file in the Immigration and Naturalization Service office reflected that she was questioned by the INS concerning the information supplied by the Bureau to them without, of course, divulging the source of the information. This information included primarily her membership and affiliations in certain Communist front organizations as set out hereinafter:

1. [redacted]

2. [redacted]

3. [redacted]

4. [redacted]

5. [redacted]

6. [redacted]

7. [redacted]

When questioned by the examiner for Immigration and Naturalization Service, [redacted] denied membership in any anti-Fascist organization although she admitted [redacted]

[redacted] who is in charge of the Investigative Division of INS in Los Angeles, reported that [redacted] application had been held for further investigation by his unit in view of the apparent possible connection with Communist activities on the part of [redacted] Both [redacted] and the other two examiners previously referred to indicated that they were of the opinion that [redacted] was not actively engaged in the Communist movement but had been duped for financial purposes primarily by front organizations as have many other prominent persons in the motion picture industry.

In view of [redacted] position to get valuable information concerning Communist activities among motion picture actresses and actors in Hollywood, the Los Angeles Office is going to maintain periodic contact with her as a source of information. However, extreme caution is to be exercised in dealing with her in view of her past contacts with persons of known Communist sympathies as well as the manner in which she has suddenly become interested in cooperating with the FBI.

ANTI-RUSSIAN PICTURES

Four of the major studios, MGM, Warner Brothers, 20th Century Fox, and Columbia, have announced that each will make a picture based on the Canada spy trials. As a matter of fact, it is reported that all four studios are quarreling among themselves as to which will be permitted to use the title "Iron Curtain".

COMMUNIST INFILTRATION OF THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY
INTERNAL SECURITY (C)
(Running Memorandum)

There is submitted herewith the running memorandum concerning Communist infiltration of the motion picture industry which has been brought up to date as of May 24, 1947. The material discussed is divided into separate sections as follows:

I Communist Infiltration of Labor Groups
II Communist Infiltration of Intellectual Groups
III Communist Party Members in Hollywood
IV Communist Influence in Current Motion Pictures
V Soviet Activities in Hollywood
VI Communist Infiltration of RKO Studios
VII Investigation of Communist Activity in the Motion Picture Industry by the Committee on Un-American Activities, House of Representatives
VIII Miscellaneous

The new material added to bring this running memorandum up to date will be found in the following sections;

Section I, page 71
Section II, pages 119 through 121
Section VII, pages 18 through 24
Section VIII, pages 2 through 9

Of the new material added, probably the most significant will be found in Section VII which pertains to the activities of the Un-American Activities Committee during their recent visit to the movie colony in Hollywood at which time various representatives of the motion picture industry appeared as witnesses. Also of interest is the interview had by the Los Angeles Office with [redacted] During this interview, [redacted] offered [redacted] services as a source of information concerning Communist activities in Hollywood and explained her connections with Communist front groups as being due to her curiosity and interest in finding out about these various groups as well as the individuals connected with them.

These activities are being closely followed and all new information received in this regard will be incorporated into the running memorandum once each quarter, in order that you may be currently advised with respect to this situation.

COMMUNIST INFILTRATION OF THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

INTRODUCTORY BACKGROUND

The majority of the information concerning Communist infiltration of the motion picture industry has been supplied by [redacted] who is Los Angeles Confidential Informant [redacted] This informant has been associated with the motion picture industry for many years. He is a member of several labor organizations which are active in the industry and is thoroughly familiar with the background of the labor organizations in that field. He was a member of the Communist Party for [redacted] The informant is quite familiar with the Communist key figures in the Hollywood area and is able to obtain information concerning Communist activities in this industry.

This source has advised that prior to 1933 the Communist international with headquarters in Moscow, Russia, had not realized the possibilities of the motion picture as a propaganda medium. About this time the talking picture was perfected and the Soviet Union with its world-wide staff of propagandists seized the lead in adapting the motion picture for propaganda purposes throughout the world. Delegations of Russians came to Hollywood to study the American cinema.

In 1935 a "directive" was issued by the top structure of the Communist Party in the United States that there must be an intensive concentration on Hollywood and the motion picture industry. The directive stated that Communists must try to capture the labor unions, for if this could be done, they could exert much influence in the nature and type of pictures produced and thus help the Soviet cause. This directive also emphasized that at the same time work must be done among the cultural groups, writers, artists, actors, actresses, and others to enlist their assistance toward the Communist cause. The direct and indirect influence of the Communist Party of the United States on the motion picture industry in Hollywood and on all those subsidiary interests connected with that industry has been one of steady development over a period of the past ten years. During this time the motion picture industry has been considered by the Communist Party as the principal medium of propaganda for the Communist Party ideas. Consequently, the Communist Party concentrated on a program of penetration of the industry by its members. This concentration on Hollywood has been most intense.

It has been reported that as a part of the program to penetrate the motion picture industry, the Communist Party considered the importation of known Communists and persons subject to Communist influence as of great significance. A large percentage of such individuals brought into Hollywood from 1935 to 1944 and given employment are refugees who came from European countries following the rise of Nazism in Europe. They have been put in responsible positions, mostly in the fields of writing and directing, and the majority of them are reported since arriving to have shown sympathy with the Communist [redacted] and to associate with individuals who are known to be Communists. As a result of this situation, it is reported that Hollywood is being Europeanized to a startling extent.

Since the entry of the United States into the war and the cooperation of the motion picture industry with governmental agencies for propaganda purposes, Communist penetration has been extremely effective. There have been two lines of attack. One was to seek control over the workers in the studios using the trade unions as the base, the other was to seek control over the so-called intellectual and creative fields and thus determine the type of propaganda to be injected into the motion picture. [redacted]

For the purpose of this memorandum, the material discussed will be divided as follows:

I. Communist Infiltration of Labor Groups.
II. Communist Infiltration of Intellectual Groups.
III. Communist Party Membership in Hollywood.
IV. Communist Influence in Current Motion Pictures.
V. Soviet Activity in Hollywood.
VI. Communist Infiltration of R.K.O. Studios

In connection with items I and II, this memorandum will set forth some historical and background detail which it is believed will be of assistance in understanding the current situation.

As of June, 1944 a survey made of Communist members in various fields of activity in the motion picture industry indicates the following data concerning members of the Communist Party or Communist front groups in the industry:

Directors and Producers — Among this group there are nine known Communist Party members and fifteen members of one or more Communist Party front groups. Herbert Biberman, a director, is probably the outstanding Communist Party member in this field. Lewis Milestone, director of "North Star" and "Mission to Moscow," although not definitely known to be a Communist Party member, is Russian born and has been active in numerous Communist Party front groups for the past ten years. [redacted]

Writers — There are 56 known Communist Party members among the writers employed at the various motion picture studios. The outstanding figure in the writers group is John Howard Lawson, a known Communist Party member, who has great influence in the Hollywood field. [redacted]

Actors — Five actors and actresses are reported to be known members of the Communist Party in Hollywood. Twenty-four others are members of Communist Party front groups. Among the known Communist Party members, Gale Sondergaard, Lionel Stander and Lucille Ball are the most prominent. Those belonging to Communist Party front groups include James Cagney, Ida Lupino, Franchot Tone, Walter Huston and John Garfield. [redacted]

Labor — Twelve prominent labor leaders in various Hollywood unions have been identified as members of the Communist Party. It is known that a number of the "rank and file" members of the various Hollywood unions are also members of the Communist Party. Herbert K. Sorrell, known Communist Party member, is the leading labor figure in the motion picture industry. As head of the Conference of Studio Unions, he is the chief liaison man between labor and the Motion Picture Producers Association.

[redacted]

Miscellaneous — In a group of miscellaneous individuals who are associated in varying capacities with the motion picture industry a survey disclosed there are 21 known members of the Communist Party. This group includes lawyers, technicians, readers and persons in the publicity field. In this group it should be noted that Donald Key King, Publicity Director for the Warner Brothers Studio, has been identified as a member of Branch K, Northwest Section, Los Angeles County Communist Party.

I. COMMUNIST INFILTRATION OF LABOR GROUPS

Information has been received that approximately in 1934 the Communist Party realizing the propaganda possibilities in the motion picture field decided to move into the motion picture industry. In the spring of 1935 direct orders are reported to have come down in mimeographed form from the top structure of the Communist Party to all units in the Los Angeles section that there must be an intense concentration on Hollywood and the motion picture industry. This directive is said to have emphasized the fact that the Communists must try to capture the labor unions and pointed out that if this could be done the unions could be of much service in influencing the type of pictures produced and thus serve the Soviet cause.

In the early days of the motion picture industry, that is from approximately 1910 to 1930, there was no consistency in the labor organizational setup. The principal active labor organization was the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees (IATSE). This was an autonomous group of local labor unions identified with the American Federation of Labor. The IATSE jurisdiction was recognized as the only union organization in Hollywood for some years. However, on two occasions in 1921 and 1933, respectively, strikes were called by this organization which were completely unsuccessful. In each case the strike was the result of a jurisdictional dispute and was broken as a result of members of outside unions entering the field as strike breakers. As a result of the unsuccessful strikes, a very chaotic condition existed in the labor field at Hollywood in approximately 1933 and many of the workers had lost confidence in the A.F. of L. As a result, the Communist Party had little difficulty in moving into the unorganized field with the Motion Picture Workers Industrial Union, created in January 1934.

[redacted]

Motion Picture Workers Industrial Union, MPWIU

The Motion Picture Workers Industrial Union was an independent group completely under the control of the Communist elements and taking orders from the local functionary of the Communist Party. It will be recalled that this was in accord with the Communist Party line at that period which advocated the creation of separate unions by the Communist Party. Most of these separate unions were affiliated with the Trade Union Unity League, which, in turn, was a branch of the International of Red Labor Unions, with headquarters in Moscow. However, the MPWIU was not affiliated with the Trade Union Unity League, although it was under the control and domination of the Communist Party. Demands were made on the organizer of this union by the section secretary of the Communist Party and the Communist Party organizer in Southern California to force the union to affiliate with the TUUL. However, it declined to do so, chiefly because of the position taken by the union organizer, H. G. Wolfe. It continued to function as an independent union.

Numerous Communist Party members, according to Confidential Informant [redacted] were active in the affairs of this union, chiefly among whom were Helmer Bergman, Don [redacted] Rudolph Kohl, Boris Goldblatt and Sam Goldblatt.

In the short time between the creation of this Union in January, 1934, and April, 1935, it had taken in a large number of members and was well on the way to becoming the leading union in Hollywood. However, in April, 1935, instructions were sent out by the Central Committee of the Communist Party that the Party line had changed and that all independent unions were to be liquidated and their members sent into the A.F. of L. unions with the object of capturing the A.F. of L. This policy was followed by the MPWIU. A short time after the change in Party line the Communists in the Union began to desert and go over into the various A.F. of L. locals. At this time these A.F. of L. locals were mere shells which in many cases existed in name only. As a result of the Communist Party directive, the MPWIU gradually went out of existence and in February, 1936 it was officially dissolved.

At about this time the CIO was being organized by John L. Lewis. Several attempts are reported to have been made on the part of Lewis and other CIO figures to organize in the motion picture field. However, they have never been successful and at the present time there are no CIO unions in the motion picture industry. There are approximately 39 labor organizations of various sorts in the industry. Some of these are affiliated with the A.F. of L. and the balance are independent unions. [redacted]

Conference of Studio Unions

Herbert K. Sorrell, president of the Studio Painters Local 644 of the International Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paper Hangers of America, A.F. of L, soon became the leader of the newly activized A.F. of L. unions. Sorrell has been identified as a former member of the Communist Party in Hollywood, California. He soon became the leader of the Communist factions in the Hollywood unions. Sorrell developed favorable relations with Pat Casey, labor representative for the Motion Picture Producers Association. Casey is an $80,000 per year executive employed by the MPPA to handle labor relations. He is definitely not a Communist, but apparently finds it easy to do business with Sorrell. As a result, Sorrell has become probably the leading figure in the Hollywood labor movement.

After Sorrell had developed the leaders of a number of locals, which had strong Communist factions in them, his next move was to set up an organization which would tie all the locals into one body under his domination. This body was known as the Conference of Studio Unions.

The Conference of Studio Unions is a small compact group of delegates or representatives of a bloc of labor unions in the Hollywood motion picture industry, which has been taken over and is now under control of the Communist Party operating through its members in those unions which have captured key positions. In reality the Conference of Studio Unions is the organization set up to act as the control and steering committee to coordinate and direct Communist activities looking toward taking over all studio workers and their unions into the Communist Party orbit. The following six locals are affiliated with the Conference of Studio Unions:

Studio Painters Local 644 of the International Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paper Hangers of America.

Laboratory Technicians Local 683 of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees.

Screen Office Employees Guild, an affiliate of Studio Painters Local 644 above.

Screen Set Designers Guild, an affiliate of Studio Painters Local 644 above.

Studio Machinists Local 1185 of the International Association of Machinists, A.F. of L.

The membership of the above groups is approximately 8,000. The Conference of Studio Unions is governed by a president, chairman, vice chairman and secretary-treasurer. Each union body affiliated is represented by not more than three delegates, one of whom must be the business representative. Herbert K. Sorrell is President. Norval D. Crutcher, a former member of the Communist Party, is Chairman. D. T. Wayne, Vice Chairman and Russell L. McKnight, Secretary-Treasurer, are not known to be Communist Party members, but are reported to be connected with numerous Communist front organizations and to give every indication of being dominated and controlled by the Communist Party.

Due to the importance of the unions affiliated with the Conference of Studio Unions, brief descriptive data concerning each is being set forth below.

Studio Painters Local 644

This union is made up chiefly of painters who were members of the Communist dominated MPWIU and who, on direct orders of the Communist Party, deserted that union in 1935 to take over Local 644 of the A.F. of L. Herbert K. Sorrell is president of this union.

Laboratory Technicians Local 683

This union is affiliated with the IATSE. It has jurisdiction and control of a narrow but very important field, that of the employees who handle developing and processing of film. It has been said to be the contention of the Communist Party that if it could control the workers in this Department, [redacted]dustry would be at their mercy. This union is reported to have consistently followed the Communist Party line and to have passed resolutions in accordance with the Communist Party program. Russell L. McKnight, mentioned above, is president of the union. Norval Crutcher, also mentioned above as a former Communist Party member, is secretary-treasurer.

Screen Office Employees Guild

This union was originally organized as an independent union in about 1937. After being in existence some three or four years, it came under the influence of Sorrell and in 1941 it was issued a charter by Local 644, A.F. of L. Studio Painters. It has jurisdiction over all clerical workers and secretaries in the Hollywood studios, although the A.F. of L. has a regularly established Office Workers Union in the Los Angeles area where these workers rightfully belong. It is said that the reason for the affiliation of this "white collar" group with the A.F. of L. Painters is the preference of its Communist leadership for Sorrell over affiliation with regular A.F. of L. office workers unions.

As of November, 1943, it was reported that the SOEG was preparing a drive to organize the motion picture industry 100 per cent prior to the establishment by the A.F. of L. of an international union for white collar workers. It was reported that a special organizer, Min Selvin, a known Communist Party member, would work in close cooperation with Glen Pratt, business representative, in this organizational campaign.

Confidential informants have advised that the Communist Party took a great interest in this campaign and that a number of known Communist Party members were engaged in assisting it. From the information reported, it appears that the Communist Party will endeavor to gain control of any proposed A.F. of L. union local for white collar employees. [redacted]

Screen Cartoonists Guild Local 852

This guild has jurisdiction over cartoonists, sketch artists and animators engaged in making animated cartoons in the motion picture industry. It was originally organized as an independent group, but came under the influence of Sorrell and in 1941 was issued a charter by Local 644 of the Studio Painters and is therefore now affiliated with the A.F. of L. It is reported that this guild as a body has consistently followed the Communist Party line and has passed parallel resolutions to those of the other unions affiliated with the Conference of Studio Unions.

Screen Set Designers Guild

This union has jurisdiction over set designers, draftsmen and illustrators who until approximately 1939 had been unorganized. In the fall of 1941 the guild became affiliated with Painters Union Local 644 and thus came under the influence of Sorrell. The officers of this guild are not [redacted] to be Communist Party members, although a member of the Executive Board is so identified. The union is reported to have followed consistently the Communist Party line.

Studio Machinists Local 1185

The members of this union are highly skilled mechanics engaged mostly in building and servicing motion picture cameras and other high precision work of similar character. This union came into existence as a direct result of the break-up of the MPWIU. It is reported to have taken in the entire crew of machinists then engaged in the experimental plant of Technicolor Corporation. The union is represented in the Conference of Studio Unions by T. D. Wayne, who is said to be under the complete domination of the Communist Party and of Herbert K. Sorrell.

Hollywood Guild Council

The guilds making up the Hollywood Guild Council are the bargaining agencies for what are known as the "cultural groups, writers, artists, directors, readers and publicists." These guilds, although not affiliated with the A.F. of L. or any other labor group, are the bargaining agencies for their members. It should be noted that as in the case of writers, directors and art directors, the matter of salaries is an individual matter. These guilds in their bargaining negotiations deal with such matters as working conditions, screen credits, etc. It is reported that the Communist element had not been successful in their efforts to function within the IATSE. They, therefore, are reported to have set up another organization outside the A.F. of L. and thus created the Hollywood Guild Council. The following so-called "cultural groups" are affiliated with the Hollywood Guild Council:

Screen Writers Guild
Screen Directors Guild
Screen Publicists Guild
Screen Readers Guild
Screen Actors Guild

At the outset the Screen Office Employees Guild and the Screen Cartoonists Guild were also affiliated with this Council, but they later withdrew to affiliate with the Conference of Studio Unions.

The reported purpose of the Hollywood Guild Council was to afford a base of operations to carry on Communist propaganda and keep alive the attempt to penetrate the other unions. The Communists reportedly have attempted to draw into the Council many of the A.F. of L. locals, but have

[redacted] successful. Their activities are said to have been confined to these various guilds, which have always been more or less subject to Communist infiltration. [redacted]

Screen Writers Guild

The leading group in the Hollywood Guild Council and the one which is said to have practically controlled this organization, was the Screen Writers Guild. It was organized in 1934 as the first union group in the cultural field and is said to have come under Communist domination almost at the outset. It was organized by a group of writers who were the members of the John Reed Club of Hollywood, a Communist front organization that later became the Hollywood chapter of the League of American Writers. Prominent among the group of original organizers were the following: Howard Lawson, Samuel Ornitz, Dudley Nichols, Guy Endore and Harry Carlisle. All of these persons according to Confidential Informant [redacted] have long records of Communist activity.

This guild has been Communist dominated from its inception and has included many known members of the Communist Party. At its election in November, 1943, the vice president, treasurer and eight members of its Executive Board were definitely identified as Communist Party members by informants. A number of other officers and members, although not definitely identified as Communist Party members, are said to be under the influence of the Communist Party. [redacted]

Screen Directors Guild

This guild was organized in February, 1936, for the purpose as stated at that time to bring the directors of motion pictures in the line with other labor unions in the industry. The organizing is said to have been done by a small group of motion picture directors who professed the "progressive position" and who maintained in a broad sense that the motion picture should carry a social or political message rather than being what they claimed it was at the time, merely an "escape mechanism" for the masses. The Screen Directors Guild is in no sense strictly a bargaining labor union. Its principal reason for existence is said to be ideological in that it will assist in the production of motion pictures sympathetic to the cause of Communism and the political economy of Russia. Among those composing the original small group were King Vidor, Lewis Milestone, Frank Tuttle, Frank Borsage, Howard Hawks, Ruben Mamoulian and Gregory LaCava. Its present officers are not known to be members of the Communist Party, but it includes in its membership individuals such as Frank Tuttle, Jay Leyda, Herbert Biberman, Herbert Kline, who are reported to be Communist Party members, and others such as Orson Welles, Herman Shumlin, Lewis Milestone, Joris Ivens and Dudley Nichols, who have been active in the affairs of numerous Communist Party front organizations such as the American Peace Mobilization, the Harry Bridges Defense Committee, and similar organizations. [redacted]

Screen Publicists Guild

This guild is composed of individuals engaged in motion picture publicity work. Although its officers have not been identified with the Communist Party, the organization as a body is reported to have affiliated [redacted] with Communist inspired groups, including Labor's Unity for Victory Committee, Hollywood Writers Mobilization for Defense, League of American Writers and the Hollywood Canteen. [redacted]

Screen Readers Guild

This guild is not strictly a labor group since it is composed of individuals employed at various studios whose duties are to read books, magazines and published material and make synopses from which stories or scenes may be adapted to the motion pictures. It is said that the readers consider themselves potential writers and that their ambitions lie in that direction. This union is reported to be influenced to a large extent and dominated by the Screen Writers Guild. [redacted]

Screen Actors Guild

This guild has included a number of prominent actors in the Hollywood area. A number of the individuals have supported and taken part in Communist front organizations according to Confidential Informant [redacted] including Helen Gahagan (Helen Gahagan Douglas), Frances Farmer, John Garfield (correct name Jake Garfinkel), Gale Sondergaard, Lionel Stander and Frederic March. Current officers for the year 1944 include James Cagney, President; George Murphy, Vice President, and a number of other well known actors. John Garfield, Lionel Stander, Frederic March, and James Cagney have been identified by [redacted] as former members of the Communist Party. Gale Sondergaard through a highly confidential technique employed by agents of the Los Angeles Field Division has been identified as a member of the Communist Party. [redacted]

Miscellaneous A. F. of L. Local Unions

Information has been received that there are a number of other local A. F. of L. unions and IATSE unions engaged in the labor field in Hollywood. However, it is reported that there is no great Communist infiltration of these groups and they may be divided roughly into two categories, namely, that in which there are a number of Communist Party members and in which the locals are to a certain extent subject to Communist infiltration, and second, that in which there are a number of anti-Communists and in which the Communist influence is at a minimum.

In February, 1944, information was received that a number of the independent unions have embarked on a Communist inspired campaign to enter the A. F. of L. for the purpose of throwing their weight and influence toward attaining Communist control of the A. F. of L. structure in Southern California. Among the unions which are occasionally subject to Communist control, is the American Federation of Musicians Local 47, whose president is J. K. (Spike) Wallace, who is reportedly dominated by the Communist Party. [redacted]

42

Motion Picture Labor Committee
for Political Action

In September, 1943, a Motion Picture Labor Committee for Political Action was set up in line with the current movement toward the formation of a political arm by labor groups. This group reportedly was organized by individuals from unions associated with the Conference of Studio Unions and it appears to be strongly Communist dominated. It is said that while the organization operates in the name of the A.F. of L., in reality the Hollywood unit is under the control of the Communist forces. This is said to be consistent with the current nationwide program of the Communist Party to take part in political organizations and place in office those persons who are favorable to the Communist position. The organization is affiliated with such reported Communist front groups as the Peoples Educational Center, the Fifteenth Congressional District Legislative Council, the League of American Writers and the Hollywood Writers School.

Conference of Studio Unions

With the past six months, four additional unions have joined this organization. They are the following:

Building Service Employees, Local 99

This union is headed by George Bradley who is reported to be a member and sponsor of many Communist front groups.

Special Officers and Guards, Local 193

This union is headed by one Ted Carp who has not heretofore been reported as engaged in Communist activities.

Screen Publicist's Guild

This union has heretofore been independent but it was recently granted an A. F. of L. charter by which it became affiliated with Local 644 of the Motion Picture Painters League. This guild has long been under the complete control of the Communist Party. Its representative to the Conference of Studio Unions is Ted Taylor, a reporter for the People's World, Pacific Coast Communist publication and said to be an ardent Communist.

41

Screen Analyst's Guild (Formerly, Screen Readers Guild)

This union was also formerly an independent union but has recently been chartered by the A. F. of L. through the Painters Union. The members of this union are readers of material which may eventually be used in motion pictures. The analyst is in a position to recommend ideas, sequences and scenes which, if the analyst is Communisticly inclined, may contain Communist propaganda.

It is reported that the influence of the C. S. U. is growing daily and that it recently has been recognized by the Motion Picture Producers Association as a separate bargaining agency. Herbert K. Sorrell continues to be the leading figure in the C. S. U. He was a former Communist Party member. Sorrell continues to be friendly with Pat Casey, labor liaison man for the Motion Picture Producers Association. It is reported that the C. S. U. supports all Communist front activities in Hollywood.

Motion Picture Labor Committee for Political Action

This committee is presently working in conjunction with the United A. F. of L. Political Action Committee which takes in all sections of the Southern California area. The purposes of the Motion Picture Labor Committee are said to be identical with those of the Hollywood Democratic Committee, a Communist front organization. Fifteen labor unions are presently affiliated with the Motion Picture Labor Committee for Political Action. Not all those of the affiliated labor unions are Communist controlled; however, eight of the fifteen unions are said to be under the domination of Communist elements. It is reported that the Motion Picture Labor Committee for Political Action, as of May, 1944 was following the Communist Party line.

As of June, 1944 it was reported that the Motion Picture Labor Committee for Political Action had joined with a number of Communist front organizations, including the Hollywood Democratic Committee, to assist in local primary elections. These elections resulted in the defeat of Congressman John M. Costello, a member of the Dies Committee, and the nomination of Helen Gahagan Douglas, wife of actor Melvin Douglas, in the 14th Congressional District. Mrs. Douglas and her husband have been associated with numerous Communist front organizations.

[redacted] of L. Votes to Oust Reds and Fascists

The Los Angeles Herald on July 11, 1944, carried an article which stated that by a four to one vote delegates of the Central Labor Council, A. F. of L. had approved a constitutional amendment through which Communists and Fascists will be barred from membership in that organization. The article stated that William Green, national head of the A. F. of L., asked for the amendment when he rejected a proposed new constitution for the Council last year on the ground it failed to prohibit membership of "radicals." The vote was 153 to 44 in favor of the amendment, but approval came only after a floor fight in which some members objected to the use of the names of Communists or Fascists on the ground that it would cause loss of some members.

Possible Labor War in Hollywood

As of July, 1944, confidential informants have advised that there is a possibility of a labor split among the Hollywood unions. This situation arose out of the dispute between the Motion Picture Alliance for the Preservation of American Ideals (MPA), an anti-Communist group of labor unions, and the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions, which includes a number of Communist-dominated labor groups. The latter organization undertook to combat the charges of Communism levelled at the motion picture industry by the MPA. Further information concerning both organizations is set out in Section II of this memorandum. As a result of the dispute informants have reported that at least one jurisdictional dispute has arisen between a union of the anti-Communist group and a union of the alleged Communist group. This occurred when Studio Carpenters' Local #946 objected to certain activities of the Studio Grips, Local 80, IATSE, at the 20th Century Fox Studios. Reportedly Herbert K. Sorrell, President of the Conference of Studio Unions and a known Communist Party member, is guiding and directing James Skelton, business representative of the Studio Carpenters' Union, in this dispute. Informants report that as of July, 1944, it is the opinion of many labor leaders in Hollywood that this will be the beginning of a labor war in the motion picture industry. [redacted]

United A. F. of L. Committee for Political Action

In August, 1944, a reported split occurred in the above Committee over the indorsement of certain political candidates. The Committee, over the strenuous objection of certain Communist members within it, withdrew indorsement of Ned Healy, candidate for Congress in the 13th Congressional District and Hal Styles who defeated John M. Costello for the Democratic nomination in the 15th Congressional District. These actions caused a violent internal conflict within the A. F. of L. ranks. The local teamster unions led the fight against the Communists. The Hollywood leaders of the Motion Picture Labor Committee for Political Action led the Communist forces. Among the [redacted]viduals identified as Communists by informant [redacted] in the latter group were Herbert K. Sorrell, Norval D. Crutcher and William Pomerance.

In August, 1944, it was learned that the Communists continued to lead the fight against withdrawal of endorsements of Styles and Healy by the United A. F. of L. Political Action Committee. According to informants, the only power of the A. F. of L. Committee is that of recommendation. Its action must be endorsed by 2/3 of all local bodies affiliated with it. The Communists reportedly used their influence with these affiliated bodies and prevented the top committee's recommendation from being adopted. The principal arena of the fight was the Central Labor Council of Los Angeles and the Communists, having secured control of this body, prevented adoption of the United Committee's recommendation. The Communists in control of the Motion Picture Labor Committee for Political Action led the fight and finally won it for the Communist element. For this reason the endorsement of Styles and Healy was not withdrawn. [redacted]

Screen Writers' Guild

In August, 1944, it was learned through the "Daily Variety," trade paper of the motion picture industry, that Mary McCall, Jr., President of the Screen Writers' Guild, had resigned. She was succeeded by Lester Cole who had previously served as Vice President. Cole will serve as President until the annual election of the Guild in November, 1944.

Lester Cole, alias Lester Cohn, is a free lance writer employed at Columbia Studios. He is a Communist and is presently assigned to Group A-1 (Writers), Northwest Section, Communist Political Association card number 46805 for 1944. He has a long record of Communist and Communist front activities and is very active in the League of American Writers, the Hollywood Writers' Mobilization, the Hollywood Council of Guilds and Unions, and the Hollywood Democratic Committee, all of which are recognized Communist front groups.

Conference of Studio Unions

During October, 1944, this bloc of ten unions was engaged in a strike situation in the motion picture industry. A jurisdictional dispute arose between the Associated Propertymen, Local 44, I.A.T.S.E., and Screen Set Designers, Local 1421, A. F. of L. At first the set designers were supported by other unions in the Conference, principally the Moving Picture Painters, Local 644, and the Studio Machinists, Local 1185.

Lined up on one side in the dispute is the Communist group, [redacted] the Conference of Studio Unions, and on the other, the anti-Communist unions. As originally reported, the dispute was to have been used by the Communist forces in an attempt to take over the membership of the opposition. Herbert K. Sorrell, who has been identified as a former member of the Communist Party, has been in charge of the affairs of the Communist bloc and Richard Walsh, International President of the I.A.T.S.E. of New York City, and Hollywood, represents the opposition.

Walsh is said to have forced the Laboratory Technicians, Local 683, I.A.T.S.E., to withdraw from the Conference of Studio Unions. This union local is described as being thoroughly controlled by Communists, but in order to save the local's charter it was agreed upon that the local would withdraw from the Conference. This action was taken, However, it is said that this has in no way changed any of the Communist control of the union.

As indicated above, one of the purposes of the Conference has been to attempt to take over anti-Communist unions in the motion picture studio. The following six unions are involved: 1. Studio Grips, Number 80, I.A.T.S.E., A. F. of L. 2. Associated Propertymen, Number 44, I.A.T.S.E., A. F. of L. 3. Studio Laborers, Number 727, I.A.T.S.E., A. F.of L. 4. Studio Electricians, Number 728, I.A.T.S.E., A. F. of L. 5. Studio Utility Workers, Number 724, A. F. of L. 6. Studio Plasterers, Number 759, A. F. of L.

To counteract the attempt of the Conference, a meeting was held on Friday, October 27, 1944, sponsored by some seven unions of the motion picture industry, at which time it was decided to form a counter-organization to combat the inroads of the Communist elements and their attempt, through the Conference of Studio Unions, to take over the remainder of those unions, not yet controlled by Communist influences.

The president of the new group is Carl Cooper, West Coast representative of the I.A.T.S.E.; the secretary is Joseph P. Touhy, president and business representative of the Studio Drivers (Teamsters), Local 399, Hollywood. The organization has not, as yet, been given a name or title, although several meetings have been held since the initial one. Furthermore, it is said the new group's activity has been delayed to some extent by virtue of the election campaigns. It is said that the formation of this organization was the result of a visit of Richard Walsh, International President of the I.A.T.S.E. to Hollywood. Walsh is related to have warned some of the local unions in the motion picture industry that Herbert K. Sorrell was going to "gobble them all up if they didn't get busy." Sorrell, in combination with the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions, is said to be now in control of 22,000 of the 30,000 studio workers. [redacted]

Motion Picture Labor Committee for Political Action

During the first part of October, 1944, it was reported that this organization composed of Hollywood Studio A. F. of L. union locals, became completely Communist controlled. At the beginning there were several non-Communist unions belonging to the Committee, but these unions, seeing the predominance of Communists and their influence, dropped out of the Committee, leaving it in Communist hands. This Political Action Committee was affiliated with the United A. F. of L. Political Action Committee. It also cooperated wholeheartedly with the CIO Political Action Committee and also was affiliated with the Hollywood Democratic Committee. Its work centered primarily in the union. After the elections it is said there was some discussion among its functionaries as to whether the Committee should be kept intact. If it is kept in a permanent status undoubtedly it will assume a different type of work.

Screen Cartoonists Guild

This organization was formed in the early part of 1939 and in the spring of 1941. It secured a sub-charter of affiliation with the Moving Picture Painters' Local Number 644, A. F. of L. It has approximately 1,000 members and is composed of cartoonists, screen artists and animators engaged in the making of animated cartoons in the motion picture industry. Since July, 1941, the Guild has followed the Communist program and has been affiliated with a number of Communist front groups, including the Conference of Studio Unions, the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, the Sleepy Lagoon Defense Committee, the People's Educational Center, the Hollywood Democratic Committee, the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions, and the 15th District Congressional Committee. Three of the organizers of the subject Guild are known Communists, and the business representatives, William Pomerance, who represents the Guild politically, is described as one of the leading Communists in the movie industry. Three of the five delegates to the Los Angeles Central Labor Council of this Guild are Communist Political Association members and formerly members of the Communist Party.

Screen Writers Guild

The Daily Worker for November 22, 1944, carried an article concerning the election of new officers in the Screen Writers Guild. The following people were elected to official capacities:

Emmet Lavery - President
James Hilton - 1st Vice President
Hugo Butler - 2nd Vice President

Elmer Rice
Talbot Jennings
Sheridan Gibney
Albert Hackett
Frances Goodrich
John Howard Lawson
Oliver H. P. Garrett
Gordon Kahn
Richard Collins
Betty Reinhardt
Jo Swerling
Harold Buckman
Arthur Kober

Among the above are numerous names linked previously with the Communist movement in varying capacities. The following is a brief description of the connections of each of those persons reported to have Communist affiliations:

Emmet Lavery is also Chairman of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, a Communist front.

James Hilton is affiliated with the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

Howard Estabrook is presently Secretary of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

Michael Kanin is a reported Communist sympathizer.

Dalton Trumbo is a known Communist.

Marc Connelly is a member of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, and according to a reliable informant has engaged in Communist activities.

Talbot Jennings is a reported Communist sympathizer.

Sheridan Gibney was a member of the League of American Writers, a Communist front.

Albert Hackett is a member of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

Frances Goodrich is a member of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

John Howard Lawson is a known Communist.

Gordon Kahn is a known Communist.

Richard Collins is a known Communist.

Harold Buchman is a known Communist.

The following, according to the Daily Worker, is the new program of activity of the Screen Writers Guild:

"1. Full employment for screen writers utilizing to the fullest extent the advent of television and the expansion of the educational and commercial film; with special attention to the rapid placement of returning writers discharged after service with the armed forces or in government bureaus.

"2. Construction of a Guild Center building, housing employe groups in the industry, with meeting halls, projection rooms, auditorium, library, etc. (together with other guilds and unions in the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions).

"3. Establishment of a foreign employment exchange for the purpose of supplying trained writers and film workers of all categories to motion picture producers in other countries; establishment of foreign language classes."

(Daily Worker, 11-22-44, p.11)

Conference of Studio Unions

[redacted] During November, 1944, this Communist dominated group under the leadership of Herbert K. Sorrell continued to be involved in several labor jurisdictional disputes with the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees (I.A.T.S.E.). While these disputes continued to appear purely jurisdictional, in fact, according to informants, they were fomented by Communist elements for the purpose of breaking I.A.T.S.E. Unions. At the present time, the principal controversy is between the Screen Set Directors, an A. F. of L. affiliate of Sorrell's union; the painters, and Local 44 of the Associated Propertymen, I.A.T.S.E. A strike has been threatened unless William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor, gives in to Sorrell who has the backing of his International Union, the International Brotherhood of Painters, Paperhangers and Decorators of America, A. F. of L. The International President of this Union is E. P. Lindelof, who supports Sorrell. Lindelof, according to the informant, has long been aware that Sorrell is a Communist.

Another controversy which has arisen during November, 1944, indirectly involving the Conference of Studio Unions, has the following background:

> The Motion Picture Producers Association, which has been in existence for many years, is composed of representatives from all the major studios in the film industry. A part of the Association is called the "Hays Office of Censorship" which approves or disapproves the content of pictures.
> A rift has developed in the Association. Warner Brothers has announced its withdrawal to take effect within six months - that time being required because the rules of the Association require six months notice of withdrawal. The reasons given by Warner Brothers for severing relations are that the Studio objects to the method of handling labor relations by Pat Casey who comes under the influence of the Hays Office. Also, Warner Brothers objects to the type of Censorship exercised by the Hays Office. The principle involved in this dispute between Warner Brothers and the Hays Office in the matter of censorship is that Warner Brothers objects to the censorship of what it terms "educational" content of the motion picture. In this case what is really meant is "political" content. Another point on which there is disagreement is the matter of labor relations. The Hays Office and the Casey Office have been bargaining with two different groups, the I.A.T.S.E. and the Basic Agreement Crafts, all A. F. of L. Within these two groups there has arisen what is called the Conference of Studio Unions, a Communist controlled group of key crafts under the leadership of Herbert K. Sorrell, a former Communist.

Warner Brothers has announced that it will conduct its labor relations department separate from the Hays and Casey Offices and will recognize for bargaining purposes the Conference of Studio Unions. This will give official recognition for the first time to the Communist leadership in the Hollywood Studio Unions. In this regard the informant has pointed out that Warner Brothers appears to have been consistently veering in the direction of Communist influence for some time.

Screen Actors Guild

The December 21, 1944, issue of the "Worker" carries an article on page eleven which announces that Hollywood extras and bit players voted in a National Labor Relations Board election three to one for affiliation with the Screen Players Union (unaffiliated) over the Screen Actors Guild (A.F.L.). The article states that the extras and bit players were formerly class "B" non-voting members of the Screen Actors Guild. Votes were cast by more than 1,900 of 3,300 eligible actors. The election took place on December 17, 1944.

Previously the "Daily Worker" for September 18, 1944, advised that the Screen Players Union had been actively blaming the Screen Actors Guild for not consummating negotiations for better wages and working conditions. It was reported in this first article that the Screen Players Union had invited 2,500 extras to a mass meeting "to ask them if they wouldn't like to have their present checks of $5.50, $8.25 and $10.50 upped to a minimum of $16.50 with present $16.50 checks raised a couple of bucks more." The September 18, 1944, article in effect criticizes the Screen Players Union. However, the December 21, 1944, article appeared very impartial.

The December 21, 1944, article advised that immediately after the above referred to election George Murphy, president of the Screen Actors Guild, called a meeting of his executive board to consider steps to be taken in defense of what the Guild considers its jurisdiction. It was explained in the article that the only voting members of the Guild have been "A" players, or those with substantial speaking parts.

The "Worker" article said that it appeared unlikely the Screen Actors Guild would challenge the election, although Murphy stated that his Union would "continue to exert exclusive jurisdiction over all acting work in the industry."

It was related that during the pre-election contest the Screen Actors Guild told its "B" members they would lose A.F.L. benefits if the Screen Players Union won, since the president, William Green, A. F. of L., would not permit any A. F. L. union but the Screen Actors Guild to take jurisdiction over the extras. The Screen Players Union reportedly countered with a claim that it had been issued a charter by an A. F. L. international union which it did not name, although it was believed, according to the article, in Hollywood that the international union involved is the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees.

The article in the "Worker" was ended by stating that the Screen Players Union victory culminated a long period of dissatisfaction among non-voting "B" members of the Screen Actors Guild, most of whom felt they were voiceless and desired a change.

Later, the January 4, 1945 issue of the "Daily Worker" carried an article on page 4 to the effect that "B Membership" of the Screen Actors Guild were scheduled to be abolished as of February 1, 1945, as a result of a special meeting of the Board of Directors of the Screen Writers Union, at which time steps were considered following a National Labor Relations Board certification of the new Screen Players Union, as the collective bargaining agent for all extras.

This article stated that heretofore, extras comprised the "B-Non-Voting-Membership" of the Screen Actors Guild, and that henceforth there would be "A" and "A-J" memberships in the Screen Actors Guild - "A" for actors as such, "A-J" for junior actors and bit players. It was also stated that extras who also do bit parts would probably maintain their Screen Actors Guild membership for their bit work, and membership in the Screen Players Union for their extra work.

Conference of Studio Unions

The January 16, 1945 issue of the Daily Worker carries an article on page 5 which is entitled "10 A. F. L. Hollywood Unions Back Campaign for Harry Bridges." This article states that thousands of Hollywood movie studio workers who are members of 10 A. F. of L. affiliates have voted to support Harry Bridges in his fight against deportation. It was reported in the article that acting through the Conference of Studio Unions, the workers wired the Attorney General and the President asking an immediate termination of deportation proceedings, as well as the granting of citizenship to Bridges. Herbert K. Sorrell, A. F. of L. Painter's leader and president of the Conference of Studio Unions, is said to have signed the wire. The article lists the Unions represented in the conference as, Screen Cartoonists Guild, Screen Office Employees Guild, Screen Set Designers, Screen Story Analysts Guild, Screen Publicists Guild, Special Officers and Guards Local 193, Film Technicians, Motion Picture Machinists, Moving Picture Painters and Service Employees Local 278. [redacted]

Information was received in January, 1945, concerning the jurisdictional dispute between this group and the International Association of Theatrical and Stage Employees. It is said that Sorrell has threatened to call a strike of the set dressers to enforce the conference's demands for control of this craft. The dispute is a part of a general program instituted by Communist controlled unions in Hollywood to invade the jurisdiction of the IATSE which is said to be generally opposed to Communist infiltration. Confidential Informant [redacted] states that the Communists are reviving the Browne-Bioff affair by demanding a Senate investigation of the release of these two men from prison, claiming they will again appear in the union affairs in Hollywood. The informant pointed out that this is being done for propaganda purposes. The same source has referred to a series of work stoppages in the studios for a period of several months, ending in January, 1945, which he said are ostensibly caused by jurisdictional disputes between the set dressers and the set designers. The informant pointed out that in reality this has been a process used by Communist controlled unions to maintain the "militancy" of the workers and at the same time work for the sympathy of members of other unions. [redacted]

Radio Writers Guild

The January 24, 1945 issue of the Daily Worker carries an article announcing that this Guild has been organized on a national basis, and that funds for its national budget have been supplied by the Authors League of America. The article announced that objects for 1945 for this organization are:

1. Negotiation of national contracts for radio news and continuity writers working for the national chains.
2. Negotiations for a national minimum basis agreement for all free lance writers.

The new National Secretary is Dorothy Bryant, described as previous secretary of the Radio Writers Guild, Eastern Region and before that executive secretary of the Chorus Equity Association. It was voted that discharged serviceman would be exempt from the standard $10.00 initiation fee. [redacted]

SCREEN WRITERS GUILD

The Screen Writers Guild, an affiliate of the Authors League of America, Inc., was organized in 1933. It is said to be the first union group of the cultural field in the motion picture industry to come under the domination of the Communists and Communist sympathizers. It has approximately 1300 members, of which about 100 are reported to be members of the Communist Party. In addition, a great many of its members are associates of Communists and are alleged to be sympathetic to Communist ideology and have been active in Communist dominated organizations. The Screen Writers Guild has given prestige to the Communist movement in Hollywood and has taken the lead in the organized cultural union groups in following the Communist Party line.

John Howard Lawson, Robert Rossen, Lester Cole, Hugo Butler, Waldo Salt and Ring Lardner, Jr. reportedly are among the leading Communists who have been officials in this guild and who have been most influential in shaping its policies.

Officers of the Screen Writers Guild, Inc.

The June, 1945 issue of "The Screen Writer," a magazine published by the Screen Writers Guild, listed the following individuals as officers of this organization:

President - Emmet Lavery:

According to information in the file of the Los Angeles Office, Lavery is a native born citizen whose home is Poughkeepsie, New York. He is a graduate of the Fordham Law School and is a former instructor of the Catholic University, Washington, D. C. He is comparatively new in the motion picture industry and for the past three years has continually associated with Communists and has been used by them as a front for various organizations. He was formerly connected with the Federal Theater Project in New York City. He claims to be an ardent foe of red-baiting and stated that despite the fact he is not a Communist he has suffered considerably, particularly on the Federal Theater Project, from red-baiting. Although no documentary evidence is contained in the file which would indicate Lavery is a member of the Communist Party, he has been chairman of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization and was also a member of the Executive Board of the Hollywood Democratic Committee, both of which are said to be Communist dominated organizations.

First Vice President - Ring Lardner, Jr.:

Lardner was formerly a member of Branch A-1, Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party. In July of 1945, he was reliably reported to be a member of the Beverly Westwood Cultural Group of the Communist Political Association.

Second Vice President - Frances Goodrich:

She has been active in the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, said to be a Communist dominated organization.

Third Vice President - Gordon Kahn:

He was formerly a member of Branch A-1, Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party. In July of 1945 he was reliably reported to be a member of the Communist Political Association. He is the Managing Editor of "The Screen Writer" a magazine published by the Screen Writers Guild. According to [redacted] a paid informant of the Los Angeles Office, Kahn is active in the Hollywood Writers Mobilization and the Hollywood Democratic Committee, both of which organizations are said to be Communist dominated.

Secretary - Howard Estabrook:

Although there is no documentary evidence of Estabrook's membership in the Communist Party, he has been active in numerous Communist front organizations and was a sponsor of the American Youth for Democracy.

Treasurer - Michael Kanin:

There is no documentary evidence in the Los Angeles Office which would prove that Kanin is a member of the Communist Party. However, he has reportedly been active in a number of Communist front organizations and is known to have contributed $10.00 to the "People's World", reported West Coast Communist news organ, during the fund drive of that publication in 1944.

Executive Committee

The following individuals, who were listed in the June, 1945 issue of "The Screen Writer" as members of the Executive Committee of the Screen Writers Guild, have been reported to be either Communists or Communist sympathizers: Richard Collins; Oliver H. P. Garrett; Sheridan Gibney; John Howard Lawson; Dalton Trumbo; Albert Hackett; Joe Sworling; Harold Buchman; Frank Partos.

Activities

A review of the second report of the Un-American Activities Committee in California, which is the report of the Joint Fact Finding Committee to the 56th California Legislature, published in Sacramento, California, in 1945, revealed the names of the individuals who signed the call to the various American writers congresses of the League of American Writers. Both the American Writers Congress and the League of American Writers are said to have been Communist dominated. The First American Writers Congress was held in New York City in 1935 and the Fourth and last American Writers Congress was held in New York City, in 1941. At the 1941 Congress John Howard Lawson and

Albert Maltz, both members of the Screen Writers Guild, were elected National Vice Presidents of the League of American Writers. It is pertinent to know that the League of American Writers organization was discontinued in the latter part of 1943. During the time it was in operation, however, it was reported to have been completely Communist dominated. It is also of interest to note that a number of the members of the Screen Writers Guild were instructors in the League of American Writers school in Hollywood, California.

Under questioning before the California Legislature Joint Fact Finding Committee, John Howard Lawson and Marc Connelly, both of whom are members of the Screen Writers Guild, admitted that they, together with Robert Rossen, also a member of the Screen Writers Guild, were the real organizers of the Communists in the motion picture industry and stated that they had carried the brunt of the early organizational work.

When Alexander Trachtenberg, National Educational Director of the Communist Party, visited Los Angeles in February, 1943, he held conferences with various Communist writers who were members of the Screen Writers Guild, among whom were John Howard Lawson, Robert Rossen, Albert Maltz and Waldo Salt.

Publications

The Screen Writers Guild has published the Screen Writers Guild Bulletin since at least 1942. This publication is a tabloid sized paper consisting of four to eight pages. It has reported the activities of the Guild, the committee, the election of officers and the screen correspondence of members of the Guild. It also reports much of the activities of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, particularly insofar as it concerns the activities of the Screen Writers Guild. It is pertinent to note the Screen Writers Guild reportedly was very influential in helping to organize the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

In June of 1945 the Guild began the publication of the magazine entitled "The Screen Writer". This magazine is about the size of the "Readers Digest" and is to be published monthly.

There is set out below the names of the individuals who are said to comprise the officers and Editorial Committee of "The Screen Writer":

Editor	Dalton Trumbo
Managing Editor	Gordon Kahn
Editorial Committee	Ring Lardner, Jr.
	Robert Andrews
	Theodore Strauss
	Earl Felton
	Lamar Trotti
	Arnold Manoff
	Frank Partos
	Michael Hogan

Of these, according to the confidential records of Elizabeth Benson, secretary of organization and membership director of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party, Dalton Trumbo, Gordon Kahn, Ring Lardner, Jr. and Arnold Manoff were members of the Communist Political Association as of July, 1945. Of the others, Lamar Trotti received a cultural award from the publication "New Masses" for his work in the motion picture "Wilson." [redacted]re Strauss has been discussed in "The Screen Writer" as a former film reviewer for the "New York Times" before he began to write for the screen. Recently he was observed by Bureau Agents at meetings in the home of Richard Collins, a screen writer and known Communist. Frank Partos, a former secretary of the Screen Writers Guild, has also been an associate of many Communists in the past. No immediate information was available concerning the Communist tendencies of Earl Felton and Michael Hogan.

Known Communists in the Screen Writers Guild

Documentary evidence in the possession of the Los Angeles Office reflects that approximately 100 members of the Screen Writers Guild were members of the Communist Political Association in July of 1945. The documentary evidence mentioned is comprised of reproductions obtained from the confidential records of Elizabeth Benson, secretary of organization and membership director of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party. The members of the Screen Writers Guild, who were listed as members of the Communist Political Association as of July, 1945, are as follows:

Screen Writers Guild Members Connected with OWI OVERSEAS FILM PROGRAM

As of July, 1945, over fifty writers all members of the Screen Writers Guild, have been working on scripts for pictures produced in connection with the OWI Overseas Film Program. The Writers Mobilization has named an editorial board which directs the activity of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization in connection with the OWI Overseas Film Program. Among the editorial board members are the following members of the Screen Writers Guild:

JOHN HOWARD LAWSON
MARC CONNELLY
SIDNEY BUCHMAN
CHARLES BRACKETT
JOHN HOUSEMAN
ROBERT ROSSEN
HOWARD ESTABROOK
HOWARD KOCH
HARRY TUGEND
TALBOT JENNINGS

All of the above-mentioned writers have been described as either Communist Party members, associates of known Communists or members of organizations allegedly controlled by known Communists.

[redacted] In addition to their activities in the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, OWI Overseas Film Program members of the Screen Writers Guild have also been active in the Hollywood Democratic Committee, a political organization which has no official connection with the Democratic Party of California. John Howard Lawson, a Communist Party member, was one of the organizers of the Hollywood Democratic Committee and information has been obtained from a technical surveillance maintained on Lawson that George Pepper, the Executive Secretary of the Hollywood Democratic Committee, confers with Lawson in order to obtain instruction as to the policies and activities of the Committee. On June 6, 1945, this organization changed its name to the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions. Among the members of the Screen Writers Guild elected to the Executive Council of the latter mentioned organization are the following:

SIDNEY BUCHMAN
MARC CONNELLY
HARRY KURNITZ
JOHN HOWARD LAWSON
JACK MOSS
WILLIAM POMERANCE
JO SWERLING
ORSON WELLES
MORRIS COHN
HOWARD KOCH
EMMET LAVERY
MARY C. McCALL
NAT PERRIN
MARION SPITZER
DALTON TRUMBO

All of the above-named members of the Screen Writers Guild have either been members of the Communist Political Association or have been connected with organizations reportedly dominated by the Communist Party in the past.

SCREEN CARTOONISTS GUILD

[redacted] Los Angeles, California, an informant of the Los Angeles Office, advised that Maurice Howard has continued as business representative for the Screen Cartoonists Guild. The motion picture trade magazine "Variety" in its issue of June 22, 1945, carried a news item to the effect that the following individuals had been elected to the offices in the Screen Cartoonists Guild:

President	Ace Gamer
Vice President	Ray Patin
Treasurer	Cornett Wood
Recording Secretary	Charlotte Adams
Executive Secretary	Cecil Beard
Warden	Roger Daley

Of the above, it should be noted that Charlotte Adams and Cecil Beard were known to the Los Angeles Office as members of the Los Angeles County Communist Political Association as of August 14, 1945. The trustees of this organization were said to be Bolus Jones, Paul Julian and Jack Bailey. Jack Bailey was known to the Los Angeles Office as a member of the Communist Political [redacted]ation as of August 14, 1945.

Information has also been received to the effect that Earl Klein was named editor of "The Animator," which is the official magazine of the Screen Cartoonists Guild. A copy of the July, 1945 issue of "The Animator" was obtained and is being retained in the Los Angeles files. This issue of "The Animator" contained articles which stressed the theme that screen cartoonists work for "peanuts" and described the motion picture producers as being unscrupulous, profit-mad individuals. This issue also carried favorable comments concerning the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions, a Communist controlled organization.

The Conference of Studio Unions

This block of studio unions played the major role in the motion picture strike taken up separately elsewhere in this section. Confidential Informan[redacted]dvised that the strike by the Conference of Studio Unions was not a legitimate labor dispute but rather a strike by a group of Communist dominated locals using the question of jurisdiction over a small group of set dressers as an excuse. The dispute was between the Conference of Studio Unions and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees - AFL. The informant advised that the present dispute was the third attempt in eight years by the Communist element to capture or disrupt the IATSE, which has always opposed Communist infiltration of its ranks. The Communist issue was raised in the strike and the dispute largely revolved about that question rather than around the usual issues of wages, hours or working conditions.

Confidential Informant [redacted] stated that although the strike was generally believed to be the result of Communist activity throughout groups belonging to the Conference of Studio Unions, newspapers reaching the general public smothered this angle of the controversy. The informant attributed this fact to the desire of the moving picture industry to keep the public from knowing that there was any basis for the threatened investigation by the "Rankin Committee" of the Communist influence in Hollywood. Publications of the IATSE, however, stressed this feature of the labor dispute but distribution of such publications reached relatively few people.

The informant stated that Herbert K. Sorrell, head of the Conference of Studio Unions and leader of the strike, who the informant described as a known Communist, called for and received the support of the Communist Party locally and to some extent throughout the United States. Sorrell reportedly had contact with the National Committee of the Communist Party in New York through Louis Weinstock, National Committeeman, and was promised support by the arrangement for picket lines in front of theaters.

STRIKE IN MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY
MARCH 12 TO OCTOBER 29, 1945

Background

The motion picture industry strike, which started on March 12, 1945, was precipitated as the result of a jurisdictional dispute as to whether 77 set designers were to be represented by Local Union 1421, Screen Set Designers, an affiliate of the Conference of Studio Unions, or Local Union 44, an affiliate of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees - AFL. The strike was settled on October 29, 1945. Herbert K. Sorrell, a former Communist, is president of the Conference of Studio Unions and was recognized as the leader of the strike. Richard A. Walsh is president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees - AFL, the union which opposed Sorrell's Conference of Studio Unions in this labor dispute.

This strike was not called in an attempt to gain an increase in wages or better working conditions for the union members but was purely political in character. It was, in fact, an attempt on the part of the Conference of Studio Unions to break the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees Group of AFL Unions, which has always opposed Communist infiltration and domination.

Lack of Communist Activity in Strike Prior to July 28, 1945

No Communist activity favoring this strike was noted from its inception on March 12, 1945 to July 28, 1945. During this period, the Communist Party line was one of collaboration, which was adopted at the time Russia was invaded by Germany in June of 1941. In view of this fact, the Communist Party did not support this strike since the Party line clearly advocated no strikes which would interfere with the prosecution of the war inasmuch as Russia was in need of all possible aid from the United States.

On July 28, 1945, the Communist Political Association reverted to the tenets of the Communist Party of the United States and at that time, William Z. Foster, the new National Chairman of the Communist Party, announced the Party would return to the Marxist-Leninist line of revolutionary action. Since this strike lasted from March 12 to October 29, 1945, a period which bridged the change in furthering this strike after July 28, 1945, is plainly apparent.

Communist Participation in the Strike after July 28, 1945

Immediately after the change in the Party line, the Communist press began to support the strike and the Communist front organizations came out openly in support of the strikers. The Communist Party and its various branches in the localities affected by the strike began to issue leaflets calling on all the workers to man the picket lines. It was plainly visible at that time that the Communist Party and its members were whipping the situation toward the violent stage.

On October 5, 1945, mass picketing began and thousands of persons, ninety per cent of whom had no connection with the film industry, appeared on the picket lines at Warner Brothers Studios in Burbank, California. The strikers concentrated on this particular studio although the same tactics were used on others, particularly Paramount, Columbia and RKO.

As a result of what amounted to mob action, during the first week of October, 1945, several hundred persons who had gathered at the Warner Brothers Studio gates were injured. The violence reached such a pitch that the community around Warner Brothers Studios was closed to both traffic and the public. During the period from October 5 to October 28, 1945, violence and mob action was rampant and the local law enforcement authorities seemed to be helpless or loath to carry out their duty of restoring order by enforcing an injunction which had been issued by the Los Angeles State Superior Court against mob action on the picket lines. At one time, mass arrests were made but this seemed only to increase the violence.

The violence which occurred in connection with this strike was so flagrant and law enforcement so inefficient that an Interim Committee on Law Enforcement of the State Assembly of California began an investigation of the law enforcement authorities for failure to enforce the law. Judging from the attitude and statements made by members of this Interim Committee, they appeared to be amazed at the influence of the Communists on the public officials of Los Angeles City and County and the State of California, who now appear to have been very susceptible to the political pressure the Communist apparatus exerted at that time.

This strike was settled on October 29, 1945, when an agreement was reached between Eric Johnston, film czar, and high AFL Union officials in a conference at Cincinnati, Ohio. Immediately after this settlement, it was reported the strike had been called off under a makeshift settlement and that the Communists were preparing to reopen the fight in the near future. However, as of January 4, 1946, there was no indication that an immediate resumption of this strike would take place in the motion picture industry.

The leading Communist front organizations which took an active part in this strike are as follows:

Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions
International Workers Order
National Lawyers Guild
Southland Jewish Committee
Beverly-Westwood Democratic Committee
Hollywood Women's Council
Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions

Los Angeles County Central Committee of the Democratic Party
Screen Writers Guild
[redacted]
CIO Industrial Union Council of Los Angeles

Since this strike was of extreme importance to the Communist program for greater infiltration and domination of the motion picture labor unions and the resultant influence on the motion picture industry as a whole, the Communist Party in Los Angeles exerted all of its influence in its fight to win this strike. [redacted]

DEVELOPMENTS AS RESULT OF STRIKE
(January 1, 1946 through March 31, 1946)

[redacted] a confidential informant of the Los Angeles Office, advised that when this strike came to a formal end through the efforts of Eric Johnston, both the Conference of Studio Unions (CSU), which is dominated by the Communist Party and whose spokesman is Herbert K. Sorrell, and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees (IATSE), which is represented in Hollywood by Roy M. Brewer, agreed to abide by the findings of a board of arbitration which had been appointed by the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor. This arbitration board consisted of three men who had no interest in the motion picture industry and who were responsible heads of the AF of L Labor Union Internationals. These men made a report of their findings about January 6, 1946, and when their decision was announced, the IATSE accepted the board's decision but the CSU unions refused to do so. The CSU members staged sitdown strikes and in many other ways interferred with the production of pictures as a result of the board's decision which was considered unfavorable to the CSU unions.

During the latter part of February, 1946, Herbert K. Sorrell, head of the CSU, advised the producers that he would call another strike unless all of his demands were met. It should be noted that the CSU has since the termination of the strike on March 12, 1945, demanded wage raises and an adjustment of hours in addition to the issues previously involved which was an attempt on the part of the CSU to break the IATSE which has always opposed Communist infiltration and domination. (According to confidential informant [redacted] the real purpose of the CSU is two-fold: first, the union desires to keep the general labor situation agitated in line with the present Communist Party program of creating confusion in the United States and second, to maintain intact the leadership of Herbert K. Sorrell.)

[redacted] further informed that Sorrell has been exposed by the IATSE as a member of theCommunist Party and added that Sorrell's record of

Communist activity over a period of eight years has been made public along with the general aims of the Communist Party in the Hollywood motion picture [redacted]stry.

In January of 1946, Sorrell was convicted in the Superior Court of Los Angeles County of inciting to riot and defying an injunction against mass picketing and was sentenced to serve sixteen days in jail. He was to begin serving his sentence on January 19, 1946, but as of February 15, 1946, there had been no attempt on the part of local authorities to enforce the sentence. In addition to the jail sentence, Sorrell was fined $1,700. It is not known whether this fine has been paid. It was stated that one of the reasons Sorrell had not been ordered to serve the sentence imposed upon him was the fact that the Communists, masked as "progressives" and "liberals," have a tremendous influence on the courts and law enforcement agencies in Southern California. The most recent information received with regard to this situation was to the effect that after some delay, Sorrell had actually served the sixteen-day jail sentence.

The Central Labor Council of Los Angeles, an AF of L body, is presently preparing to expel Sorrell as a delegate to that Council because of his reported Communist Party membership and his secret maneuverings with the CIO. It is thought that Sorrell would like to see the CIO take jurisdiction over all of the Hollywood studio unions. A complete report which contains photostatic proof of Sorrell's connections with the Communist Movement has been filed with the Los Angeles Central Labor Council. All of this proof is reportedly substantiated by testimony of recognized handwriting experts. Despite this allegation of Communist affiliation on the part of Sorrell, the producers of motion pictures, according to [redacted] have announced that they will deal with Sorrell as the representative of the CSU. [redacted] added that this action of the producers is difficult to understand unless it is due to the influence of certain individuals in the top executive branches who are known to be sympathetic to the Communist cause or at least to be affiliated with Communist front organizations. The leader of this faction is Walter Wanger, one of the major producers in the moving picture industry and an inveterate "Communist-fronter." The following individuals within the Communist-influenced labor unions in Hollywood are most active as leaders in support of Sorrell and the Communist aim of controlling all studio labor according to Wolf:

John Howard Lawson, Screen Writers Guild *
Emmett Lavery, Screen Writers Guild
John Cromwell, Screen Directors Guild
Frank Tuttle, Screen Directors Guild *
Norval Crutcher, Local 683, Laboratory Technicians, IATSE *
Russell L. McKnight, Local 683, Laboratory Technicians, IATSE

John Martin, Local 683, Laboratory Technicians, IATSE
Jacob Sterr, Studio Machinists, Local 1185
[redacted] Charles Barker, Studio Machinists, Local 1185
Roy Tindall, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, (IBEW) Local 40
Helmer Bergman, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, (IBEW) Local 40 *
William Pomerance, Business Manager, Screen Writers Guild *
Maurice Howard, Business Representative Screen Cartoonists *
Ed Mussa, Set Decorators, Local 1421
Frank Drdlik, Set Decorators, Local 1421 *
Carl Head, Studio Painters, Local 644
Ted Ellsworth, Studio Costumers, Local 705, IATSE
Glenn Pratt, Screen Office Employees Guild
Lillian Hurwitz, Screen Office Employees Guild
Dave Hilberman, Screen Office Employees Guild *
Mike Jeffers, Screen Players Union, Independent Union of Extras
James Skelton, Studio Carpenters, Local 946
George Bradley, Building Service Employees, Local 99 *
Jack Williams, Police Officers and Guards, Local 278 *

The above-named individuals are the leaders of the Communist faction within the Hollywood studio crafts and unions. They are the spokesmen along with Sorrell for the program of the Communist Party. The individuals after whose names an asterisk appears have heretofore been reported as known Communist Party members by sources considered to be reliable by the Los Angeles Office.

Screen Writers Guild, Inc.
(Period January 1, 1946, through March 31, 1946)

According to the January, 1946 issue of "The Screen Writer," which is the official publication of the Screen Writers Guild, there are at present 1,317 members of the SWG, 972 of whom are classified as active members and 345 who are described as associate members. An associate member is a writer who has been elevated to a directorship or a producership position in the motion picture industry. However, of the 972 active members of the SWG, only 366 are presently employed in the eight major studios in the motion picture industry. According to this issue of "The Screen Writer," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer employees 116 screen writers, RKO Studios 27, 20th Century-Fox Studios 44, Columbia 36, Paramount 50, Republic 20, Universal 32 and Warner Brothers 41.

In November of 1945, the SWG held its annual election at which time the following writers were elected to executive positions:

[redacted] President	Emmet Lavery
First Vice President	Lester Cole
Second Vice President	Howard Estabrook
Third Vice President	Oliver Garret
Secretary	Maurice Rapf
Treasurer	Harold Buchman
Executive Board:
Philip Dunne	Gordon Kahn
Mary McCall	Marguerite Roberts
Sheridan Gibney	Howard Koch
Richard Collins	Adele Buffington
Robert Rossen
Alternates to Executive Board:
Frank Partos	John Wexley
Allan Scott	Bud Schulberg
Hugh Herbert	Henry Meyers

All of the above-named individuals with the exception of Adele Buffington, Philip Dunne and Hugh Herbert are alleged Communists or have been identified as having participated in numerous Communist front activities. The Executive Secretary and Business Agent of the SWG, William Pomerance, was recently reappointed. Pomerance, according to [redacted] is a Communist.

[redacted] a member of the SWG who has requested that his name be kept in strictest confidence, advised that for some time there has been a discussion within the Guild regarding the passing of a resolution or an amendment to their constitution which would allow the Guild to make political assessments. According to [redacted] the reason for this was to avoid a recurrence of the difficulty with which the American Federation of Radio Artists was confronted when Cecil B. DeMille refused to pay one dollar which had been accessed to him for political purposes.

According to articles which appeared in the local Los Angeles newspapers on July 17, 1945, the question of political assessments was brought up at a meeting of the SWG but was defeated. When this information later appeared in the "Hollywood Reporter," Emmet Lavery, President of the SWG, wrote a mimeographed letter to each member of the Guild in which he advised that the "Hollywood Reporter" had libeled him and denied that there had ever been any attempt to force a political assessment upon the Guild's members. However, Lavery did state that at a regular meeting of the SWG on July 17, 1945, the membership took a strong stand by forming a committee to join with other guilds and unions in a strong affirmation of "community unity in the face of Gerald L. K. Smith's destructive and disruptive tactics." The members of the Guild also authorized the Executive Board of the SWG to take whatever steps seemed appropriate to them in defending both the Guild and the motion picture industry against the "continued attacks by Congressman Rankin and State Senator Jack B. Tenney, Chairman of the California State Un-American Activities Committee." It was made quite clear at this meeting that the SWG planned to take a definite stand against "vicious red-baiters." According to information obtained from a technical surveillance which is maintained on John Howard Lawson, Lester Cole, a Communist, will be a member of the aforementioned committee. Lester Cole was also appointed as head of a committee set up by the SWG to prepare a re-employment plan for writers who are returning from the armed services.

On February 13, 1946, the "Daily News" carried a news story which quoted Lester Cole as saying that the producers have not been cooperative and that his committee must take additional steps in order to secure the re-employment of veterans.

[redacted] a confidential informant of the Los Angeles Office, stated that this action is an attempt on the part of the Communist element within the SWG to force producers to re-employ Communists who are now returning from the armed forces.

On March 12, 1945, Herbert K. Sorrell called a strike in the motion picture industry because of a jurisdictional dispute between his Conference of Studio Unions and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees Union. Sorrell called this strike without having consulted with Communist leaders and within a few days after it began, the Communists issued an official statement in which they informed that they would not take part in the strike inasmuch as it was adverse to their no-strike pledge. It is interesting to note that the SWG also issued a statement to the effect that there was no justification for the strike. However, following the publication of the Jacques Duclos' article and the subsequent revision of Communist Party policy on July 27, 1945, the Communists in Hollywood issued another official statement of policy in which they advised they would on August 9, 1945, the SWG issued a request which amounted to a demand that the producers negotiate with the CSU in a demand to the War Labor Relations Board that the strike be ended at once. William Pomerance, Executive Secretary of the SWG and an alleged Communist, sent a wire to E. J. Mannix, President of the Motion Picture Producers Association, in which he stated that the producers' position had created serious obstacles to the peaceful settlement of the dispute and called upon them to settle and thus removed the suspicion that the producers were endeavoring to exploit the situation to their advantage.

[redacted] In the August 21, 1945 issue of "Variety" the Teamsters Union strongly criticized the SWG for having entered into a dispute in which it was in no way concerned. The Teamsters Union called on the SWG to answer the question of why it had abandoned its neutral position. The teamsters added that the blunt fact was that the Hollywood studio strike was not a strike over wages or hours but a jurisidctional dispute in which both the Communists and the SWG had reversed their original positions. [redacted] informed that this action on the part of the SWG clearly represents the Communist domination and infiltration of that organization.

During this period the SWG has continued to publish "The Screen Writer," many articles of which are contributed by members of the Communist Party. In the October, 1945 issue of this publication, there are five lead articles, four of which were written by members of the Communist Party, and the fifth was authorized by a Chinese cameraman, James Wong Howe, who lives with a Caucasian Communist, Sonora Babb. The editor, the managing editor and Ring Lardner, Jr., who is on the editorial committee, are members of the Communist Party and "The Screen Writer" itself is designed by John Hubley, a Communist, according to information obtained from the records of Elizabeth Benson, Section Organizer and Membership Director of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles Communist Party.

Conference of Studio Unions
(Period January 1, 1946, through March 31, 1946)

The strike in the motion picture studios which was called by the Conference of Studio Unions on March 12, 1945, and which ended on October 29, 1945, has been settled temporarily by a three-man arbitration committee during the period January 1 through March 31, 1946. This arbitration committee was appointed by the Executive Council of the AF of L. The striking employees returned to their jobs but the same basic differences between the Conference of Studio Unions and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees are still in existence despite the decision made by the arbitration committee. According to [redacted] a confidential informant of the Los Angeles Office, it is only a matter of time until the fight between the Conference of Studio Unions and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees will flare up again.

Herbert K. Sorrell, leader of the Conference of Studio Unions and a former Communist, was a member of the Communist Party in 1937 under the name of Herb Stewart. In 1937 he carried Communist Party Membership Book No. 60622.

DEVELOPMENTS IN THE CONFERENCE OF STUDIO UNIONS
APRIL 1, TO JULY 1, 1946

During the month of May, the labor situation within the Hollywood studio unions was comparatively quiet, most probably due to the fact that Herbert K. Sorrell was on trial before the Los Angeles Central Council on the charge of being a Communist. However, on May 29, 1946, the AF of L Central Labor Council directed its affiliated members not to handle material worked on by the members of the nonaffiliated International Association of Machinists. The International Association of Machinists withdrew from the AF of L some ten months ago, as you will recall, as a result of a jurisdictional dispute with the AF of L Carpenters.

The Conference of Studio Unions, lead by Herbert K. Sorrell and heavily infiltrated by Communists, has been placed in a very peculiar position as a result of this dispute. The Conference of Studio Unions is composed of eleven local unions, ten of which are affiliated with the AF of L and the other with the International Association of Machinists.

A spokesman for the International Association of Machinists stated that if members of his union are discharged as a result of the AF of L ultimatum, the eight major Hollywood studios will be picketed. Leaders of the AF of L have ordered the motion picture industry to ignore the picket line of the International Association of Machinists. The Conference of Studio Unions, however, has announced that its 8,000 members will support the International Association of Machinists' picket line, and it appeared at that time as if the major Hollywood studios would again be faced with a major jurisdictional strike.

The International Association of Machinists local, as you recall, is completely dominated by Communists who have pursuaded Communist leaders in the Conference of Studio Unions to back them against the AF of L.

The "Daily People's World", a West Coast Communist publication, on June 22, 1946, carried an article under the caption, "Producers Strike," which stated that it was really the producers who were calling the strike in the motion picture industry and which described it as, "a Producers maneuver, the same kind of maneuver which to date has successfully stalled contracts." However, information developed reflects that the producers are merely the victims of a jurisdictional dispute between the two rival unions.

The Communist Party has issued a number of leaflets addressed to all studio workers calling upon them to unite in order that they may secure higher wages, and additional information reflects that the Communists will fully back any strike which is called in the motion picture industry.

JJC:IGS

Producers in Hollywood were allowing both rival unions to work, meanwhile filing their petitions with the National Labor Relations Board requesting a proper bargaining agent. This petition to the National Labor Relations Board outlines the claim of the four unions which are now involved in the dispute, namely, the International Association of Machinists, the new charter AF of L Machinists, the International Brotherhood of Teamsters and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees. Each of these unions claims the right to represent machinists in the studios.

On July 1, 1946, Herbert K. Sorrell called a strike, claiming the producers failed to recognize his wage demands. This strike seriously affected the ten major motion picture studios. Sorrell coupled recognition of a non AF of L Machinists union with his wage demands. Although producers state that they have agreed to meet wage demands, they do not recognize the non AF of L Machinists Union and have called upon the National Labor Relations Board to settle the jurisdictional issue.

Additional information developed from confidential paid informant [redacted] stated that the real issue is a jurisdictional dispute between the Conference of Studio Unions and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees. Roy Brewer, international representative of the IATSE, stated to the press on the morning of July 1, that his members would cross the picket lines. According to a release in the "Daily Worker", carrying the date line of July 2, 1946, and bearing the caption "The AF of L Unionists Engage in Bloody Clashes at Two Movie Studios Today," it was indicated that many were bruised, two required hospitalization and two were arrested as the production was generally slowed down. Following this uprising, peace feelers went out from the strikers. This peace bid came from the Conference of Studio Unions, which proposed an interim wage contract with producers and a truce of thirty to sixty days. The IATSE announced a willingness to join this peace movement, and the article continued, the producers had scheduled a meeting to be held later on July 2, 1946.

(July 23, 1946 to November 14, 1946)

According to [redacted] Confidential Paid Informant of the Los Angeles Field Division, the Conference of Studio Unions, which he classified as a block of Communist-dominated unions, during August of this year again opened the jurisdictional dispute with the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees (IATSE). [redacted] stated that because of this dispute there may be another strike called in the motion picture industry. He stated that the block of unions has now refused to accept the decision of the arbitrators of the dispute and that they are now demanding that the work allocated to the IATSE be given to the Studio Carpenters Local 946, which is one of the Unions affiliated with the Conference of Studio Unions.

This source states that in all this union activity there is no question of wages or conditions involved as the motion picture producers are now in the process of negotiating with all unions, and contracts will be entered into. Any strike in the studio will be a repetition of the previous strikes led by Sorrell, which, according to this source, were an attempt to gain control of certain known Communist union locals now under the jurisdiction of the IATSE.

"The Los Angeles Examiner" on July 31, 1946, under the head "Film Merger Confirmed" announced that the old Universal Studio and International Pictures, Inc., plus Arthur Rank, Ltd., of London, had amalgamated into one of the most exciting mergers that has happened in Hollywood in many years and the biggest since Twentieth Century Fox took over the old Fox Company. It is stated that the name of the new organization will be Universal - International Production Company.

[redacted] further stated that William Goetz will be President of the new organization; Leo Spitz will be the Chairman of the Board; Nate Blumberg will remain Chairman of the Board of Universal and J. Cheever Cowdin is also to be associated with Universal. Cliff Work is to remain as an executive and Walter Wanger will release his products through this company.

"Variety" for August 15, 1946, under a New York date line stated, "The first meeting in America of the Confederation Internationale des Societes de 'Auteurs et Compositeurs will be held in Washington in October. There are forty-one member nations. ASCAP will play host to the Second Federation. The Confederation is divided into four federations: Dramatic Rights, Reforming Rights, Mechanical Rights and Book Rights. ASCAP's General Manager, John G. Paine, is President of the Second Federation."

According to Confidential Informant [redacted] and [redacted] the Conference of Studio Unions once again called a strike in September in the Hollywood Motion Picture Industry. These sources stated that this strike is merely a continuation of a previous strike called in 1945 which lasted for eight months. They state that the present strike is again purely a matter of jurisdiction between the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, and the Conference of Studio Union, which is dominated by Communist influence, the leader of the latter group being Herbert K. Sorrell, who has long been affiliated with Communist activities in the motion picture industry.

These sources state the primary purpose of this strike is to try and get control of all studio workers for Communist purposes. As a means of clarification, the eleven unions which now compose the Conference of Studio Unions, ten of which are associated with the American Federation of Labor, are being set out below:

Local	Parent Organization
Screen Set Designers Local 1421	Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America
Screen Publicists Guild Local 1489	Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America
Screen Story Analyst Guild Local 1488	Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America
Screen Cartoonists Guild Local 852	Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America
Moving Picture Painters and Scenic Artists, Local 644	Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America
Special Officers and Guards Local 193	Building Service Employees International Union
Building Service Employees Local 278	Building Service Employees International Union

Local	PARENT ORGANIZATION
[redacted]dio Carpenters Local 946	United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America
Studio Electrical Workers Local 40	International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers
Studio Sheet Metal Workers Local 108	Studio Metal Workers International Union
Studio Machinists Local Cinema Lodge 1185	International Association of Machinists

As has been previously indicated, the Conference of Studio Unions is headed by Herbert K. Sorrell. This Conference is an independent organization which was formed several years ago, reportedly by Communists on the theory that if several unions would band together, their bargaining position would be greatly enhanced. The only union which is not affiliated with the AFL within this Conference is Local 1185 of the Studio Machinists. At first the International Association of Machinists spokesmen stated that if members of Local 1185 were discharged from their positions because of the ultimatum issued by the AFL Central Labor Council, that their members would picket these studios. However, as yet, according to the above-mentioned sources, no members of the International Association of Machinists have been discharged and the producers have employed additional machinists who are affiliated with the AFL in order to avoid this jurisdictional dispute.

DEVELOPMENTS IN THE INTERNATIONAL ALLIANCE OF THEATRICAL STAGE EMPLOYEES. (July 23, 1946 through November 8, 1946)

[redacted]os Angeles paid confidential informant, related that the struggle for control of all studio unions revolves around the National Convention of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees held the week of July 22, 1946 in Chicago, Illinois. He states that the Communists in the studio unions operating through the Conference of Studio Unions attempted to defeat the incumbent President, Richard M. Walsh, who has been consistently anti-Communist in union affairs. He stated that the Communists failed to elect their candidate William T. Bennett, of Washington, D. C., who had made a bargain with the Conference of Studio Unions and Herbert K. Sorrell, the Communist leader of that group.

The highlight of this convention, according to [redacted] was the Communist issue which took precedence over all other issues. [redacted]states that Walsh was elected practically on this issue alone. He stated that Senator Jack B. Tenney head of the Joint Legislative Committee on Subversive Activities in California, flew to Chicago and addressed the Convention on the Communist issue and convinced that body for the most part that all the troubles in the immediate past within the Hollywood Unions were the result of the attempts by the Communist Party to capture those unions. According to this source, the Convention voted powers to Walsh to clean up the Hollywood situation. No action has been reported, as yet, in this direction, however.

The Hollywood Reporter for July 29, 1946, under the heading "Walsh handed Powers, End All Jurisdictional Disputes" stated in part that Walsh was reelected to his third term as president of the IATSE, and announced a determination to settle for all time the jurisdictional disputes in Hollywood and to rid the Alliance of destructive elements that stand in the way of the union. He was given dictatorial powers to achieve this end. The 38th biennial convention at the Stevens Hotel reelected him by a vote of 649 to 426 and granted all effective powers to settle jurisdictional matters that have troubled the Alliance during the last years.

Walsh defeated William Bennett in his second try for the presidency. The enthusiastic endorsement given Walsh by William Green, by Eric Johnson, by Brigadier General Joseph Keenan and others, and also a number of resolutions approving his actions during the Hollywood strike, helped Walsh continue in his job.

The article stated that in granting Walsh full powers, the Convention authorized him to "act as he chooses" in the Hollywood studio situation and "to add, amend or alter any portion of the constitution and by-laws of the Alliance he deems necessary."

It stated, "The delegates acted on a supplementary report from Walsh in which he pleaded for this power and in which he explained that he needed this 'supreme authority' for the purpose of 'not asking but telling' the locals what to do."

It quoted Walsh as stating, "I know this is a drastic move, it gives your incoming president tremendous powers but I need it to protect our jurisdiction and local unions in Hollywood. If we don't win Hollywood we'll lose all. Your president must have this authority."

The article further stated, "After long debates, the convention adopted a resolution dealing Walsh and the Executive Board to act immediately to get rid of Communists, Nazis, Fascists and Ku Klux Klansmen in the union."

The article stated that the convention approved the expulsion of twelve members of Local 44 for failure to cooperate with the Alliance in the jurisdictional disputes during the recent strike in the Hollywood studios.

A banquet was held at the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel on the evening of October 3, 1946. According to [redacted] Tom O'Brien labor member of the British Parliament then in Hollywood studying the problems of labor in motion pictures, stated that the film industry of Great Britain was having much the same trouble with the Communists as the IATSE was having in Hollywood. He went into the subject at length because the same type of labor disputes broke out in the English industry at the same time as those which took place in Hollywood. He stated, "It may be a coincidence, but I doubt it. The Communists are trying to take over the entertainment industry of the world because through it they can exercise great influence. If they can get control of this industry, they will have gone two-thirds of the way."

DEVELOPMENTS AS A RESULT OF MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY STRIKE (July 23, 1946 to November 8, 1946)

Through confidential informants the Los Angeles Office learned that the motion picture industry was faced with a strike on the night of September 12, 1946 as a result of a jurisdictional dispute within the American Federation of Labor over the Studio Carpenters. The International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, which represents most of the employees in the entertainment world, but which is not a member of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, does not represent the Studio Carpenters. An individual known only as Hutchinson, who represents the Carpenters Union, participated a showdown with Walsh of the IATSE. This showdown threatened a complete stoppage of the motion picture studios.

[redacted] advised representatives of our Los Angeles Office that local unions of the motion picture industry during the week of September 18th were holding mass meetings protesting to William Green and other high union executives, against the dispute between Hutchinson, of the Carpenters Union, and Walsh, of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees which threatens to shut down the industry. At that time this source reported that no new motion picture sets were being constructed by the carpenters and when pictures presently in production had filmed all possible scenes using the present sets, production would shut down unless the Executive Board of the AFL reached a decision. At that time it was stated that approximately 60 carpenters would be the cause of some 30,000 people being out of work. George Elmer Adams, of the Burbank, California Police Department, predicted that a strike would occur at any time and that considerable trouble would be experienced when the strike occurred.

During this same period Herbert K. Sorrell, of the Conference of Studio Unions, was charging that producers refused to recognize Studio Carpenters of Local 946, which is a member of the Conference of Studio Unions and that producers favored carpenters within the IATSE. The Screen Writers Guild publicly stated at this time that the dispute was a jurisdictional one within the AFL and that it had been so designated by the AFL. The Guild instructed its members to pass through any picket lines. At this time it was reported that the Communists would vigorously support a strike.

It appeared at this time, according to Roy M. Brewer, International Representative of the IATSE, that the strike would start during the week of September 25, 1946. According to Brewer, members of the IATSE Screen Actors Guild, Screen Extras Guild, Musicians Local, Teamsters Local and all other known Conference of Studio Unions groups in the motion picture industry have been instructed to pass through any picket lines established by the Conference of Studio Unions.

Reliable sources report that Sorrell at this time was unable to lead the 7000 Conference of Studio Union workers out on strike over a jurisdictional issue and, therefore, he was winning his point by ordering Conference of Studio Union members not to work on studio sets, thus forcing the producers to discharge Conference of Studio Union members who, in turn, called this a producers' lockout.

On September 25th the Conference of Studio Unions demanded that the producers rehire 1000 discharged carpenters and painters by 6:00 PM. The producers charged the Conference of Studio Unions was not acting in good faith and that this was merely a jurisdictional dispute. The Conference of Studio Unions planned a mass meeting for the evening of the 25th of September, at which time it appeared inevitable a vote for this strike would be passed. A strike vote was cast by this group and picket lines were set up which resulted in fighting and general disorder. The police forced the Conference of Studio Unions pickets to conform with the Superior Court injunction which limits the number of pickets.

The CSU reportedly was boasting about the fact that the strike had seriously hampered production. The Producers Association, however, stated on October 1, 1946 that production was normal in all major studios. The Selznik Studios, an independent producer, stopped production for the duration of the strike. The Conference of Studio Unions filed conspiracy charges against the ten major studios and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees with the NLRB, charging that major studios and the IATSE have conspired to deny the CSU its rights under the National Labor Relations Act. The AFL Central Labor Council, according to reports, remained neutral on the question. Richard Walsh, the Head of the IATSE, issued an ultimatum to independent producers to discharge the CSU members and to hire IATSE replacements.

It is reported that the Communist-dominated Screen Writers Guild met on October 1, 1946 to determine its strike policy. It is the report of informants that the position taken by this organization will forecast the policy to be followed by the Communists in connection with the strike.

Herbert K. Sorrell, of the CSU, and Richard Walsh, of the IATSE, together with ten representatives from the Screen Actors Guild were reported attending the AFL Convention which began on October 7th in Chicago. The jurisdictional dispute between the IATSE and the CSU was, according to informants, to be considered at this convention.

On October 5, 1946 Warner Brothers countered the CSU action against them by entering a million-dollar damage suit against Sorrell and the CSU, charging conspiracy to damage the Warner Brothers property in the 1945 jurisdictional strike. During this period it was reported that U. S. representatives John Wood, Chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee, was in Los Angeles to investigate the extent of Communist influence in the current strike. Newspapers quoted Wood as stating that he will return to Los Angeles in November for further investigation of the Communist activities in connection with labor in the motion picture industry.

During this same period it was reported by reliable sources that if the jurisdictional question was decided against Sorrell at the AFL Convention, Sorrell might attempt to lead his CSU into the CIO. Under the present agreement in effect between the AFL and CIO there is no CIO union operating in the motion picture industry.

Reliable police contacts reported that the producers received a telegram from AFL President William Green on the afternoon of October 8, 1946 stating that the jurisdictional issue would not be settled at the Chicago Convention and that the CSU - IATSE dispute must be settled in Hollywood.

Green has reportedly turned down the plea of the Screen Actors Guild to settle the jurisdictional dispute. Some observers believe that this may mean picketing and violence. Mass picketing was reported at the Columbia Studios in Hollywood on the morning of October 8, 1946.

On October 14, 1946, the police halted mass picketing at the Columbia Studios which was in violation of the Superior Court injunction by arresting and jailing 153 pickets. No violence or disorder, however, was reported in connection with these arrests.

Norval Crutcher, Secretary, Film Technicians Local 683, IATSE affiliate, announced on October 13th that his local would resist CSU picket lines. Members of this local process film and thus are essential to the making of motion pictures.

Roy Brewer, International representative of the IATSE, has charged that Local 683 of IATSE has always closely adhered to the Communist line. Richard Walsh, International Head of the IATSE threatened strong reprisals against the IATSE local. As you will recall, when a similar situation developed in last year's film strike, Walsh took over an IATSE local as a trustee. Indications are that Walsh may do this with the rebellious Local 683. Some observers say the action of Local 683 is a serious obstacle to an early strike settlement.

It was learned that a meeting of prominent Communists was held on the evening of October 12, 1946 at the home of Screen Writer Ring Lardner, Jr., an alleged Communist, where approximately $4,000 was raised to help CSU strikers. Well-informed sources have stated that the Communists are wholeheartedly in support of the current strike.

On October 18, 1946, the International Representatives of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees suspended the powers granted to IATSE Film Technicians Local 683 to conduct its affairs. This action was taken by International Representatives because Local 683 joined the rival CSU picket lines. This strike by Film Technicians seriously hampered production in all National Studios since members of this local must process all film.

However, Roy Brewer again threatened Local 683 that unless the members returned to work immediately, other arrangements would be made to process movie film in New York.

On October 23, 1946, reliable sources reported that the jurisdictional strike in the motion picture industry may soon end due to the fact that both the CSU and the IATSE have agreed to accept the AFL decision to award set erection work to the IATSE.

According to press reports, a joint committee of the IATSE - CSU and the powerful Screen Actors Guild, which was largely responsible for this settlement, met on the afternoon of October 28, 1946 to appoint a permanent arbitrator for jurisdictional controversies in the motion picture industry.

It is interesting to note that the Communists through the Daily Worker have alleged that the million-dollar motion picture industry entered into a conspiracy with corrupt and racketeering leaders of the IATSE to

"Smash Democratic Unionism" in Hollywood. The Communists through the Daily Worker are alleging that Walsh and Brewer of the IATSE are cooperating with the producers over this jurisdictional dispute to becloud the real issue. They allege that the CSU is the only union in the industry which gets tough about wages, hours and working conditions and that whenever action along these lines is instigated by the CSU, the old "jurisdictional bugaboo" is hauled out and brought into the forefront.

The Communists accuse the producers of obtaining injunctions through local judges who are alleging anti-labor, and of also obtaining the aid of police and sheriffs who cooperate with them.

The Communists through the Daily Worker list the following demands of the CSU:

1. Return all employees under CSU jurisdiction to their jobs with status unimpaired.

2. Acceptance by all parties of the AFL Directive in its entirety giving to carpenters the construction of sets or stages which they have done for the past 26 years, as ordered by the AFL Executive Council and AFL President William Green.

3. Immediate completion and signing of all contracts with provisions for adequate machinery for settlement of all controversies, including those over allocation of work.

On November 5, 1946 it was reported that negotiations were continuing to end the Hollywood film strike. However, it was also reported that the question of higher wages was now being brought into the light by the strikers. The Conference of Studio Union affiliates were reported to be demanding a 20% raise for a thirty-hour week before signing contracts to return to work.

Roy Brewer, the International representative of the rival IATSE, charged the Conference of Studio Unions with bad faith and stated that the question of wages was never involved in the jurisdictional strike which was called by Sorrell some six weeks ago. Brewer also charged that Sorrell is now attempting to alter the arbitration proposal previously agreed upon by both the CSU and the IATSE. At the time of this report the Conference of Studio Unions was still picketing all major studios and an unusually large mass demonstration was reported at 20th Century Fox Studios.

On November 13, 1946 it was reported that the leaders of the CSU and the IATSE were conferring with Joseph Kennan, AFL leader who was in Hollywood to consider accepting a position of AFL Labor Czar for the movie industry. However, no indication of an immediate settlement of this jurisdictional strike has been reported.

Sorrell charged at this time that wages and hours are the basic issue between the Conference of Studio Unions and the producers. Meanwhile, the Motion Picture Consumers Local 705, which is affiliated with the IATSE, has rebelled against the international leadership of the IATSE and set November 14th as the deadline upon which they would join IATSE Film Technicians Local 683 in the CSU picket lines.

Local 705 alleges that producers have refused to give them a signed contract covering wages and hours. This move by executive heads of Local 705 is directly contrary to the stand taken by the general membership of this local who at a meeting the previous week voted down a motion to set a definite time limit on negotiations with producers.

On the afternoon of November 13, 1946, CSU leader Sorrell threatened to extend the Conference of Studio Union picket lines to independent producers. It was also reported that 64 writers within the Screen Writers Guild have started a petition to donate $10,000 to Film Technicians Local 683 to "aid their fight against certain undemocratic pressures within the IATSE."

On November 13, 1946 it was reported that five homes of non-strikers, one a shop steward of IATSE Local 44, were bombed in a new wave of violence in the Hollywood film strike. These bombs were described as homemade grenades. Although at least two of the bombs caused extensive damage to the homes, no one was injured. Roy M. Brewer of the IATSE has posted $5,000 reward leading to the arrest and conviction of the vandals.

Richard F. Walsh, President of IATSE, announced that all representatives of IATSE would be withdrawn from the current negotiations with CSU leaders. He stated that his organization would not negotiate with the CSU as long as there is any act of violence against members of his union.

Los Angeles press reports state that Sorrell refused any comment on this recent outbreak of violence. Reliable Los Angeles police contacts advise that an extensive investigation is being conducted but that it has been made unusually difficult because there are a number of so-called "powder men" in Hollywood who are hired by studios to simulate explosions in motion pictures. This source also reports that the Los Angeles police are investigating a gunman who was recently expelled from the IATSE for disclosing information to the rival labor leader Sorrell. Sorrell is combating, according to reliable sources, what appears to be an unauthorized dissension within the ranks of his union to continue the strike.

SCREEN WRITERS GUILD

The Screen Writers Guild opened discussions among its members whether to ban the sale of material to the motion picture industry and adopt the procedure of licensing of all material.

[redacted] a screen writer who requested that his name be kept in strict confidence, has pointed out that this move to license material has two objectives: First, to prevent the studio from re-using or re-issuing a screen story without paying the writer an additional fee and, two, to control the content of the motion picture. This source, who is a screen writer, states that the Communists are, of course, particularly interested in securing absolute control over the content of motion pictures and they, the Communists, feel that through the Screen Writers Guild they will be able to force the producers of the Motion Picture Industry to accept a license to use a particular screen story and as an incentive to the use of that license, the producer would not, of course, be able to change the script.

James Cain, prominent novelist and screen writer, has appeared before the Screen Writers Guild and asked the Guild to accept the idea of a license apparently on the basis that the producers frequently re-issue pictures for which they do not pay the writer a second time. In the May, 1946 issue of the "Screen Writer," one of the feature articles is entitled "A Time for Action," which is written by Emmett Lavery, President of the Screen Writers Guild. In this article, Lavery, who has been identified in numbers of Communist Front organizations and activities, has pointed out that the Executive Council of the Authors League has come out for the principle of licensing and he has called upon the Authors League to assist the Screen Writers Guild in securing such rights for the Screen Writers. He admits that the Guild is nearly powerless to enforce the licensing idea at the present time inasmuch as the minimum basic agreement under which the Screen Writers Guild operates applies to employment conditions only and does not apply to material sold to the studios for the screen. He feels that the problem is one for concerted action by the Authors League and the Screen Writers Guild.

Lavery pointed out that at a recent meeting of the Screen Writers Guild, a resolution was passed which states, "In any arrangement by which there is granted the right to produce a motion picture based on material written by any member of the Authors League, or, its member or affiliated guilds (the Screen Writers Guild is affiliated with the Authors League), there should be granted only the right to produce and exhibit within a stated period a single motion picture on 35 mm film in the English language. These rights should be in the form of a license limited as aforesaid, which shall cease upon the expiration of a fixed time."

[redacted]

[redacted] feels that if the Communists and the Screen Writers Guild [redacted] able to secure a contract with the producers based upon licensing rather than the sale of material, they will be able to control the content of each motion picture. This informant feels that along with a license to use a motion picture will be an accompanying restriction upon changing it by the producers.

James Cain, recently, during a meeting of the Screen Writers Guild, according to the March 5, 1946 issue of "Variety" stated: "Once we control our properties we can demand and get all sorts of concessions. We should have a fund, like the ASCAP fund for the musicians obtained from a check off on all pictures for the benefit of all members of this Guild to be whacked up on a rating basis to take care of us in our old age, to be put in the bank or to be used for whatever we choose to spend it on."

Apparently, in line with this new move on the part of the Communists within the Screen Writers Guild, H. S. Kraft, a Communist, wrote a four-page article for the March, 1946 issue of the "Screen Writer" entitled, "Dreiser's War in Hollywood." This article was an account of Theodore Dreiser's attempt to force Paramount Pictures to dramatize his novel, "An American Tragedy" with a full realization of "the violent social, economic and loyal influences affecting the hero of the novel."

COMMITTEES APPOINTED BY SWG

The May, 1946 issue of the "Screen Writer," which is the official publication of the Screen Writers Guild, carried a list on page five of the Screen Writers Guild Studio Chairman. An examination of this list reflects heavy infiltration and domination by the Communists in the Guild. This list is as follows:

Columbia Studios:	Melvin Levy
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer:	Isobel Lennart
Paramount:	Abe Polonsky
RKO:	Henry Myers
Republic:	John Butler
Twentieth Century Fox:	Wanda Tuchack
Universal:	Joel Malone
Warner Brothers:	Ranald MacDougall

Elizabeth Benson, Section Organizer and Membership Director of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles Communist Party, which is composed of motion picture personnel had in her possession records reflecting that Levy, Lennart, Polonsky and Myers were members of the Communist Party according to a highly [redacted]idential but delicate source and [redacted], Confidential Informant of the Los Angeles Office, has identified MacDougall in several front activities.

The February issue of the "Screen Writer" identified members of the Screen Writers Guild Arbitration Panel and it was noted that the following Communists were members of this panel: Leopold Atlas, Ben Barzman, Guy Endore, Robert Lees, Melvin Levy, Waldo Salt and Leo Townsend. It was also noted that Melvin Frank is a member of this panel and although it has never been determined that he is a member of the Communist it has been ascertained through a highly confidential but delicate source that Elizabeth Benson, Section Organizer and Membership Director of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles Communist Party, which is composed of motion picture personnel has in her possession records which reflect Ann Ray Frank, his wife, is a Communist.

During the last three or four years, W. R. Wilkerson, Editor of the trade publication "The Hollywood Reporter" has repeatedly attacked the Communist infiltration of the Motion Picture Industry and he has paid exceptional attention to the Communist infiltration of the Screen Writers Guild. In the April 16, 1946 issue of the "Hollywood Reporter," Wilkerson attacked members of the Screen Writers Guild and stated that most of them were either Communists or Fascists and that all of them spend far too much time in political activities. Wilkerson stated that the writers in Hollywood are "doing every job but the one that they are being paid for. The former $200 a week writer is now getting $2,000 each pay day and doing less work." Again on June 20, 1946, Wilkerson described what he called "some screwy undercover tricks being pulled by our creators in the studios are promulgated by the Commies among them." Wilkerson then went on to relate a situation of an unidentified important star who refused to accept a certain director stating that the director was a red baiter, and Wilkerson related another incident in which an individual was a known Communist writer and was dismissed from a screen story because the star who was allegedly a Communist complained to the studio about the writer.

At a membership meeting of the Screen Writers Guild on April 29, 1946, a resolution was raised urging action against the Hollywood Reporter and in the May, 1946 issue of the "Screen Writer," Wilkerson was pictured as "inviting Congressman Rankin to push on with his witch hunt in Hollywood" and in the light of this discussion the SWG passed the following resolution: "That the Screen Writers Guild now declare officially that Wilkerson has been unfair to the Guild and all its members and that the members of the Guild are called upon to institute a voluntary boycott of the publication and that we call upon other Guilds and unions and Agents to join us in this boycott."

It has been noted that recent issues of the "Screen Writer" have prominently displayed in heavy black type an announcement that the Screen Writers Guild has indorsed the FEPC and requested members of the Guild to sign a petition which will put the FEPC on the California ballot.

In the March issue of the "Screen Writer" there was a note on page 46 which urged all members "and friends and others interested in this extension of democracy" to sign the petitions of the Fair Employment Practices Committee. This note then went on to list the members of the State Executive Committee to place the FEPC on the California ballot.

Well informed sources have stated that the FEPC has been originated and promoted by the Communist Party.

The "Screen Writer" is the official publication of the Screen Writers Guild and is issued monthly. It has been noted that the May issue of the "Soreen Writer" stated that Isobel Lennart had been selected to serve on the Editorial Committee. Those responsible for the publication are as follows:

Dalton Trumbo - Editor (Communist)
Gordon Kahn - Managing Editor (Communist)

Editorial Committee:
Adele Buffington
F. Hugh Herbert
Philip Dunne
Sonya Levien
Theodore Strauss (Communist)
Ring Lardner, Jr. (Communist)
Paul Trivers (Communist)
Stephen N. Avery

The "Screen Writer" is sold at only eleven book stores and news stands in Los Angeles and it is noted that among these are the Lincoln Book Store, 1721 North Highland Avenue in North Hollywood and the Progressive Book Shop, 717 West Sixth Street, Los Angeles, both of which have been identified by reliable informants as Communist book stores. Under date of August 14, 1946, the "Hollywood Reporter," a motion picture trade sheet edited by William Wilkerson, contained the following editorial under the caption, "Another Vote for Stalin." Because of its interest, this article is being set out in full:

"The Screen Writers Guild continues to take its orders from Moscow!

"A late issue of Izvestia, the official newspaper of the Soviet government, attacked the recent film trade agreement arranged between the American and French state departments.

"According to an Associated Press dispatch dated August 9 from Moscow, Victor Poltoralsky, writing in the Communist organ, attacked the agreement as a threat to the very existence of the French film industry, and became particularly virulent over an alleged statement by American economists that American films offered 'the best method of fighting Communism in France.'

"Izvestia is the voice of World Communism giving orders. The voice of the Red Beachhead in Hollywood—saying, 'aye, aye, comrade!!'—was heard in the Screen Writers Guild meeting on July 29, at the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel, when that Red-dominated organization adopted the following resolution:

> ....."that the Screen Writers Guild, in answer to the appeal of the French film workers, expresses its opinion of the French-American film agreement and asks our State Department to investigate the possibility of re-negotiating this agreement so that the French film industry can survive.'

"In other words, the Communist Party organ in Moscow and the Screen Writers Guild in Hollywood attacked the French trade agreement on the same spurious grounds—that it would destroy the French film industry.

"And the Guild voted against the State Department of the republic that gives American writers their freedom, and against the motion picture industry, which gives them their living.

"They were persuaded to do this by Harold Salemson, who addressed the Guild for 25 minutes, denouncing the trade agreement. He charged that a third of the workers in the French film industry would be thrown out of work by the American trade agreement. He said the American industry was prepared to flood France with five years of film product. And he implied that the State Department was imperialistically forcing American films upon an unwilling French public.

"This was barefaced lying. The agreement negotiated by Leon Blum and the American State Department does not guarantee THE EXHIBITION OF A SINGLE AMERICAN MOTION PICTURE IN FRANCE. American pictures will be played ONLY if French theatre owners and the French public want them.

"The trade agreement DOES GUARANTEE that four out of every 13 weeks' playing time in French theatres shall be devoted to the exhibition of French pictures. All 13 weeks CAN be devoted to French pictures if the theatre manager prefers.

"The Guild resolution deliberately beclouds this situation by making it seem that French exhibitors were forced to play nine weeks of American pictures. But the only force backing American films in France is that of popular demand.

"And this, the Communists can't stand!

"The true situation is revealed in a copy of a letter which the Reporter received from the head of a major studio yesterday—a letter written by Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association, to Emmet Lavery, President of the Screen Writers Guild. It speaks for itself:

'Dear Mr. Lavery:

'I am profoundly disturbed by the implication of a resolution which I understand was recently adopted by the Screen Writers Guild.

'According to information received from our Hollywood office, this resolution said in part:

> "that the Screen Writers Guild in answer to the appeal of the French film workers, expresses its opinion of the French-American film agreement and asks our State Department to investigate the possibility of re-negotiating this agreement so that the French film industry can survive."

'The plain implication of the resolution is that the agreement recently negotiated by our government and the French government is a threat to the survival of the French film industry.

'I believe there is absolutely no basis for the unwarranted assumption that the agreement threatens the extinction of the French film industry and I believe further that such an assumption casts an undeserved reflection upon the good faith of the American and French officials who negotiated the agreement for the two governments.'

'The Guild's resolution, in effect, distorts so completely the purpose and meaning of the agreement that I believe a clarification of its provisions is vitally essential. With that in mind I shall set forth briefly why it was adopted and the purposes which it is designed to achieve.

'The moving purpose behind the agreement was a desire to promote the ideal of world unity by removing some of the restrictions which isolate one nation from another by Chinese Walls of nationalism. The motion picture is a primary medium for the exchange of ideas between people. I have always believed that excessive nationalism breeds war; that a freer exchange of goods, services and information is a healthy offset to the friction which causes war.

'As for the specific conditions of the agreement relating to the motion picture, I believe that any fair-minded person will agree that the terms set forth actually protect the development of the French film industry and give it a greater measure of protection than it had before the war.

'For example, every theatre in France must reserve at least four weeks playing time out of every 13 solely for French pictures. During the remaining nine weeks of the quarter, the theatre is free to play foreign pictures or French pictures, whichever it prefers. The free playing time is not reserved for American pictures—it may be used for the exhibition of Russian films or British films or French films or the films of any other nation.

'Actually, the agreement does not guarantee the exhibition of a single American motion picture in France. It simply opens the market to the best pictures.

'Before the war, the American motion picture industry annually supplied between 150 and 185 "dubbed" feature pictures for the French market. Since the agreement, however, the eight leading American companies voluntarily agreed to release not more than 124 "dubbed" features in the French market annually. The number of feature pictures with superimposed titles which have a limited distribution in France will be substantially smaller than before the war. This should reassure anyone who honestly believes that the American industry is preparing to flood the French market with films produced here during the war period.

'The observation of Monsieur Leon Blum, an outstanding French patriot who aided in negotiating the agreement, should be sufficient answer to the accusation that the agreement is against the best interests of the French producing industry. In a statement, quoted in the American press on June 29, Monsieur Blum said:

"In renouncing the 1936 pact, the United States made a considerable concession in agreeing to let France keep exclusively four weeks out of every 13 for French products, assuring 30 percent of the playing time. When negotiations started, the French hoped to get a seven weeks quota, but after long discussion France did well in comparison to a 17 percent guarantee granted to Italy and a 22 percent accord with Britain."

'Monsieur Blum added:

"There is not a word in the accord to prevent an exhibitor from showing 100 percent French films if he wishes. What is needed is for the French film industry to produce films pleasing to the public.

"Film interests here must remember the Washington accord would assist in the re-establishment of the French film industry. The French industry will aid in every way."

'You may be interested in knowing that when the loan agreement was up for approval in the French assembly, the only spoken opposition to the film provisions came from a few Communist deputies. It is obvious to me why French Communists wish to keep out American motion pictures which reflect American democratic life.

'I do not for a moment challenge the right of the Screen Writers Guild or any other group to ask the State Department to re-negotiate the existing film agreement with France. That is simply the exercise of an American fundamental right.

'But the implication that the government of the United States or the American film industry took undue advantage of the French film industry is both naive and false. I challenge it.

'I am giving you these facts in the interest of fairness and accuracy.

Sincerely yours,

Eric Johnston.'

"Mr. Johnston's appeal probably will fall on deaf ears. [redacted] Communists are not interested in 'fairness and accuracy'.

"Mr. Salemson, the sponsor of this attack on industry and government, has been an industrious member of many of the extreme left-wing groups which have consistently followed the Party line!

"This is the kind of leadership to which the Screen Writers Guild listens. This is the kind of leadership which causes the Guild to ignore the fact that the foreign market on many pictures means the difference between profit and loss, and to attack the industry of which it is a part.

"THE PARTY FIRST!"

The "Hollywood Reporter" on August 20, and 21, 1946, contained articles which were directed at the Screen Writers Guild and accused this organization of being a Communist controlled and dominated group. The "Hollywood Reporter" carried articles reflecting that the President of the Guild, John Howard Lawson, has been a sponsor of numerous Communist front groups, such as the American Youth for Democracy, and the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee, as well as the Harry Bridges Defense Committee and the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee for the Arts, Sciences and Professions.

The article also reflected that Dalton Trumbo, a member of the Guild's Executive Board and Editor of the Guild's official magazine, was a Communist and is the holder of Communist Party Membership Book No. 36802.

Gordon Kahn, Ring Lardner, Jr. and Richard Jay Collings, all members of the Executive Board, are also accused of being Communists and their Communist Party Book numbers are set out therein.

These articles were followed in this periodical by an article on the American Authors Authority, which is sponsored and backed by the Screen Writers Guild. The latter article is referred to in the section set out concerning "The American Authors Authority."

DEVELOPMENTS IN CONFERENCE OF STUDIO UNIONS
(November 14, 1946 to February 14, 1947)

This block of Communist controlled unions, according to [redacted] a paid confidential informant of the Los Angeles Field Division, is still on strike. The strike is a continuance of the 1945 strike which was and still is an attempt of the Communist elements, according to this source, to control the unions in the Hollywood studios.

[redacted] reported that during the picketing of the studios the pickets were singing "Solidarity Forever." This source also reported that the Painters District Council #36 voted a $5,000 fund for the benefit of the strikers. The Radio Writers Guild met at the home of Ring Lardner, Jr., and voted $4,000 for the strikers' benefit.

The Conference of Studio Unions has been spreading its influence to the radio field through an alliance with another group of like nature now being formed in that field. This new block of unions is to be called the Council of Radio Unions. An organizational meeting of radio unions was held on November 21, 1946, in Hollywood. Composing this parallel block of unions are the following:

Radio Writers Guild
Radio Directors Guild
American Federation of Musicians,
Local #47
American Federation of Radio Artists

According to this source this group has announced that it will affiliate with the Conference of Studio Unions. Commenting on this alliance, the source indicated that this would be a most effective weapon because of the affinity of the motion picture industry with the radio industry. [redacted]

With regard to the strike in the Hollywood motion picture industry, it is reported that this strike is now more or less ineffective. The studios have used replacements put in by the ITASE and seem to be making pictures as usual. It is reported that the Conference of Studio Unions is attempting to get the support of the unions in England in order to stop production there of any pictures in which American capital is interested. So far there has been little success attached to this effort. [redacted]

COUNCIL OF HOLLYWOOD GUILDS AND UNIONS

[redacted] Special Agents of the Los Angeles Field Division on September 9, 1946, obtained a 10-page typewritten report which described the activities of the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions. This report reflects that there are now seven CSU unions, two IATSE locals, two independent unions, and one A. F. of L. miscellaneous union, which comprise this organization. They are as follows: Screen Story Analyst's Guild; Screen Cartoonist Guild; Screen Costumers Guild; Film Technicians; Film Electricians Local 40; Machinists Guild; Musicians Local 767 (This is not the musicians union to which musicians in the studios belong.); Painters Union; Screen Publicists Union; Screen Supervisors Union; Screen Set Decorators; Screen Writers Guild.

It is noted that the subject organization has lost, mainly because of difficulties over the current film strikes, the Screen Actors Guild, Screen Office Employees Guild, and Musicians Local No. 47, to which all musicians in the motion picture industry belong.

According to this report the Council is seeking new affiliation and is attempting to induce the Radio Writers, the Radio Directors, and the Film Editors Guilds to join with them in pressing for "progressive legislation." This report also points out that the Council must seek for closer affiliation with the Conference of Studio Unions which is, as has been previously pointed out, heavily infiltrated with the Communist Party. This report also points out that the "Progressives," i.e. Communists within the Council, see the current Hollywood film strike, together with the move by the AF of L to set up a Hollywood Council, as a "serious threat" to the subject organization. According to the report, the Communists feel that if the AF of L does set up a Hollywood Labor Council in addition to the Los Angeles Labor Council the two may be operated in parallel but that it is also quite likely that the AF of L will take the AF of L local out of the Council and may have them use only the independent unions. Moreover, the current jurisdictional dispute between the CSU and the IATSE is a serious threat to the internal stage of the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions. Regardless of which stand the Council takes in the settlement of the dispute, several locals which are affiliated with the Council will obviously protest and this leaves the Council unable to take the affirmative, definite stand in the current dispute.

This was put quite clearly in this reports, [redacted] which report is believed to have been written by C. Margaret Bennett Wills, Executive Secretary, when she stated, "I am sure that everyone will agree that either the Council will cease to exist entirely or it must be stamped as a real source in Hollywood."

This report also detailed some of the highlights of the Council's activities, an examination of which reflects that the Council has constantly supported the measures advocated by the Communist Party in the Los Angeles Field Division. These include (1) a fight against Cecil B. DeMille, (2) participation in the fight for radio freedom, i.e. the protest against high labor contenders, (3) the fight against motion picture aliens, (4) "conferences with Robert Riskin of the OWI on educational films for Europe," (5) protest against the State Un-American Activities Committee, (6) activity for a state FEPC, (7) sending a delegate to the "Win the Peace" conference, (8) a protest against banning of Lena Horne film in Tennessee, (9) a protest against Truman's intervention in the railroad strike.

This summation of Council's activities in the last few months concludes by stating, "Nor have we forgotten the Yugoslavs, the Russians, and the drive toward World War III."

The Council has continued to support those measures and activities in which the Communist Party has been prominently identified. For example, on Sunday, March 17, 1946, the Council was identified as one of the sponsors of an address by Congressman Hugh DeLacy, who gave a "hard-hitting expose of the plot against the peace."

[redacted] an Agent of the Los Angeles Field Division obtained minutes of the meeting of the Council which was held on June 6, 1946. According to the minutes, the Council received a letter from Festus Coleman, a Negro prisoner at San Quentin, thanking the Council for their support in an attempt to secure his parole. It is well known that the Communist Party has waged a vigorous campaign to free Coleman alleging that he was improperly convicted. At the same meeting the Council stated that President Truman had "used the powers of his office to blackjack the railroad workers rather than to effect a just settlement."

At a meeting held on August 8, 1946, the Council registered a strong protest with the Ambassador Hotel for refusing lodging to a Negro song writer, Carlton Moss. Moss was identified, through a highly confidential but delicate source who had access to the records of Elizabeth Benson, the section organizer and membership director of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party, as a member of the Communist Party. This meeting of August 8, 1946, closed with a resolution urging the widespread distribution of leaflets which had been prepared by the Mobilization for Democracy. Mobilization for Democracy has been identified as a Communist front organization and according to [redacted] a paid active informant of the Los Angeles Office, this organization works very closely with the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions.

SCREEN WRITERS GUILD

In the October, 1946, issue of the Screen Writer, the publication of the Screen Writers Guild, on page 32 there is a note which reads, "The current outlook and strike in the major motion picture studios began too late to permit inclusion in this issue of any summary of events." The note then [redacted] on to point out that the Screen Writers Guild has made an independent investigation and found that there was considerable violence at the studio gates. It reminded the members of the Screen Writers Guild that they need not go through a picket line where there was any fear of violence and concluded by stating that they would legally assist any member of the Screen Writers Guild who was fired or otherwise discriminated against by a producer for refusing to come to work.

At a so-called emergency meeting of the Screen Writers Guild on October 1, 1946, which was reportedly attended by only a very few Screen Writers, a resolution was passed to loan the striking unions $10,000. However, at a general membership meeting held on November 13, 1946, this proposal was decisively defeated.

[redacted] a screen writer and an informant of the Los Angeles Office, pointed out that recently there has developed within the Screen Writers Guild considerable opposition to the pro-Communist leadership. This source stated that following the publication of the articles by Wilkerson identifying most of the Executive Board as members of the Communist Party, many of the writers began to challenge this leadership, and a movement was begun to draft a slate of non-Communist writers as officers. At a general membership meeting of the Screen Writers Guild, held on November 13, 1946, the following were elected to executive positions:

President	Emmet Lavery
1st Vice President	Mary McCall, Jr.
2nd Vice President	Howard Estabrook
3rd Vice President	Hugo Butler
Secretary	F. Hugh Herbert
Treasurer	Harold Buchman

Lavery secured 495 votes, to 293 votes for the opposition candidate, Talbot Jennings. This vote does not in some small measure eliminate a portion of the Communist influence from the Executive Board of the Guild. However, Mary McCall and Howard Estabrook have both been identified in several Communist front organizations. Through a highly confidential but delicate source it was ascertained that the records of Elizabeth Benson, membership director of the Los Angeles County Communist Party, reflected that Hugo Butler and Harold Buchman were members of the Communist Party.

At this same meeting, a resolution to loan $10,000 to one of the unions now on strike in the motion picture industry was defeated; however, a resolution to loan $2500 to the Newspaper Guild was passed.

The Screen Writers Guild continues to publish the Screen Writer as its official publication, and many of the articles are contributed by known members of the Communist Party. The editorial committee of SWG is presently composed of:

Dalton Trumbo, Editor
Gordon Kahn, Managing Editor
Stephen Morehouse Avery
Harris Gable
F. Hugh Herbert
Ring Lardner, Jr.
Isabel Lennart
Sonia Levien
Theodore Strauss
Paul Trivers
Harold J. Salemson, Director of Publications

Of this committee, seven including Trumbo, Kahn, Lardner, Lennert, Strauss, Trivers and Salemson are members of the Communist Party.

In the October, 1946, issue of the Screen Writer, which was the latest one available at the time, there are six articles. One concerns the establishment of the AAA; another, the scope of the Screen Writers Guild; a third article by Communists Howard Dimsdale and Guy Endore; the fourth on a technical phase of screen writing; the fifth on opinions and motion pictures; and the sixth by Communist screen writer Lester Cole on wage negotiations for screen writers.

This publication contains each month an editorial which in the October issue was devoted to the merits of the AAA, and in the back of the publication there is a section entitled "News Notes." An analysis of these notes clearly shows that quite often Communist causes are sponsored or advertised in them. For example, the news notes in the October issue of the Screen Writer reflect: (1) an announcement by the California Labor School of a series of courses; (2) a production by the Communist-dominated Actors Laboratory; (3) a note regarding the symposium of "The Challenge of the Post War World to the Liberal Movement"; (4) an announcement of the Communist-dominated Peoples Educational Center; (5) details of the new curriculum of the Peoples Educational Center; (6) a note concerning the Hollywood Writers Mobilization and the Communist front organization, Mobilization for Democracy; and (7) a note that "Orson Welles has relinquished his air time to concentrate on film production; a distinct loss to the forces of liberalism on the American air waves."

[redacted] ascertained that Ann Roth Morgan, 860 Westmount Drive, Los Angeles, and Ruth Birnkrant are employed as secretaries in the office of the Screen Writers Guild. This same highly confidential but reliable source reported that the records of Elizabeth Benson reflected both of these women were members of the Communist Party.

The Screen Writer is designed by John Hubley, an artist whom, according to the same source, has been also identified as a member of the Communist Party.

International Film and Radio Guild

The International Film and Radio Guild threw a picket line around the Avalon Theater on the East Side of Hollywood on January 30, 1947, in the first phase of an all-out campaign against the continued production of "inferior and insulting" all-Negro quickes currently being produced by a handful of Southern and Eastern independent producers for showing in predominately Negro theaters. The management of the Avalon Theater in Hollywood cancelled the film "Beale Street Mama" after three showings of the scheduled minimum five-day run. This action combined with violent protests from other leading citizens of the community against the continued showing of the Bert Goldberg all-colored featurette forced the theater manager to discontinue the showing of the featurette.

A. Frederici, manager of the Avalon Theater, issued the following statement: "We have a contract with the Alfred N. Sack Amusement Enterprises to show 15 of these all-colored films throughout the coast area in the near future, but if the Negro people consider these pictures insulting, we certainly prefer to take the consequences with Sack rather than to offend an entire race."

Leon Hardwick, executive secretary of the International Film and Radio Guild, explained his organization's position thusly: "For several years, IFRG, NAACP, the Negro press and various other groups have been lambasting Hollywood studios for presenting Negroes in non-complimentary roles, seeking at the same time a more balanced presentation of Negro life on the screen. Meanwhile we have been overlooking entirely the practice of a small group of money-mad individuals in the east and south who dump these inferior, insulting films on the Negro market throughout the country. How can we expect to get better treatment from Hollywood as long as this latter evil persists?

"IFRG, an organization dedicated to the task of helping protect the interests of minorities in the entertainment world, is launching an active campaign against this vicious type of racial exploitation in films and hope others will join us."

Listed among the officers of the International Film and Radio Guild are Superior Judge Stanley Mosk, Lena Horne, John Garfield, Joseph Calleia, King Cole and Al Jarvis.

The above information concerning this group was obtained from the Peoples Voice of February 1, 1947.

DEVELOPMENTS AS A RESULT OF MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY STRIKE

Following the outbreaks of violence in the Hollywood motion picture industry strike on November 14, 1946, in which at least five homes of non-strikers were reportedly bombed, unidentified vandals on November 15, stole and burned a passenger bus owned by the Tanner Motor Company which had been used to transport nonstrikers through the Conference of Studio Unions' picket lines. The Los Angeles Field Office reported that reliable police contacts confidentially advised that they had identified a Communist from San Pedro, California, as probably being implicated in the bombings. The Los Angeles Times as a result of this violence called upon the Conference of Studio Unions' leaders to deny or affirm that they were in any way implicated.

The IATSE representatives on November 15, 1946, again refused to confer with the Conference of Studio Unions leaders as long as their members were subjected to possible violence. On the afternoon of November 15, it was reported that the Conference of Studio Unions held a mass meeting which resulted in the sending out of orders to all members that they must assemble in front of Columbia Motion Picture Studios the following morning at 6:00 a.m. and that any member who was not arrested would be fined $25 by the Union. It is reported that Sorrell confided in a police informant that he as well as his entire Strategy Committee would go to jail. This picketing, of course, would be in violation of the Superior Court's injunction. As a result of this mass picketing, the Los Angeles Police Department arrested approximately 802 strikers in front of Columbia Studios for violation of the Superior Court injunction relating to the limiting of the number of legal pickets.

The Los Angeles Field Division reported that at a Communist mass meeting held the previous night, a Conference of Studio Unions representative spoke and urged Communists to turn out in mass for the morning picket lines. It was later learned that at this meeting which was held to celebrate the 29th Anniversary of the October Revolution under the auspices of the Los Angeles Communists, John Stepp, Communist Party organizer for the Hollywood Section, urged all present to turn out for picket duty.

A reward being offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction for those responsible for violence in this film strike has grown to $30,000. Governor Earl Warren on November 15, 1946, stated that he would give full cooperation to local authorities who were endeavoring to determine who was responsible for the recent bombings and terrorisms. Although the Conference of Studio Unions leader, Herbert Sorrell, had refused to make any public comment some Conference of Studio Unions leaders were charging that the IATSE had imported Chicago gunmen. This, however, appears to be highly doubtful inasmuch as all violence had been directed against members of the IATSE.

On November 19, 1946, the Conference of Studio Unions pickets massed in front of the RKO studios. The RKO studios at that time had not secured a court order limiting the number of pickets.

The District Attorney's Office on the evening of November 18, 1946, announced that it would file criminal conspiracy charges against the Conference of Studio Unions film leaders and a deputy district attorney publicly stated that the Conference of Studio Unions action was a declaration of war and described it as a "campaign of lawless violence." According to the Los Angeles Police Department, only a few of the 812 strikers arrested raised bail and that the remaining individuals who were incarcerated in the Los Angeles city jails were starting on a hunger strike to call attention to their plight.

On November 21, 1946, the Los Angeles County Grand Jury commenced subpenaing witnesses and inquiry into violence which had accompanied this strike. Also examining evidence against 14 ring leaders who were arrested on the 18th and 19th of November, 1946, on complaints issued by the Los Angeles County District Attorney. Those indicted included Herbert K. Sorrell, business agent for Painters Union, Local #1421, and President of the Conference of Studio Unions; Matthew Mattison, business agent for the Screen Story Analysts Guild and a Communist; James Skelton, Chairman of Strike Strategy Committee; Averill Berman, radio commentator and Communist; Norval Crutcher, Secretary-Treasurer of the IATSE, Local #683, and a Communist; and Andrew Lawless, Louis Whitman, Ray Higby, Carl Head, John R. Martin, Frank Drdlik, Russell McKnight, Roy Tinsdall and Edward Gilbert.

On November 23, 1946, these individuals were indicted for felonious conspiracy by the Los Angeles County Grand Jury. The 812 individuals previously arrested for mass picketing in violation of the Superior Court's injunction were released on $50 bond each on this same date. The following individuals suspected of committing the recent bombings were arrested for having in their possession explosives: Robert McCuskey, alias McCorskey; and John F. Veazey, Eugene Calvin Horton and Robert A. Perry. Horton is reported to be a painter, Perry an engineer and the others longshoremen.

On November 25, 1946, Sorrell made a statement in which he denied that the Conference of Studio Unions was in any way responsible for the recent bombings. He made an appeal to the studio producers to reopen negotiations looking toward a return to work. Spokesman for the producers stated that Sorrell's appeal was under consideration and it appeared that the producers would reopen negotiations.

On November 26, 1946, Superior Court Judge Willis denied the strikers' appeal to dismiss a restraining order limiting the number of pickets and pointed out that the motion picture studios were caught in a union jurisdictional dispute.

Following the District Attorney's action of instigating the conspiracy charges against the strike leaders, the Los Angeles Office reported that the Communist attorney Benjamin Margolis, the attorney for the Conference of Studio Unions, was contacted by the Communist Party County Chairman for advice as to how far the Communist press could go in attacking the conspiracy charges. Margolis advised that the Communist press could call this "an attack on labor, and "fascist techniques" but cautioned Communist Party leaders against threatening the judge or alleging corruption. It is reported also that the Communist Party leaders urged their members to maintain the picketing and "tough attitude" for at least a few more days.

On December 2, 1946, approximately 50 members of the Conference of Studio Unions picketed the Los Angeles Times newspaper office for alleged unfair news reporting of the strike.

The Mexican labor leader, Lombardo Tolendano, President of the Latin American Confederation of Labor, pledged his support to the Conference of Studio Unions.

It was also reported on December 3, 1946, that former Congressman Ellis E. Patterson was employed by the Conference of Studio Unions for political liaison work.

With regard to the strike itself, it is reported that Sorrell has clearly lost the jurisdictional issue and continues to press his new demands for higher wages and shorter hours in an apparent attempt to justify his calling the Conference of Studio Unions out on strike.

At a meeting held December 3, 1946, office employees of the International Union which has jurisdiction over the white-collar workers in the film industry voted to call a strike in all local film exchanges but did not set a date for this strike. Office workers were demanding a 20 per cent wage increase and improved working conditions. This local has wired the National Labor Relations Board and the Secretary of Labor under the provisions of the Smith-Connally Act for the strike authorization and has called upon the Central Labor Council to place all motion picture studios on the unfair list. Workers in major studios have pledged their support to the Office Employees International Union in the film exchanges and should the entire membership of the OEIU go out on strike it would effect the stenographic and clerical employees in all major studios except Paramount which has a company union for these employees.

On December 5, 1946, Roy M. Brewer, International representative of the IATSE, testified before the House Committee on Un-American Activities that the current Hollywood film strike was brought about by Communists. It was reported that the House Committee was unable to serve a subpena on Sorrell, but it was reported that State Senator Tenney, who is Chairman of the California State Un-American Activities Committee appeared before the United States House Committee on Un-American Activities and testified that Sorrell was a Communist Party member. At that time the House Committee indicated that it would call Sorrell to testify at a Committee Hearing which was to be held in Washington, D. C., sometime in January. Hearings conducted by the House Committee were being held behind closed doors, but sources believe they were conducting intensive inquiries into the film industry.

As of December 10, 1946, the producers still refused to open negotiations with the Conference of Studio Unions unless the latter assured them that it would act to prevent violence, that the Conference of Studio Unions would assure them that that they would accept the AFL jurisdiction over this strike, and would abide by their July agreement not to ask for additional wage increases.

The mass trial of over 800 pickets opened in Los Angeles on December 11, 1946. Warner Brothers studios reported minor vandalism when unidentified individuals attempted to chop open a cable of over 200 telephone lines at their studio.

Fifteen members of the Studio Carpenters Union asked the Federal Court in Los Angeles to issue a declaratory judgment. This action was described as unprecedented legal action to settle jurisdictional disputes. These men allege in their complaint that they are unable to work at their accustomed jobs because of a jurisdictional dispute and named both the IATSE and Conference of Studio Unions as defendants.

According to the Los Angeles press, the Los Angeles Field Division reported on December 13, 1946, that 35 screen set decorators affiliated with the Conference of Studio Unions petitioned the IATSE to grant them membership cards in order that they might continue to work in the motion picture studios. [redacted]

The 14 film union officials and pickets who were indicted on charges of criminal conspiracy on January 7, 1947, entered pleas of not guilty. Sorrell and Mattison in addition to the indictments of criminal conspiracy have been charged with conspiracy to influence and coerce strikers to break an injunction on November 14, 1946.

Meanwhile Municipal Judge Ellsworth Meyer has denied a defense motion for separate trials for each of the 202 film pickets now on trial in Los Angeles and on January 10, 1947, former Congressman Ellis Patterson, who is reliably reported to be a member of the Communist Party, and Ruth Seade, who is known to be a member of the Communist Party, appeared at the City Attorneys office and demanded that the City drop prosecution against the pickets who were arrested in connection with illicit picketing in November of last year.

Charging "unexcusable brutality" and "unwarranted" persecution of film strikers, Allen Heist, Southern California Director of the American Civil Liberties Union, appealed to the police and District Attorney to drop the conspiracy indictment against the strike leaders. Heist also charged that the present mass trials of pickets impinges upon the civil rights of strikers and stated that the resources of the American Civil Liberties Union would be available to those charged with conspiracy and disorder in the current film strike.

Negotiations for the settlement of this strike appear to be deadlocked and the producers have again stated that inasmuch as it is a jurisdictional dispute it can be ended only by action within the AFL.

CONFERENCE OF STUDIO UNIONS

(February 14, 1947 to April 22, 1947)

Confidential Informant [redacted] of Los Angeles reported that the Conference of Studio Unions, under the leadership of Herbert K. Sorrell, a former Communist, is still on strike. He stated that picket lines are still before the studio gates and all attempts to settle the strike so far have failed. He reported that the Conference of Studio Unions, although an AFL bloc, has the sympathies of the CIO and all groups where Communist influence is felt. The World Federation of Trade Unions has been appealed to by Sorrell and unions in France and England have responded. Some of them have refused to handle film in their countries. The same applies, according to [redacted] to South America and Mexico where Communists are strongly entrenched. Vicente Lombardo Toledano, head of the left-wing unions in Mexico and a vice president of the World Federation of Trade Unions, was in Los Angeles during February of 1947, and spoke at a meeting of the Conference of Studio Unions, at which time he promised he would shut down every motion picture theater in Mexico for one day in sympathy with the strike of these Hollywood unions.

The Hollywood Reporter for February 3, 1947, under the heading "Mexican Theater Strike to Aid CSU" stated in part that Vicente Lombardo Toledano, Mexican labor leader, on Sunday night, February 2, 1947, told a C.S.U. mass meeting that he was wiring the Mexican union, the equivalent of the I.A.T.S.E. in the United States, to call a one day strike of all Mexican theaters on the first convenient Sunday, as a means of telling the Mexican public of the Hollywood strike

It stated that Toledano is in Los Angeles attending a meeting of the International Labor Organization and he was quoted as saying that he was "wiring my office in Mexico City to write to all Latin American theater unions requesting them to take similar action." He said if the strike were not settled by May, when the World Trade Federation of which he is a vice president meets in Prague, he would try to have a world wide one day theater "close-down" called. It further stated that a majority of the Screen Actors Guild has gone on record as supporting the Screen Actors Guild's policy and activities of the Board of Directors in the current Hollywood film strike.

It also stated that the Screen Actors Guild leadership was blamed for a lack of moral courage to support the strike in a talk last night by Father George Dunne. He called on the Screen Actors Guild to adopt a policy of refusing to cross picket lines and thus speed the end of the long studio strike.

The Labor Herald for February 6, 1947, stated that the American Labor Delegation from the American Federation of Labor objected to any consideration of the Hollywood strike on the grounds that it is a strictly jurisdictional strike and it then was emphasized that Toledano's presentation was unofficial.

Regarding the Hollywood situation, Toledano said that he had received a telegram from Hollywood strikers while he still was in Mexico. The strikers asked that Mexican workers refuse to finish work on any films produced in the United States which might be sent to Mexico for completion. His reply was that Mexican trade unions "of course" would not finish any such films sent to Mexico.

It stated that Herbert Woods, a United States worker and an AFL delegate who was presiding, cut short the exchange of positions with a reminder that "Mr. Toledano's declarations had been entirely unofficial" and required no formal action from the group of delegates.

This is the second strike in two years by this group for control of the studio workers. There is no question of wages or hours involved. The present strike is now in its fifth month.

A benefit to raise money for the strikers was held at the Philharmonic Auditorium on February 6, 1947. All those entertainers appearing or sponsoring same have reportedly records of Communist activity or sympathy. The prominent ones were:

Abe Burrows and Irving Reis (Co-Chairmen of the Meeting);
Ivie Anderson (Negress) - singer;
Eve Arden, actress;
Saul Chaplin, son of Charlie Chaplin;
Betty Comden;
Adolph Green;
Howard Da Silva, screen actor;
Anita Ellis, Actors Lab.;
John Garfield, actor;
Peter Lind Hayes, actor;
Dan Seymour;
Paul Henreid, actor;
Al Jarvis, radio entertainer;
Sol Kaplan;
Gene Kelly, actor;
Evelyn Keyes, actress;
Harpo Marx, actor;
Sidney Miller;
Corinna Mura, actress;
Stanley Prager, actor;
Jessie Price, Actors Lab.;
Alan Reed;
Keenan Wynn, actor.

Approximately $6000 was raised.

Agents of the Los Angeles Office attended the show at the Philharmonic Auditorium February 6, 1947, given by the so-called "motion picture stars of Hollywood" for the benefit of motion picture strikers. The program was the usual songs, dances, dialogue, jokes and skits of various sorts. Interspersed, there were several strike scenes where the police were shown "beating up strikers." Usually only one or two strikers were shown as if peacefully picketing, carrying banners or boards on which some slogans were inscribed.

The police, usually several in number, would arrive on the scene and charge the pickets with "conspiracy" to do something and proceed to "beat up" the pickets. At no time did the pickets resist but meekly submitted to the [illegible]tended beatings."

There were approximately 3000 persons present. The admission was from $1.00 to $5.00. It is estimated that approximately $2500 to $3000 net was realized from the box office. In addition, a collection was taken. The contributions announced were as follows:

1	$1000.00
2 $500 checks	1000.00
1 $250 check	250.00
1 $200 check	200.00
10 $100 checks	1000.00
3 $50 checks	150.00
12 $25 checks	300.00
20 $5.00 bills	100.00

In addition to the above, a general collection was taken by passing baskets. The total from the collection, including the above mentioned as announced was $3829. It is estimated that the total net from the entertainment was at least $6000 and may have been as much as $7000.

This same informant reported that on the morning of March 3, 1947, Herbert K. Sorrell, alleged Communist leader of the studio strike, was found 150 miles from Los Angeles in the desert where, supposedly, he had been thrown from a car. He was found to have been beaten and scratched; he stated that the night before he had been kidnapped by three men near his home in Glendale, California; that they had threatened to kill him. He had been trussed up and thrown into the car, then taken out into the desert and left there. He said threats to kill him had been made.

This story made headlines all over the country. However, according to a statement made by Ben Martinez, Business Representative of Studio Plasterers, Local 755, who had attended a cocktail party given by the Studio Managers on the evening of March 6, 1947, this story is false. Martinez stated that some of Sorrell's own union members who wanted to go to work had, on Sunday morning, March 2, 1947, gotten into an argument with Sorrell and beat him up pretty badly; that the whole story of the kidnapping was a fake manufactured by Sorrell.

Despite this, the strikers in the studios, aided by all the forces of the Communist Party in Los Angeles County, were to stage a mass meeting to protest against this "attack on labor" by the Motion Picture Producers and the "gangster-ridden IATSE unions." The mass meeting was to be held at the Olympic Auditorium in Los Angeles on Sunday evening, March 9, 1947. Those billed to speak were the following:

Phillip M. Connelly	Secretary-Treasurer of LAIUC
Ellis E. Patterson	Ex-Congressman
Walter J. Turner	AFL Pressmen's Union (Candidate for School Board)
Joe De Silva	AFL Retail Clerks, Business Agent
Rev. Father George Dunne	Loyola University
Rev. J. L. Castin	Negro Candidate for City Council
Mary McCall, Jr.	Writer
Dalton Trumbo	Screenwriter

The Conference of Studio Unions issued a circular on or about February 10, 1947, entitled "Anti-Labor Injunctions" in which was stated the following in substance:

"Anti-Labor injunctions are being issued at the request of employers in many parts of the United States, to prohibit picketing, encourage scabbing, break strikes and destroy unions.

"Local injunctions have been ruled out in Federal Court and in 26 states, but not in California."

He further stated that in the current Hollywood dispute, the motion picture employers have obtained court orders and injunctions without any court hearing, often with violence and with mass arrests of more than 1000 peaceful pickets.

It stated that these injunctions aid the employers in their purpose which is to smash those unions now picketing the film studios for the following advantages:

"1. Workable arbitration machinery to settle all disputes concerning the allocation of work.

"2. Signed contracts covering wages, hours and working conditions.

"3. Return to their job without discrimination of all workers on or respecting the picket lines."

"Variety," for March 10, 1947, under the heading "Six Thousand Hear Sorrell at C.S.U. Rally," stated that approximately 6000 persons turned out last night at the Olympic Auditorium to hear Herbert K. Sorrell recount the story of his recent kidnapping and beating.

It stated that those attending the mass meeting voted to send telegrams to Senator Robert A. Taft and Representative Fred A. Hartley, Chairmen of the U. S. Senate and House Labor Committees, protesting proposed legislation outlawing the closed shop and collective bargaining and what were called "restrictive amendments" to the Wagner Act. Other telegrams were sent to Mayor Bowron, the District Attorney, and the City Attorney of Los Angeles, demanding dismissal of the mass trials, apprehension of Sorrell's assailants, and an end to the violence which has characterized the strike.

In addition to Sorrell, the following persons addressed the meeting:

Ellis E. Patterson (former Congressman)
Walter J. Turner	Father George Dunne
Rev. Jonathan Castan	Averill Berman
Phillip M. Connelly	Dalton Trumbo

This informant, who was again contacted between April 9 and 11, 1947, reported that there was no evidence of a settlement of the strike, which is not over wages or hours but is completely one for Communist control of the Studio Unions.

CONFERENCE OF STUDIO UNIONS
(April 22, 1947 - May 24, 1947)

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office reported during the first part of May, 1947, that this Communist-controlled bloc of Studio Unions still remains on strike and maintains picket lines before the motion picture studios. He stated this strike is now in the eighth month. He indicated the motion picture producers are attempting to bargain with the strikers but so far nothing has resulted. He also stated that the usual forces influenced by the Communist movement still support the strike.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE DIRECTOR

The attached memorandum summarizes the information in the Bureau's possession concerning the Communist infiltration of the motion picture industry. There are set out alphabetically between pages 3 and 24 the names of all of the persons in the motion picture industry whom we know to be or to have been Communists. Individual memoranda are being prepared on Charles Chaplin, Edward G. Robinson, John Garfield, Herbert Biberman, John Howard Lawson, and probably a few other more prominent Communists or Communist sympathizers in the movie industry, in order that Mr. Nichols may have this information in preparing data for the Rankin Thomas Committee. The attached memorandum, of course, will furnish the over-all background picture.

COMMUNIST INFILTRATION INTO THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

INTRODUCTION

The Communist Party has developed an organized body in the motion picture industry particularly among the unions and cultural organizations. There are at the present time 483 individuals who are or have been identified as Communists in Hollywood. They are either connected with the motion picture industry or the radio industry. The Communists in the film colony make up a militant and trained group which is endeavoring to propagate the Communist cause through motion pictures.

I. COMMUNIST PARTY MEMBERSHIP IN HOLLYWOOD AND METHOD OF OPERATION

A. COMMUNIST PARTY MEMBERSHIP IN HOLLYWOOD

There is set out hereinafter a list of individuals who are or have been identified as Communists in Hollywood, California. These individuals are for the most part members of the Communist Party and were formerly members of the Communist Political Association's cultural and industrial sections. Los Angeles paid informant [redacted] stated that Communist Party cultural and industrial sections are composed of individuals employed either in the motion picture industry or in the radio industry. This list also contains the names of individuals who are known Communist Party members or were formerly members of the Communist Political Association. Their employment in the motion picture industry has been indicated by information obtained through [redacted] and/or through reliable informants.

It will be noted that following the names of the individuals listed there appears six columns. A brief paragraph explaining each of these columns is being set out prior to the list to describe completely the information set out in the list of individuals identified as Communists in Hollywood.

I. MEMBER COMMUNIST POLITICAL ASSOCIATION, AUGUST, 1944.

An X will appear on the list under Roman Numeral I when the individual was identified as a member of the Communist Political Association in August of 1944.

[redacted]

B. METHOD OF OPERATION

As a part of the general program of Communist penetration into the motion picture industry Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office has reported that the Communist Party considered the importation of known pro-Communist individuals into the Hollywood area of great significance. A large percentage of such individuals have been brought into Hollywood commencing in 1935 through 1944. Many of these individuals were European refugees who came to this country following the rise of Nazism in Europe and were employed in reliable positions in the field of writing and directing. The majority of these people, although not openly admitted members of the Communist Party, have shown a sympathy to the Communist cause or have moved in Communist circles in the motion picture industry. Among the exiled refugees prominent in pro-Soviet and Communist circles in Hollywood is Hanns Eisler. Hanns Eisler is the brother of Gerhardt Eisler who was recently convicted on contempt of Congress. Hanns Eisler has been the subject of an un-American Activities Committee inquiry into the motion picture industry. Hanns Eisler has an extensive record of Soviet and Communist affiliations both in the United States and Europe which had been brought to your attention in a separate memorandum dated March 7, 1947.

Confidential Informant [redacted] provided information indicating that the Communists have recently lost ground to some extent in the trade union field because of the failure of the strike of the Conference of Studio Unions. He indicated, however, that the Communists have more than made up for their failure by having many of their sympathizers placed in high executive positions such as directors and writers. He related that this latter type of penetration is more insidious because of the reputations and influence gained by those elevated in this manner. An outstanding example was the appointment of Dore Schary to be Director of all production at RKO Studios. Mr. Schary has followed the Communist Party line for many years, has engaged in the activities of and supported a number of Communist influenced organizations. Informant [redacted] has related that his important position affords him complete protection against any charge by an outsider that he has been involved in Communist activity. This pattern appears to be followed closely, according to [redacted] and extends throughout the industry, tending to make it somewhat sacred for any criticism of a definite or specific nature. Other individuals of this type who have been elevated to key positions in the industry include the following:

MacDougall, Ranald - Made producer by Warner Bros.

Kurnitz, Harry - Associate Producer with Mary Pickford and Lester Cowan

Kanin, Garson - Producer with Universal-International

Caspary, Vera - Long-term writer with Eagle-Lion

SECRET

Sperling, Milton - Producer, Warner Bros.

Kazan, Elia - Director, signed by Darryl Zanuck, Twentieth Century-Fox

Traube, Shepard - Signed as Director for RKO

Rossen, Robert - Director, RKO

Herbert, F. Hugh - Director, Twentieth Century-Fox

Koenig, Lester - Producer, Liberty Films, William Wyler Productions

Kelly, Gene - MGM Studios announced that he will soon be made a director for that firm.

Informant [redacted] has stated that there has been a noticeable change take place in the general tactical lines and methods of operation of the Communist Party in the film industry. He stated that this is apparently due to the wave of exposures of individual Communists and Communist Party line followers in governmental and other circles as a part of the broad campaign of the attack now being waged on Communism. There has resulted in the Communist Party a change in its methods of operation and tactics to meet these conditions. He stated that some of the former outspoken leaders of the Communists, as well as Communist sympathizers, have been drawn back to less important positions and have less to say openly in Communist affairs, while those who have not been so active or so well known have been forced to the front to carry on the program, not as Communists but camouflaged as "liberals" and "progressives."

[redacted] related that these Communists are even boring within the anti-Communi movement with the object in view of taking over the movement and directing it to less harmful channels, the result being that Communists are attacking themselves but not sufficiently vigorous enough to basically harm themselves or their movement. He related that these are all a part of the tactics which were laid down at the Leninist School of "Strategy and Tactics." It should be pointed out that this Informant [redacted] is a former member of the Communist Party and consequently has considerable knowledge of the Communist movement, its strategy and tactics.

SECRET

[redacted] stated that it is becoming more and more apparent that the Communists are using permanent sympathizers in the motion picture industry to further their policies. He stated that by using these persons of high standing and influence the Communist Party hopes to cover up these individuals' real Communist connections. He continued by stating that the following top producers over a period of years not only employed Communists and Communist sympathizers some of whom were notoriously known but have protected them whenever their names or reputations have been exposed to public notice: David Selznick, Samuel Goldwyn, Warner Brothers, Charles Chaplin, and Walter Wanger. He further analyzed the present situation by relating that producers in the motion picture industry could clean up the Communist movement if they saw fit, stating that up until very recently there was no recorded instance where the Hollywood motion picture industry or any of its top influential leaders have ever denounced Communism or Communists publicly. Basically, he said they are "Internationalists." Because of this the activity of the Communists and their sympathizers, who do the real work for the Communist cause, increases day by day with added influence in all departments of the motion picture industry.

II. COMMUNIST INFILTRATION OF LABOR GROUPS

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office, who was a member of the Communist Party from [redacted] until [redacted] and who has been active in the motion picture industry for a considerable period, reported that in 1934 the Communist Party realized the propaganda possibilities in the motion picture field and decided to move into the motion picture industry. He related that in the spring of 1935 direct orders came down in mimeographed form from the top structure of the Communist Party, USA, to all units in the Los Angeles area instruct them to intensify and concentrate their activities on Hollywood and the motion pictu industry. This directive emphasized the fact that Communists must try to capture th labor unions and pointed out that if this were done, the unions could be of tremendo service in influencing the type of pictures produced and thus serving the Communist cause. It should be pointed out that Informant [redacted] did not furnish this informatio to the Bureau until 1942 and, consequently, this mimeographed form referred to by hi is not available.

[redacted] stated that in the early days of the motion picture industry there apparently was no consistency in the labor organizational set-up. The principal active labor organization was the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees (IATSE).

International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees

Confidential Informant [redacted] reported that this was an autonomous group of local labor unions identified with the American Federation of Labor. The Internatio Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees' jurisdiction was recognized as the only unio organization in Hollywood for a number of years. However, on two occasions, in 192 1933, respectively, strikes were called by this organization which were completely unsuccessful. In each case the strike was the result of a jurisdictional dispute a was broken by members of outside unions entering the field as strikebreakers. [redacted] related that these unsuccessful strikes brought about a very chaotic condition in t labor field in 1933 which caused many of the workers to lose confidence in the Ameri Federation of Labor (AFL). As a result, the Communist Party had little difficulty moving into the unorganized field with the Motion Picture Workers Industrial Union.

Motion Picture Workers Industrial Union

Informant [redacted] stated that this was an independent group completely under the control of Communist elements and taking orders directly from local Commu Party leaders. In the short time between the creation of this union in January of and April of 1935 it had obtained a large number of members and was well on its way becoming the leading union in Hollywood. However, about that time instructions wer sent out by the Central Committee of the Communist Party that the Party had changed line from that of advocating the creation of separate unions under Communist contro that of affiliating with existing unions with the hope of taking over the control o these groups. In Hollywood the Communist activity was directed at affiliating with AFL groups. These instructions called for the liquidation of all independent union and their members sent in to the AFL unions. This policy was followed by the Motio Picture Workers Industrial Union which resulted in the gradual disintegration of th union. It was officially dissolved in February of 1936.

103

According to [redacted] during this same period the CIO was being organized by John L. Lewis and several attempts were made by the CIO to organize in the motion picture industry. There were at that time approximately 25 labor unions of various types in the motion picture industry. Some of these were affiliated with the AFL and the balance were independent unions. [redacted] stated that in 1937 Herbert K. Sorrell became the president of the Studio Painters Local 644 of the International Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America, AFL. This union was a newly activated AFL group. Sorrell soon became the leader of the Communist factions among Hollywood labor circles. After he had developed the leaders of a number of locals which had strong Communist factions in them, he moved to set up an organization which would tie all the locals into one body under his domination. Consequently, in the fal of 1941 the Conference of Studio Unions was formed.

With regard to Herbert K. Sorrell, it should be pointed out that the Los Angeles Office received from Tom Cavitt, a representative of the Tenney Committee investigating un-American activities on behalf of the California State Legislature, a receipt for a Communist Party membership (Book No. 60622) with the signature "Herb Stewart." The Los Angeles Field Division also has in its files a photostatic copy of 1938 registration blank which indicates that the Party name, Herbert Stewart, was assigned Communist Party Book No. 60622. It indicated that he joined the Communist Pa in 1936. This was obtained from Informant [redacted] California. These documents were furnished to the Bureau's Technical Laboratory together with known handwriting specimens of Herbert K. Sorrell. The Bure Laboratory identified Sorrell's handwriting with that on the photostatic copy of the l registration blank and the photographic copy of the membership book receipt. Confident Informant [redacted] has identified Sorrell as the leader of the Communist controlled unions in Hollywood motion picture industry. There is no current information reflecting that Sorrell is at the present time a member of the Communist Party.

Conference of Studio Unions

Confidential Informant [redacted] refers to this group as a small compact organization composed of delegates or representatives of a bloc of labor unions in the Hollywood motion picture industry which is under the control of the Communist Party operating through its members in those unions which have captured key positions. It h further been described as a Hollywood studio labor group to act as the control and ste committee which coordinates and directs Communist union activities, looking toward the taking over of all studio workers and their unions into the Communist Party orbit. Th Conference of Studio Unions, according to [redacted] is the organization upon which the Communist Party relies for eventual complete domination of motion picture unions.

The unions which at present compose the Conference of Studio Unions are as follows: It will be noted that of the eleven unions listed, ten are associated with AFL.

Local	Parent Organization
Screen Set Designers Local 1421, AFL	Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America
Screen Publicists Guild Local 1489, AFL	Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America

104

Local	Parent Organization
Screen Story Analyst Guild Local 1488, AFL	Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America
Screen Cartoonists Guild Local 852, AFL	Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America
Moving Picture Painters and Scenic Artists, Local 644, AFL	Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America
Special Officers and Guards Local 193, AFL	Building Service Employees International Union
Building Service Employees Local 278, AFL	Building Service Employees International Union
Studio Carpenters Local 946, AFL	United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America
Studio Electrical Workers Local 40, AFL	International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers
Studio Sheet Metal Workers Local 108, AFL	Studio Metal Workers International Union
Studio Machinists Local Cinema Lodge 1185	International Association of Machinists

[redacted] related that since the origin of the Conference of Studio Unions, several strikes have developed in the motion picture industry which basically were the result of jurisdictional disputes between the Communist bloc or Conference of Studio Unions and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees under the leadership of Richard Walsh, international president.

Concerning these strikes participated in by the Conference of Studio Unions, Informant [redacted] has advised that they were not legitimate labor disputes but rather strikes by a group of Communist dominated local unions using the question of jurisidictio as an excuse to create a strike. [redacted] stated that these disputes have been attempts by the Communist element to disrupt the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and that the Communist issue was usually the question around which the dispute revolved rather than the usual issue of wages, hours, or working conditions. He related that Herbert K. Sorrell, head of the Conference of Studio Unions, received the support of the Communist Party locals in these jurisdictional disputes.

Informant [redacted] related that on March 12, 1945, a jurisdictional dispute between the Conference of Studio Unions and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees precipitated a strike which was purely political in character and was an attempt on the part of the Conference of Studio Unions to break the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees unions in Hollywood. [redacted] continued that from March 12, 194 until July 28 the Communist Party line in the United States was one of collaboration whic had been adopted at the time Russia was invaded by Germany in June of 1941. He stated tha view of this, the Communist Party did not take an active part in this strike. However, on July 28, 1945, the Communist Political Association reverted to the tenets of the Communist Party, USA, and elected William Z. Foster as the new national chairman. [redacted] related that on this occasion the Party announced that it would relinquish its Browder revisionist policies and return to the basic Marxist-Leninist principles. Immediately after the change in the Party line, the Communist press began to support the strike and the Communist Party in Los Angeles began to issue leaflets through its various branches calling on the workers to man the picket lines in the strike. According to Informant [redacted] it was obvious that the Communist Party and its members were whipping the situation toward the violent stage. During October of 1945 numerous individuals were injured and violence reached such a pitch that the public and traffic were not permitted in the vicinity of Warner Brothers Studio. This strike was settled on October 29, 1945, when an agreement was reached between high AFL union officials and Eric Johnston of the Motion Picture Producers Association.

Confidential Informant [redacted] related that the real purpose of the Conference of Studio Unions was two-fold; first, the union desired to keep the general labor situation agitated in line with the Communist Party program of creating confusion in the United States; and, secondly, to maintain intact the leadership of Herbert K. Sorrell.

A strike was again called in September of 1946 by the Conference of Studio Unions. Informant [redacted] as well as [redacted] advised that this strike was again a purely jurisdictional matter between the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and the Conference of Studio Unions. They stated that this was merely a continuation of the previous strike in 1945 which lasted for some eight months. This strike resulted in numerous strikers and union leaders being arrested in Los Angeles. The strikers picketing the studios were arrested for violating the Superior Court's injunction which prohibited mass picketing and the Conference of Studio Unions' leaders were arrested on charges of criminal conspiracy.

The Los Angeles Times for January 7, 1947, reflected that on November 22, 1946, the following individuals were indicted by a Los Angeles County Grand Jury for felonious conspiracy: Herbert K. Sorrell, President of the Conference of Studio Unions; Matthew Mattison, Business Agent for the Screen Story Analyst Guild; James Skelton, Studio Carpenters Local 946 and Chairman of the Strike Strategy Committee; Averill Berman, Radio Commentator; Norval Crutcher, Secretary-Treasurer of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, Local 683; Russell L. McKnight of Local Union 683, Laboratory Technicians, IATSE; John R. Martin, Local Union 683; Laboratory Technicians, IATSE; Roy Tinsdall, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local Union 40; Frank Drdlik of the Set Decorators, Local 1421 and Carl Head, Studio Painters, Local 644; Andrew Lawless; Louis Whitman; Ray Higby, and Edward Gilbert.

With the exception of Andrew Lawless, Louis Whitman, Ray Higby, and Edward Gilbert, all of the above-listed individuals who were indicted for felonious conspiracy have been identified by Confidential Informant [redacted] as leaders of the Communist faction within the Hollywood Studio Crafts and Unions. [redacted] stated that they are all spokesmen together with Sorrell for the program of the Communist Party. In addition, Averill Berman, radio commentator, has been identified as a former member of the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee for the Arts, Sciences and Professions, a Communist influenced group, and a speaker before a gathering of the American Youth for Democracy according to the People's World of September 28, 1946. On November 23, 1946, the 812 individuals who were arrested in conjunction wit the mass picketing which was in violation of the Superior Court injunction were each released on $50.00 bond. The pending court action against the strikers and leaders had not been settled as of July 8, 1947.

The Conference of Studio Unions has also been spreading its influence into the radio field through an alliance with another group of like nature which was recently formed. This new bloc of unions is known as the Council of Radio Unions. An organizational meeting of the new group of Radio Unions was held on November 21, 1946, in Hollywood. Composing this preliminary bloc of unions are the following:

Radio Writers Guild	American Federation of Musicians, Local 47
Radio Directors Guild	American Federation of Radio Artists

[redacted] previously identified [redacted] related that this group announced its affiliation with the Conference of Studio Unions. Commenting on this alliance, [redacted] stated that this would be a most effective weapon (for the unions involved) because of the close affinity existing between the motion picture industry and the radio industry.

Screen Writers Guild

The Motion Picture Alamanac for 1942 and 1943 reflected that the Screen Writers Guild was an affiliate of the Authors League of America, Inc. The Hollywood Press Times for November 10, 1944, reflected that the Screen Writers Guild was organized in 1933 in the Hollywood motion picture industry. Informant [redacted] has reported that this was one of the first unions in the cultural field to come under the influen of Communists in Hollywood. He related that among the original organizers were John Howard Lawson, Samuel Ornitz, and Guy Endore. These individuals who have been identi fied as Communists are referred to in Section I of this memorandum where their Communist affiliations are set forth. According to [redacted] John Howard Lawson, Robert Rossen, Lester Cole, Hugo Butler, Waldo Salt, and Ring Lardner, Jr., are among the leading Communists in the Guild who have been most influential in the forming of its policies. All of these individuals have been identified as Communists and their Communist affiliations are set out in Section I of this memorandum.

According to the organization's official publication in June of 1945 there were approximately 13,000 members of the Screen Writers Guild. Of this number about 100 were identified as Communists at that time through the information obtained [redacted] The names of these individuals who are still affiliated with the motion picture industry are set out in Section I of thi memorandum. In addition, a great many others, according to [redacted] were associates of Communists reported to be sympathetic to Communist ideologies and/or members of Communist front organizations.

However, in order to show the true significance of these figures, it is necessary to consider the reports of such confidential informants as [redacted] of the Screen Writers Guild as well as [redacted] Motion Picture Alliance for the Preservation of American Ideals, the latter group having been formed to oppose Communist influence in the motion picture industry during February of 1944. These informants have stated that the Screen Writers Guild is actually controlled and operated by between 100 and 300 members who take an active interest in the work of the organization. As a further clarification of these figures, it was noted that in January of 1946 the "Screen Writer," the official publication of the Screen Writers Guild, contained a report reflecting that there were 1317 members of the Screen Writers Guild. The report classified 972 members as being active and 345 as associate members. The associate members were identified as writers who have been elevated to directorships or producerships in the motion picture industry. It also pointed out that of the 972 members of the Screen Writers Guild only were employed at that time in the eight major studios in the motion picture industry.

The May, 1946, issue of this same publication, "Screen Writer," listed the Screen Writers Guild studio chairmen. This list included Melvin Levy for Columbia Studios, Isabel Lennart for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Abe Polonsky for Paramount, and Henry Myers for RKO. All of these individuals have been identified as Communists and their Communist affiliations are set out in Section I.

On November 13, 1946, the following were elected as officers of the Screen Writers Guild: Emmett Lavery, President; Mary McCall, First Vice-President; Howard Estabrook, Second Vice-President; Hugo Butler, Third Vice-President; F. Hugh Herbert, Secretary; and Harold Buchman, Treasurer. Of these individuals, Butler and Buchman have been identified as Communists and their Communist affiliations are set out in Section of this memorandum. Mary McCall, First Vice-President, has been identified by [redacted] as having been a member of the League of American Writers, The Writers School, The Hollywood Writers Mobilization, and a member of the Hollywood Executive Board of the Hollywood Democratic Committee. The Communist connections of these organizations are discussed in Section III of this memorandum. Howard Estabrook, Second Vice-President, has been identified by Informant [redacted] as a member of the League of American Writers, and instructor at the People's Education Center in Hollywood, and a member of the Executive Council of the Hollywood Democratic Committee. The Communist connections of these groups are discussed in Section III of this memorandum.

The "Screen Writer," previously identified as the official publication of the Screen Writers Guild, carries Dalton Trumbo as editor; Gordon Kahn, managing editor, both of whom have been identified as Communists. Their Communist affiliations are set out in Section I of this memorandum. In addition to the above, Ring Lardner, Isabel Lennart, Theodore Strauss, and Paul Trivers of the editorial committee of the publication have been identified also as Communist Party members and whose Communist affiliations are set out in Section I.

As an example of the influence had by these Communists within the organization, I desire to call to your attention the October, 1946, issue of the "Screen Writer." In this publication, an editorial appears concerning the Communist inspired American Authors Authority; an article concerning the scope of the Screen Writers Guild; a third article by Communists Howard Dimsdale and Guy Endore; a fourth article on a technical phase of writing; the fifth on opinions and motion pictures; and the sixth by Communist screen writer Lester Cole on wage negotiations for screen writers. The Communist affiliations of Howard Dimsdale, Guy Endore and Lester Cole referred to as Communists are set out in Section I.

In the back of the publication there is a section entitled "News Notes." An analysis of these notes also clearly shows how the Communist cause is disseminated by this publication. For example, "News Notes" in this issue carried an announcement by the California Labor School, a Communist inspired group, of a series of courses, a production by the Communist influenced Actors Laboratory, an announcement of the Communist influenced People's Educational Center carrying details of the curriculum of this school as well as a report concerning the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, a Communist influenced group. The Communist connections of the Actors Laboratory, The People's Educational Center, and the Hollywood Writers Mobilization are set out in Section III of this memorandum.

The American Authors Authority, previously referred to, was said to have been established and conceived by the Screen Writers Guild. The inception of this plan, according to the "Screen Writer," resulted from a meeting of the Screen Writers Guild Original Material Committee of which Communist Ring Lardner is the head. Briefly, the American Authors Authority plan, which was conceived under the guidance of Communist Ring Lardner, calls for this group to copyright in its own name, for the benefit of its members, all material, whether stage, screen, book, magazine, or radio, and the leasing but never selling, of the rights to all of this material under copyright. The American Authors Authority would encompass the work of the members of the Screen Writers Guild, Dramatists Guild, Authors League of America and the Radio Writers Guild. This plan can be seen as an instrument which in the hands of Communists would give them complete control of all written material.

In this connection it is of interest to point out that it was ascertained from a technical surveillance which was maintained on the residence of John Howard Lawson, identified in Section I as a Communist, that Lawson on May 23, 1946 stated in a conversation with Bert Bargeman that the best method to fight "Fascism" was to Communize the writers and producers in Hollywood and, eventually, control every picture and fiction story produced in Hollywood. He continued that perhaps one day it would be possible to control every news article in the United States that the people read. By way of identification concerning Bert Bargeman, it should be pointed out that at that time she was employed as a secretary at the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

It is through the Communists in this group, the Screen Writers Guild, that Communist ideology is disseminated to the fellow traveler, Communist sympathizer, and unsuspecting writers who are affiliated with the Guild in the motion picture industry. The Communists and Communist pressure in the Guild thus caused the injection into motion picture scripts of Communist propaganda and the elimination of anti-Communist statements and scenes from original motion picture scripts.

Screen Writers Guild Members Connected with the Office of War Information Overseas Film Program

In July of 1945 over fifty writers, all members of the Screen Writers Guild, were working on Scripts for pictures to be produced in conjunction with the Office of War Information Overseas Film Program. Among the editorial board members were the following members of the Screen Writers Guild:

John Howard Lawson	Robert Rossen
Marc Connelly	Howard Estabrook
Sidney Buchman	Howard Koch
Charles Brackett	Harry Tugend
John Houseman	Talbot Jennings

John Howard Lawson, Sidney Buchman and Robert Rossen have been identified as Communists, and their Communist Party affiliations are set out in Section I.

Marc Connelly has been reported by Informant [redacted] in 1944 as having been a member of the Communist Party. [redacted] has also stated that he was a member of the League of American Writers and the Hollywood Democratic Committee. The Communist connections of these two organizations are set out in Section III of this memorandum.

Charles Brackett has been identified by Informant [redacted] as having been a member of the Screen Writers Guild, The League of American Writers, and The Hollywood Democratic Committee.

John Houseman has been identified by Informant Wolf as having been a member of the League of American Writers. The People's World, a Communist publication for June 10, 1944, reflected that Houseman was a member of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

The Communist affiliations of Howard Estabrook have previously been reported in this section of the memorandum.

Informant [redacted] has reported that Howard Koch has been a member of the League of American Writers, The Screen Writers Guild, and The Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee for the Arts, Sciences and Professions.

Informant [redacted] has related with regard to Harry Tugend that he was a member o the Screen Writers Guild and a member of the Hollywood Democratic Committee. The People's World for June 10, 1944, reflected that Tugend was a member of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

According to Informant [redacted] Talbot Jennings was a member of the League of American Writers and the Screen Writers Guild.

As has been previously indicated in this section the organizational affiliations of the above individuals have been set out to show that these individuals have been connected with organizations which have been infiltrated by Communists or are under the influence of Communists. The organizations with which these individuals are affiliated are discussed in Section III of this memorandum.

III. COMMUNIST INFILTRATION OF INTELLECTUAL GROUPS

The Communist Party Directive of 1935, as reported by Confidential Informant [redacted], previously referred to herein which directed the Communists to penetrate the motion picture industry, included a specific call to the Communis requesting that they concentrate on the so-called intellectual groups composed of directors, writers, artists, actors, actresses, and highly paid technicians. In this field of intellectual groups, particularly among the writers and directors, the Communists have been most successful and their influence has been far reaching. According to [redacted] the Communist activity in this field has been to work through front organizations which were not openly identified as Communist Party groups but, nevertheless, were controlled or under the influence of the Party through its official membership.

Informant [redacted] reported that in 1930 in the Soviet Union there was se up an organization known as the International Union of Revolutionary Theatres. This group was the parent of a multitude of sub-organizations which, in the United States, were known as Workers' Theatres, Theatre Groups, et cetera. The first group formed as an outgrowth of the International Union of Revolution Theatres was the League of Workers' Theatres created in New York in approximate 1932. During 1934 its name was changed to the New Theatre League.

New Theatre League

Informant [redacted] has reported that this organization set up a National Executive Board in 1935 composed of representatives in the writing and directin field throughout the United States. Among the individuals who were associated with this group in an executive capacity and who have been active in Hollywood are John Howard Lawson, writer; Albert Maltz, writer; Clifford Odets, writer; Jay Leyda, Director; Lester Cole, writer; Herbert Biberman, Director; Frank Tuttle, Director; J. Edgar Bromberg, actor; Lionel Stander, actor; and Donald Ogden Stewart, writer. Of the above mentioned individuals Lawson, Maltz, Leyda Cole, Biberman, Tuttle, and Bromberg all have been identified as Communists and their Communist Party affiliations are set out in Section one. Clifford Odets, according to Informant [redacted] was one of the original organizers of the League of American Writers.

Lionel Stander has been reported by Informant [redacted] as having been a member of the American League for Peace and Democracy, as well as having been active in the American League Against War and Fascism and the North American Committee To Aid Spanish Democracy. Donald Ogden Stewart, according to Informant [redacted] was a member of the League of American Writers, the American Peace Mobilization, International Workers Order, Screen Writers Guild, Hollywood Writers Mobilization and the American League for Peace and Democracy.

The American League Against War and Fascism and the American League for Peace and Democracy both are subversive organizations and have been declar subversive within the purview of the Hatch Act. The North American Committee To Aid Spanish Democracy is a Communist influenced organization as is the

111

International Workers Order, both of which have been referred to the Department for its consideration under Executive Order Number 9835, dated March 21, 1947. The Hollywood organizations with which these inviduals are affiliated are discussed in this Section of the memorandum.

League of American Writers

According to [redacted] another mobilizing force in the cultural field which was active in the early 1930s in Hollywood, California, was the League of American Writers. The League of American Writers was said to be a part of an international organization of writers and intellectuals which had its origin at a World Congress of Writers held in Kharkov, Russia, during November of 1930.

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office has advised that the Hollywood Chapter of the League of American Writers was established during the fall of 1935. He stated the the purpose of this group was to bring the writers employed in the motion picture industry under the influence of the League of American Writers which, at that time, was the foremost front organization operating in the so-called cultural and intellectual fields for the Communist Party in the United States. He related that the effort of this group were extremely successful, which resulted in this branch becoming, in a short time, the dominant unit of the League and one of its strongest propaganda instruments. [redacted] also related that up until the time of the signing of the Hitler-Stalin Pact on August 23, 1939, the League of American Writers, including the Hollywood Chapter, worked out in the open and was most successful in its Communist activitiee. However, following the signing of this Pact the League, being completely under the control of the Communist Party, changed its position from one of collective security to isolation, which resulted in the League becoming very cautious and working practically in secret. This change in policy exposed the League of American Writers as a Communist front organizati

Hollywood School for Writers

The League of American Writers established in Hollywood, according to Informant [redacted] the Hollywood School for Writers which acted as a subsidiary of the League of American Writers and was said to be a transmission belt whereby budding writers were developed along political lines followed by the League of American Writers and conditioned for eventual membership in the League as well as the Communist Party. This School was established in October of 1939. An examination of its listed instructors and lecturers for 1942-1943 reflects that the majority of them have been identified with various Communist Front movements Many of them actually were members of the Communist Party, such as John Howard Lawson, Guy Endore and Dalton Trumbo. The Communist Party affiliations of these individuals are set out in Section One of this memorandum.

The Hollywood Writers Mobilization

According to Informant [redacted] the Hollywood Writers Mobilization is anot offshoot of the League of American Writers. It came into existence in the latte part of 1941 or the early part of 1942, shortly after our entry into World War II

The reason for the creation of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization lies in the fact that the League of American Writers had become publicly branded as a Communist controlled organization. For example, Eugene Lyons in the widely-read book entitled, the "Red Decade", referred to the League of American Writers a a Communist-dominated group. Personnel of the new organization, the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, included writers in the motion picture industry who had heretofore been affiliated with the League of American Writers. The Chairman of the new organization was Robert Rossen, who has been identified as a Communist as reflected in Section One of this memorandum and who is employed in the motion picture industry as a screen writer. Rossen was also active in the Screen Writers' Guild, a Communist influenced group.

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office related that the following eight guilds sponsored the Hollywood Writers Mobilization at the time it was set up, and that each of these guilds was under Communist influen

1. Screen Writers' Guild
2. Radio Writers' Guild
3. Screen Publicists' Guild
4. Screen Readers' Guild
5. Screen Cartoonists Guild
6. American Newspaper Guild
7. Independent Publicists' Guild
8. Song Writers' Protective Association

He related that while the total membership of these Guilds was approximately 7,500, the Hollywood Writers Mobilization was operated by representatives or delegates from these Guilds which numbered not more than twenty-five individuals. He described it as more or less a steering committee for the activities of writers in the motion picture industry controlled and operated by such individuals as John Howard Lawson, Robert Rossen, Francis Faragoh and Herbert Biberman, all of whom he described as Communists. The Communist affiliations of all of these individuals with the exception of Francis Faragoh, is set out in Section one of this memorandum. He related that the organization was a paper-type group which "stooged" for the League of American Writers, through which the latter continued to operate as a propaganda agency for the Communist Party.

The announced purpose of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization was to mobilize the writers in the screen industry to assist in the war effort and particularly to assist the various Government and military agencies in the preparation of propaganda material for use either against the enemy or for general morale purposes at home. [redacted] described the organization's primary purpose as being the providing of material for military camp shows slanted to project the Communist line.

According to Informant [redacted] this organization injected such phases of Communist propaganda into its work as the demand for a second front, freedom for India, Independence for Puerto Rico, racial equality and similar material which fostered the Communist Party program. In May of 1942, the Los Angeles Office learned that the publication of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization [illegible]

as the "Communique" was now captioned "Communique, Hollywood Writers Mobilzatic for Defense in Cooperation with -- OEM". The publication was being mailed under the official Government frank which read "Executive Office of the President, Office of Emergency Management, Washington, D. C., Official Business. Penalty for Private Use to Avoid Payment of Postage, $300 GPO." The Los Angele Office obtained two copies of this publication, one dated April 10, 1942 and the other dated April 17, 1942. The April 17, 1942 issue is maintained in the files of the Bureau.

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office reported the following information concerning the background of this set up. He related that the head of the radio section of OEM at Washington was Bernard Schoenfeld, who was a close friend of Garson Kanin, the individual in charge of the film section of OEM. Michael Kanin, a brother of Garson and Fay Kanin, the wife of Michael, are writers who were connected with the League of Americal Writers. Garson Kanin, according to this source, went to Schoenfeld in Washington and told him that he, Kanin, had a brother and sister-in-law who were in Hollywood. He stated that they were talented in writing and that they were very anxious and willing to be of assistance in the OEM. As a result of these contacts, Fay Kanin was put to work on a radio project preparing information being put out by the OEM. After which, Michael Kanin appeared and suggested that they should get busy and contact the Hollywood League of American Writers and endeavor to have them prepare the information which was to be put out in the "Communique."

Mr. R. H. Washburne was contacted on October 10, 1942, at which time he advised that he was appointed by Bernard Schoenfeld of the Office of Emergency Management to be in charge of the Los Angeles Branch of the OEM, Informa Division. He related that shortly thereafter he was contacted by Mrs. Fay Kan Michael Kanin, Ring Lardner, Jr. and others to discuss the means of obtaining aid of certain film writers to publicize those things which the Office of Emer Management, Information Division, wished to give publicity in order that corre information could be made known to the public by the best possible means. He stated that on this occasion the "Communique", an information letter was decid upon as being the best method for this publicity.

Mr. Washburne related that he wrote a Mr. Robert Horton of the Offic of Emergency Management, Washington, D. C., and obtained authority to publish "Communique". The articles for the "Communique" were written by the committee which was composed of the aforementioned writers and others and were submitted to Mr. Washburne. Washburne related that he edited these articles which were mimeographed, assembled and distributed by his staff to members of the Film Wr Guild. According to Washburne, the specific purpose of this information lette was to put information into the hands of the members of the Film Writers' Guild with the idea that these persons would "Spot it" in the production upon which were working so that this information would be made available to the public ar would give proper publicity to those things which the Office of Emergency Mana ment felt should be publicized. Shortly after this committee was formed, Wash burne stated that he was contacted by the Hollywood Writers Mobilization who i formed him that their organization had been set up for just such a purpose and therefore there was a duplication by the organization and the committee. Consec

he related, that the committee became a part of the Hollywood Writers Mobiliza He stated that the first eight editions of the "Communique" were prepared on paper furnished by the Office of Emergency Management and were mimeographed by the Office of Emergency Management staff. He also related that the first three editions of the "Communique" were mailed under the franking privilege.

In March of 1943 the publication "Variety" reported that the Coordin tor of Inter-American Affairs would make transcripts of Office of War Informat Hollywood Writers Mobilization radio programs for broadcast in foreign languag The air show referred to was a radio program entitled "Free World Theatre Air Show", which was instituted and produced jointly by the Office of War Informat and the Hollywood Writers Mobilization. "Variety" also reflected that the Hol wood Writers Mobilization held a meeting of forty writers to supply ideas for this program under the Chairmanship of John Howley, who has been identified as a Communist and whose Communist Party affiliations are set out in Section One of this memorandum. The Free World Theatre Program had such individuals connected with it as Jay Gorney, Edward Eliscu and Henry Myers, writers of the propaganda musical comedy "Meet the People." These individuals likewise have been identified as Communists and their Communist connections are set out in Section One of this memorandum.

Special service contact [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office advised that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization also wrote and produced a series of short propaganda plays for the OWI for use in industrial plants and Army camps. Those assisting in this phase of activity included well-known members of the League of American Writers, a Communist front group. In addition, the Hollywood Writers Mobilization worked closely with Nelson Poynter who, until July of 1943, was coordinator for Government films for OWI. [redacted] related that the production of these films was under the direct control and supervisio of Poynter and that Poynter before accepting these films demanded a pro-Russia slant as a prerequisite to acceptance. He reported that Poynter associated himself with the Hollywood Writers Mobilization and worked closely with Communist Robert Rossen, Waldo Salt and Frank Tuttle, all of whom have been identified as Communists in Section One of this memorandum. Poynter's office was discontinued in July of 1943.

In conjunction with the University of California at Los Angeles the Hollywood Writers Mobilization jointly sponsored the Fifth Writers' Congress. Actually, according to [redacted] this Fifth Writers' Congress was the Fifth Congr of the League of American Writers but was not termed as such due to the fact that the League of American Writers had become publicly branded as a Communist dominated group. This Congress was held as scheduled and attended by some fifteen hundred writers from all over the United States. Informant [redacted] rela that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization was the medium whereby the Communist control of the entire proceedings was established and maintained. He stated that the leading Communist writers were said to have attended and dominated every session.

The "Peoples World", a west coast Communist newspaper for June 10, 1944, reflected that arrangements were made between Robert Riskin, Chief of the Overseas Film Bureau of the OWI and the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, whereby the screen writers would assume responsibility for the production and writing of all documentary films for overseas distribution. The program of films called for a "Projection of America" series and a new group of invasion films for distribution in Germany and the satellite countries.

The Hollywood Writers Mobilization, according to the article, had set up a working committee which was to consist of such well-known Communists as John Howard Lawson and Robert Rossen identified in Section One of this memorandum. In addition, such prominent Communist sympathizers as Marc Connelly, Howard Esterbrook, John Houseman, Talbot Jennings, Howard Koch and Harry Tugend, all who have been identified with Communist influenced or infiltrated groups previously in this memorandum.

The August 7, 1944, issue of "Variety" reported that a program of eleven short subjects and five newsreel bulletins had been arranged for production by the Hollywood Writers Mobilization. The article reflected that the films would be produced in various Hollywood studios with players from the Screen Actors' Guild and writers from the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

The pictures planned to be produced included the following: "It's Murder," "The Story With Two Endings", "When He Comes Home", "So Far So Good", "Air Transport Command", and "World Peace Through World Trade." "It's Murder" was written by Henry Blankfort, who has been identified as a Communist. "The Story With Two Endings" was to be written by Harold Buchman and Lou Solomon, both of whom were identified as Communists. "When He Comes Home" was to be written by Paul Trivers. Trivers has also been identified as a Communist. "So Far So Good" was being written by Oscar Saul, also identified as a Communist. "World Peace Through World Trade" was to be written by Edward Eliscu, also identified as a Communist. All of the above individuals referred to as Communists have their Communist affiliations set out in Section One of this memorandum.

According to Informant [redacted], during the month of January, 1945, information was received that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, through its connectic with the Office of War Information, had become a part of what was officially calle the War Activities Committee, Hollywood Division. Other organizations officially affiliated with the Committee were the Screen Writers' Guild, Screen Directors' Guild, Screen Actors' Guild, and other similar type groups.

According, to Informant [redacted], in May of 1945, John Howard Lawson, one of the leading Communists in the motion picture industry, was appointed by the Hollywood Writers Mobilization to act as its representative as an observer at the United Nations Conference.

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office stated that during the spring of 1945 the work of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization in connection with the Office of War Information, Overseas Bureau, went into high gear as a result of a series of conferences between Robert Riskin, Chief of the Bureau for OWI, and the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, Editorial Committee on Overseas Films. It should be pointed out that seven out of the fourteen members of the Editorial Committee were identified as Communists, including John Howard Lawson, Melvin Levy, Richard Collins, Waldo Salt, Leonardo Bercovici, Arthur Birnkrant, and Sidney Buchman. The Communist affiliations of these individuals are set out in Section One of this memorandum.

SECRET

Confidential Informant [redacted] related that beginning on May 21, 1945, the Hollywood Writers Mobilization was to produce a series of radio programs over the Blue Network dealing with problems of the returning soldiers. The Committee producing this has been described as one strongly under the influence of known Communists such as Louis Solomon.

Confidential Informant [redacted] related that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization has been active in supporting and participating in the activities of the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, a Communist infiltrated and influenced organization. It also produced a quarterly magazine known as the "Hollywood Quarterly" in cooperation with the University of California at Los Angeles. Included as one of the editors of this publication was John Howard Lawson, one of the Communist Party leaders in the film industry. [redacted] related that other known Communists and Communist sympathizers were also affiliated with this publication in a lesser capacity.

Informant [redacted] related that in addition, this organization has shown Russian propaganda motion pictures at the Gordon Theatre in Los Angeles as well as at other independent theatres in the Los Angeles and Hollywood area. Other known Communist front groups have also participated in this type of activity.

Following the elimination of the Office of War Information as a Government agency, the Hollywood Writers Mobilization devoted its activities to the propaganda field through radio and publications. The official newspaper of the American Newspaper Guild in June of 1946 reflected that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization had rendered numerous war services, among which were the following:

Documentary and short subject films	- 210
Radio scripts	- 1069
War activity feature stories	- 125

Confidential Informant [redacted] related that this Communist controlled organization had narrowed its activities considerably, confining its functions primarily to the radio field.

SECRET

Hollywood Community Radio

Confidential Informant [redacted] has advised that the Hollywood Community Radio group is composed of a number of individuals who are known Communists and Communist sympathizers, many of whom are active members of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization. Among the known Communists on the Board of Directors of this organization are: Hy Kraft, screen writer and Abraham L. Polonsky, screen writer. The Communist affiliations of these individuals is set out in Section One of this memorandum.

Informant [redacted] has related this group is endeavoring to obtain a license for a radio station in the vicinity of Los Angeles. According to Confidential Informant [redacted] if this permit is granted and the radio station set up, it will be run and operated by the Hollywood Writers Mobilization and will be an outlet for the Communist propaganda disseminated by this group.

The Federal Communications Commission is conducting hearings relative to the establishment of this radio station. As you will recall, the Communist connections of the individuals affiliated with this group have been furnished to the Federal Communications Commission by this Bureau.

People's Educational Center

According to Informant [redacted] the Hollywood Writers' School previously referred to herein is an offshoot of the League of American Writers. He related that the Hollywood Writers' School changed its name following the announcement by Earl Browder on January 9, 1944, that the Communist Party would cease to be a political party but would become an educational organization. The name of the School was changed from the Hollywood Writers' School to the People's Educational Center. Most of the courses taught at this School were the usual ones of theory and tactics which are conducted at similar Communist schools throughout the country, according to Informant [redacted] The School also conducted classes in screen writing, acting, directing, and kindred subjects. The Hollywood Branch of the People's Educational Center is located at 1717 North Vine Street in Hollywood. The Director of the School at the present time is Sidney Davison. [redacted] It is not known definitely if this individual is identical with the aforementioned Sidney Davison who is the Director of this School. Confidential Informant [redacted] has reported that many of the individuals who have been on the executive staff and teaching staff of this organization are Communists, identifying Herb Biberman, Frank Tuttle, Edward Dmytrik, Hugo Butler and Guy Endore. The Communist affiliations of these individuals are set out completely in Section I of this memorandum. Informant [redacted] related that the most current activity of this group appears to be the indoctrination of young people in the motion picture industry and those aspiring to get into the industry.

The Hollywood Democratic Committee

The Hollywood Democratic Committee, according to Confidential Informant [redacted] was set up in January of 1943. Its announced purpoee was the formation of an Association of Voters in the motion picture community to suppo "Victory Legislation" and "Victory Candidates". Many Hollywood writers, Directors and actors who have previously been identified with the Communist movement were affiliated with this group, among which were: John Howard Lawso Communist screen writer; Sidney Buchman, Communist writer and Frank Tuttle, Co munist Motion Picture Director. The above mentioned Communists are referred t in Section I, where their complete Communist Party affiliations are set out. John Garfield, pro-Communist actor who was also associated with this group, ha been identified by Informant [redacted] as having been affiliated with the Young Com munist League, the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, the Hollywood Democratic Commit as well as having been a member of the Screen Actors Guild and the Hollywood I dependent Citizens Committee of Arts, Sciences and Professions.

The activities of the Hollywood Democratic Committee were described by Informant [redacted] as being under the leadership of John Howard Lawson, Communi

7 449

Party member and leading figure among the Communist element in Hollywood. It is not, as the name might imply, officially a part of the Democratic Party, according to [redacted] He related it was a separate group composed of, in the main, individuals who associated with the Communist movement in Hollywood. Its activities were mainly devoted to publicity for favorable candidates and violent attacks against other legislators or candidates who had adopted a platform unfavorable to this organization. These undesired candidates were also undesired candidates in the eyes of the Communist Party. He described it as a group set up to work within democratic processes to carry out Communist Party doctrine as outlined by Earl Browder in 1944.

During 1944 the Hollywood Democratic Committee grew to be one of the most important political groups in Southern California, according to Confidential Informant [redacted] He reported that this was primarily due to its connection with the motion picture industry and the prestige derived therefrom.

This organization continued its political activities in the 1944 elections and announced that it was to become a permanent group, cooperating with and supporting the Political Action Committee and other progressive groups in politics.

On January 25, 1945, the "Daily Worker" carried an article reflecting that 100 Hollywood leaders sent a wire to President Roosevelt, requesting him to terminate the proceedings against Harry Bridges. The article reflected that the action was taken at a dinner sponsored by the Hollywood Democratic Committee. Among the signers of this telegram were Communists and many individuals who have supported the Communist movement in Hollywood. This article reflected that John Howard Lawson, writer; Jack Moss, producer, and Dalton Trumbo, writer, all known Communists in Hollywood, were among the signers of this communication. These individuals identified as Communists above are referred to in Section I, where their Communist affiliations are set out.

On June 6, 1945, in Hollywood, California, a meeting was called by the Hollywood Democratic Committee, at which time the name of this group was changed by unanimous decision to the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences, and Professions.

Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions

The Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, a now defunct organization, was formed under the influence of Communists and Communist sympathizers and was supported throughout its existence by the Communists and the Communist press. Benjamin J. Davis, Jr., a member of the National Committee of the Communist Party, on August 11, 1945, read recommendations to the New York State Convention of the Communist Party of those individuals who had been nominated for the New York State Committee.

120

Concerning Lionel Berman, Davis stated, "Comrade Berman, a Communist Party functionary, is Jewish and a member of the old State Committee.....I would say, (he) is the head of the Cultural Section of the Party.....It seems to me that in his work in the past, particularly in the elections when he was one of those instrumental in setting up the Independent Citizens Committee of Arts, Sciences and Professions, he has demonstrated a very excellent capacity for organization of a very excellent political character." This information was obtained through a microphone surveillance on this State Convention.

[redacted] advised on April 4, 1946, that the organization of the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions by the Communist Party was directed and planned in his office at the "Daily Worker" in 1944, by Lionel Berman of the Communist Party Cultural Section, and Joseph Field of the Workers Library Publishing Company. He also advised that this organization was a Communist controlled group in spite of the fact that the majority of the membership was not Communist and a minority of the Communists were directing it.

An Executive Council of 105 members was set up by the new organization in Hollywood. Out of this number, 15 were described as Communists and the majority of the remaining have a record as having been involved in Communist front groups, according to Confidential Informant [redacted] He stated that this group developed into the main propaganda outlet for Communist doctrines in Hollywood. It appeared to follow the general Communist Party program on local, national and international issues. He related that the control exercised by the Communists in this organization was apparent because of the elected officers, the activities and the publications of this group. This organization cooperated with other known Communist front groups such as the American Youth for Democracy.

The activities of the Hollywood Branch of this organization were directed at the Jack Tenney Committee in Los Angeles in an effort to put political pressure on the Committee to cease its activities which were being directed at the faculty and radical student body elements at the University of California. [redacted] stated that the Hollywood Branch of the Independent Citizens Committee has been described as having taken part in or supported all local activities in the Hollywood area which were inspired or propagated by the Communist Party.

According to Informant [redacted] during the 1946 elections this group supported candidates for office at the State primary elections. These same candidates were supported by the Communist Party, the only exception to this being the Communist candidate Archie Brown who conducted a write-in campaign for the governorship. He was not supported by the Hollywood Branch of this organization. Prior to the 1946 elections, this organization participated directly and indirectly with other groups which are also known to be under the influence of Communists and Communist sympathizers in a series of political rallies for the benefit of these candidates. Despite this backing, the only major candidate elected that was supported by this group was Helen Gahagan Douglas.

In December of 1946 Confidential Informant [redacted] reported that the National Headquarters of the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions was contemplating merging with the National Citizens Political Action Committee with the ultimate object of laying the foundation for a new so-called liberal group in the United States.

In January of 1947 Confidential Informant [redacted] stated that the Hollywood Chapter of this organization was preparing to go out of existence under its present name and emerge as the Hollywood Branch of the new organization which was formed in New York City on December 28 and 29, 1946, called the Progressive Citizens of America. This latter group was formed by the merger of the now defunct Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions and the National Citizens Political Action Committee.

Progressive Citizens of America

The new organization, the Progressive Citizens of America, was formed in Hollywood on February 11, 1947, according to Informant [redacted] At this meeting which was held in the Embassy Auditorium in Los Angeles, Jo Davidson, National Co-chairman of the Progressive Citizens of America, was present. Jo Davidson has been identified by [redacted] as a Communist. A slate of 130 individuals was nominated by a committee to be elected as the Executive Board for this organization. Of the 130 persons on this list 26 were said to be known Communists.

The program of the Progressive Citizens of America both in Hollywood and nationally has closely paralleled that of the Communist Party. This was one of the first organizations to most vigorously attack the President's proposal for aid to Greece and Turkey, as did the Communist Party. Also this organization joined with the Civil Rights Congress, a national front organization, in protesting against the city authorities of Peoria, Illinois, and Albany, New York, who failed to permit Paul Robeson to speak in the public schools. The national organization is now publishing a monthly paper called the "Progressive Citizens". This paper is being circulated by the Hollywood Chapter. The Hollywood group is represented on this staff by the following individuals: Herman Shumlin; Norman Corwin, radio commentator; John Cromwell, writer; Lillian Hellman, writer, Gene Kelly, actor; Frederic March, actor; Robert W. Kenny, ex-California State Attorney General; and Paul Robeson, singer and actor.

SECRET/22

With regard to Herman Shumlin, Informant [redacted] has reported that he was one of the endorsers of the American Peace Mobilization, a Communist front organization, a member of the League of American Writers, and a teacher at the Hollywood Writers School.

Norman Corwin, according to [redacted] was a lecturer at the Hollywood School for Writers and a member of the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions.

The writer, John Cromwell, has been referred to by Informant [redacted] as having been a member of the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions and also having participated in a radio forum sponsored by the Hollywood Democratic Committee in Hollywood on January 5, 1945.

The writer, Lillian Hellman, according to [redacted] has been a member of the League of American Writers, the American Peace Mobilization, the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, and connected with the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee.

Actor Gene Kelly has been identified by [redacted] as having been a member of the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, and a member of the Progressive Citizens of America.

Actor Frederic March has been referred to by Informant [redacted] as a former member of the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions. [redacted] has reported that March is a member of the Communist Party.

Former California State Attorney General Robert W. Kenny has been identified as a co-Chairman of the Progressive Citizens of America. He also, according to [redacted], was affiliated with the National Win the Peace Conference and a member of the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions.

Singer Paul Robeson has been identified as having been active in the American Peace Mobilization, the National Win the Peace Conference, and the Council on African Affairs by Informant [redacted]

The above referred to organizations are discussed in this section of the memorandum, with the exception of the Council on African Affairs, a Communist influenced group.

The Hollywood Progressive Citizens of America on May 9, 1947, issued an ultimatum printed in the "Daily Variety", Hollywood trade publication, protesting the investigations being conducted by the House Committee on Un-American Activities and defending the rights of the Communist Party in the United States.

Hollywood Anti-Nazi League

The Hollywood Anti-Nazi League was set up in the motion picture industry for the purpose of defending America's democratic rights against Nazi influence. The organization had among its original officers such well-known Communists as Herbert Biberman, director, and Gail Sondergaard, actress. The Communist Party affiliations of these individuals are set out in Section I. Following the Hitler-Stalin Pact and the consequent change in the Communist Party line from opposition to Fascism to a program of general isolation, the organization was liquidated.

Hollywood League for Democratic Action

According to Informant [redacted] the Hollywood League for Democratic Action was made up of the same people who were active in the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League although its activities were just the reverse of the Anti-Nazi League because of the change in the Communist Party program. Many of the leading people in this organization were also identified with the Communist Party, such as Dalton Trumbo, Frank Tuttle and John Wexley. The Communist Party affiliations of these individuals are set out in Section I of this memorandum. This organization dropped out of the picture with the coming of the American Peace Mobilization.

The American Peace Mobilization

This organization was a national Communist front movement which, in Hollywood, was under the leadership of Herbert Biberman. Other known Communists active in this movement were John Howard Lawson, Dalton Trumbo, Frank Tuttle and Guy Endore. The Communist Party affiliations of these individuals are set out in Section I. Many of the so-called "intellectuals" who had been active in Communist front movements in Hollywood were also active in supporting the American Peace Mobilization. Probably one of the most prominent of these so-called "intellectuals" was Donald Ogden Stewart, a member of the League of American Writers, International Labor Defense, Screen Writers Guild, and the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, according to Confidential Informant [redacted]

The Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee

Informant [redacted] related that from 1937 on, during the period of the Spanish Revolution, numerous Communist front groups were formed in the United States to assist the Communist cause in Spain. Prominent among these groups were the Spanish Refugee Ship Mission, the Medical Bureau to Aid Spanish Democracy, Spanish Refugee Relief Campaign, Friends of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade, Hollywood Committee for Writers in Exile, and the United American Spanish Aid Committee. These groups had found membership and support among the intellectual group in the Hollywood area. The remnants of these groups were consolidated together with the formation of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee. This organization, a Communist influenced group, was said to be interested only in those refugees whose political opinions coincided with those who were in control of the Committee. Many prominent individuals in Hollywood who had previously associated with the Communist movement were active in this organization, including Robert Rossen and Hy Kraft, Communists whose Party affiliations are set out in Section I.

The Actors Laboratory

The Actors Laboratory, according to Confidential Informant [redacted] is a Communist controlled institution where screen and stage acting is purportedly taught by directors, actors, and writers affiliated with the motion picture industry. He stated that this school was formerly located in New York City under the name of the Group Theatre. The Group Theatre was said to be affiliated with the New Theatre League, an alleged Communist venture. He related that the New Theatre League, from about 1932 until 1938, was a propaganda agency making use of the stage as a medium which was successful in turning out actors who later served the Communist movement in the United States. He reported that the Actors Laboratory cooperates with such organizations as the Hollywood Writers Mobilization and formerly the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions.

Informant [redacted] has related that this group, during the war, provided entertainment for Army personnel. Many of its past and present instructors or teachers and others affiliated with the Laboratory are known Communists. Others have been associated with the Communist movement through front organizations in the Hollywood motion picture industry. Such well-known Communists as J. Edgar Bromberg, Edward Dmytrik, and Frank Tuttle have been affiliated with the Laboratory as members of its faculty. The Communist Party affiliations of the aforementioned Communists are set out in Section I.

The American Youth for Democracy

The American Youth for Democracy, a nationally known Communist youth movement, has received the support of many Communists and Communist sympathizers in the Hollywood area. The American Youth for Democracy is a successor to the Young Communist League. Among those individuals in the motion picture industry who have been active in the support of this group are Edward Dmytrik, director; Ring Lardner, Jr., writer; Dalton Trumbo, writer; Albert Maltz, writer; Sam Ornitz, writer; and John Howard Lawson, writer, all of whom are known to be Communists. The Communist Party affiliations of these individuals are set out in Section I.

Citizens Committee for the Motion Picture Strikers

This organization, according to Confidential Informant [redacted] was set up for the purpose of aiding the strike in the motion picture industry which occurred in March of 1945. This strike developed as a result of a jurisdictional dispute between the Conference of Studio Unions and the IATSE and was discussed under the section headed "Conference of Studio Unions". He stated that this Committee was under Communist control and that it was made up of individuals who were active in such Communist front groups in Hollywood as the Hollywood Writers Mobilization and the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee, as well as the Screen Writers' Guild. Known Communist Party members, according to [redacted] were active in leading this Committee. They included Frank Tuttle, Edward Dmytrik, and Mrs. Sadie Ornitz, wife of Sam Ornitz, formerly a Communist Party functionary in Los Angeles. The Communist Party affiliations of Tuttle, Dmytrik and Sam Ornitz are set out in Section I of this memorandum. Wolf related that the entire strength of the Communist Party was concentrated on the strike through this committee. He stated that leaflets and bulletins signed by the Los Angeles County Communist Party and other Communist Party branches were distributed freely by members of this group who engaged in picket duty.

The National Committee to Win the Peace

Confidential Informant [redacted] related that this organization came into existence in Hollywood on May 12, 1946, and was sponsored by many individuals who have previously been affiliated with the Communist movement through various front organizations. In this connection, it should be pointed out that the National Committee to Win the Peace is known to have been promulgated and supported by the Communist Party, its press and supporters. The Los Angeles meeting held on May 12, 1946, referred to above, was under the guidance of such well-known sympathizers as William Pomerance, Executive Secretary of the Screen Writers Guild, and Willis J. Hill, President of the Peoples Educational Center. The Communist infiltration and influence in these two groups have been discussed in this section of the memorandum.

The Hollywood Forum

The Hollywood Forum, according to Informant [redacted] was held under the auspices of the "Daily People's World", West Coast Communist newspaper. This group, devoted to the discussion of Communism or Communist propaganda, was under the control of many Communists and Communist sympathizers affiliated with the motion picture industry. Individuals who have been active in this group include Waldo Salt, Sam Ornitz, John Howard Lawson, and Alvah Bessie, all of whom have been identified as Communists. Their Communist Party affiliations are set out in Section I of this memorandum.

John Barnes and Associates

In August of 1946 Confidential Informant [redacted] related that this organization was a recently formed "public relations"-type group which had announced that its functions were to "see that liberal, progressive commentators such as are listed as supporting the organization, are kept on the air as an antidote to the radio prostitutes who put their personal well-being above that of their fellow Americans....." Among the persons listed as supporting this group who are directly or indirectly connected with the Hollywood Film Industry are: Averill Berman, radio commentator who was a member of the Executive Council of the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee for the Arts, Sciences, and Professions, and Peter DeLima, radio commentator who has been connected with the Progressive Citizens of America as well as the Hollywood Writers Mobilization. All of these organizations mentioned above have been subjected to Communist infiltration or influence. Confidential Informant [redacted] reported that also listed as supporting this venture were businessmen in Los Angeles, all of whom lean toward the Communist position.

Western Council for Progressive Business, Labor and Agriculture

Confidential Informant [redacted] has related that this is also a pressure-type organization in the Hollywood Section which cooperates with John Barnes and Associates. This group, according to [redacted] is obviously a Communist pressure group because of the names given as supporting it. Some of them are: Paul Robeson, Bartley C. Crum, and Robert W. Kenny. The Communist affiliations of Kenny and Robeson are previously set out in this section of this memorandum. Concerning Bartley C. Crum, the Washington Daily News for September 4, 1946, reflected that Crum was Vice-President of the American Committee for Spanish Freedom, a sponsor of the American Youth for Democracy, an initiating sponsor of the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences, and Professions, and a Vice-President of the National Lawyers Guild. All of the above groups have been infiltrated or were under the influence of Communists or Communist sympathizers.

The American-Russian Institute

Confidential Informant [redacted] stated in March of this year that the American-Russian Institute opened an office at 6607 Hollywood Boulevard. It should be pointed out that the American-Russian Institute is a Soviet propaganda-type organization which acts as a dissemination center for Russian propaganda in Hollywood. Alvah Bessie, writer, identified in Section I as a Communist, and Lewis Milestone, who has been reported by Informant [redacted] as having been a member of the Hollywood Democratic Committee, the League of American Writers and the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, have been affiliated with this organization. Additional information concerning the American-Russian Institute is also set out in this summary under the section captioned, "Soviet Activities in Hollywood."

The Civil Rights Congress

The Civil Rights Congress is a national Communist front organization formed as the result of the merger of the National Federation for Constitutional

127

Included among the Communists who have supported this organization is Frank Tuttle who has been identified in Section I as a Communist. In addition, Lewis Milestone, previously identified in this section of the memorandum, together with others who have supported the Communist front movement, supported this organization.

Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions

According to Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office, this organization was originally formed to combat the anti-Communist activities of the Motion Picture Alliance for the Preservation of American Ideals. At the very beginning it was a loosely formed group composed of some 21 guilds and unions in the motion picture industry. However, the Communists seized control of the organization and have taken advantage of its position in an effort to obtain further influence among the intellectuals as well as the trade union field in the motion picture industry.

[redacted] This report reflected that the Council was seeking closer affiliation with the Conference of Studio Unions, a group reported by [redacted] to be under Communist control, and pointed out that the "progressives" (probably referring to the pro-Communist element within the Council) saw the current motion picture film strike as a serious threat to the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions.

The report reflected that the Council had supported measures advocated by the Communist Party in Los Angeles, including the following:

1. Participation in the fight for radio freedom.
2. Conferences with Robert Riskin of OWI on educational films for Europe.
3. Protest against the State Un-American Activities Committee.
4. Support of the proposed State FEPC legislation.
5. Sending a delegate to the [illegible]in the Peace Conference.
6. A protest against the banning of the Lena Horne film in Tennessee.

The document also reflected that the Council in the last few months has not forgotten the Yugoslavs and the Russians, as well as the drive toward World War III.

[redacted] 127

IV. COMMUNIST INFLUENCE IN MOTION PICTURES

According to Confidential Informant [redacted] the Communist Party for many years has been concentrating on the writers and directors in the motion picture industry for the purpose of injecting propaganda into motion pictures, these writers and directors being in a position in the creative field to determine the content of the picture. The writer who creates the dialogue and action and the director who interprets the same are in a position to influence the political philosophy contained in any given picture. For this reason, [redacted] has related, the political views and background of the writer and director are utilized to the fullest extent by the Communist Party, which has resulted in the infiltration of known Communists and Communist Party line fellow travelers into the writers and directors groups.

[redacted] has related that World War II permitted those writers and directors who acted under Communist guidance to insert sequences and episodes into a picture in a most clever manner. For this reason, he related, the Communist apparatus in the motion picture industry has been most successful, having placed in the majority of war pictures those writers and directors who were in sympathy with the cause of Communism. [redacted] stated that the crowning achievement in this respect was the picture "Mission to Moscow".

"Mission to Moscow", a Warner Bros. release in May of 1943, was produced by Robert H. Buckner. Buckner was a former correspondent in Moscow of the "London Daily Mail". According to [redacted], he selected J. Leyda to act as technical director for the picture. Leyda had been in Moscow at the same time as Buckner where he had been connected with the Bureau of Revolutionary Writers of the Soviet Motion Picture Industry. Leyda is identified in Section I of this memorandum as a Communist. He was also active in the League of American Writers, a Communist front group.

[redacted] has related that the actual writer of the screen play "Mission to Moscow" was Erskine Caldwell. Caldwell has been a member of the League of American Writers for many years. He also made several trips to the Soviet Union. At one time, he was associate editor of "Soviet Russia Today", a Soviet propaganda publication. Prior to August of 1939, he was in favor of a collective security. During the life of the Hitler-Stalin Non-Aggression Pact, he supported the program of the American Peace Mobilization and openly opposed Lend-Lease and Selective Service. After June 22, 1941, which was the date that the Soviet Union was invaded by the Nazis, he called for all-out aid to Britain, Soviet Russia and China.

The picture "Mission to Moscow" is based upon the book "Mission to Moscow" written by former U. S. Ambassador to Russia, Joseph E. Davies. Due to the fact that the picture contained pro-Soviet propaganda it was criticized by several newspapers on these grounds.

[redacted] has related that this picture raised such a controversy throughout the United States it was necessary that the Communist technique be changed. He related that the Communists then decided that the Communist writers and directors must become more subtle. He stated they are now content to insert a line, a sentence or a situation carrying the Communist Party line into an otherwise non-political picture, having found that this method is more effective by reason of the fact that it does not appear to be purposeful but just incidental. He related that this subtle method of getting propaganda into the pictures was not restricted to war-type pictures or serious drama. He stated that the Communist message was also conveyed in the so-called "musicals". As an example, he cited the picture "Meet the People". He related that "Meet the People", a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, was a straight musical comedy and would not ordinarily be expected to carry a serious political message. However, a close examination of the origin of the picture, the background and activities of those who made the picture, and the obvious Communist inspiration behind the scenes, will reveal the method and tactics used by the Hollywood Communist elements to utilize the motion picture industry for propaganda purposes. The play itself was written by Henry Myers, Jay Gorney and Edward Eliscu, all Communists who have been previously identified in Section I of this memorandum.

[redacted] related that these are but few examples of the Communist influence in motion pictures. The Communists in influencing the production of these pictures do not only direct their efforts at injecting propaganda into the pictures, but also prevent all material that the Party might consider objectionable to its current program from appearing in pictures. It has been reported that on several instances the Communist element has actually prevented the making of certain pictures.

Among the pictures of this type, according to [redacted], was "Uncle Tom's Cabin", written from the book by Harriet Beecher Stowe. Production of this picture was particularly attacked by elements of the Communist Party due to the fact that it was felt that the picture did not reflect a proper attitude on the part of the negroes. As a result of this pressure, this picture was withdrawn. Another picture, "The Life of Eddie Rickenbacker" met similar pressure. The Communist Party objected to him because of his expressed political opinions regarding labor. He was labeled as a Fascist, a Nazi sympathizer, a reactionary and an isolationist. Pressure was said to have been put on a number of film stars to refuse leading roles in the picture. It was also said, that a number of writers were threatened causing some of them to refuse to do the script. This again resulted in the picture being withdrawn from production.

In summarizing the above information, Confidential Informant [redacted] has stated that this influence of the Communist Party and its subservient apparatus in the motion picture industry was exceedingly strong. He stated that this influence was facilitated because of World War II and the trend toward internationalism, which made it possible for the exponents of certain foreign ideologies by contrast to overshadow the genuine effects of our American democracy.

An examination of the list of persons taking part in the production of a great many of the motion pictures on our screen today will reflect that a number of individuals who are known Communists or Communist sympathizers take an active part in the production of these pictures. For instance, the picture "The Strange Love of Martha Ivers", a Paramount release, was directed by Lewis Milestone whose Communist front affiliations have been previously set out; the screen play was written by Robert Rossen, identified in Section I as a Communist; and as a member of the cast was Roman Bohnen, also identified in Section I as a Communist. These individuals have been referred to by Informant [redacted] as the type who would not hesitate to inject propaganda sequences and suggestions into the picture.

V. SOVIET ACTIVITIES IN HOLLYWOOD

[redacted]

Lawson, Maltz, Trumbo, Bessie, Dmytrik, Wexley, Rosson and Cole are Communists and their Communist affiliations are set out in Section I of this memorandum. Edward G. Robinson has been identified as a Communist by Informant [redacted] Charles Chaplin, according to [redacted] may or may not be a member of the Communist Party. However, [redacted] has stated that Chaplin has always gone along with the Communist Party and has helped them financially. He stated that Chaplin has financed the West Coast Communist newspaper "Peoples World." John Garfield, according to Informant [redacted] has been affiliated with the Actors Laboratory, the Young Communist League, Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, Hollywood Democratic Committee and the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee for the Arts, Sciences and Professions. All of the above organizations, with the exception of the Young Communist League, the former youth group of the Communist Party, USA, are discussed in Section III of this memorandum.

Mikhail Kalatozov, Soviet motion picture representative, came to Hollywood in August of 1943, where he endeavored to purchase American films. Among the films he sought to purchase were "Little Foxes" and the "Earl of Chicago." The first of these films depicts a degenerate Southern family, the latter is a story of a Chicago gangster in England. It may well be a part of Kalatozov's plan or propaganda technique to obtain such pictures in order to exhibit American life at its worst to the Soviet people, much in the manner that Adolf Hitler, through his propaganda ministry, tried to convince the German people for several years before the war that the United States was nothing more than a nation of Chicago gangsters.

[redacted]

In May of 1944, Gregory L. Irsky, formerly of the Amtorg Trading Corporation; Leonid Kozmatov, film camera man; and Boris Tolstogowzov, a film technician, came to the United States from the Soviet Union as a commission to study scientific technique on behalf of the Soviet Union, to arrange for cinematographic equipment and to negotiate for technical assistance in the motion picture field. Informant [redacted] of the Production Division for Bell and Howell, motion picture manufacturing company, related that Irsky in his contacts with him indicated that he was endeavoring to disseminate Russian propaganda type films on various phases of Soviet life, such as the Soviet military strength, under the guise of educational features, to American schools and colleges. This project, of course, did not materialize.

[redacted]

The Los Angeles papers carried numerous stories reflecting that Konstantin Simonov held a party aboard a Russian ship anchored in the harbor at Los Angeles. Among those who attended this party were Mr. and Mrs. John Garfield, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Chaplin and Lewis Milestone. The Los Angeles

134

Herald for May 28, 1946, reflected that the Jack Tenney (California State Legislature Un-American Activities Committee) group was going to conduct an investigation of this party. It was reflected that the committee was interested in the elaborate banquet which was provided for the guests---- "While millions are starving in Europe----providing an ironic touch to the celebration honoring the proletariat."

With regard to Simonov's visit to this country, the June, 1946 issue of the "Screen Writer," which is the official publication of the Screen Writers Guild, carried a transcript of an informal discussion held under the auspices of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization between Simonov and members of the Screen Writers Guild. The informal discussion was presided over by Dalton Trumbo, a Communist, whose Communist affiliations are set out in Section I and who is employed as a screen writer in the motion picture industry.

This article contained a question propounded to Simonov concerning the rights of a writer to his material. Simonov replied that Soviet writers do not sell their work outright to the film industry but rather only sell the right for screening, indicating that the right for publishing the material remains in the hands of the author. It should be pointed out that the Screen Writers Guild is the organization supporting the American Authors Authority, which program, conceived under Communist guidance, calls for the copyrighting and subsequent leasing of screen plays rather than the selling of screen plays to producers.

Since Shirley Kopley is employed in the Office of the American-Russian Institute in Los Angeles, [redacted] Two documents [redacted] relating to the motion picture industry. One of these dealt with various departments in the United States Motion Picture Studios and their functions and was apparently drawn up for the purpose of comparing the efficiency of the United States Motion Picture Studios with those of the Soviets. The other was a treatise proposing the formation of a Motion Picture Research Foundation which would function under the direct jurisdiction of the Motion Picture Producers Association and would be financed by the member companies on an assessment basis in the same ratio as such companies are now assessed for other Association activities. The Foundation would have as a purpose the offsetting of rising costs in the industry and the enhancing of entertainment values. [redacted]

Artkino Pictures, Incorporated

Artkino Pictures, Incorporated, was chartered in New York on July 22, 1940. It has registered, listing as its foreign principal, Soyuzintorgkin Moscow, USSR.

The organization claims that it is engaged in the importation of motion picture films from Soviet Russia and the distribution of these films in the Western Hemisphere. Although there is no apparent direct connection between Artkino Pictures, Incorporated, and the Communist Party, USA, several of the people associated with the organization have been identified either as members of the Communist Party, Communist Political Association or closely associated with the Communist movement through front organizations.

Rose Madell, who was listed as Vice President in January of 1947 of Artkino Pictures, Incorporated, is married to Sam Madell, alias Sam Muldofsky. Sam Madell has been reported by several reliable sources, including [redacted] and reliable informant [redacted] as being actively affiliated with the Waterfront Section of the Communist Party in New York.

Ginger Canor, switchboard operator at Artkino, is believed to be identical with Gertrude Canor, who was born in New York City on February 2, 1925. Reliable informant [redacted] a former member of the Communist Party and former confidential informant of the New York Office, reported that Ginger Robesen, believed to be identical with Ginger Canor, was among those present at the Inmwood Victory Club of the Communist Political Association on February 6, 1945, at New York City. He also reported that she was among those present at two other meetings of this same Club, one held on December 26, 1944, and the other on January 23, 1945. Nancy Markoff, listed as a telephone operator at Artkino, has been referred to by informant Abraham Naidich as a member of the OGPU, presently known as the MGB. At the present time this allegation has not been proven or disproven. However, investigation is being made to determine the exact status of this individual.

VI. INVESTIGATION OF COMMUNIST ACTIVITIES IN THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY BY THE COMMITTEE ON UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

The House Committee on Un-American Activities publicly announced on June 20, 1945, that it had voted to investigate subversive activities in Hollywood to determine whether film stars and producers were involved in a plot to overthrow the Government.

It would appear that this decision on the part of the Committee was reached as a result of articles appearing in Los Angeles newspapers following a meeting in the City of Los Angeles on June 8, 1945, sponsored by the "New Masses," a Communist publication, and held in honor of William Gropper, cartoonist for the publication. Principal speakers included Richard Bransten, also known as Bruce Minton, former contributing editor of the "New Masses," and his wife, Ruth McKenney, also a former contributing editor of the "New Masses," as well as Joseph Foster, film editor of "New Masses." With regard to Richard Bransten and Ruth McKenney, it will be recalled that on September 19, 1946, these individuals were expelled from the Communist Party for an unauthorized release of a report on the National Plenum of the Communist Party held in July of 1946.

The Los Angeles papers reflected that the speakers indicated that Communist propaganda and activities in the future would be centered around Hollywood, that Communists were seeking to strengthen their ties with the White House, that pressure must be exerted to continue lend-lease to Russia and that "the thousands of pretty young girls in our Communist Youth Movement must volunteer as hostesses in USO's, canteens, churches, social groups-wherever the soldiers, sailors, and marines seek recreation and are prone to listen to persuasive voices." The latter quoted statement concerning young girls in the Communist movement appeared in the Los Angeles Examiner. However, the Agents of the Los Angeles Office who were in attendance at this meeting stated that this quotation was an inaccuracy on the part of the paper. The Agents attending the meeting also pointed out that the Examiner made the statement that the program presented had been "carefully blueprinted in New York City by Earl Browder and other American Soviets." No such statement in fact had been made at the meeting.

The Congressional investigation was held as a result, and following the investigation the Committee prepared three confidential reports. The first report contained many blanket statements and conclusions which did not appear to be supported by evidence.

The first section of this report was devoted to the naming of some of the prominent Communists in Hollywood. The second section dealt with the Actors Laboratory, a Communist-influenced group, the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions (formerly known as the Hollywood Democratic Committee), the Emergency Committee on KFI, the Anti-Defamation League, the Peoples Educational Center and the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, all of which were referred to as Communist-inspired groups, with brief statements concerning the activities of known Communists connected with these groups.

The next section set forth a list of names of individuals "believed to be" members of the Party in the Hollywood area. Section Four dealt with Communist activities in the various guilds in Hollywood and contained for the most part general statements concerning these guilds.

Part Five entitled "Communists in Labor Unions," was devoted in the main to Herbert K. Sorrell, one of the principal figures in the motion picture industry strikes. Part Six entitled "Russian Government's Interest in Motion Pictures," discussed primarily the visit of Mikhail Kalotozov to Hollywood. Kalotozov, who was in Hollywood during 1943 was a representative of the Soviet Film Industry, Soyuzintorgkino. The motion picture, "Mission to Moscow" was also discussed in this section, particularly with regard to the newspaper comments made concerning it, indicating that the picture was nonfactual and untruthful. The conclusion of the report discussed the aforementioned Communist meeting held in honor of the "New Masses." A considerable portion was also devoted to the alleged trouble that Ivan Levedoff, actor and writer, had in obtaining employment because he was opposed to Communists and Communism.

The second report, which was called a supplemental report, was dated September 28, 1945, and reviewed the publications: "International Theater," said to be an official publication of the International Union of the Revolutionary Committee, published in Moscow, Russia; "The New Theater," an American publication, the organ of the Workers Committee, which was a section of the International Union of the Revolutionary Theater; "International Literature," said to be an organ of the International Union of Revolutionary Writers published in Moscow; and the "T.A.C. Magazine," an American publication sponsored by the Theater Arts Committee. The international and Communist connections of these publications from available copies were reviewed and set out in this report.

The third report, another supplemental report, issued early in 1946, limited its scope to the activities and affiliations of the Communist activities engaged in by the writers employed by Metro-Goldwyn Mayer Studios.

This same Congressional Committee on December 3, 1946, held a preliminary hearing in Los Angeles concerning the Communist activity in the film industry and, according to reports received, only three witnesses were called and the hearings were superficial. The Committee announced, however, that it would return in January of 1947 to conduct extensive hearings on all phases of this type of activity in Hollywood.

The next statement concerning Communist activity in the motion picture industry was made by you in your testimony before this group on March 26, 1947. On this occasion you pointed out that the Communists launched their attack in Hollywood during 1935, directing their activities at the infiltration of labor unions and so-called intellectual and creative fields. You stated that the Communist activity in Hollywood was effective and was furthered by Communists and Communist sympathizers who used the prestige of prominent individuals in the film colony to further their cause. You also stated that the Communists endeavored to insert into motion pictures Communist propaganda and to eliminate anti-Communist statements.

Following your testimony you will recall that Eric Johnston, of the motion picture industry, testified before this Committee. The Washington Post in reference to Johnston's appearance quoted him as stating, "As for there being Communist influence in the movies, such an accusation is absurd. If Hollywood were a Communist network, I should not be attacked every morning in the 'Daily Worker'! —— as I can assure you I am ——."

As you will further recall, Father Cronin telephonically advised Mr. Tamm that Johnston had requested him to draw up a program for the elimination of Communists in the motion picture industry. You will also undoubtedly have noted that Mr. Johnston and his associates have hired former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes as their attorney and his first assignment will be to represent Johnston's organization when the Un-American Activities Committee holds its hearings on Communist activity in the motion picture industry in Washington, D. C. during September of 1947. These actions on the part of Johnston do not show a consistency with his statements as quoted in the Washington Post and referred to above.

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office, advised that members of the Un-American Activities Committee arrived in Hollywood on May 8, 1947, amid a great fanfare of press releases and headlines, to conduct an inquiry concerning Communism in the motion picture industry and to ascertain specifically the activities of Hanns Eisler, the brother of Gerhardt Eisler, who is employed in the motion picture industry as a writer.

Novelist Rupert Hughes testified before the Committee on May 15, 1947, at which time he stated that Communists dominated Hollywood to a large degree and specifically mentioned Charles Chaplin and John Howard Lawson. Jack Warner, Vice President of Warner Brothers Studio, also is said to have testified and complimented the Committee on the work it was doing.

Chairman Thomas of the Committee complimented Adolf Menjou for his enlightening presentation before the Committee, stating that Menjou testified that Communists in the film industry were so powerful that many of the "little people" were afraid to move against them.

Mrs. Lela Rogers, mother of Ginger Rogers, who appeared before the Committee, referred to "The Little Red School House" as being the People's Educational Center in Hollywood and also testified concerning an alleged Communist statement that her daughter refused to say in the motion picture "Tender Comrade."

Robert Taylor also testified, relating that he was forced by Lowell Mellett, former Administrative Assistant to the late President Roosevelt, into playing in a motion picture which favored Russian ideologies over American. The Los Angeles Examiner of May 15, 1947, from which this information was obtained, reflected that Mellett was also affiliated with the Office of War Information as the Director of the Motion Picture Division. The article further reflected that Mellett specifically came to Hollywood for the express purpose of overruling Taylor's objection to appearing in the 1943 release "Song of Russia."

Other individuals prominent in the film world who appeared before the Committee included Screen Actor Richard Arlen and Henry Ginsberg, Vice President in Charge of Production at Paramount Studios. Viktor Kravchenko, estranged Soviet official, appeared before the Committee and was quoted by the Los Angeles Examiner for May 17, 1947, as having stated that Hollywood was a serious intellectual front in the United States and it was necessary to clear Hollywood of the Communists and Communist sympathizers.

The New York Times of May 17, 1947 quoted Chairman J. Parnell Thomas of the Un-American Activities Committee as asserting after a week of hearings on subversive activities in Hollywood that "90% of the Communist infiltration" was in the Screen Writing field, but that the Federal Government had also abetted the work. He related that in the testimony of 14 actors, writers, and producers, a very outstanding point that appeared many times was the influence of the "Government in aiding the Communist conspiracy."

The article also reflected that Mr. Thomas stated he reported testimony reflecting that even the White House exerted its influence on certain people in Hollywood to have certain pro-Russian motion pictures filmed during the regime of the late President Roosevelt.

He also indicated that he was not only referring to the incident which came out as a result of the testimony of Robert Taylor, but to other statements made by actors and producers who indicated how the Government persuaded them to put out Communist propaganda in their productions.

COMMUNIST INFILTRATION INTO THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

INTRODUCTION

The Communist Party has developed an organized body in the motion picture industry particularly among the unions and cultural organizations. There are at the present time 483 individuals who are or have been identified as Communists in Hollywood. They are either connected with the motion picture industry or the radio industry. The Communists in the film colony make up a militant and trained group which is endeavoring to propagate the Communist cause through motion pictures.

I. COMMUNIST PARTY MEMBERSHIP IN HOLLYWOOD AND METHOD OF OPERATION

A. COMMUNIST PARTY MEMBERSHIP IN HOLLYWOOD

There is set out hereinafter a list of individuals who are or have been identified as Communists in Hollywood, California. These individuals are for the most part members of the Communist Party and were formerly members of the Communist Political Association's cultural and industrial sections. Los Angeles paid informant [redacted] stated that Communist Party cultural and industrial sections are composed of individuals employed either in the motion picture industry or in the radio industry. This list also contains the names of individuals who are known Communist Party members or were formerly members of the Communist Political Association. Their employment in the motion picture industry has been indicated by information obtained through [redacted] and/or through reliable informants.

It will be noted that following the names of the individuals listed there appears six columns. A brief paragraph explaining each of these columns is being set out prior to the list to describe completely the information set out in the list of individuals identified as Communists in Hollywood.

I. MEMBER COMMUNIST POLITICAL ASSOCIATION, AUGUST, 1944.

An X will appear on the list under Roman Numeral I when the individual was identified as a member of the Communist Political Association in August of 1944.

B. METHOD OF OPERATION

As a part of the general program of Communist penetration into the motion picture industry Confidential Informan[redacted] of the Los Angeles Office has reported that the Communist Party considered the importation of known pro-Communist individuals into the Hollywood area of great significance. A large percentage of such individuals have been brought into Hollywood commencing in 1935 through 1944. Many of these individuals were European refugees who came to this country following the rise of Nazism in Europe and were employed in reliable positions in the field of writing and directing. The majority of these people, although not openly admitted members of the Communist Party, have shown a sympathy to the Communist cause or have moved in Communist circles in the motion picture industry. Among the exiled refugees prominent in pro-Soviet and Communist circles in Hollywood is Hanns Eisler. Hanns Eisler is the brother of Gerhardt Eisler who was recently convicted on contempt of Congress. Hanns Eisler has been the subject of an un-American Activities Committee inquiry into the motion picture industry. Hanns Eisler has an extensive record of Soviet and Communist affiliations both in the United States and Europe which had been brought to your attention in a separate memorandum dated March 7, 1947.

Confidential Informant [redacted] provided information indicating that the Communists have recently lost ground to some extent in the trade union field because of the failure of the strike of the Conference of Studio Unions. He indicated, however, that the Communists have more than made up for their failure by having many of their sympathizers placed in high executive positions such as directors and writers. He related that this latter type of penetration is more insidious because of the reputations and influence gained by those elevated in this manner. An outstanding example was the appointment of Dore Schary to be Director of all production at RKO Studios. Mr. Schary has followed the Communist Party line for many years, has engaged in the activities of and supported a number of Communist influenced organizations. Informant [redacted] has related that his important position affords him complete protection against any charge by an outsider that he has been involved in Communist activity. This pattern appears to be followed closely, according to [redacted] and extends throughout the industry, tending to make it somewhat sacred for any criticism of a definite or specific nature. Other individuals of this type who have been elevated to key positions in the industry include the following:

MacDougall, Ranald - Made producer by Warner Bros.

Kurnitz, Harry - Associate Producer with Mary Pickford and Lester Cowan

Kanin, Garson - Producer with Universal-International

Caspary, Vera - Long-term writer with Eagle-Lion

Sperling, Milton - Producer, Warner Bros.

Kazan, Elia - Director, signed by Darryl Zanuck, Twentieth Century-Fox

Traube, Shepard - Signed as Director for RKO

Rossen, Robert - Director, RKO

Herbert, F. Hugh - Director, Twentieth Century-Fox

Koenig, Lester - Producer, Liberty Films, William Wyler Productions

Kelly, Gene - MGM Studios announced that he will soon be made a director for that firm.

Informant [redacted] has stated that there has been a noticeable change take place in the general tactical lines and methods of operation of the Communist Party in the film industry. He stated that this is apparently due to the wave of exposures of individual Communists and Communist Party line followers in governmental and other circles as a part of the broad campaign of the attack now being waged on Communism. There has resulted in the Communist Party a change in its methods of operation and tactics to meet these conditions. He stated that some of the former outspoken leaders of the Communists, as well as Communist sympathizers, have been drawn back to less important positions and have less to say openly in Communist affairs, while those who have not been so active or so well known have been forced to the front to carry on the program, not as Communists but camouflaged as "liberals" and "progressives."

[redacted] related that these Communists are even boring within the anti-Communi movement with the object in view of taking over the movement and directing it to less harmful channels, the result being that Communists are attacking themselves but not sufficiently vigorous enough to basically harm themselves or their movement. He related that these are all a part of the tactics which were laid down at the Leninist School of "Strategy and Tactics." It should be pointed out that this Informant [redacted] is a former member of the Communist Party and consequently has considerable knowledge of the Communist movement, its strategy and tactics.

SECRET

[redacted] stated that it is becoming more and more apparent that the Communists are using permanent sympathizers in the motion picture industry to further their policies. He stated that by using these persons of high standing and influence the Communist Party hopes to cover up these individuals' real Communist connections. He continued by stating that the following top producers over a period of years not only employed Communists and Communist sympathizers some of whom were notoriously known but have protected them whenever their names or reputations have been exposed to public notice: David Selznick, Samuel Goldwyn, Warner Brothers, Charles Chaplin, and Walter Wanger. He further analyzed the present situation by relating that producers in the motion picture industry could clean up the Communist movement if they saw fit, stating that up until very recently there was no recorded instance where the Hollywood motion picture industry or any of its top influential leaders have ever denounced Communism or Communists publicly. Basically, he said they are "Internationalists." Because of this the activity of the Communists and their sympathizers, who do the real work for the Communist cause, increases day by day with added influence in all departments of the motion picture industry.

II. COMMUNIST INFILTRATION OF LABOR GROUPS

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office, who was a member of the Communist Party from [redacted] until [redacted] and who has been active in the motion picture industry for a considerable period, reported that in 1934 the Communist Party realized the propaganda possibilities in the motion picture field and decided to move into the motion picture industry. He related that in the spring of 1935 direct orders came down in mimeographed form from the top structure of the Communist Party, USA, to all units in the Los Angeles area instruct them to intensify and concentrate their activities on Hollywood and the motion pictu industry. This directive emphasized the fact that Communists must try to capture th labor unions and pointed out that if this were done, the unions could be of tremendo service in influencing the type of pictures produced and thus serving the Communist cause. It should be pointed out that Informant [redacted] did not furnish this informatio to the Bureau until 1942 and, consequently, this mimeographed form referred to by hi is not available.

[redacted] stated that in the early days of the motion picture industry there apparently was no consistency in the labor organizational set-up. The principal active labor organization was the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees (IATSE).

International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees

Confidential Informant [redacted] reported that this was an autonomous group of local labor unions identified with the American Federation of Labor. The Internatio Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees' jurisdiction was recognized as the only unio organization in Hollywood for a number of years. However, on two occasions, in 192 1933, respectively, strikes were called by this organization which were completely unsuccessful. In each case the strike was the result of a jurisdictional dispute a was broken by members of outside unions entering the field as strikebreakers. [redacted] related that these unsuccessful strikes brought about a very chaotic condition in t labor field in 1933 which caused many of the workers to lose confidence in the Ameri Federation of Labor (AFL). As a result, the Communist Party had little difficulty moving into the unorganized field with the Motion Picture Workers Industrial Union.

Motion Picture Workers Industrial Union

Informant [redacted] stated that this was an independent group completely under the control of Communist elements and taking orders directly from local Commu Party leaders. In the short time between the creation of this union in January of and April of 1935 it had obtained a large number of members and was well on its way becoming the leading union in Hollywood. However, about that time instructions wer sent out by the Central Committee of the Communist Party that the Party had changed line from that of advocating the creation of separate unions under Communist contro that of affiliating with existing unions with the hope of taking over the control o these groups. In Hollywood the Communist activity was directed at affiliating with AFL groups. These instructions called for the liquidation of all independent union and their members sent in to the AFL unions. This policy was followed by the Motio Picture Workers Industrial Union which resulted in the gradual disintegration of th union. It was officially dissolved in February of 1936.

103

According to [redacted] during this same period the CIO was being organized by John L. Lewis and several attempts were made by the CIO to organize in the motion picture industry. There were at that time approximately 25 labor unions of various types in the motion picture industry. Some of these were affiliated with the AFL and the balance were independent unions. [redacted] stated that in 1937 Herbert K. Sorrell became the president of the Studio Painters Local 644 of the International Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America, AFL. This union was a newly activated AFL group. Sorrell soon became the leader of the Communist factions among Hollywood labor circles. After he had developed the leaders of a number of locals which had strong Communist factions in them, he moved to set up an organization which would tie all the locals into one body under his domination. Consequently, in the fal of 1941 the Conference of Studio Unions was formed.

With regard to Herbert K. Sorrell, it should be pointed out that the Los Angeles Office received from Tom Cavitt, a representative of the Tenney Committee investigating un-American activities on behalf of the California State Legislature, a receipt for a Communist Party membership (Book No. 60622) with the signature "Herb Stewart." The Los Angeles Field Division also has in its files a photostatic copy of 1938 registration blank which indicates that the Party name, Herbert Stewart, was assigned Communist Party Book No. 60622. It indicated that he joined the Communist Pa in 1936. This was obtained from Informant [redacted] California. These documents were furnished to the Bureau's Technical Laboratory together with known handwriting specimens of Herbert K. Sorrell. The Bure Laboratory identified Sorrell's handwriting with that on the photostatic copy of the l registration blank and the photographic copy of the membership book receipt. Confident Informant [redacted] has identified Sorrell as the leader of the Communist controlled unions in Hollywood motion picture industry. There is no current information reflecting that Sorrell is at the present time a member of the Communist Party.

Conference of Studio Unions

Confidential Informant [redacted] refers to this group as a small compact organization composed of delegates or representatives of a bloc of labor unions in the Hollywood motion picture industry which is under the control of the Communist Party operating through its members in those unions which have captured key positions. It h further been described as a Hollywood studio labor group to act as the control and ste committee which coordinates and directs Communist union activities, looking toward the taking over of all studio workers and their unions into the Communist Party orbit. Th Conference of Studio Unions, according to [redacted] is the organization upon which the Communist Party relies for eventual complete domination of motion picture unions.

The unions which at present compose the Conference of Studio Unions are as follows: It will be noted that of the eleven unions listed, ten are associated with AFL.

Local	Parent Organization
Screen Set Designers Local 1421, AFL	Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America
Screen Publicists Guild Local 1489, AFL	Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America

Studio Machinists Local Cinema Lodge 1185	International Association of Machinists

[redacted] related that since the origin of the Conference of Studio Unions, several strikes have developed in the motion picture industry which basically were the result of jurisdictional disputes between the Communist bloc or Conference of Studio Unions and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees under the leadership of Richard Walsh, international president.

Concerning these strikes participated in by the Conference of Studio Unions, Informant [redacted] has advised that they were not legitimate labor disputes but rather strikes by a group of Communist dominated local unions using the question of jurisidictio as an excuse to create a strike. [redacted] stated that these disputes have been attempts by the Communist element to disrupt the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and that the Communist issue was usually the question around which the dispute revolved rather than the usual issue of wages, hours, or working conditions. He related that Herbert K. Sorrell, head of the Conference of Studio Unions, received the support of the Communist Party locals in these jurisdictional disputes.

Informant [redacted] related that on March 12, 1945, a jurisdictional dispute between the Conference of Studio Unions and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees precipitated a strike which was purely political in character and was an attempt on the part of the Conference of Studio Unions to break the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees unions in Hollywood. [redacted] continued that from March 12, 194 until July 28 the Communist Party line in the United States was one of collaboration whic had been adopted at the time Russia was invaded by Germany in June of 1941. He stated tha view of this, the Communist Party did not take an active part in this strike. However, on July 28, 1945, the Communist Political Association reverted to the tenets of the Communist Party, USA, and elected William Z. Foster as the new national chairman. [redacted] related that on this occasion the Party announced that it would relinquish its Browder revisionist policies and return to the basic Marxist-Leninist principles. Immediately after the change in the Party line, the Communist press began to support the strike and the Communist Party in Los Angeles began to issue leaflets through its various branches calling on the workers to man the picket lines in the strike. According to Informant [redacted] it was obvious that the Communist Party and its members were whipping the situation toward the violent stage. During October of 1945 numerous individuals were injured and violence reached such a pitch that the public and traffic were not permitted in the vicinity of Warner Brothers Studio. This strike was settled on October 29, 1945, when an agreement was reached between high AFL union officials and Eric Johnston of the Motion Picture Producers Association.

Confidential Informant [redacted] related that the real purpose of the Conference of Studio Unions was two-fold: first, the union desired to keep the general labor situation agitated in line with the Communist Party program of creating confusion in the United States; and, secondly, to maintain intact the leadership of Herbert K. Sorrell.

A strike was again called in September of 1946 by the Conference of Studio Unions. Informant [redacted] as well as [redacted] advised that this strike was again a purely jurisdictional matter between the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and the Conference of Studio Unions. They stated that this was merely a continuation of the previous strike in 1945 which lasted for some eight months. This strike resulted in numerous strikers and union leaders being arrested in Los Angeles. The strikers picketing the studios were arrested for violating the Superior Court's injunction which prohibited mass picketing and the Conference of Studio Unions' leaders were arrested on charges of criminal conspiracy.

The Los Angeles Times for January 7, 1947, reflected that on November 22, 1946, the following individuals were indicted by a Los Angeles County Grand Jury for felonious conspiracy: Herbert K. Sorrell, President of the Conference of Studio Unions; Matthew Mattison, Business Agent for the Screen Story Analyst Guild; James Skelton, Studio Carpenters Local 946 and Chairman of the Strike Strategy Committee; Averill Berman, Radio Commentator; Norval Crutcher, Secretary-Treasurer of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, Local 683; Russell L. McKnight of Local Union 683, Laboratory Technicians, IATSE; John R. Martin, Local Union 683; Laboratory Technicians, IATSE; Roy Tinsdall, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local Union 40; Frank Drdlik of the Set Decorators, Local 1421 and Carl Head, Studio Painters, Local 644; Andrew Lawless; Louis Whitman; Ray Higby, and Edward Gilbert.

With the exception of Andrew Lawless, Louis Whitman, Ray Higby, and Edward Gilbert, all of the above-listed individuals who were indicted for felonious conspiracy have been identified by Confidential Informant [redacted] as leaders of the Communist faction within the Hollywood Studio Crafts and Unions. [redacted] stated that they are all spokesmen together with Sorrell for the program of the Communist Party. In addition, Averill Berman, radio commentator, has been identified as a former member of the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee for the Arts, Sciences and Professions, a Communist influenced group, and a speaker before a gathering of the American Youth for Democracy according to the People's World of September 28, 1946. On November 23, 1946, the 812 individuals who were arrested in conjunction wit the mass picketing which was in violation of the Superior Court injunction were each released on $50.00 bond. The pending court action against the strikers and leaders had not been settled as of July 8, 1947.

The Conference of Studio Unions has also been spreading its influence into the radio field through an alliance with another group of like nature which was recently formed. This new bloc of unions is known as the Council of Radio Unions. An organizational meeting of the new group of Radio Unions was held on November 21, 1946, in Hollywood. Composing this preliminary bloc of unions are the following:

Radio Writers Guild	American Federation of Musicians, Local 47
Radio Directors Guild	American Federation of Radio Artists

[redacted] previously identified [redacted] related that this group announced its affiliation with the Conference of Studio Unions. Commenting on this alliance, [redacted] stated that this would be a most effective weapon (for the unions involved) because of the close affinity existing between the motion picture industry and the radio industry.

Screen Writers Guild

The Motion Picture Alamanac for 1942 and 1943 reflected that the Screen Writers Guild was an affiliate of the Authors League of America, Inc. The Hollywood Press Times for November 10, 1944, reflected that the Screen Writers Guild was organized in 1933 in the Hollywood motion picture industry. Informant [redacted] has reported that this was one of the first unions in the cultural field to come under the influen of Communists in Hollywood. He related that among the original organizers were John Howard Lawson, Samuel Ornitz, and Guy Endore. These individuals who have been identi fied as Communists are referred to in Section I of this memorandum where their Communist affiliations are set forth. According to [redacted] John Howard Lawson, Robert Rossen, Lester Cole, Hugo Butler, Waldo Salt, and Ring Lardner, Jr., are among the leading Communists in the Guild who have been most influential in the forming of its policies. All of these individuals have been identified as Communists and their Communist affiliations are set out in Section I of this memorandum.

According to the organization's official publication in June of 1945 there were approximately 13,000 members of the Screen Writers Guild. Of this number about 100 were identified as Communists at that time through the information obtained [redacted] The names of these individuals who are still affiliated with the motion picture industry are set out in Section I of thi memorandum. In addition, a great many others, according to [redacted] were associates of Communists reported to be sympathetic to Communist ideologies and/or members of Communist front organizations.

However, in order to show the true significance of these figures, it is necessary to consider the reports of such confidential informants as [redacted] of the Screen Writers Guild as well as [redacted] Motion Picture Alliance for the Preservation of American Ideals, the latter group having been formed to oppose Communist influence in the motion picture industry during February of 1944. These informants have stated that the Screen Writers Guild is actually controlled and operated by between 100 and 300 members who take an active interest in the work of the organization. As a further clarification of these figures, it was noted that in January of 1946 the "Screen Writer," the official publication of the Screen Writers Guild, contained a report reflecting that there were 1317 members of the Screen Writers Guild. The report classified 972 members as being active and 345 as associate members. The associate members were identified as writers who have been elevated to directorships or producerships in the motion picture industry. It also pointed out that of the 972 members of the Screen Writers Guild only were employed at that time in the eight major studios in the motion picture industry.

The May, 1946, issue of this same publication, "Screen Writer," listed the Screen Writers Guild studio chairmen. This list included Melvin Levy for Columbia Studios, Isabel Lennart for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Abe Polonsky for Paramount, and Henry Myers for RKO. All of these individuals have been identified as Communists and their Communist affiliations are set out in Section I.

On November 13, 1946, the following were elected as officers of the Screen Writers Guild: Emmett Lavery, President; Mary McCall, First Vice-President; Howard Estabrook, Second Vice-President; Hugo Butler, Third Vice-President; F. Hugh Herbert, Secretary; and Harold Buchman, Treasurer. Of these individuals, Butler and Buchman have been identified as Communists and their Communist affiliations are set out in Section of this memorandum. Mary McCall, First Vice-President, has been identified by [redacted] as having been a member of the League of American Writers, The Writers School, The Hollywood Writers Mobilization, and a member of the Hollywood Executive Board of the Hollywood Democratic Committee. The Communist connections of these organizations are discussed in Section III of this memorandum. Howard Estabrook, Second Vice-President, has been identified by Informant [redacted] as a member of the League of American Writers, and instructor at the People's Education Center in Hollywood, and a member of the Executive Council of the Hollywood Democratic Committee. The Communist connections of these groups are discussed in Section III of this memorandum.

The "Screen Writer," previously identified as the official publication of the Screen Writers Guild, carries Dalton Trumbo as editor; Gordon Kahn, managing editor, both of whom have been identified as Communists. Their Communist affiliations are set out in Section I of this memorandum. In addition to the above, Ring Lardner, Isabel Lennart, Theodore Strauss, and Paul Trivers of the editorial committee of the publication have been identified also as Communist Party members and whose Communist affiliations are set out in Section I.

As an example of the influence had by these Communists within the organization, I desire to call to your attention the October, 1946, issue of the "Screen Writer." In this publication, an editorial appears concerning the Communist inspired American Authors Authority; an article concerning the scope of the Screen Writers Guild; a third article by Communists Howard Dimsdale and Guy Endore; a fourth article on a technical phase of writing; the fifth on opinions and motion pictures; and the sixth by Communist screen writer Lester Cole on wage negotiations for screen writers. The Communist affiliations of Howard Dimsdale, Guy Endore and Lester Cole referred to as Communists are set out in Section I.

In the back of the publication there is a section entitled "News Notes." An analysis of these notes also clearly shows how the Communist cause is disseminated by this publication. For example, "News Notes" in this issue carried an announcement by the California Labor School, a Communist inspired group, of a series of courses, a production by the Communist influenced Actors Laboratory, an announcement of the Communist influenced People's Educational Center carrying details of the curriculum of this school as well as a report concerning the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, a Communist influenced group. The Communist connections of the Actors Laboratory, The People's Educational Center, and the Hollywood Writers Mobilization are set out in Section III of this memorandum.

The American Authors Authority, previously referred to, was said to have been established and conceived by the Screen Writers Guild. The inception of this plan, according to the "Screen Writer," resulted from a meeting of the Screen Writers Guild Original Material Committee of which Communist Ring Lardner is the head. Briefly, the American Authors Authority plan, which was conceived under the guidance of Communist Ring Lardner, calls for this group to copyright in its own name, for the benefit of its members, all material, whether stage, screen, book, magazine, or radio, and the leasing but never selling, of the rights to all of this material under copyright. The American Authors Authority would encompass the work of the members of the Screen Writers Guild, Dramatists Guild, Authors League of America and the Radio Writers Guild. This plan can be seen as an instrument which in the hands of Communists would give them complete control of all written material.

In this connection it is of interest to point out that it was ascertained from a technical surveillance which was maintained on the residence of John Howard Lawson, identified in Section I as a Communist, that Lawson on May 23, 1946 stated in a conversation with Bert Bargeman that the best method to fight "Fascism" was to Communize the writers and producers in Hollywood and, eventually, control every picture and fiction story produced in Hollywood. He continued that perhaps one day it would be possible to control every news article in the United States that the people read. By way of identification concerning Bert Bargeman, it should be pointed out that at that time she was employed as a secretary at the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

It is through the Communists in this group, the Screen Writers Guild, that Communist ideology is disseminated to the fellow traveler, Communist sympathizer, and unsuspecting writers who are affiliated with the Guild in the motion picture industry. The Communists and Communist pressure in the Guild thus caused the injection into motion picture scripts of Communist propaganda and the elimination of anti-Communist statements and scenes from original motion picture scripts.

Screen Writers Guild Members Connected with
the Office of War Information Overseas Film Program

In July of 1945 over fifty writers, all members of the Screen Writers Guild, were working on Scripts for pictures to be produced in conjunction with the Office of War Information Overseas Film Program. Among the editorial board members were the following members of the Screen Writers Guild:

John Howard Lawson	Robert Rossen
Marc Connelly	Howard Estabrook
Sidney Buchman	Howard Koch
Charles Brackett	Harry Tugend
John Houseman	Talbot Jennings

John Howard Lawson, Sidney Buchman and Robert Rossen have been identified as Communists, and their Communist Party affiliations are set out in Section I.

Marc Connelly has been reported by Informant [redacted] in 1944 as having been a member of the Communist Party. [redacted] has also stated that he was a member of the League of American Writers and the Hollywood Democratic Committee. The Communist connections of these two organizations are set out in Section III of this memorandum.

Charles Brackett has been identified by Informant [redacted] as having been a member of the Screen Writers Guild, The League of American Writers, and The Hollywood Democratic Committee.

John Houseman has been identified by Informant Wolf as having been a member of the League of American Writers. The People's World, a Communist publication for June 10, 1944, reflected that Houseman was a member of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

The Communist affiliations of Howard Estabrook have previously been reported in this section of the memorandum.

Informant [redacted] has reported that Howard Koch has been a member of the League of American Writers, The Screen Writers Guild, and The Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee for the Arts, Sciences and Professions.

Informant [redacted] has related with regard to Harry Tugend that he was a member o the Screen Writers Guild and a member of the Hollywood Democratic Committee. The People's World for June 10, 1944, reflected that Tugend was a member of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

According to Informant [redacted] Talbot Jennings was a member of the League of American Writers and the Screen Writers Guild.

As has been previously indicated in this section the organizational affiliations of the above individuals have been set out to show that these individuals have been connected with organizations which have been infiltrated by Communists or are under the influence of Communists. The organizations with which these individuals are affiliated are discussed in Section III of this memorandum.

III. COMMUNIST INFILTRATION OF INTELLECTUAL GROUPS

The Communist Party Directive of 1935, as reported by Confidential Informant [redacted], previously referred to herein which directed the Communists to penetrate the motion picture industry, included a specific call to the Communis requesting that they concentrate on the so-called intellectual groups composed of directors, writers, artists, actors, actresses, and highly paid technicians. In this field of intellectual groups, particularly among the writers and directors, the Communists have been most successful and their influence has been far reaching. According to [redacted] the Communist activity in this field has been to work through front organizations which were not openly identified as Communist Party groups but, nevertheless, were controlled or under the influence of the Party through its official membership.

Informant [redacted] reported that in 1930 in the Soviet Union there was se up an organization known as the International Union of Revolutionary Theatres. This group was the parent of a multitude of sub-organizations which, in the United States, were known as Workers' Theatres, Theatre Groups, et cetera. The first group formed as an outgrowth of the International Union of Revolution Theatres was the League of Workers' Theatres created in New York in approximate 1932. During 1934 its name was changed to the New Theatre League.

New Theatre League

Informant [redacted] has reported that this organization set up a National Executive Board in 1935 composed of representatives in the writing and directi field throughout the United States. Among the individuals who were associated with this group in an executive capacity and who have been active in Hollywood are John Howard Lawson, writer; Albert Maltz, writer; Clifford Odets, writer; Jay Leyda, Director; Lester Cole, writer; Herbert Biberman, Director; Frank Tuttle, Director; J. Edgar Bromberg, actor; Lionel Stander, actor; and Donald Ogden Stewart, writer. Of the above mentioned individuals Lawson, Maltz, Leyda Cole, Biberman, Tuttle, and Bromberg all have been identified as Communists and their Communist Party affiliations are set out in Section one. Clifford Odets, according to Informant [redacted] was one of the original organizers of the League of American Writers.

Lionel Stander has been reported by Informant [redacted] as having been a member of the American League for Peace and Democracy, as well as having been active in the American League Against War and Fascism and the North American Committee To Aid Spanish Democracy. Donald Ogden Stewart, according to Informant [redacted] was a member of the League of American Writers, the American Peace Mobilization, International Workers Order, Screen Writers Guild, Hollywood Writers Mobilization and the American League for Peace and Democracy.

The American League Against War and Fascism and the American League for Peace and Democracy both are subversive organizations and have been declar subversive within the purview of the Hatch Act. The North American Committee To Aid Spanish Democracy is a Communist influenced organization as is the International Workers Order, both of which have been referred to the Department for its consideration under Executive Order Number 9835, dated March 21, 1947. The Hollywood organizations with which these inviduals are affiliated are discussed in this Section of the memorandum.

League of American Writers

According to [redacted] another mobilizing force in the cultural field which was active in the early 1930s in Hollywood, California, was the League of American Writers. The League of American Writers was said to be a part of an international organization of writers and intellectuals which had its origin at a World Congress of Writers held in Kharkov, Russia, during November of 1930.

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office has advised that the Hollywood Chapter of the League of American Writers was established during the fall of 1935. He stated the the purpose of this group was to bring the writers employed in the motion picture industry under the influence of the League of American Writers which, at that time, was the foremost front organization operating in the so-called cultural and intellectual fields for the Communist Party in the United States. He related that the effort of this group were extremely successful, which resulted in this branch becoming, in a short time, the dominant unit of the League and one of its strongest propaganda instruments. [redacted] also related that up until the time of the signing of the Hitler-Stalin Pact on August 23, 1939, the League of American Writers, including the Hollywood Chapter, worked out in the open and was most successful in its Communist activities. However, following the signing of this Pact the League, being completely under the control of the Communist Party, changed its position from one of collective security to isolation, which resulted in the League becoming very cautious and working practically in secret. This change in policy exposed the League of American Writers as a Communist front organizati

Hollywood School for Writers

The League of American Writers established in Hollywood, according to Informant [redacted] the Hollywood School for Writers which acted as a subsidiary of the League of American Writers and was said to be a transmission belt whereby budding writers were developed along political lines followed by the League of American Writers and conditioned for eventual membership in the League as well as the Communist Party. This School was established in October of 1939. An examination of its listed instructors and lecturers for 1942-1943 reflects that the majority of them have been identified with various Communist Front movements Many of them actually were members of the Communist Party, such as John Howard Lawson, Guy Endore and Dalton Trumbo. The Communist Party affiliations of these individuals are set out in Section One of this memorandum.

The Hollywood Writers Mobilization

According to Informant [redacted] the Hollywood Writers Mobilization is anot offshoot of the League of American Writers. It came into existence in the latte part of 1941 or the early part of 1942, shortly after our entry into World War II

The reason for the creation of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization lies in the fact that the League of American Writers had become publicly branded as a Communist controlled organization. For example, Eugene Lyons in the widely-read book entitled, the "Red Decade", referred to the League of American Writers a a Communist-dominated group. Personnel of the new organization, the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, included writers in the motion picture industry who had heretofore been affiliated with the League of American Writers. The Chairman of the new organization was Robert Rossen, who has been identified as a Communist as reflected in Section One of this memorandum and who is employed in the motion picture industry as a screen writer. Rossen was also active in the Screen Writers' Guild, a Communist influenced group.

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office related that the following eight guilds sponsored the Hollywood Writers Mobilization at the time it was set up, and that each of these guilds was under Communist influen

1. Screen Writers' Guild
2. Radio Writers' Guild
3. Screen Publicists' Guild
4. Screen Readers' Guild
5. Screen Cartoonists Guild
6. American Newspaper Guild
7. Independent Publicists' Guild
8. Song Writers' Protective Association

He related that while the total membership of these Guilds was approximately 7,500, the Hollywood Writers Mobilization was operated by representatives or delegates from these Guilds which numbered not more than twenty-five individuals. He described it as more or less a steering committee for the activities of writers in the motion picture industry controlled and operated by such individuals as John Howard Lawson, Robert Rossen, Francis Faragoh and Herbert Biberman, all of whom he described as Communists. The Communist affiliations of all of these individuals with the exception of Francis Faragoh, is set out in Section one of this memorandum. He related that the organization was a paper-type group which "stooged" for the League of American Writers, through which the latter continued to operate as a propaganda agency for the Communist Party.

The announced purpose of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization was to mobilize the writers in the screen industry to assist in the war effort and particularly to assist the various Government and military agencies in the preparation of propaganda material for use either against the enemy or for general morale purposes at home. [redacted] described the organization's primary purpose as being the providing of material for military camp shows slanted to project the Communist line.

According to Informant [redacted] this organization injected such phases of Communist propaganda into its work as the demand for a second front, freedom for India, Independence for Puerto Rico, racial equality and similar material which fostered the Communist Party program. In May of 1942, the Los Angeles Office learned that the publication of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization [illegible]

as the "Communique" was now captioned "Communique, Hollywood Writers Mobilzatic for Defense in Cooperation with -- OEM". The publication was being mailed under the official Government frank which read "Executive Office of the President, Office of Emergency Management, Washington, D. C., Official Business. Penalty for Private Use to Avoid Payment of Postage, $300 GPO." The Los Angele Office obtained two copies of this publication, one dated April 10, 1942 and the other dated April 17, 1942. The April 17, 1942 issue is maintained in the files of the Bureau.

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office reported the following information concerning the background of this set up. He related that the head of the radio section of OEM at Washington was Bernard Schoenfeld, who was a close friend of Garson Kanin, the individual in charge of the film section of OEM. Michael Kanin, a brother of Garson and Fay Kanin, the wife of Michael, are writers who were connected with the League of Americal Writers. Garson Kanin, according to this source, went to Schoenfeld in Washington and told him that he, Kanin, had a brother and sister-in-law who were in Hollywood. He stated that they were talented in writing and that they were very anxious and willing to be of assistance in the OEM. As a result of these contacts, Fay Kanin was put to work on a radio project preparing information being put out by the OEM. After which, Michael Kanin appeared and suggested that they should get busy and contact the Hollywood League of American Writers and endeavor to have them prepare the information which was to be put out in the "Communique."

Mr. R. H. Washburne was contacted on October 10, 1942, at which time he advised that he was appointed by Bernard Schoenfeld of the Office of Emergency Management to be in charge of the Los Angeles Branch of the OEM, Informa Division. He related that shortly thereafter he was contacted by Mrs. Fay Kan Michael Kanin, Ring Lardner, Jr. and others to discuss the means of obtaining aid of certain film writers to publicize those things which the Office of Emer Management, Information Division, wished to give publicity in order that corre information could be made known to the public by the best possible means. He stated that on this occasion the "Communique", an information letter was decid upon as being the best method for this publicity.

Mr. Washburne related that he wrote a Mr. Robert Horton of the Offic of Emergency Management, Washington, D. C., and obtained authority to publish "Communique". The articles for the "Communique" were written by the committee which was composed of the aforementioned writers and others and were submitted to Mr. Washburne. Washburne related that he edited these articles which were mimeographed, assembled and distributed by his staff to members of the Film Wr Guild. According to Washburne, the specific purpose of this information lette was to put information into the hands of the members of the Film Writers' Guild with the idea that these persons would "Spot it" in the production upon which were working so that this information would be made available to the public ar would give proper publicity to those things which the Office of Emergency Mana ment felt should be publicized. Shortly after this committee was formed, Wash burne stated that he was contacted by the Hollywood Writers Mobilization who i formed him that their organization had been set up for just such a purpose and therefore there was a duplication by the organization and the committee. Consec

he related, that the committee became a part of the Hollywood Writers Mobiliza He stated that the first eight editions of the "Communique" were prepared on paper furnished by the Office of Emergency Management and were mimeographed by the Office of Emergency Management staff. He also related that the first three editions of the "Communique" were mailed under the franking privilege.

In March of 1943 the publication "Variety" reported that the Coordin tor of Inter-American Affairs would make transcripts of Office of War Informat Hollywood Writers Mobilization radio programs for broadcast in foreign languag The air show referred to was a radio program entitled "Free World Theatre Air Show", which was instituted and produced jointly by the Office of War Informat and the Hollywood Writers Mobilization. "Variety" also reflected that the Hol wood Writers Mobilization held a meeting of forty writers to supply ideas for this program under the Chairmanship of John Howard Lawson, who has been identified as a Communist and whose Communist Party affiliations are set out in Section One of this memorandum. The Free World Theatre Program had such individuals connected with it as Jay Gorney, Edward Eliscu and Henry Myers, writers of the propaganda musical comedy "Meet the People." These individuals likewise have been identified as Communists and their Communist connections are set out in Section One of this memorandum.

Special service contact [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office advised that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization also wrote and produced a series of short propaganda plays for the OWI for use in industrial plants and Army camps. Those assisting in this phase of activity included well-known members of the League of American Writers, a Communist front group. In addition, the Hollywood Writers Mobilization worked closely with Nelson Poynter who, until July of 1943, was coordinator for Government films for OWI. [redacted] related that the production of these films was under the direct control and supervisio of Poynter and that Poynter before accepting these films demanded a pro-Russia slant as a prerequisite to acceptance. He reported that Poynter associated himself with the Hollywood Writers Mobilization and worked closely with Communist Robert Rossen, Waldo Salt and Frank Tuttle, all of whom have been identified as Communists in Section One of this memorandum. Poynter's office was discontinued in July of 1943.

In conjunction with the University of California at Los Angeles the Hollywood Writers Mobilization jointly sponsored the Fifth Writers' Congress. Actually, according to [redacted] this Fifth Writers' Congress was the Fifth Congr of the League of American Writers but was not termed as such due to the fact that the League of American Writers had become publicly branded as a Communist dominated group. This Congress was held as scheduled and attended by some fifteen hundred writers from all over the United States. Informant [redacted] rela that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization was the medium whereby the Communist control of the entire proceedings was established and maintained. He stated that the leading Communist writers were said to have attended and dominated every session.

The "Peoples World", a west coast Communist newspaper for June 10, 1944, reflected that arrangements were made between Robert Riskin, Chief of the Overseas Film Bureau of the OWI and the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, whereby the screen writers would assume responsibility for the production and writing of all documentary films for overseas distribution. The program of films called for a "Projection of America" series and a new group of invasion films for distribution in Germany and the satellite countries.

The Hollywood Writers Mobilization, according to the article, had set up a working committee which was to consist of such well-known Communists as John Howard Lawson and Robert Rossen identified in Section One of this memorandum. In addition, such prominent Communist sympathizers as Marc Connelly, Howard Esterbrook, John Houseman, Talbot Jennings, Howard Koch and Harry Tugend, all who have been identified with Communist influenced or infiltrated groups previously in this memorandum.

The August 7, 1944, issue of "Variety" reported that a program of eleven short subjects and five newsreel bulletins had been arranged for production by the Hollywood Writers Mobilization. The article reflected that the films would be produced in various Hollywood studios with players from the Screen Actors' Guild and writers from the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

The pictures planned to be produced included the following: "It's Murder," "The Story With Two Endings", "When He Comes Home", "So Far So Good", "Air Transport Command", and "World Peace Through World Trade." "It's Murder" was written by Henry Blankfort, who has been identified as a Communist. "The Story With Two Endings" was to be written by Harold Buchman and Lou Solomon, both of whom were identified as Communists. "When He Comes Home" was to be written by Paul Trivers. Trivers has also been identified as a Communist. "So Far So Good" was being written by Oscar Saul, also identified as a Communist. "World Peace Through World Trade" was to be written by Edward Eliscu, also identified as a Communist. All of the above individuals referred to as Communists have their Communist affiliations set out in Section One of this memorandum.

According to Informant [redacted], during the month of January, 1945, information was received that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, through its connectic with the Office of War Information, had become a part of what was officially calle the War Activities Committee, Hollywood Division. Other organizations officially affiliated with the Committee were the Screen Writers' Guild, Screen Directors' Guild, Screen Actors' Guild, and other similar type groups.

According, to Informant [redacted], in May of 1945, John Howard Lawson, one of the leading Communists in the motion picture industry, was appointed by the Hollywood Writers Mobilization to act as its representative as an observer at the United Nations Conference.

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office stated that during the spring of 1945 the work of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization in connection with the Office of War Information, Overseas Bureau, went into high gear as a result of a series of conferences between Robert Riskin, Chief of the Bureau for OWI, and the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, Editorial Committee on Overseas Films. It should be pointed out that seven out of the fourteen members of the Editorial Committee were identified as Communists, including John Howard Lawson, Melvin Levy, Richard Collins, Waldo Salt, Leonardo Bercovici, Arthur Birnkrant, and Sidney Buchman. The Communist affiliations of these individuals are set out in Section One of this memorandum.

SECRET

Confidential Informant [redacted] related that beginning on May 21, 1945, the Hollywood Writers Mobilization was to produce a series of radio programs over the Blue Network dealing with problems of the returning soldiers. The Committee producing this has been described as one strongly under the influence of known Communists such as Louis Solomon.

Confidential Informant [redacted] related that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization has been active in supporting and participating in the activities of the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, a Communist infiltrated and influenced organization. It also produced a quarterly magazine known as the "Hollywood Quarterly" in cooperation with the University of California at Los Angeles. Included as one of the editors of this publication was John Howard Lawson, one of the Communist Party leaders in the film industry. [redacted] related that other known Communists and Communist sympathizers were also affiliated with this publication in a lesser capacity.

Informant [redacted] related that in addition, this organization has shown Russian propaganda motion pictures at the Gordon Theatre in Los Angeles as well as at other independent theatres in the Los Angeles and Hollywood area. Other known Communist front groups have also participated in this type of activity.

Following the elimination of the Office of War Information as a Government agency, the Hollywood Writers Mobilization devoted its activities to the propaganda field through radio and publications. The official newspaper of the American Newspaper Guild in June of 1946 reflected that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization had rendered numerous war services, among which were the following:

Documentary and short subject films	- 210
Radio scripts	- 1069
War activity feature stories	- 125

Confidential Informant [redacted] related that this Communist controlled organization had narrowed its activities considerably, confining its functions primarily to the radio field.

SECRET

Hollywood Community Radio

Confidential Informant [redacted] has advised that the Hollywood Community Radio group is composed of a number of individuals who are known Communists and Communist sympathizers, many of whom are active members of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization. Among the known Communists on the Board of Directors of this organization are: Hy Kraft, screen writer and Abraham L. Polonsky, screen writer. The Communist affiliations of these individuals is set out in Section One of this memorandum.

Informant [redacted] has related this group is endeavoring to obtain a license for a radio station in the vicinity of Los Angeles. According to Confidential Informant [redacted] if this permit is granted and the radio station set up, it will be run and operated by the Hollywood Writers Mobilization and will be an outlet forthe Communist propaganda disseminated by this group.

The Federal Communications Commission is conducting hearings relative to the establishment of this radio station. As you will recall, the Communist connections of the individuals affiliated with this group have been furnished to the Federal Communications Commission by this Bureau.

People's Educational Center

According to Informant [redacted] the Hollywood Writers' School previously referred to herein is an offshoot of the League of American Writers. He related that the Hollywood Writers' School changed its name following the announcement by Earl Browder on January 9, 1944, that the Communist Party would cease to be a political party but would become an educational organization. The name of the School was changed from the Hollywood Writers' School to the People's Educational Center. Most of the courses taught at this School were the usual ones of theory and tactics which are conducted at similar Communist schools throughout the country, according to Informant [redacted] The School also conducted classes in screen writing, acting, directing, and kindred subjects. The Hollywood Branch of the People's Educational Center is located at 1717 North Vine Street in Hollywood. The Director of the School at the present time is Sidney Davison. [redacted] It is not known definitely if this individual is identical with the aforementioned Sidney Davison who is the Director of this School. Confidential Informant [redacted] has reported that many of the individuals who have been on the executive staff and teaching staff of this organization are Communists, identifying Herb Biberman, Frank Tuttle, Edward Dmytrik, Hugo Butler and Guy Endore. The Communist affiliations of these individuals are set out completely in Section I of this memorandum. Informant [redacted] related that the most current activity of this group appears to be the indoctrination of young people in the motion picture industry and those aspiring to get into the industry.

The Hollywood Democratic Committee

The Hollywood Democratic Committee, according to Confidential Informant [redacted] was set up in January of 1943. Its announced purpose was the formation of an Association of Voters in the motion picture community to suppo "Victory Legislation" and "Victory Candidates". Many Hollywood writers, Directors and actors who have previously been identified with the Communist movement were affiliated with this group, among which were: John Howard Lawso Communist screen writer; Sidney Buchman, Communist writer and Frank Tuttle, Co munist Motion Picture Director. The above mentioned Communists are referred t in Section I, where their complete Communist Party affiliations are set out. John Garfield, pro-Communist actor who was also associated with this group, ha been identified by Informant [redacted] as having been affiliated with the Young Com munist League, the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, the Hollywood Democratic Commit as well as having been a member of the Screen Actors Guild and the Hollywood I dependent Citizens Committee of Arts, Sciences and Professions.

The activities of the Hollywood Democratic Committee were described by Informant [redacted] as being under the leadership of John Howard Lawson, Communi

Party member and leading figure among the Communist element in Hollywood. It is not, as the name might imply, officially a part of the Democratic Party, according to [redacted] He related it was a separate group composed of, in the main, individuals who associated with the Communist movement in Hollywood. Its activities were mainly devoted to publicity for favorable candidates and violent attacks against other legislators or candidates who had adopted a platform unfavorable to this organization. These undesired candidates were also undesired candidates in the eyes of the Communist Party. He described it as a group set up to work within democratic processes to carry out Communist Party doctrine as outlined by Earl Browder in 1944.

During 1944 the Hollywood Democratic Committee grew to be one of the most important political groups in Southern California, according to Confidential Informant [redacted] He reported that this was primarily due to its connection with the motion picture industry and the prestige derived therefrom.

This organization continued its political activities in the 1944 elections and announced that it was to become a permanent group, cooperating with and supporting the Political Action Committee and other progressive groups in politics.

On January 25, 1945, the "Daily Worker" carried an article reflecting that 100 Hollywood leaders sent a wire to President Roosevelt, requesting him to terminate the proceedings against Harry Bridges. The article reflected that the action was taken at a dinner sponsored by the Hollywood Democratic Committee. Among the signers of this telegram were Communists and many individuals who have supported the Communist movement in Hollywood. This article reflected that John Howard Lawson, writer; Jack Moss, producer, and Dalton Trumbo, writer, all known Communists in Hollywood, were among the signers of this communication. These individuals identified as Communists above are referred to in Section I, where their Communist affiliations are set out.

On June 6, 1945, in Hollywood, California, a meeting was called by the Hollywood Democratic Committee, at which time the name of this group was changed by unanimous decision to the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences, and Professions.

Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions

The Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, a now defunct organization, was formed under the influence of Communists and Communist sympathizers and was supported throughout its existence by the Communists and the Communist press. Benjamin J. Davis, Jr., a member of the National Committee of the Communist Party, on August 11, 1945, read recommendations to the New York State Convention of the Communist Party of those individuals who had been nominated for the New York State Committee.

120

Concerning Lionel Berman, Davis stated, "Comrade Berman, a Communist Party functionary, is Jewish and a member of the old State Committee.....I would say, (he) is the head of the Cultural Section of the Party.....It seems to me that in his work in the past, particularly in the elections when he was one of those instrumental in setting up the Independent Citizens Committee of Arts, Sciences and Professions, he has demonstrated a very excellent capacity for organization of a very excellent political character." This information was obtained through a microphone surveillance on this State Convention.

[redacted] advised on April 4, 1946, that the organization of the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions by the Communist Party was directed and planned in his office at the "Daily Worker" in 1944, by Lionel Berman of the Communist Party Cultural Section, and Joseph Field of the Workers Library Publishing Company. He also advised that this organization was a Communist controlled group in spite of the fact that the majority of the membership was not Communist and a minority of the Communists were directing it.

An Executive Council of 105 members was set up by the new organization in Hollywood. Out of this number, 15 were described as Communists and the majority of the remaining have a record as having been involved in Communist front groups, according to Confidential Informant [redacted] He stated that this group developed into the main propaganda outlet for Communist doctrines in Hollywood. It appeared to follow the general Communist Party program on local, national and international issues. He related that the control exercised by the Communists in this organization was apparent because of the elected officers, the activities and the publications of this group. This organization cooperated with other known Communist front groups such as the American Youth for Democracy.

The activities of the Hollywood Branch of this organization were directed at the Jack Tenney Committee in Los Angeles in an effort to put political pressure on the Committee to cease its activities which were being directed at the faculty and radical student body elements at the University of California. [redacted] stated that the Hollywood Branch of the Independent Citizens Committee has been described as having taken part in or supported all local activities in the Hollywood area which were inspired or propagated by the Communist Party.

According to Informant [redacted] during the 1946 elections this group supported candidates for office at the State primary elections. These same candidates were supported by the Communist Party, the only exception to this being the Communist candidate Archie Brown who conducted a write-in campaign for the governorship. He was not supported by the Hollywood Branch of this organization. Prior to the 1946 elections, this organization participated directly and indirectly with other groups which are also known to be under the influence of Communists and Communist sympathizers in a series of political rallies for the benefit of these candidates. Despite this backing, the only major candidate elected that was supported by this group was Helen Gahagan Douglas.

In December of 1946 Confidential Informant [redacted] reported that the National Headquarters of the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions was contemplating merging with the National Citizens Political Action Committee with the ultimate object of laying the foundation for a new so-called liberal group in the United States.

In January of 1947 Confidential Informant [redacted] stated that the Hollywood Chapter of this organization was preparing to go out of existence under its present name and emerge as the Hollywood Branch of the new organization which was formed in New York City on December 28 and 29, 1946, called the Progressive Citizens of America. This latter group was formed by the merger of the now defunct Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions and the National Citizens Political Action Committee.

Progressive Citizens of America

The new organization, the Progressive Citizens of America, was formed in Hollywood on February 11, 1947, according to Informant [redacted] At this meeting which was held in the Embassy Auditorium in Los Angeles, Jo Davidson, National Co-chairman of the Progressive Citizens of America, was present. Jo Davidson has been identified by [redacted] as a Communist. A slate of 130 individuals was nominated by a committee to be elected as the Executive Board for this organization. Of the 130 persons on this list 26 were said to be known Communists.

The program of the Progressive Citizens of America both in Hollywood and nationally has closely paralleled that of the Communist Party. This was one of the first organizations to most vigorously attack the President's proposal for aid to Greece and Turkey, as did the Communist Party. Also this organization joined with the Civil Rights Congress, a national front organization, in protesting against the city authorities of Peoria, Illinois, and Albany, New York, who failed to permit Paul Robeson to speak in the public schools. The national organization is now publishing a monthly paper called the "Progressive Citizens". This paper is being circulated by the Hollywood Chapter. The Hollywood group is represented on this staff by the following individuals: Herman Shumlin; Norman Corwin, radio commentator; John Cromwell, writer; Lillian Hellman, writer, Gene Kelly, actor; Frederic March, actor; Robert W. Kenny, ex-California State Attorney General; and Paul Robeson, singer and actor.

SECRET/22

With regard to Herman Shumlin, Informant [redacted] has reported that he was one of the endorsers of the American Peace Mobilization, a Communist front organization, a member of the League of American Writers, and a teacher at the Hollywood Writers School.

Norman Corwin, according to [redacted] was a lecturer at the Hollywood School for Writers and a member of the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions.

The writer, John Cromwell, has been referred to by Informant [redacted] as having been a member of the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions and also having participated in a radio forum sponsored by the Hollywood Democratic Committee in Hollywood on January 5, 1945.

The writer, Lillian Hellman, according to [redacted] has been a member of the League of American Writers, the American Peace Mobilization, the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, and connected with the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee.

Actor Gene Kelly has been identified by [redacted] as having been a member of the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, and a member of the Progressive Citizens of America.

Actor Frederic March has been referred to by Informant [redacted] as a former member of the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions. [redacted] has reported that March is a member of the Communist Party.

Former California State Attorney General Robert W. Kenny has been identified as a co-Chairman of the Progressive Citizens of America. He also, according to [redacted], was affiliated with the National Win the Peace Conference and a member of the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions.

Singer Paul Robeson has been identified as having been active in the American Peace Mobilization, the National Win the Peace Conference, and the Council on African Affairs by Informant [redacted]

The above referred to organizations are discussed in this section of the memorandum, with the exception of the Council on African Affairs, a Communist influenced group.

The Hollywood Progressive Citizens of America on May 9, 1947, issued an ultimatum printed in the "Daily Variety", Hollywood trade publication, protesting the investigations being conducted by the House Committee on Un-American Activities and defending the rights of the Communist Party in the United States.

Hollywood Anti-Nazi League

The Hollywood Anti-Nazi League was set up in the motion picture industry for the purpose of defending America's democratic rights against Nazi influence. The organization had among its original officers such well-known Communists as Herbert Biberman, director, and Gail Sondergaard, actress. The Communist Party affiliations of these individuals are set out in Section I. Following the Hitler-Stalin Pact and the consequent change in the Communist Party line from opposition to Fascism to a program of general isolation, the organization was liquidated.

Hollywood League for Democratic Action

According to Informant [redacted] the Hollywood League for Democratic Action was made up of the same people who were active in the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League although its activities were just the reverse of the Anti-Nazi League because of the change in the Communist Party program. Many of the leading people in this organization were also identified with the Communist Party, such as Dalton Trumbo, Frank Tuttle and John Wexley. The Communist Party affiliations of these individuals are set out in Section I of this memorandum. This organization dropped out of the picture with the coming of the American Peace Mobilization.

The American Peace Mobilization

This organization was a national Communist front movement which, in Hollywood, was under the leadership of Herbert Biberman. Other known Communists active in this movement were John Howard Lawson, Dalton Trumbo, Frank Tuttle and Guy Endore. The Communist Party affiliations of these individuals are set out in Section I. Many of the so-called "intellectuals" who had been active in Communist front movements in Hollywood were also active in supporting the American Peace Mobilization. Probably one of the most prominent of these so-called "intellectuals" was Donald Ogden Stewart, a member of the League of American Writers, International Labor Defense, Screen Writers Guild, and the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, according to Confidential Informant [redacted]

The Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee

Informant [redacted] related that from 1937 on, during the period of the Spanish Revolution, numerous Communist front groups were formed in the United States to assist the Communist cause in Spain. Prominent among these groups were the Spanish Refugee Ship Mission, the Medical Bureau to Aid Spanish Democracy, Spanish Refugee Relief Campaign, Friends of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade, Hollywood Committee for Writers in Exile, and the United American Spanish Aid Committee. These groups had found membership and support among the intellectual group in the Hollywood area. The remnants of these groups were consolidated together with the formation of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee. This organization, a Communist influenced group, was said to be interested only in those refugees whose political opinions coincided with those who were in control of the Committee. Many prominent individuals in Hollywood who had previously associated with the Communist movement were active in this organization, including Robert Rossen and Hy Kraft, Communists whose Party affiliations are set out in Section I.

SEC RE

The Actors Laboratory

The Actors Laboratory, according to Confidential Informant [redacted] is a Communist controlled institution where screen and stage acting is purportedly taught by directors, actors, and writers affiliated with the motion picture industry. He stated that this school was formerly located in New York City under the name of the Group Theatre. The Group Theatre was said to be affiliated with the New Theatre League, an alleged Communist venture. He related that the New Theatre League, from about 1932 until 1938, was a propaganda agency making use of the stage as a medium which was successful in turning out actors who later served the Communist movement in the United States. He reported that the Actors Laboratory cooperates with such organizations as the Hollywood Writers Mobilization and formerly the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions.

Informant [redacted] has related that this group, during the war, provided entertainment for Army personnel. Many of its past and present instructors or teachers and others affiliated with the Laboratory are known Communists. Others have been associated with the Communist movement through front organizations in the Hollywood motion picture industry. Such well-known Communists as J. Edgar Bromberg, Edward Dmytrik, and Frank Tuttle have been affiliated with the Laboratory as members of its faculty. The Communist Party affiliations of the aforementioned Communists are set out in Section I.

The American Youth for Democracy

The American Youth for Democracy, a nationally known Communist youth movement, has received the support of many Communists and Communist sympathizers in the Hollywood area. The American Youth for Democracy is a successor to the Young Communist League. Among those individuals in the motion picture industry who have been active in the support of this group are Edward Dmytrik, director; Ring Lardner, Jr., writer; Dalton Trumbo, writer; Albert Maltz, writer; Sam Ornitz, writer; and John Howard Lawson, writer, all of whom are known to be Communists. The Communist Party affiliations of these individuals are set out in Section I.

Citizens Committee for the Motion Picture Strikers

This organization, according to Confidential Informant [redacted] was set up for the purpose of aiding the strike in the motion picture industry which occurred in March of 1945. This strike developed as a result of a jurisdictional dispute between the Conference of Studio Unions and the IATSE and was discussed under the section headed "Conference of Studio Unions". He stated that this Committee was under Communist control and that it was made up of individuals who were active in such Communist front groups in Hollywood as the Hollywood Writers Mobilization and the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee, as well as the Screen Writers' Guild. Known Communist Party members, according to [redacted] were active in leading this Committee. They included Frank Tuttle, Edward Dmytrik, and Mrs. Sadie Ornitz, wife of Sam Ornitz, formerly a Communist Party functionary in Los Angeles. The Communist Party affiliations of Tuttle, Dmytrik and Sam Ornitz are set out in Section I of this memorandum. Wolf related that the entire strength of the Communist Party was concentrated on the strike through this committee. He stated that leaflets and bulletins signed by the Los Angeles County Communist Party and other Communist Party branches were distributed freely by members of this group who engaged in picket duty.

The National Committee to Win the Peace

Confidential Informant [redacted] related that this organization came into existence in Hollywood on May 12, 1946, and was sponsored by many individuals who have previously been affiliated with the Communist movement through various front organizations. In this connection, it should be pointed out that the National Committee to Win the Peace is known to have been promulgated and supported by the Communist Party, its press and supporters. The Los Angeles meeting held on May 12, 1946, referred to above, was under the guidance of such well-known sympathizers as William Pomerance, Executive Secretary of the Screen Writers Guild, and Willis J. Hill, President of the Peoples Educational Center. The Communist infiltration and influence in these two groups have been discussed in this section of the memorandum.

The Hollywood Forum

The Hollywood Forum, according to Informant [redacted] was held under the auspices of the "Daily People's World", West Coast Communist newspaper. This group, devoted to the discussion of Communism or Communist propaganda, was under the control of many Communists and Communist sympathizers affiliated with the motion picture industry. Individuals who have been active in this group include Waldo Salt, Sam Ornitz, John Howard Lawson, and Alvah Bessie, all of whom have been identified as Communists. Their Communist Party affiliations are set out in Section I of this memorandum.

John Barnes and Associates

In August of 1946 Confidential Informant [redacted] related that this organization was a recently formed "public relations"-type group which had announced that its functions were to "see that liberal, progressive commentators such as are listed as supporting the organization, are kept on the air as an antidote to the radio prostitutes who put their personal well-being above that of their fellow Americans....." Among the persons listed as supporting this group who are directly or indirectly connected with the Hollywood Film Industry are: Averill Berman, radio commentator who was a member of the Executive Council of the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee for the Arts, Sciences, and Professions, and Peter DeLima, radio commentator who has been connected with the Progressive Citizens of America as well as the Hollywood Writers Mobilization. All of these organizations mentioned above have been subjected to Communist infiltration or influence. Confidential Informant [redacted] reported that also listed as supporting this venture were businessmen in Los Angeles, all of whom lean toward the Communist position.

Western Council for Progressive Business, Labor and Agriculture

Confidential Informant [redacted] has related that this is also a pressure-type organization in the Hollywood Section which cooperates with John Barnes and Associates. This group, according to [redacted] is obviously a Communist pressure group because of the names given as supporting it. Some of them are: Paul Robeson, Bartley C. Crum, and Robert W. Kenny. The Communist affiliations of Kenny and Robeson are previously set out in this section of this memorandum. Concerning Bartley C. Crum, the Washington Daily News for September 4, 1946, reflected that Crum was Vice-President of the American Committee for Spanish Freedom, a sponsor of the American Youth for Democracy, an initiating sponsor of the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences, and Professions, and a Vice-President of the National Lawyers Guild. All of the above groups have been infiltrated or were under the influence of Communists or Communist sympathizers.

The American-Russian Institute

Confidential Informant [redacted] stated in March of this year that the American-Russian Institute opened an office at 6607 Hollywood Boulevard. It should be pointed out that the American-Russian Institute is a Soviet propaganda-type organization which acts as a dissemination center for Russian propaganda in Hollywood. Alvah Bessie, writer, identified in Section I as a Communist, and Lewis Milestone, who has been reported by Informant [redacted] as having been a member of the Hollywood Democratic Committee, the League of American Writers and the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, have been affiliated with this organization. Additional information concerning the American-Russian Institute is also set out in this summary under the section captioned, "Soviet Activities in Hollywood."

The Civil Rights Congress

The Civil Rights Congress is a national Communist front organization formed as the result of the merger of the National Federation for Constitutional

127

Included among the Communists who have supported this organization is Frank Tuttle who has been identified in Section I as a Communist. In addition, Lewis Milestone, previously identified in this section of the memorandum, together with others who have supported the Communist front movement, supported this organization.

Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions

According to Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office, this organization was originally formed to combat the anti-Communist activities of the Motion Picture Alliance for the Preservation of American Ideals. At the very beginning it was a loosely formed group composed of some 21 guilds and unions in the motion picture industry. However, the Communists seized control of the organization and have taken advantage of its position in an effort to obtain further influence among the intellectuals as well as the trade union field in the motion picture industry.

[redacted] This report reflected that the Council was seeking closer affiliation with the Conference of Studio Unions, a group reported by [redacted] to be under Communist control, and pointed out that the "progressives" (probably referring to the pro-Communist element within the Council) saw the current motion picture film strike as a serious threat to the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions.

The report reflected that the Council had supported measures advocated by the Communist Party in Los Angeles, including the following:

1. Participation in the fight for radio freedom.
2. Conferences with Robert Riskin of OWI on educational films for Europe.
3. Protest against the State Un-American Activities Committee.
4. Support of the proposed State FEPC legislation.
5. Sending a delegate to the [illegible]in the Peace Conference.
6. A protest against the banning of the Lena Horne film in Tennessee.

The document also reflected that the Council in the last few months has not forgotten the Yugoslavs and the Russians, as well as the drive toward World War III.

IV. COMMUNIST INFLUENCE IN MOTION PICTURES

According to Confidential Informant [redacted] the Communist Party for many years has been concentrating on the writers and directors in the motion picture industry for the purpose of injecting propaganda into motion pictures, these writers and directors being in a position in the creative field to determine the content of the picture. The writer who creates the dialogue and action and the director who interprets the same are in a position to influence the political philosophy contained in any given picture. For this reason, [redacted] has related, the political views and background of the writer and director are utilized to the fullest extent by the Communist Party, which has resulted in the infiltration of known Communists and Communist Party line fellow travelers into the writers and directors groups.

[redacted] has related that World War II permitted those writers and directors who acted under Communist guidance to insert sequences and episodes into a picture in a most clever manner. For this reason, he related, the Communist apparatus in the motion picture industry has been most successful, having placed in the majority of war pictures those writers and directors who were in sympathy with the cause of Communism. [redacted] stated that the crowning achievement in this respect was the picture "Mission to Moscow".

"Mission to Moscow", a Warner Bros. release in May of 1943, was produced by Robert H. Buckner. Buckner was a former correspondent in Moscow of the "London Daily Mail". According to [redacted], he selected J. Leyda to act as technical director for the picture. Leyda had been in Moscow at the same time as Buckner where he had been connected with the Bureau of Revolutionary Writers of the Soviet Motion Picture Industry. Leyda is identified in Section I of this memorandum as a Communist. He was also active in the League of American Writers, a Communist front group.

[redacted] has related that the actual writer of the screen play "Mission to Moscow" was Erskine Caldwell. Caldwell has been a member of the League of American Writers for many years. He also made several trips to the Soviet Union. At one time, he was associate editor of "Soviet Russia Today", a Soviet propaganda publication. Prior to August of 1939, he was in favor of a collective security. During the life of the Hitler-Stalin Non-Aggression Pact, he supported the program of the American Peace Mobilization and openly opposed Lend-Lease and Selective Service. After June 22, 1941, which was the date that the Soviet Union was invaded by the Nazis, he called for all-out aid to Britain, Soviet Russia and China.

The picture "Mission to Moscow" is based upon the book "Mission to Moscow" written by former U. S. Ambassador to Russia, Joseph E. Davies. Due to the fact that the picture contained pro-Soviet propaganda it was criticized by several newspapers on these grounds.

[redacted] has related that this picture raised such a controversy throughout the United States it was necessary that the Communist technique be changed. He related that the Communists then decided that the Communist writers and directors must become more subtle. He stated they are now content to insert a line, a sentence or a situation carrying the Communist Party line into an otherwise non-political picture, having found that this method is more effective by reason of the fact that it does not appear to be purposeful but just incidental. He related that this subtle method of getting propaganda into the pictures was not restricted to war-type pictures or serious drama. He stated that the Communist message was also conveyed in the so-called "musicals". As an example, he cited the picture "Meet the People". He related that "Meet the People", a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, was a straight musical comedy and would not ordinarily be expected to carry a serious political message. However, a close examination of the origin of the picture, the background and activities of those who made the picture, and the obvious Communist inspiration behind the scenes, will reveal the method and tactics used by the Hollywood Communist elements to utilize the motion picture industry for propaganda purposes. The play itself was written by Henry Myers, Jay Gorney and Edward Eliscu, all Communists who have been previously identified in Section I of this memorandum.

[redacted] related that these are but few examples of the Communist influence in motion pictures. The Communists in influencing the production of these pictures do not only direct their efforts at injecting propaganda into the pictures, but also prevent all material that the Party might consider objectionable to its current program from appearing in pictures. It has been reported that on several instances the Communist element has actually prevented the making of certain pictures.

Among the pictures of this type, according to [redacted], was "Uncle Tom's Cabin", written from the book by Harriet Beecher Stowe. Production of this picture was particularly attacked by elements of the Communist Party due to the fact that it was felt that the picture did not reflect a proper attitude on the part of the negroes. As a result of this pressure, this picture was withdrawn. Another picture, "The Life of Eddie Rickenbacker" met similar pressure. The Communist Party objected to him because of his expressed political opinions regarding labor. He was labeled as a Fascist, a Nazi sympathizer, a reactionary and an isolationist. Pressure was said to have been put on a number of film stars to refuse leading roles in the picture. It was also said, that a number of writers were threatened causing some of them to refuse to do the script. This again resulted in the picture being withdrawn from production.

In summarizing the above information, Confidential Informant [redacted] has stated that this influence of the Communist Party and its subservient apparatus in the motion picture industry was exceedingly strong. He stated that this influence was facilitated because of World War II and the trend toward internationalism, which made it possible for the exponents of certain foreign ideologies by contrast to overshadow the genuine effects of our American democracy.

An examination of the list of persons taking part in the production of a great many of the motion pictures on our screen today will reflect that a number of individuals who are known Communists or Communist sympathizers take an active part in the production of these pictures. For instance, the picture "The Strange Love of Martha Ivers", a Paramount release, was directed by Lewis Milestone whose Communist front affiliations have been previously set out; the screen play was written by Robert Rossen, identified in Section I as a Communist; and as a member of the cast was Roman Bohnen, also identified in Section I as a Communist. These individuals have been referred to by Informant [redacted] as the type who would not hesitate to inject propaganda sequences and suggestions into the picture.

V. SOVIET ACTIVITIES IN HOLLYWOOD

[redacted]

Lawson, Maltz, Trumbo, Bessie, Dmytrik, Wexley, Rosson and Cole are Communists and their Communist affiliations are set out in Section I of this memorandum. Edward G. Robinson has been identified as a Communist by Informant [redacted] Charles Chaplin, according to [redacted] may or may not be a member of the Communist Party. However, [redacted] has stated that Chaplin has always gone along with the Communist Party and has helped them financially. He stated that Chaplin has financed the West Coast Communist newspaper "Peoples World." John Garfield, according to Informant [redacted] has been affiliated with the Actors Laboratory, the Young Communist League, Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, Hollywood Democratic Committee and the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee for the Arts, Sciences and Professions. All of the above organizations, with the exception of the Young Communist League, the former youth group of the Communist Party, USA, are discussed in Section III of this memorandum.

Mikhail Kalatozov, Soviet motion picture representative, came to Hollywood in August of 1943, where he endeavored to purchase American films. Among the films he sought to purchase were "Little Foxes" and the "Earl of Chicago." The first of these films depicts a degenerate Southern family, the latter is a story of a Chicago gangster in England. It may well be a part of Kalatozov's plan or propaganda technique to obtain such pictures in order to exhibit American life at its worst to the Soviet people, much in the manner that Adolf Hitler, through his propaganda ministry, tried to convince the German people for several years before the war that the United States was nothing more than a nation of Chicago gangsters.

[redacted]

In May of 1944, Gregory L. Irsky, formerly of the Amtorg Trading Corporation; Leonid Kozmatov, film camera man; and Boris Tolstogowzov, a film technician, came to the United States from the Soviet Union as a commission to study scientific technique on behalf of the Soviet Union, to arrange for cinematographic equipment and to negotiate for technical assistance in the motion picture field. Informant [redacted] of the Production Division for Bell and Howell, motion picture manufacturing company, related that Irsky in his contacts with him indicated that he was endeavoring to disseminate Russian propaganda type films on various phases of Soviet life, such as the Soviet military strength, under the guise of educational features, to American schools and colleges. This project, of course, did not materialize.

[redacted]

The Los Angeles papers carried numerous stories reflecting that Konstantin Simonov held a party aboard a Russian ship anchored in the harbor at Los Angeles. Among those who attended this party were Mr. and Mrs. John Garfield, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Chaplin and Lewis Milestone. The Los Angeles

134

Herald for May 28, 1946, reflected that the Jack Tenney (California State Legislature Un-American Activities Committee) group was going to conduct an investigation of this party. It was reflected that the committee was interested in the elaborate banquet which was provided for the guests---- "While millions are starving in Europe----providing an ironic touch to the celebration honoring the proletariat."

With regard to Simonov's visit to this country, the June, 1946 issue of the "Screen Writer," which is the official publication of the Screen Writers Guild, carried a transcript of an informal discussion held under the auspices of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization between Simonov and members of the Screen Writers Guild. The informal discussion was presided over by Dalton Trumbo, a Communist, whose Communist affiliations are set out in Section I and who is employed as a screen writer in the motion picture industry.

This article contained a question propounded to Simonov concerning the rights of a writer to his material. Simonov replied that Soviet writers do not sell their work outright to the film industry but rather only sell the right for screening, indicating that the right for publishing the material remains in the hands of the author. It should be pointed out that the Screen Writers Guild is the organization supporting the American Authors Authority, which program, conceived under Communist guidance, calls for the copyrighting and subsequent leasing of screen plays rather than the selling of screen plays to producers.

Since Shirley Kopley is employed in the Office of the American-Russian Institute in Los Angeles, [redacted] Two documents [redacted] relating to the motion picture industry. One of these dealt with various departments in the United States Motion Picture Studios and their functions and was apparently drawn up for the purpose of comparing the efficiency of the United States Motion Picture Studios with those of the Soviets. The other was a treatise proposing the formation of a Motion Picture Research Foundation which would function under the direct jurisdiction of the Motion Picture Producers Association and would be financed by the member companies on an assessment basis in the same ratio as such companies are now assessed for other Association activities. The Foundation would have as a purpose the offsetting of rising costs in the industry and the enhancing of entertainment values. [redacted]

Artkino Pictures, Incorporated

Artkino Pictures, Incorporated, was chartered in New York on July 22, 1940. It has registered, listing as its foreign principal, Soyuzintorgkin Moscow, USSR.

The organization claims that it is engaged in the importation of motion picture films from Soviet Russia and the distribution of these films in the Western Hemisphere. Although there is no apparent direct connection between Artkino Pictures, Incorporated, and the Communist Party, USA, several of the people associated with the organization have been identified either as members of the Communist Party, Communist Political Association or closely associated with the Communist movement through front organizations.

Rose Madell, who was listed as Vice President in January of 1947 of Artkino Pictures, Incorporated, is married to Sam Madell, alias Sam Muldofsky. Sam Madell has been reported by several reliable sources, including [redacted] and reliable informant [redacted] as being actively affiliated with the Waterfront Section of the Communist Party in New York.

Ginger Canor, switchboard operator at Artkino, is believed to be identical with Gertrude Canor, who was born in New York City on February 2, 1925. Reliable informant [redacted] a former member of the Communist Party and former confidential informant of the New York Office, reported that Ginger Robesen, believed to be identical with Ginger Canor, was among those present at the Inmwood Victory Club of the Communist Political Association on February 6, 1945, at New York City. He also reported that she was among those present at two other meetings of this same Club, one held on December 26, 1944, and the other on January 23, 1945. Nancy Markoff, listed as a telephone operator at Artkino, has been referred to by informant Abraham Naidich as a member of the OGPU, presently known as the MGB. At the present time this allegation has not been proven or disproven. However, investigation is being made to determine the exact status of this individual.

VI. INVESTIGATION OF COMMUNIST ACTIVITIES IN THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY BY THE COMMITTEE ON UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

The House Committee on Un-American Activities publicly announced on June 20, 1945, that it had voted to investigate subversive activities in Hollywood to determine whether film stars and producers were involved in a plot to overthrow the Government.

It would appear that this decision on the part of the Committee was reached as a result of articles appearing in Los Angeles newspapers following a meeting in the City of Los Angeles on June 8, 1945, sponsored by the "New Masses," a Communist publication, and held in honor of William Gropper, cartoonist for the publication. Principal speakers included Richard Bransten, also known as Bruce Minton, former contributing editor of the "New Masses," and his wife, Ruth McKenney, also a former contributing editor of the "New Masses," as well as Joseph Foster, film editor of "New Masses." With regard to Richard Bransten and Ruth McKenney, it will be recalled that on September 19, 1946, these individuals were expelled from the Communist Party for an unauthorized release of a report on the National Plenum of the Communist Party held in July of 1946.

The Los Angeles papers reflected that the speakers indicated that Communist propaganda and activities in the future would be centered around Hollywood, that Communists were seeking to strengthen their ties with the White House, that pressure must be exerted to continue lend-lease to Russia and that "the thousands of pretty young girls in our Communist Youth Movement must volunteer as hostesses in USO's, canteens, churches, social groups-wherever the soldiers, sailors, and marines seek recreation and are prone to listen to persuasive voices." The latter quoted statement concerning young girls in the Communist movement appeared in the Los Angeles Examiner. However, the Agents of the Los Angeles Office who were in attendance at this meeting stated that this quotation was an inaccuracy on the part of the paper. The Agents attending the meeting also pointed out that the Examiner made the statement that the program presented had been "carefully blueprinted in New York City by Earl Browder and other American Soviets." No such statement in fact had been made at the meeting.

The Congressional investigation was held as a result, and following the investigation the Committee prepared three confidential reports. The first report contained many blanket statements and conclusions which did not appear to be supported by evidence.

The first section of this report was devoted to the naming of some of the prominent Communists in Hollywood. The second section dealt with the Actors Laboratory, a Communist-influenced group, the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions (formerly known as the Hollywood Democratic Committee), the Emergency Committee on KFI, the Anti-Defamation League, the Peoples Educational Center and the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, all of which were referred to as Communist-inspired groups, with brief statements concerning the activities of known Communists connected with these groups.

The next section set forth a list of names of individuals "believed to be" members of the Party in the Hollywood area. Section Four dealt with Communist activities in the various guilds in Hollywood and contained for the most part general statements concerning these guilds.

Part Five entitled "Communists in Labor Unions," was devoted in the main to Herbert K. Sorrell, one of the principal figures in the motion picture industry strikes. Part Six entitled "Russian Government's Interest in Motion Pictures," discussed primarily the visit of Mikhail Kalotozov to Hollywood. Kalotozov, who was in Hollywood during 1943 was a representative of the Soviet Film Industry, Soyuzintorgkino. The motion picture, "Mission to Moscow" was also discussed in this section, particularly with regard to the newspaper comments made concerning it, indicating that the picture was nonfactual and untruthful. The conclusion of the report discussed the aforementioned Communist meeting held in honor of the "New Masses." A considerable portion was also devoted to the alleged trouble that Ivan Levedoff, actor and writer, had in obtaining employment because he was opposed to Communists and Communism.

The second report, which was called a supplemental report, was dated September 28, 1945, and reviewed the publications: "International Theater," said to be an official publication of the International Union of the Revolutionary Committee, published in Moscow, Russia; "The New Theater," an American publication, the organ of the Workers Committee, which was a section of the International Union of the Revolutionary Theater; "International Literature," said to be an organ of the International Union of Revolutionary Writers published in Moscow; and the "T.A.C. Magazine," an American publication sponsored by the Theater Arts Committee. The international and Communist connections of these publications from available copies were reviewed and set out in this report.

The third report, another supplemental report, issued early in 1946, limited its scope to the activities and affiliations of the Communist activities engaged in by the writers employed by Metro-Goldwyn Mayer Studios.

This same Congressional Committee on December 3, 1946, held a preliminary hearing in Los Angeles concerning the Communist activity in the film industry and, according to reports received, only three witnesses were called and the hearings were superficial. The Committee announced, however, that it would return in January of 1947 to conduct extensive hearings on all phases of this type of activity in Hollywood.

The next statement concerning Communist activity in the motion picture industry was made by you in your testimony before this group on March 26, 1947. On this occasion you pointed out that the Communists launched their attack in Hollywood during 1935, directing their activities at the infiltration of labor unions and so-called intellectual and creative fields. You stated that the Communist activity in Hollywood was effective and was furthered by Communists and Communist sympathizers who used the prestige of prominent individuals in the film colony to further their cause. You also stated that the Communists endeavored to insert into motion pictures Communist propaganda and to eliminate anti-Communist statements.

Following your testimony you will recall that Eric Johnston, of the motion picture industry, testified before this Committee. The Washington Post in reference to Johnston's appearance quoted him as stating, "As for there being Communist influence in the movies, such an accusation is absurd. If Hollywood were a Communist network, I should not be attacked every morning in the 'Daily Worker'! —— as I can assure you I am ——."

SECRET

As you will further recall, Father Cronin telephonically advised Mr. Tamm that Johnston had requested him to draw up a program for the elimination of Communists in the motion picture industry. You will also undoubtedly have noted that Mr. Johnston and his associates have hired former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes as their attorney and his first assignment will be to represent Johnston's organization when the Un-American Activities Committee holds its hearings on Communist activity in the motion picture industry in Washington, D. C. during September of 1947. These actions on the part of Johnston do not show a consistency with his statements as quoted in the Washington Post and referred to above.

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office, advised that members of the Un-American Activities Committee arrived in Hollywood on May 8, 1947, amid a great fanfare of press releases and headlines, to conduct an inquiry concerning Communism in the motion picture industry and to ascertain specifically the activities of Hanns Eisler, the brother of Gerhardt Eisler, who is employed in the motion picture industry as a writer.

Novelist Rupert Hughes testified before the Committee on May 15, 1947, at which time he stated that Communists dominated Hollywood to a large degree and specifically mentioned Charles Chaplin and John Howard Lawson. Jack Warner, Vice President of Warner Brothers Studio, also is said to have testified and complimented the Committee on the work it was doing.

Chairman Thomas of the Committee complimented Adolf Menjou for his enlightening presentation before the Committee, stating that Menjou testified that Communists in the film industry were so powerful that many of the "little people" were afraid to move against them.

Mrs. Lela Rogers, mother of Ginger Rogers, who appeared before the Committee, referred to "The Little Red School House" as being the People's Educational Center in Hollywood and also testified concerning an alleged Communist statement that her daughter refused to say in the motion picture "Tender Comrade."

Robert Taylor also testified, relating that he was forced by Lowell Mellett, former Administrative Assistant to the late President Roosevelt, into playing in a motion picture which favored Russian ideologies over American. The Los Angeles Examiner of May 15, 1947, from which this information was obtained, reflected that Mellett was also affiliated with the Office of War Information as the Director of the Motion Picture Division. The article further reflected that Mellett specifically came to Hollywood for the express purpose of overruling Taylor's objection to appearing in the 1943 release "Song of Russia."

Other individuals prominent in the film world who appeared before the Committee included Screen Actor Richard Arlen and Henry Ginsberg, Vice President in Charge of Production at Paramount Studios. Viktor Kravchenko, estranged Soviet official, appeared before the Committee and was quoted by the Los Angeles Examiner for May 17, 1947, as having stated that Hollywood was a serious intellectual front in the United States and it was necessary to clear Hollywood of the Communists and Communist sympathizers.

The New York Times of May 17, 1947 quoted Chairman J. Parnell Thomas of the Un-American Activities Committee as asserting after a week of hearings on subversive activities in Hollywood that "90% of the Communist infiltration" was in the Screen Writing field, but that the Federal Government had also abetted the work. He related that in the testimony of 14 actors, writers, and producers, a very outstanding point that appeared many times was the influence of the "Government in aiding the Communist conspiracy."

The article also reflected that Mr. Thomas stated he reported testimony reflecting that even the White House exerted its influence on certain people in Hollywood to have certain pro-Russian motion pictures filmed during the regime of the late President Roosevelt.

He also indicated that he was not only referring to the incident which came out as a result of the testimony of Robert Taylor, but to other statements made by actors and producers who indicated how the Government persuaded them to put out Communist propaganda in their productions.

Reference is made to my memorandum to you of July 8, 1947. Attached to the referenced memorandum was a summary based upon available information on Communist infiltration into the motion picture industry. You were advised in referenced memorandum that additional inquiry was being made by the Los Angeles and New York Offices in order to obtain a more complete and rounded picture of the subject matter. The information which has been obtained from these Offices has now been incorporated into a new summary on the captioned subject matter. This summary is attached hereto.

A digest of the Communist activities set out in the summary will preface the summary for your convenience. The summary is broken down under the following headings:

I. History and Development of a Communist Party in Hollywood
II. Communist Infiltration of Labor Groups
III. Communist Infiltration of Intellectual Groups
IV. Communist Infiltration in Motion Pictures
V. Soviet Activities in Hollywood
VI. Investigation of Communist Actigities in the Motion Picture Industry by the Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives

COMMUNISM IN THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

The Executive Committee of the Communist International in March of 1925 instructed the Communist Parties of the world to turn the motion picture into an arsenal of agitation and propaganda weapons of the Communist Party.

Willi Muenzenberg, a former member of the Executive Committee of the Communist International, authored two articles printed in the American Communist newspaper, The Daily Worker, in 1925, which pointed to the significance of the motion picture as a propaganda medium of the Communist Party. Muenzenberg quoted one of the fathers of Communist teachings, V. I. Lenin, as follows:

> "You must powerfully develope film production, taking especially the proletarian kino (motion picture theaters) to the city masses and still a much greater extent to the village. You must always consider that of all the arts, the motion picture is for us the most important."

Muenzenberg, in his articles, also made the following statements:

> "We must develope the tremendous cultural possibilities of the motion picture in the revolutionary sense....One of the most pressing tasks confronting Communist Parties on the field of agitation and propaganda is the conquest of this supremely important propaganda weapon, until now the monopoly of the ruling class. We must wrest it from them and turn it against them."

> "There must no longer be any country in which the Communist Party and its group do not make extensive use of the motion picture film."

The printing of these articles by the Daily Worker can be considered as a directive to the American Communists in that it was authored by an internationally famous Communist propagandist.

Communists in the United States following these instructions have employed the strategy and techniques outlined by the great Communist fathers, Marx and Lenin.

25-1X

In order to understand the operational procedures of the Communists it is well to consider the aim of the Communist Party in the United States. According to a "Manual on Organization of the Communist Party," by J. Peters, which was published in 1935, this aim is to overthrow capitalism and establish a dictatorship of the proletariat..

William Z. Foster, present National Leader of the Communist Party in the United States in his book, "Toward Soviet America," stated:

> "The leader of the revolution in all its stages is the Communist party....The establishment of an American Soviet Government will mark the birth of real democracy in the United States."

As an additional indication of the allegiance of the American Communists it should be noted that William Z. Foster, when testifying before the Fish Committee of the 71st Congress in 1930, stated:

> "The workers of this country (United States) and the workers of every country have only one flag. That is the Red flag. That is the flag of the proletarian democracy."

Indicative of the revolutionary character of the Communist Party is the following quotation taken from the "Manual on Organization of the Communist Party," by J. Peters, in which the author quotes from a pledge given by Earl Browder to two thousand individuals that were being initiated into the Communist Party in New York City in 1935:

> "I pledge myself to rally the masses to defend the Soviet Union, the land of victorious Socialism. I pledge myself to remain at all times a vigilant and firm defender of the Leninist line of the Party, the only line that insures the triumph of Soviet power in the United States."

The deceptive tactics, including the use of trickery and subterfuge, by Communists, are also indicated in the teachings of Lenin. Lenin stated:

> "It is necessary to be able to withstand all this, to agree to any and every sacrifice, and even--if need be--to resort to all sorts of devices, maneuvers, and illegal methods, to evasion and subterfuge, in order to penetrate into trade unions, to remain in them, and to carry on Communist work in them at all costs."

In order to fully understand the full import of the Communist propaganda which is disseminated by the Party and its sympathizers in written or spoken words, the deceptiveness of Aesopian language utilized by the Communists must be considered

Lenin, in referring to this brand of Communist doubletalk, stated:

> "....that cursed Aesopian language...which...compelled all revolutionaries to have recourse, whenever they took up their pens to write a 'legal' work."

Lenin used Aesopian language for the purpose of avoiding censorship. Communists today are using it to mislead the public.

Information has been received that in 1935, the Communist Party, USA, issued instructions to the Hollywood Section of the Communist Party to intensify and concentrate their activities in Hollywood and the motion picture industry. This directive emphasized the fact that the Communists must try to capture the labor unions and pointed out that if this were done the unions could be of tremendous service in influencing the type of picture produced. The directive also contained a specific call to the Communists requesting them to concentrate on the so-called intellectual groups in Hollywood which are composed of directors, writers, artists, actors, actresses, and highly paid technicians.

The infiltration of the motion picture industry, commencing in 1935, was one of the important objectives of the Communist Party in the United States. The Communists recognized the motion picture as an excellent means of molding and influencing public opinion. The noted Communist theoretician, V. J. Jerome, was sent by the Communist Party, USA, to Hollywood on several occasions to carry out the orders of the Communist Party with regard to the motion picture industry. The general plans of the Communist Party included schemes to capture the labor unions, influence management, make friends among the company executives and to penetrate the so-called intellectual groups.

V. J. Jerome, in the late 1930's, was assisted in the labor field in Hollywood by Jeff Kibre, a Communist labor leader, who was active in the Communist crafts and unions in Hollywood.

John Howard Lawson, the Communist screen writer, and Edward Biberman, Communist Director, who in 1941 were reported as functionaries of the Communist Party in Hollywood, played an important role in the Communist plan of attack. Lawson, as a leader of the Screen Writers' Guild, was instrumental in getting many Communist writers such as Albert Maltz, Alvah Bessie, Dalton Trumbo, and Henry Blankfort, who were sent to him by the National Headquarters of the Party, into the motion picture industry. Hanns Eisler, brother of Gerhardt Eisler, indicated on one occasion that he intended to go to Hollywood through the efforts of John Howard Lawson.

The Communist Party in Hollywood, has undergone many structural changes since it was first organized. The last major change occurred in December, 1945, under the leadership of John Stapp, Hollywood Section Organizer for the Communist Party. Stapp caused the formation of three sub-sections, namely the cultural, the industrial, and the community. The latter two have just recently merged into one group. In addition, there are five studio shop units or branches located at Universal International, RKO, MGM, Paramount, and Columbia Studios. Waldo Salt, the Communist screen writer, is the organizer of the cultural sub-section in Hollywood. A studio grip, Paul Perlin, is the organizer of the consolidated community and industrial sub-sections.

A very reliable source has indicated that there are six hundred Communists employed in the motion picture and radio industries, in Hollywood, California. Five hundred and twenty of these individuals have been identified as Communists in that they are now or were members of the Communist Party, USA, or were members of the Communist Political Association, USA. The occupational breakdown of these Communists whose occupation has been ascertained is as follows:

Actresses	45
Actors	47
Directors	15
Producers	8
Writers	127
Publicists	5
Musicians	42
Analysts	9
Technicians	12
Cameramen	3
Film Editors	1
Miscellaneous (cartoonists, laborers, office employees, artists, and so forth)	62

A noticeable change has been reported to be taking place in the tactical operations of the Communists in Hollywood. This change appears to be the result of the attitude now taken by the Government and the country as a whole, toward the Communist movement in the United States.

Former outspoken leaders of the Communist Party, as well as other Communist sympathizers, have drawn back into less important positions and have less to say openly in Communist affairs, while those who have not been so active or so well known have been forced to the front to carry on the program, not as Communists, but camouflaged as "liberals" and "progressives."

Following the Leninist teachings on tactics and strategy, the Communists in the motion picture industry are reported to be boring within the anti-Communist movement, their objective being to direct these anti-Communist movements to less harmful channels. The result is that Communists are actually attacking themselves or their movement.

According to a reliable source the Communists have actually lost groun in the trade union field because of the failure of the Conference of Studio Union The Communists have, however, more than made up for this failure by having their sympathizers placed in high executive positions in the motion picture industry, s as directors and writers. This latter type of penetration is more insidious because of the reputations and influence gained by those elevated in this manner.

Among the labor element in Hollywood the principle force of the Communi has been the Conference of Studio Unions. This group is described as a bloc of Communist controlled unions under the leadership of Herbert K. Sorrell, who has been identified as a former member of the Communist Party. The purpose of the Conference of Studio Unions has been reported as two-fold; (1) that the Union desires to keep the general labor situation agitated in Hollywood in line with the Communist Party program of creating confusion and (2) to maintain intact the leadership of Herbert K. Sorrell.

The strikes which have developed between the Conference of Studio Unions and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees have been for the most part purely jurisdictional disputes caused by the Communist bloc in the Conference of Studio Unions as a part of their disruptionist tactics to gain control of the labor element in Hollywood.

The Screen Writers' Guild is one of the first unions which was formed in the motion picture industry in the cultural field. It has been under the influence of Communists and Communist sympathizers since its inception. The purpose of the Screen Writers' Guild has been to obtain better conditions for its members and to propagate the Communist Party strategy in influencing public opini These Communists and their fellow travelers in the Screen Writers' Guild have furthered the Communist cause by the dissemination of their Communist ideology to unsuspecting writers who are also members of the Guild. The Communist writers and "Innocents" then inject into motion picture scripts Communist-veiled propagan or eliminate anti-Communist statements or scenes from the original motion picture script.

The Screen Actors' Guild has been infiltrated by many Communists and Communist sympathizers. Forty-two individuals who have been identified as Commun are known to be members in good standing of the Screen Actors' Guild.

The Screen Cartoonists' Guild is another group which has been under the influence of Communists and Communist sympathizers. Known Communists and/or Communist sympathizers have held official positions in the Guild. Close cooperation has existed between the Communist Party in the Hollywood area and the Screen Cartoonists' Guild.

The Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions is an organization allegedly formed to fight the so-called "Fascist" activities of the Motion Picture Alliance for the Preservation of American Ideals. Known Communists and Communist sympathizers, active in the motion picture industry, participated in the formation of this group and many of these individuals have continued in executive capacities in this organization.

In the cultural field the Hollywood Communists have been most successful in influencing organizations such as the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, the People's Educational Center, the Hollywood Independent Citizen's Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, and the Actors' Laboratory.

The Communists and fellow travelers in the Hollywood Writers Mobilization played an important part in writing and producing documentary films for the Overseas Branch for the Office of War Information. In the Spring of 1945 the Hollywood Writers Mobilization Editorial Committee on Overseas Films was composed of fourteen members. Seven of these have been identified as Communists.

The People's Educational Center in Hollywood is an outgrowth of the Hollywood Writers School, a Communist school in Los Angeles, and it was formed by known Communists and active Communist sympathizers. Since its inception this group has offered courses on political and cultural matters as well as instructional courses with regard to the motion picture industry. The majority of its instructors have been identified as Communists or active Communist sympathizers in that they have been prominent in known Communist Front organizational work in the motion picture industry. Such well-known Communists as motion picture Directors Herbert Biberman, Frank Tuttle and Edward Dmytryk have been connected with it in an executive or teaching capacity.

The Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences, and Professions is an organization which was supported by the Communist Party and the Communist press during its existence. A national Communist functionary (Lionel Berman) has been given credit for participating in the formation of this group. In Hollywood the Communist penetration of this group was no exception for the Executive Council, at the time the Hollywood unit was established, had fifteen individuals as Council members, who have been described as Communists. Many more members of the Executive Council have been affiliated with other organizations known to have been infiltrated by the Communist element.

This organization in Hollywood has been described as having taken a part in, or supported, all local activities in the Hollywood area which were inspired or propagated by the Communist Party.

On February 11, 1947, the Hollywood Chapter of the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences, and Professions, went out of existence and its membership formed a new group known as the Progressive Citizens of America, which action was precipitated by similar action being taken by the National organization on December 28 and 29, 1946, in New York City. It is known that this same National Communist functionary, (Lionel Berman), who was active in the formation of the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences, and Professions, was active in laying the plans for the formation of the Progressive Citizens of America. The Progressive Citizens of America has established in Hollywood a Council of the Arts, Sciences, and Professions of the Progressive Citizens of America. This group recently sponsored a Conference on Thought Control which was actively participated in by many known Communists and Communist sympathizers.

The Communist Party has concentrated its efforts on the writers and directors of the motion picture industry for a considerable period of time in an effort to have Communist propaganda injected into motion pictures. The writer who creates the dialogue and action and the director who interprets the same are in a position to influence the political philosophy contained in any given picture. For this reason, the political views and background of the writer and the director are utilized to the fullest extent by the Communist Party in their effort to disseminate propaganda through the motion picture.

During World War II, these writers and directors, who acted under Communist guidance, were reported to have inserted excerpts into pictures in a most clever manner. The crowning achievement in this respect was the picture "Mission to Moscow." However, the open propaganda in this picture was so obvious that throughout the United States the picture was criticized by numerous newspapers. This action resulted in the Communists changing their tactics to a more subtle approach. The Communists and Communist sympathizers are now said to be content with the inserting of a line, sentence, or a situation into a picture which will carry the Communist Party line into an otherwise nonpolitical picture. It has been said that they have found this method to be more effective by reason of the fact that it does not appear to be purposeful but rather incidental. This subtle method of getting propaganda into the motion pictures has not been limited to the serious drama but has also included the musical comedies. The Communists have not only endeavored to inject Communist propaganda into pictures but have also prevented material which the Party might consider objectionable to its current program from appearing in pictures.

It is significant to point out that William Z. Foster, national leader of the Communist Party, USA, in a conversation on September 10, 1947, at Los Angeles with William Schneiderman and Ned Sparks, West Coast Communist Party leaders, commented concerning the motion picture "The Best Years of Our Lives" that it was the real "stuff" and commented on the pictures "The Farmer's Daughter" and "Crossfire" by stating "They are standing them on their ears." He referred to all three of these pictures as very fine productions. These three pictures are discussed in Section IV of this memorandum.

Summarily, it may be said that the Communist Party, through its members and Communist sympathizers, has been most successful in its infiltration tactics among the labor and intellectual groups in Hollywood motion picture industry. Through the labor element they have utilized their disruptionist tactics causing strife and unrest. Through the intellectual groups they have attempted to disseminate Communist propaganda in a very subtle and disguising manner through the motion picture, or have prohibited filming or production of anti-Communist material.

SUMMARY ON COMMUNIST INFILTRATION INTO THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

I. HISTORY AND DEVELOPMENT OF THE COMMUNIST PARTY IN HOLLYWOOD

A. Communist International and National Declarations of Interests in Motion Picture Industry

Willi Muenzenberg, in an article entitled "Capture the Film!" with the sub-title "Hints on the Use of, Out of the Use of, Proletarian Film Propaganda" which appeared in the Daily Worker on July 23, 1925, stated as follows:

> "We must develop the tremendous cultural possibilities of the motion picture in the revolutionary sense....One of the most pressing tasks confronting Communist Parties on the field of agitation and propaganda is the conquest of this supremely important propaganda weapon, until now the monopoly of the ruling class, we must wrest it from them and turn it against them."

In stressing the importance of the motion picture, Muenzenberg calls attention to the fact that "the total attendance in the movie theatres of England, France and the United States is perhaps even today (1925) greater than the total of newspaper readers in those countries". Muenzenberg also states in this article "Not the destruction of tools and technical equipment, but their conquest and their turning to the use of the labor movement, for the idea--World of Communism".

In a second article by Muenzenberg found in the Daily Worker of Saturday, August 15, 1925, entitled "The Picture and the Film in the Revolutionary Movement", he quotes internationally famous Communists concerning the importance of motion pictures to the world Communist movement. He quotes Vladimir Ilitch Lenin in a conversation with Comrade A. V. Lunacharski, the former Soviet Commissar for Public Education, as stating:

> "You must powerfully develop film production, taking especially the proletarian kino (motion picture theatres) to the city masses and in still a much greater extent to the village. You must always consider that of all the arts, the motion picture is for us the most important."

Muenzenberg also quotes the Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Communist International, Gregory E. Zinoviev, concerning the motion picture as follows:

> "The motion picture in the possession of the bourgeoisie is the strongest means for the betrayal and befuddling of the masses. In our hands it can and must become a mighty weapon of Communist propaganda for the enlightening of the widest working masses."

Muenzenberg also quoted K. Woroschilow, who at that time was the Commander of the Red Army in the Moscow Military District, as stating:

> "The motion picture, as a cultural plane (the carpenter's tool), has won itself a place of honor in the U.S.S.R. It is no less popular in the Red Army than among the worker and peasant masses."

He quotes Clara Zetkin who has been referred to as the oldest revolutionary woman and an intimate friend of Lenin as stating concerning the significance of the film in the Communist propaganda:

> "On no account can the Communist movement ignore the propaganda power of the motion picture."

In addition to these quotations cited by Muenzenberg, he also wrote in his article as follows:

> "....In the factories or after working hours we could show the workers by means of trick film the constant lowering of their living conditions, of the actual lowering of their wages in comparison to the rising prices, and thus demonstrate the actual working out of bourgeoisie control of politics and industry.
> "There are hundreds of motives and objectives that can be utilized in film propaganda. We are not oblivious to the colossal censorship difficulties, technical and organizational obstacles, that stand in the way of all these suggested plans. Much groundwork would already be won if we could put every Communist Party and organization into a position to show a monthly film chronicle of the most important happenings in Soviet Russia, and thus to bring the development of this strongest prop of the international proletarian and revolutionary movement into the clear vision of the masses."

Muenzenberg also relates,

> "But next to nothing has been done to put the film into the arsenal of agitation and propaganda weapons of the Communist Party. Quite properly the enlarged Executive Committee of the Comintern in March, 1925, called attention to this shortcoming, and instructed all affiliated Parties to concern themselves much more than formerly in turning this weapon to this service. Leading Comrades of the International have repeatedly and emphatically pointed out the tremendous significance of the film propaganda."

Muenzenberg concludes this article with the following statement:

"There must no longer be any country in which the Communist Party and its groups do not make extensive propagandist use of the motion picture film."

With regard to the aforegoing quotations, it should be pointed out that they were taken from the Daily Worker, which is the Communist daily paper for the eastern part of the United States published in New York City. The author of this article, Willi Muenzenberg, was for many years a Party functionary of the Communist Party of Germany in Charge of Publications and Propaganda. He was generally considered to be the "Czar of Propaganda and Publications of the German Kommunitische Partie Deutschland." Confidential Informant, Harvey Gilbert Wolf, a former member of the Communist Party and a reliable paid informant of the Los Angeles Office, has stated that Muenzenberg who is now deceased, was at one time a member of the Executive Committee of the Communist International. He related that Muenzenberg was not in the United States at the time this article was incorporated into the Daily Worker but that it was incorporated into the Daily Worker and the fact that it was reprinted would be considered by the Communists as a directive to be followed. He related that he has noted in the international correspondence in the past years that Willi Muenzenberg has attended Plenums of the Communist International in Moscow, Russia.

B. Communist Tactics, Strategy and Methods of Operation

In order to more clearly point out the motivating forces which cause Communists to carry out the teachings of Marx, Lenin and Joseph Stalin and to indicate the aim and objective of the Communist movement, quotations from various Communist periodicals and other authoritative sources are being set out in this section. In addition, reliable sources have indicated various methods of operation and tactical procedures used by the Communists, in some instances with regard to the motion picture industry, and these are also being set out in this section.

The Communist ethics must be considered in order to visualize the true significance and content of the tactics and statements of Communists and their fellow travelers. Lenin summarized this morality when he said:

> "Our morality is entirely subordinate to the interests of the class struggle of the proletariat....For the Communists, morality consists entirely of compact, united discipline and conscious mass struggle against the exploiters. We do not believe in eternal morality, and we expose all the fables about morality."

It is clear from Lenin's statement that the individual Communist's ethical judgment is subservient to the will of the Communist Party. According to Lenin, the Communist code of ethics must reflect that the truth should give way to the class advantage. In other words, the Communists' word only has as much value as their conception of the interests of the class struggle may dictate.

The aim of the Communist Party in the United States is clearly indicated in "A Manual on Organization" of the Communist Party by J. Peters published in 1935. According to this manual, the Communist Party's aim is as follows:

> "The Communist Party of the USA leads the working class in the fight for the revolutionary overthrow of capitalism, for the establishment of a Socialist Soviet Republic in the United States,..."

William Z. Foster, present leader of the Communist Party in the United States, stated in the book entitled "Toward Soviet America":

> "The leader of the revolution in all its stages is the Communist Party....The establishment of an American Soviet Government will mark the birth of real democracy in the United States. For the first time the toilers will be free, with industry and the government in their own hands. Now they are enslaved: the industries and the government are the property of the ruling class."

To further show the allegiance of the American Communists, it should be noted that William Z. Foster, when testifying before the Fish Committee of the 71st Congress in 1930, stated:

> "The workers of this country (the United States) and the workers of every country have only one flag. That is the red flag. That is the flag of the proletarian democracy."

In addition, to show the true revolutionary movement of the Communists in the United States, an excerpt of a pledge given to 2,000 individuals who were being initiated into the Communist Party at New York City in 1935, Earl Browder, at that time head of the Communist Party, USA, stated in part:

"I pledge myself to rally the masses to defend the Soviet Union, the land of victorious socialism. I pledge myself to remain at all times a vigilant and firm defender of the Leninist line of the Party, the only line that insures the triumph of Soviet power in the United States."

The deceptive principles employed by the Communist Party have been indicated by their use of trickery and subterfuge to employ a tactic or gain an objective. The following quotations of V. I. Lenin, regarded as the "great god" of the American Communists whose writings are their bible, are being set out as indicative of the above.

"The strictest loyalty to the ideals of Communism must be combined with the ability to make all necessary practical compromises, to maneuver, to make agreements, zig-zags, retreats, etc., so as to accelerate the coming to power..."

"It is necessary to be able to withstand all this, to agree to any and every sacrifice, and even--if need be--to resort to all sorts of devices, maneuvers, and illegal methods, to evasion and subterfuge, in order to penetrate into the trade unions, to remain in them, and to carry on Communist work in them at all costs."

In order that one can readily recognize the Communist propaganda disseminated in written or spoken words, the deceptiveness of the Aesopian language utilized by the Communists must be considered. Lenin, in referring to this brand of Communist double-talk, stated:

"....That cursed Aesopian language...which....compelled all revolutionaries to have recourse, whenever they took up their pens to write a 'legal' work."

Lenin used it for the purpose of avoiding "censorship". Communists today are using it to mislead the public.

Indicative of the method of procedure utilized by the Communist Party is the following quotation taken from the publication entitled "Program of the Communist International" which reflects that the Communist Party "extends its influence over the majority of members of its own class, including workingmen and the working youth. To achieve this, the Communist Party must secure proletariat influence in the broad mass proletarian organizations (Soviets, trade unions, factory committees, cooperative societies, sport organizations, cultural organizations, etc.). It is particularly important for the purpose of winning over the majority of the proletariat, to gain control of the trade unions, which are genuine mass working class organizations closely bound up with the every day struggles of the working class. To work in reactionary trade unions and skillfully to gain control of them, to win the confidence of the broad masses of the industrially organized workers, to change and remove from their posts' the reformist leaders, represent important tasks in the preparatory period." The preceding quotation was found in this publication under the heading, "The Fundamental Tasks of Communist Strategy and Tactics".

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office who is a former member of the Communist Party in the Los Angeles area and has been closely affiliated with the motion picture industry for a considerable period of time, has stated that there has been a noticeable change in the general tactical lines and methods of operation in the Communist Party in the film industry. He stated that this is apparently due to the wave of exposals of individual Communists and Communist Party line followers in government and other circles as a part of the broad campaign of the attack now being waged on Communism. He related that there has resulted a change in its method of operation and tactics to meet these conditions. He stated that some of the former outspoken leaders of the Communists as well as Communist sympathizers have drawn back to less important positions and have less to say openly in Communist affairs, while those who have not been so active or so well-known have been forced to the front to carry on the program not as Communists but camouflaged as "liberals" and "progressives".

Informant [redacted] has related that these Communists are even boring within the anti-Communist movement with the objective in view of taking over the movement and directing it to less harmful channels, the result being that Communists are attacking themselves but not sufficiently vigorously enough to basically harm themselves or their movement. He related that these are all a part of the tactics which were laid down at the Leninist School of "strategy and tactics". It should be pointed out that this informant [redacted], being a former member of the Communist Party, has considerable knowledge of the Communist strategy and tactics.

[redacted] stated it is becoming more and more apparent that the Communists are using prominent sympathizers in the motion picture industry to further their policies. He stated that by using these persons of high standing and influence, the Communist Party hopes to cover up these individuals' real Communist connections. He continued by stating that the following top producers over a period of years not only employed Communists and Communist sympathizers, some of whom were notoriously known, but have protected them whenever their names or reputations have been exposed to public notice:

David Selznick
Warner Brothers
Walter Wanger

Samuel Goldwyn
Charles Chaplin

[redacted] analyzed the situation in Hollywood by relating that producers in the motion picture industry could clean up the Communist movement if they saw fit. He stated that up until recently there was no recorded instance where the Hollywood motion picture industry or any of its top influential leaders had ever denounced Communism or Communists publicly. Basically, he said, they are "internationalists". Because of this, the activity of the Communists and their sympathizers who do not really work for the Communist cause increases day by day with added influence in all departments of the motion picture industry.

As an additional part of the general program for Communist penetration into the motion picture industry, Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office stated that the Communist Party considered the importation of known pro-Communist individuals into the Hollywood area of great significance.

Confidential Informant [redacted] also related that a large percentage of this pro-Communist element was brought into Hollywood during the period from 1935 to 1944. Many of these individuals were European refugees who came to this country following the rise of Nazism in Europe and were employed in reliable positions in the field of writing and directing. The majority of these people, although not openly admitted members of the Communist Party, have shown a sympathy to the Communist cause or have moved in Communist circles in the motion picture industry. Among the exiled refugees prominent in pro-Soviet and Communist circles in Hollywood is Hanns Eisler. Hanns Eisler is the brother of Gerhardt Eisler who was recently convicted on contempt of Congress. Hanns Eisler has been the subject of an un-American Activities Committee inquiry into the motion picture industry. Hanns Eisler has an extensive record of Soviet and Communist affiliations both in the United States and Europe which had been brought to your attention in a separate memorandum dated July 11, 1947.

Confidential Informant [redacted] provided information indicating that the Communists have recently lost ground to some extent in the trade union field because of the failure of the strike of the Conference of Studio Unions. He indicated, however, that the Communists have more than made up for their failure by having many of their sympathizers placed in high executive positions such as directors and writers. He related that this latter type of penetration is more insidious because of the reputations and influence gained by those elevated in this manner. An outstanding example was the appointment of Dore Schary to be Director of all production at RKO Studios. Mr. Schary has followed the Communist Party line for many years, has engaged in the activities of and supported a number of Communist influenced organizations. Informant [redacted] related that his important position affords him complete protection against any charge by an outsider that he has been involved in Communist activity. This pattern appears to be followed closely, according to Wolf, and extends throughout the industry, tending to make it somewhat sacred for any criticism of a definite or specific nature.

C. Early Communist Party History and Organization in Hollywood

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office related that the League of American Writers, at a convention held in New York City in April of 1935, decided to form a Pacific Coast Branch of the League of American Writers and related that at that time Waldo Frank was the National Secretary of the League of American Writers.

A complete record and report on the first American Writers Congress has been published by the International Publishers, edited by Henry Hart. This report contains all the addresses delivered at this Congress. It includes an article by John Howard Lawson entitled "Technique and the Drama".

Quoting from an introduction appearing in this book concerning the First American Writers Congress, it states:

> "We propose, therefore, that a Congress of American Revolutionary Writers be held in New York City April 26, 27, 28, 1935; that to this Congress there be invited all writers who have achieved some standing in their respective field and who have clearly indicated their sympathy with the Revolutionary cause; who do not need to be convinced of the decay of capitalism, of the inevitability of revolution....We believe such a congress should create the League of American Writers, affiliated with the International Union of Revolutionary Writers. In European countries the International Union of Revolutionary Writers is in the vanguard of literature and political action."

Prominent Hollywood writers listed as being on the call to attend the first and second American Writers Congresses included such individuals as: Guy Endore, John Howard Lawson and Samuel Ornitz. All three of these individuals are identified in this section of the memorandum as Communists.

With regard to the Congress of American Revolutionary Writers which created the League of American Writers, it should be pointed out that this is one of the organizations which was declared subversive by the Attorney General in that it came within the purview of Public Law 135 of the 77th Congress which was superseded by Public Law 644 of the 77th Congress.

The United Progressive News of September 21, 1936, reflects that some 25 writers attended the first local (Los Angeles and Hollywood) meeting of the League of American Writers on Sunday night and that included in this group was V. J. Jerome (true name Isaac Romaine), The United Progressive News is a defunct weekley paper, formerly distributed in Los Angeles. A known Communist, Ellenore Bogigian, aka, Ellenore Abowitz was one of seven members of the paper's staff in 1936. By the way of identification, it should be pointed out that V. J. Jerome is one of the leading theoreticians of the Communist Party now holding the position of Associate Editor of the monthly theoretical organ of the Communist Party, "Political Affairs".

The Daily Worker of September 23, 1933, contained an article by V. J. Jerome entitled "Marx, Lenin and Stalin on the Role of the Communist Party". Comments by Jerome in the conclusion of this article are as follows:

> "And on our own celebration day of the 14th anniversary of our Party's founding, we must bear in mind that our Party has as its guide to action the teaching of Marx, Lenin and Stalin embodied in the program of the Communist International. We must realize that our central task is to win over the majority of the working class."

[redacted] who has in his possession considerable information collected by the [redacted] concerning the Communist Party's activities in Los Angeles and Hollywood, stated that in 1934 there were actually only 35 or 40 Communist members in Hollywood connected with the motion picture industry. He stated they were attached to the Los Angeles Section of the Communist Party. However, he related that in 1935, V. J. Jerome, identified above, came to Hollywood from New York in an effort to organize Communist Party units in Hollywood among the writers, producers and actors.

In substantiating the information set out heretofore in this section, Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office, who has amassed considerable data concerning Communist activities in the Los Angeles area and who is at present an [redacted] Company, related that the Communist Party in the motion picture industry gained impetus through such organizations as the League of American Writers, the American Writers Congress and the League Against War and Fascism, all of which were Communist front groups. He also related that V. J. Jerome, the Communist theoretician, came to Hollywood in 1935.

Former Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office, who is a retired Los Angeles police officer and former [redacted] related that V. J. Jerome, in 1935, came to Hollywood and set up, in the motion picture industry, Communist branches.

John L. Leech, who in 1934 was the organizational Secretary of the Communist Party in Los Angeles County, testified before a Los Angeles County Grand Jury on August 14, 1940, at which time he stated that V. J. Jerome (Victor Jerome, true name Isaac Romaine) was sent to Hollywood in the latter part of 1935 by the Communist Party Central Committee, New York, to improve cultural work, taking over these duties from Stanley Lawrence. Leech stated that V. J. Jerome helped organize study clubs and coordinated Party work between Hollywood and downtown Communist sections. Leech related that Jerome brought John Howard Lawson (Communist screen writer) to Hollywood. In Leech's testimony, he also made the remark that Jerome had the aid of Jeff Kibre, labor leader whom he identified as a Communist. Leech stated that in the latter part of 1935 Jerome formulated plans to establish an underground Communist unit among the film elite. All dues and contributions as well as reports were to go directly to National Communist Party Headquarters in New York City. Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office, previously identified in this section, related that Jerome secured the aid of Nora and George Hellgren in Hollywood. Nora and George Hellgren are identified in this section as Communists. He stated that Jerome utilized Nora Hellgren in connection with the Communist plan to set up branches in the motion picture industry in the Hollywood area. This information was also substantiated by Informant [redacted] who related that Hellgren did most of the "leg work" including the running of errands and collecting of dues for Jerome. He also related that Jeff Kibre was at that time closely associated with V. J. Jerome.

Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office related that in the Spring of 1935 while he was a member of the Communist Party, direct orders came down from the top structure of the Communist Party, U.S.A. to all units in the Los Angeles Area ihstructing them to intensify and concentrate their activities in Hollywood and the motion picture industry. The directive emphasized the fact that Communists must try to capture the labor unions and pointed out if this were done, the unions could be of tremendous service in influencing the type of picture produced. The directive also contained a specific call to the Communists requesting them to concentrate on the so-called intellectual groups in Hollywood which are composed of directors, writers, artists, actors and actresses and the highly paid technicians.

[redacted] and functionary of the Communist Party who is at present acting as an informant of the New York Office, has related that one of the objectives of the Communist Party during the period of his membership (1935 to 1945) was to infiltrate the motion picture industry. He related that from the time of his assignment [redacted] in 1935, there was a very definite emphasis placed on the discussions and activities of the Party leaders on the program of establishing and strengthening Communist influence in Hollywood and penetrating the motion picture industry ideologically. He stated that the national officers of the Communist Party looked upon this program as being very important and considered it as an excellent means of molding and influencing public opinion. [redacted] stated that the Communists' interests in the motion picture industry were not entirely divorced from other interests on the West Coast. He stated, for example, that there was a sort of link between the activities of Harry Bridges and West Coast shipping and the Communist infiltration program in Hollywood. [redacted] stated Bridges was well acquainted with the Hollywood producers and with many of the "Hollywood crowd". He stated that they helped each other to their mutual advantage. He also recalls that the Communist infiltration of the motion picture industry was definitely on the agenda when former Communist Party leaders and the current national leader, William Z. Foster, visited the West Coast and particularly the Los Angeles area.

In September, 1939, the Los Angeles County Communist Party published a pamphlet portraying the 20 year history of the Communist Party in Los Angeles County. The pamphlet is known under the title "Two Decades of Progress". Its reference to Hollywood and cultural groups reflects that members had in early years penetrated cultural groups and various theater groups. In 1939, the geographical organization of the Communist Party in Hollywood was based on street units and not industrial units. Members belonged to the units in their respective neighborhood and not units pertaining to industry. The publication listed 2 studio units in 1939, namely the Culver City Studios Branch with Frank Oats as President, and the Hollywood Studios Branch with Milton Henry as President, both attached to the 15th Congressional District Section of the Communist Party. In 1939, the Los Angeles County Communist Party was organized by branches and sections under a geographical division similar to the political assembly and congressional district respectively. "2 Decades of Progress" in 1939 quotes Emil Freed, President of the East Branch of the Communist Party as stating:

> "Our Party has either initiated or assisted in struggles, for better housing, progressive election victories, and the unionization of Hollywood."

The East Branch, according to this history, was then a unit of the 15th Congressional District Communist Party Section, an area covering Hollywood Boulevard between Fairfax and Hoover Streets.

Confidential Informant [redacted] stated that sometime following the period during which the actor James Cagney was the subject of much publicity as being mixed up in Communist activity (1940), V. J. Jerome made a trip to the West Coast at which time he spent approximately six weeks in Hollywood for the purpose of straightening out the situation there. Jerome reorganized the Hollywood Branch of the Communist Party separating top ranking stars and big name personalities. [redacted] specifically recalled Jerome's having told him of a change that had been made in the handling of money coming in from the Communist Party of Hollywood whereby the "center" (Communist Party National Headquarters) took over the collection of funds from that area. This step was taken because it was felt that the West Coast was receiving too large a share of money coming in from Hollywood.

According to [redacted] included in the general plans of infiltration of the motion picture industry were various schemes to capture labor unions, influence management, make friends among the company executives and to penetrate the so-called intellectual groups. He stated by mobilizing the Communist Party back of a particular picture which was to the liking of the Communists, management was put on notice that it could expect tremendous support from the Communist Party in an effort to make the picture a success.

[redacted] referred to the motion picture actor, Lionel Stander, as having been a most active Communist leader in the Hollywood professional set and to the fact that Stander was very difficult to handle because he was too Leftist. In referring to Jerome's visit to Hollywood he stated that Jerome conferred with leaders among the professional set including Stander, Edward G. Robinson and Frederic March.

[redacted] related that the first real impetus to the infiltration of the motion picture industry was the sending of John Howard Lawson to Hollywood in 1941 or earlier. He stated that Lawson, who was already a fairly successful playwright, was sent for the specific purpose of doing Party work. He related that at the time Lawson left New York he was a member of the Communist Party. He stated that he was sure Lawson was one of the keys to the whole situation and was sent to Hollywood by Communist Party officials in New York for the specific purpose of getting things organized there and promoting the Communist Party's influence in the motion picture industry. [redacted] recalled that following Lawson's arrival in Hollywood almost any Communist who could write would be sent by the national office to be put under Lawson's wing. In this connection, it should be pointed out that Lawson was the first President of the Screen Writers Guild which is discussed in greater detail in another section of this memorandum. related that Lawson had the Party send him authors "just so long as they had at least written a book", because he could take care of them and thereby would be helping the Party. He related that Lawson's efforts were most successful. Among the writers who were sent out to Hollywood under this program were Albert Maltz, Alvah Bessie, Dalton Trumbo, Michael Blankfort and others whose names he could not recall.

[redacted] It should be noted in this connection that at the present time Hanns Eisler is in Hollywood and has been one of the subjects of the Un-American Activities Committee's investigation into Communist activity in the motion picture industry.

[redacted] its membership included Alexander Trachtenberg, Joseph Fields, Lionel Berman and Robert Reed.

[redacted] advised that Berman was the head of the Cultural Committee and that he was in constant contact with Hollywood and played an important part in the program.

On November 15, 1941, former Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Chicago Office advised that the Communist Party was in the process of realigning its districts throught the United States as well as reorganizing its structural set up. He stated that District 13 was to include all of the States of California and of Nevada. According to [redacted] it was to have centralized offices in San Francisco and in Los Angeles. The San Francisco Office was to be headed by Steve Nelson. Further Betty Garnett was to be the Organizational Secretary of District 13 with John Howard Lawson and Herbert Biberman in control of organizational work in the Hollywood area.

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office as well as Informant [redacted] Informant [redacted] and former Communist Party member [redacted] who was dismissed from the Communist Party in 1944, advised that the Los Angeles County Communist Party penetration into the motion picture industry prior to the formation of the Northwest Section in 1942 was important only as pertained to nominal employees within the studios. They related that between the years 1935 and 1942 the jurisdiction over film luminaries and writers was under the jurisdiction of the New York Communist Party headquarters or the District 13 Communist Party headquarters at San Francisco. Consequently the proof of Communist Party membership of important Hollywood personages was not available or known to the Los Angeles County Communist Party functionaries.

D. Structural Development of the Communist Party in Hollywood

Following the rearrangement effected by V. J. Jerome and the appointment of Herbert Biberman and John Howard Lawson to executive positions in the Communist Party, Hollywood Section, the Communist Party was again reorganized in about 1942. According to Informant [redacted] who has heretofore been identified as [redacted] who has amassed considerable information concerning the Communist Party's activities in Hollywood, this reorganization was effected through the establishment of the Northwest Section of the Communist Party in Los Angeles. It wasn't until this time, according to [redacted] that the Los Angeles County Communist Party had jurisdiction over important Communists in Hollywood. According to [redacted] this new section was to encompass all Communist Party members in Hollywood including the Communists in the motion picture and radio industries.

Through a most highly reliable but very delicate source, it was ascertained that the Northwest Section was under the leadership of the following individuals known as the Section Executive Committee:

John Howard Lawson	Elizabeth Leach, also known as Elizabeth Benson and Elizabeth Glenn
Waldo Salt	Mischa Altman
Margaret Bennett Wills	M. W. (Bill) Pomerance
Louis Harris

With the exception of Elizabeth Leach, all of the individuals listed above are identified in this section as Communists. On February 26, 1943, Elizabeth Leach told former Confidential Informant of the Los Angeles Office [redacted] that she was Organizer for the Northwest Section, receiving a salary of $125 per month. According to the [redacted] on John Howard Lawson, she received this salary from Lawson, Communist screen writer. This information was verified by Informant [redacted] of the [redacted] Los Angeles.

Through this same extremely confidential but most delicate source, it was ascertained during 1943 and 1944 that the Northwest Section was broken down into industrial branches including a writers' branch, community, radio, cartoonists, actors, readers, screen office employees guild branch and numerous other branches. However, in December, 1944, John Williamson, at that time National Secretary of the Communist Political Association, visited Los Angeles and conferred with local Communist leaders. [redacted]

[redacted] it was ascertained that one of the subjects discussed was the reorganization of the Communist Political Association along the community lines in place of the previous industrial branch setup. During the discussion, Williamson was asked what should be done with people such as union leaders, professional people and motion picture industry people since they could not afford to become active in community clubs and probably would refuse to do so. Williamson ruled that exceptions had to be made in cases of this type and that for their bookkeeping purposes, they should be attached to an Assembly District Community Club but permitted to meet separately and have their own club.

In January, 1945, it was ascertained through [redacted] Elizabeth Leach that she was in the process of contacting the functionaries of the Party and through them the membership of the Northwest Section, advising them that the section setup was to be disbanded and new cultural groups were to be formed. During this reorganization, according to information received from a most reliable but very delicate source, [redacted] approximately 300 of the 600 members of the Northwest Section of the Communist Party were transferred to community groups and the remaining 300 were assigned to cultural clubs. Through a most reliable but very delicate source, it was ascertained that at the time the new cultural groups were formed in January, 1945, the old Section Executive Committee was replaced by the Motion Picture and Radio Commission. The names for this new commission, according to this source, were submitted to Carl Winter, Chairman of the Communist Political Association in that area, for approval. Although the full name of each of these individuals was not set out, an identification was effected by Agents of the Los Angeles Office who were familiar with the Communist Party setup in the Hollywood area at that time.

The following names are believed to have been selected and submitted for approval to Carl Winter:

John Howard Lawson
Bill Pomerance
Pauline Lauber
Madeleine Ruthven
George Willner
Georgia Backus
Bernie Lusher
Waldo Salt
George Pepper
Norval Crutcher
Mischa Altman
Rex Ingram
Sam Moore
Margaret Bennett
Ed Smith

All of the above listed individuals with the exception of Madeleine Ruthven are identified in this section of the memorandum as Communists. With regard to Ruthven, it should be pointed out she was a former Organizer of the Communist Party and close associate of Communist Party functionaries in the Los Angeles area.

[redacted] December, 1945, it was ascertained that she no longer intended to keep her position as the Organizer of the Hollywood Section of the Communist Party, whereupon information was received through this source that John Stapp was made the Organizer.

Following the appointment of Stapp, Confidential Informant [redacted] who is a paid informant of the Los Angeles Office and [redacted] related that the Hollywood Section was again reorganized. It was divided into three sub-sections, namely:

Community Sub-Section
Industrial Sub-Section
Cultural Sub-Section

Information as to this reorganization was also furnished by paid Confidential Informant of the Los Angeles Office, [redacted] who is [redacted] of the Communist Party. [redacted] stated that these three sub-sections were broken down as follows:

The Community Sub-Section contained people living in the Hollywood area not employed in the motion picture or radio industries.

The Industrial Sub-Section included individuals employed in the motion picture and radio industries on a labor or craft basis, holding positions from that of Assistant Director down.

The Cultural Sub-Section was to include the cultural people employed in the motion picture and radio industries, holding positions comparable to that of Director on up, such as writers, producers, and actors.

According to this source, each sub-section had an Organizer as follows:

20

Community Sub-Section	Sid Share
Industrial Sub-Section	Paul Perlin
Cultural Sub-Section	Waldo Salt

Informants [redacted] and [redacted] related that John Stapp, the Section Organizer, works full time as a Party functionary and is not employed in the motion picture industry.

Sid Share, Organizer of the Community Sub-Section is unemployed according to these sources because of poor eyesight. With regard to this Sub-Section, Informant [redacted] related that plans were under way to disband it and consolidate it with the Industrial Sub-Section.

Paul Perlin, Organizer of the Industrial Sub-Section, was employed for several years as a grip at the Universal Pictures Corporation until he went out on strike.

Waldo Salt, Organizer of the Cultural Sub-Section, is a Screen writer under contract to RKO Studios.

Informant [redacted] related in June, 1946, that the controlling body for the Hollywood Section was known as the Section Executive Committee and was made up of the Sub-Section officers, the Chairman of each of the 20 clubs in the Sub-Section and 1 additional delegate from each club.

According to Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office who holds the position [redacted] of the Communist Party, shop units of the Communist Party have been established at the Universal-International Studios, RKO Studios and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios. He stated that in addition, Paul Perlin, who is the Organizer of the Industrial Sub-Section of the Communist Party in Hollywood, had advised him that an industrial branch had been established at the Paramount Studios which has developed into one of the largest branches of the Industrial Sub-Section. [redacted] also related that he had learned from Dorothy Stein, who formerly was the Membership Director of the Community Sub-Section of the Hollywood Section of the Communist Party, that the Communist Party also had an industrial branch at Columbia Studios. This same source related that in an effort to revitalize the Industrial Sub-Section and to provide further for the closer cooperation between the Community and Industrial Sub-Sections, these 2 groups were consolidated in June, 1947.

According to [redacted] the new officers of the consolidated Sub-Section are as follows:

Paul Perlin	Organizer
Dorothy Forrest	Organizational Secretary
Dorothy Rivers	Membership Director
Helmer Bergman	Educational Director
Jack Flyer	Literature Director
Jack Sniffen	Press Director
Noum Light	Financial Director

According to these sources, as well as a most reliable and very delicate source [redacted] surveillances, John Howard Lawson, Elizabeth Leach Glenn, and John Stapp, in carrying on the work of the Northwest Section and, as it is known today, the Hollywood Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party, maintained contact with the Headquarters of the Los Angeles County Communist Party.

On June 13, 1947, Henry Winston, National Organizational Secretary of the Communist Party, USA, was in Los Angeles, California, and on that occasion, according to information obtained [redacted] he discussed the Hollywood Section of the Party stating that Hollywood was important to the entire country and that one person must be responsible for the Hollywood Section to the National Office. He indicated this person should be John Stapp, the Hollywood Section Organizer.

Informant [redacted] estimates the membership of the Hollywood Section at the present time at approximately 900 persons. Of this number, the Party records indicate approximately 600 are employed in the motion picture and radio industries. Of the 600, it has been verified that approximately 300 are actually employed in the motion picture industry today.

E. Communist Party Membership in Hollywood

The Communist Party in the Hollywood Motion Picture area has developed an organized body, particularly among the unions and cultural organizations. There are at the present time 520 individuals in Hollywood who are or have been identified as Communists. These individuals are either connected with the Hollywood motion picture industry or the Hollywood radio industry.

There is set out hereinafter a list of these individuals who are or have been identified as Communists in Hollywood. Los Angeles paid Informant [redacted] the Communist Party in Hollywood, stated that the Communist Party Cultural and Industrial Sub-Sections are composed of individuals employed either in the motion picture industry or the radio industry. This list will contain the names of the individuals identified as communists, their occupation and whether or not this occupation has been verified. The first 6 columns will reflect the dates on which the individuals listed were identified by a most reliable but very confidential source as Communists in that they were members of the Communist Party or the Communist Political Association. A brief paragraph explaining each of these columns is being set out prior to the list in order to fully describe the information set out in the list of individuals identified as Communists.

[redacted]

I. Member Communist Political Association, August 31, 1944

An "X" will appear on the list under Roman Numeral I when the individual was identified as a member of the Communist Political Association on August 31, 1944. This information was obtained from a most reliable but very delicate source who related that the individuals listed were members of the Northwest Section (Cultural Section) of the Communist Political Association as of August 31, 1944. This source provided, in addition to the individuals named, the 1943 or 1944 Communist Party, USA, membership book number or the Communist Political Association, USA, membership book number issued to the individual.

II. Membership Communist Political Association, January 8, 1945

Under the column headed Roman Numeral II an "X" will appear when the individual was identified as a member of the Northwest Section of the Communist Political Association in Hollywood, California, as of January 8, 1945. This identification was effected through the same most reliable but very delicate source.

III. Membership Communist Political Association, January 16, 1945

In the column headed Roman Numeral III, an "X" will appear following the names of the individuals who were identified as members of the Communist Political Association in Hollywood, California, on January 16, 1945. This identification was also effected through the same most reliable but very delicate source.

On this occasion this source provided the final lists of assignments to the various cultural groups in the Hollywood area. In addition, this source provided the names of the functionaries and the club breakdown of the cultural people in the Communist Party in Hollywood. It also established membership in the Communist Political Association and set forth a lengthy list of new Communist Party recruits. This source, in addition, provided the 1944 Communist Political Association membership cards.

IV. Membership Communist Political Association, February 26, 1945

Under this column, captioned "IV", an "X" will appear following the names of individuals who have been identified as members of the Communist Political Association on February 26, 1945, in Hollywood, California. This identification was also effected through this same most reliable but very delicate source. This source provided the 1945 Communist Political Association membership card number. In addition, the source also provided the 1945 registration cards which reflected the background on the individuals including address, sex, occupation, district where employed, union affiliation, and whether the individual subscribed to the "Daily People's World", West Coast Communist publication.

V. Membership Communist Party, USA, November 19, 1945

As you will recall, the Communist Political Association was dissolved in the summer of 1945 and subsequently the Communist Party, USA, undertook the project of registering its members under the reconstituted Communist Party. Therefore, under the column captioned "V", an "X" will appear following the names of the individuals who were identified as members of the Communist Party in Los Angeles or Hollywood, California, as of November 19, 1945. This identification was again effected through this same most reliable but very delicate source of information.

This source indicated that on this occasion, due to the reconstituted Communist Party's security consciousness, the registration cards were less susceptible to identification. In some instances the club had actually cut out the section containing the member's name. Other clubs had indicated the person's name by a number and numbered them in sequence. Other clubs had also inserted initials which appeared to be false. However, according to this source, there were lists of names giving the first name and last initial accompanying each group of registration cards. As a result, it was possible to ascertain the probable identities of a substantial number of individuals registered at that time.

VI. Membership in the Communist Party, USA, May 25, 1947

An "X" will appear under the caption "VI" following the name of an individual who has been identified as a member of the Communist Party in Hollywood affiliated with the motion picture or radio industries as of May 25, 1947. This identification was effected by another most reliable but very delicate source of information.

VII. Occupation

Under column "VII", the occupation of most of the Communists identified in Columns I through VI is set out. It should be pointed out that this occupation has been ascertained by Agents of the Los Angeles Office by contacting responsible officials in the film industry, reliable sources in the various studio unions and guilds, confidential informants and Hollywood periodicals and publications.

VIII. Occupation as verified by investigation -- July 21-August 6, 1947

Unless otherwise indicated in Column VIII, the occupation of the individual Communists has been verified by Agents of the Los Angeles Office through investigation between July 21 and August 6, 1947. In this connection, it should be pointed out that employment in the motion picture crafts, guilds and unions is of a floating nature. Workers are transferred among studios at the discretion of the unions in many instances. The average motion picture takes approximately 3 months to make and the unions attempt to keep their personnel active which requires a certain amount of transferring.

It should also be pointed out that the Conference of Studio Unions, comprising a number of the crafts and unions, is currently on strike and none of the members of these unions are actually presently employed in the industry. However, their names have been set out in this list and their occupations indicated as well as their employment verified at their former place of employment in view of the fact that they will resume work in the industry following the end of this strike. In specific instances, it will be noted that a certain date is set out instead of an "X" under this column. In those instances, the information was obtained from a Credit Bureau or other source and reflects the last date that the records indicated the individual was employed in the listed occupation in the motion picture industry. It should also be pointed out that if an individual carries a union or guild card and is in good standing with his union, he is considered as an active employee of the motion picture industry. In some instances, union records have indicated that these individuals have been suspended or are delinquent. Quite frequently a person in this classification will, by paying up his dues, become active in the entertainment field.

The Los Angeles Office is continuing its investigation to verify the employment of all individuals reported as Communists. However, due to the fact that a great number of the names are common names, difficulty has been encountered in determining exactly which ones are the Communists. Also, it must be considered that some of the names obtained through this most reliable but very delicate source may have been Party names which will cause the verification of employment to be a much more difficult job.

In specific instances, it will be noted that certain individuals whose names are set out on this list, have been identified as members of the Communist Party or Communists by reliable confidential informants such as [redacted] In this instance no "X" will appear under columns I through VI but rather, following the individual name, the name of the informant will appear and the year in which he identified the individual as a Communist will be set out.

F. Analysis of Preceding List

As has been indicated, the preceding list reflects all the individuals in the motion picture industry or the radio industry in Hollywood, California, who are or have been members of the Communist Political Association or the Communist Party, USA, according to a most reliable but very delicate source. The occupational breakdown of the Communists listed who have been identified and their occupations ascertained, is as follows:

Actresses	45
Actors	47
Directors	15
Producers	3
Writers	127
Publicists	5
Musicians	42
Analysts	9
Technicians	12
Cameramen	3
Film Editors	1
Miscellaneous (Cartoonists, laborers, office employees, artists, etc.)	62

It should be noted that there are 159 individuals on this list whose occupations have not as yet been ascertained. A perusal of this list will reflect that many common names, which, in some instances, may be Communist Party names, are set out. Identification of these individuals has been made more difficult as the result of the small amount of identifying data available at the source. In addition, the constant rotation of places of employment by Hollywood personnel has caused additional hardships in effecting identifications.

Many of the writers, directors, producers and actors are employed in more than one capacity; that is, director and writer, writer and producer, etc. Consequently, in the occupational breakdown these individuals have been listed under each of the occupations in which they are engaged.

G. Prominent Motion Pictures with which some of the Leading Actresses, Actors, Producers, Directors and Writers identified as Communists have been connected, according to "1947-48 International Motion Picture Almanac"

II. COMMUNIST INFILTRATION OF LABOR GROUPS

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office, who was a member of the Communist Party from October, 1933, until September, 1935, and who has been active in the motion picture industry for a considerable period, reported that in 1934 the Communist Party realized the propaganda possibilities in the motion picture field and decided to move into the motion picture industry. He related that in the Spring of 1935 direct orders came down in mimeographed form from the top structure of the Communist Party, USA, to all units in the Los Angeles area instructing them to intensify and concentrate their activities on Hollywood and the motion picture industry. This directive emphasized the fact that Communists must try to capture the labor unions and pointed out that if this were done, the unions could be of tremendous service in influencing the type of pictures produced and thus serving the Communist cause. It should be pointed out that Informant [redacted] did not furnish this information to the Bureau until 1942, and, consequently, this mimeographed form referred to by him is not available.

John L. Leech who, in 1934, was the Organizational Secretary of the Los Angeles County Communist Party, gave testimony before the Los Angeles County Grand Jury on August 14, 1940. On this occasion he testified that Jeff Kibre was a member of the Communist Party in Hollywood in 1934. He further testified that V. J. Jerome, a prominent Marxian Communist who has been engaged in the Communist propaganda field, was sent in the latter part of 1935 by National Communist Party Headquarters to Hollywood at which time Jerome sought the aid of Jeff Kibre in setting up plans for capturing the Hollywood motion picture industry for the Communist Party.

Ezra F. Chase, identified in 1939 as having been a member of the Communist Party for a period of seven years or more, swore to an affidavit in Los Angeles on March 19, 1939, that Jeff Kibre was a member of the Communist Party. His affidavit further stated that Jeff Kibre was at that time assigned to "special" work in the studio unions, more specifically in the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, Local #37 to the organizing of special studio units of the Communist Party.

[redacted] of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, who has been active in the trade union movement in Hollywood for a number of years and who is familiar with the activities of the Communist Party members in connection with labor groups in the motion picture industry, related that the Communist penetration of the motion picture unions began in 1934 or 1935 when a meeting was held in Carmel, California, at which the principal figure, one Mr. Michael Eistein, then attached to the Amtorg Trading Corporation and bearing the title of "Commissar of Heavy Industries of the U.S.S.R.", was present as well as a number of Hollywood personalities.

He stated arrangements were made at this meeting to finance the program of infiltration into the Hollywood studio enterprise and these arrangements later resulted in the establishment of Mr. Jeff Kibre as the individual chosen by the Communist organization to carry out its designs.

Confidential Informant [redacted] stated that in the early days of the motion picture industry there apparently was no consistency in the labor organizational set-up. The principal active labor organization was the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees (IATSE).

International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees

Confidential Informant [redacted] reported that this was an autonomous group of local labor unions identified with the American Federation of Labor. The International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees' jurisdiction was recognized as the only union organization in Hollywood for a number of years. However, on two occasions, in 1921 and in 1933, strikes were called by this organization which were completely unsuccessful. In each case the strike was the result of a jurisdictional dispute and was broken by members of outside unions entering the field as strikebreakers. [redacted] related that these unsuccessful strikes brought about a very chaotic condition in the labor field in 1933 which caused many of the workers to lose confidence in the American Federation of Labor (AFL). As a result, the Communist Party had little difficulty in moving into the unorganized field with the Motion Picture Workers Industrial Union.

In 1937, after the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees had reestablished themselves following the disastrous strike in 1933, one local union emerged covering what is known as the "backyard crafts" which crafts are normally identified with stage and theatrical workers such as electricians and grips. While this controversy in the trade union movement was continuing in the motion picture studios, a new attack was attempted on the established unions by an organization known as the United Studio Technicians Guild. This Guild was headed by Jeff Kibre who was attempting to set up an overall industrial union.

Before the establishment of the United Studio Technicians Guild, numerous smaller groups such as the Federation of Motion Picture Crafts and an organization which became known as the COMPAC (Committee of Motion Picture Arts and Crafts) as well as an unemployed conference all of which, according to Brewer, were obviously Communist front groups used to agitate in an effort to destroy the unions which were already organized under the AFL. According to Brewer, the struggle for domination within the labor movement in the motion picture studios did not develop into a major controversy until 1936 when the principal factor in establishing the importance of the United Studio Technicians Guild fight was a decision of the National Labor Relations Board which challenged the validity of a contract which the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees had entered into in 1936. Following this decision there was held an election which was promulgated by a petition filed by the United Studio Technicians Guild. This election resulted in the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees' winning by a substantial majority. However, Local #644 of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Herbert K. Sorrell, who had only recently come into power in this Union, did not support the other AFL unions, actively campaigning on the side of the United Studio Technicians Guild. Sorrell's Communist connections will be taken up separately in this section of the memorandum. Following the defeat of the United Studio Technicians Guild, Kibre disappeared from the Hollywood motion picture studio labor field and his organization dissolved.

During the years of 1937 and 1938, the AFL and affiliated unions in the motion picture industry in Hollywood were greatly disturbed over the Communists' efforts to wreck or disturb the union and consequently at the union's 35th Convention held at Louisville, Kentucky, from June 3 to 6, 1940, a report was prepared which set out numerous exhibits in the form of letters written by either Jeff Kibre, aforementioned, or Roy Hudson, a national functionary of the Communist Party who is at present District Leader of the Party in the Pittsburgh area. This report, a photographic copy of which is maintained in the files of this Bureau, contains a lengthy report of Jeff Kibre dated April 23, 1928, in Hollywood, entitled "Report on Hollywood.... Review of Plan and Objectives for Past Several Months". One portion of it refers to a studio unemployment conference representing a group of unions and guilds banded together in a broad anti-International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees movement as a preliminary to the formation of an industrial union.

Exhibit #2 of this report is Jeff Kibre's letter to one Bob Reed of 136 West 13th Street, New York City, dated February 9, 1938. Reed is identified in the report by J. W. Buzzell, Secretary of the Los Angeles Central Labor Council, as a member of the Actors' Equity in New York and an active organizer for the Communist Party. In this regard Kibre writes, "Well, one thing about the Reds, they seldom write except on business". Kibre refers to himself in the letter as the "undercover field representative for CIO in Hollywood". Kibre states "In the meantime I wish you would discuss the matter of 'I.A.' (International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees) action with Jack Stachel (national functionary of the Communist Party) and the necessity of my getting in touch with contacts in the various cities. I have taken it up with Paul Cline (at that time Los Angeles Communist Party functionary) but he feels a personal appeal by you or V. J. (V. J. Jerome) rather than communicating through official channels would get quicker results."

72

Exhibit #4 of this report is a letter from Roy Hudson, identified above, to Comrade Lambert at San Francisco, a copy of this letter being sent to Paul Cline in Los Angeles. This letter was dated June 21, 1938. Buzzell identified Lambert as Walter Lambert, a member of the Executive Committee of the California Communist Party. Roy Hudson, in the letter, states "On the basis of the above, it seems to me there should be a thorough reexamination of the methods of work of our people in Hollywood and especially the approach to the I.A.T.S.E.....Finally, I think that we should try and keep closer contact and have a more systematic change of information between our people in the I.A.T.S.E. in Hollywood and the people here in New York. Hereafter, when communications are sent they will be brought directly to the attention of our fraction here. Likewise we would like to have the names of people in Hollywood in this organization with whom our people here could correspond directly."

Motion Picture Workers Industrial Union

Informant [redacted] stated that this was an independent group completely under the control of Communist elements and taking orders directly from local Communist Party leaders. In the short time between the creation of this union in January of 1934 and April of 1935, it had obtained a large number of members and was well on its way to becoming the leading union in Hollywood. However, about that time instructions were sent out by the Central Committee of the Communist Party that the Party had changed its line from that of advocating the creation of separate unions under Communist control to that of affiliating with existing unions with the hope of taking over the control of these groups. In Hollywood the Communist activity was directed at affiliating with the AFL groups. These instructions called for the liquidation of all independent unions and their members sent in to the AFL unions. This policy was followed by the Motion Picture Workers Industrial Union which resulted in the gradual disintegration of this union. It was officially dissolved in February of 1936.

According to [redacted] during this same period the CIO was being organized by John L. Lewis and several attempts were made by the CIO to organize in the motion picture industry. There were at that time approximately 25 labor unions of various types in the motion picture industry. Some of these were affiliated with the AFL and the balance were independent unions [redacted] stated that in 1937 Herbert K. Sorrell became the President of the Studio Painters Local 644 of the International Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America, AFL. This union was a newly activated AFL group. Sorrell soon became the leader of the Communist factions among Hollywood labor circles. After he had developed the leaders of a number of locals which had strong Communist factions in them, he moved to set up an organization which would tie all the locals into one body under his domination.

Conference of Studio Unions

[redacted] of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees who has previously been referred to herein, stated that the Conference of Studio Unions was formed by nearly the same group of unions that had formed the COMPAC (Committee of Motion Picture Arts and Crafts), the Unemployed Conference and several other labor groups which had sprung up in Hollywood during the late 1930s. One significant addition, he related, which had been made to this group was Local #683 of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees which is a union composed of studio technicians. He related that the Conference of Studio Unions took up the Communist fight where the United Studio Technicians Guild had left off only utilizing a different tactical approach. The Conference of Studio Unions was designed to form a wedge between the membership of the AFL and the International Unions of the AFL and at the same time to establish a solid front of those unions which the Communists had been able to bring into their orbit.

Confidential Informant [redacted] refers to this group as a small compact organization composed of delegates or representatives of a bloc of labor unions in the Hollywood motion picture industry which is under the control of the Communist Party operating through its members in those unions which have captured key positions. It has further been described as a Hollywood studio labor group to act as the control and steering committee which coordinates and directs Communist union activities, looking toward the taking over of all studio workers and their unions into the Communist Party orbit. The Conference of Studio Unions, according to [redacted] is the organization upon which the Communist Party relies for eventual complete domination of motion picture unions.

As the Conference of Studio Unions organization developed, [redacted] related, Herbert Sorrell began to emerge as the overall leader of the Communist fraction in the Hollywood motion picture studio unions. He stated that the Conference of Studio Unions was officially organized in 1941 at which time its activities were outlined as follows: to organize all unorganized groups in the studios into unions which the Communists could control and in the absence of any union to suit the particular craft, place workers in the Painters Union which was headed by Sorrell. [redacted] related that the Conference of Studio Unions, following its organization in 1941, supported the Communist Party line completely, carrying on a program of agitation in which they cried for local autonomy and democratic unionism generally advocating contempt and disregard for the authority of officers within the union above the local level.

The unions, as of October, 1946, which composed the Conference of Studio Unions were as follows. It will be noted that of the eleven unions listed, ten are associated with the AFL:

Local	Parent Organization
Screen Set Designers Local 1421, AFL	Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America
Screen Publicists Guild Local 1489, AFL	Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America
Screen Story Analyst Guild Local 1488, AFL	Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America
Screen Cartoonists Guild Local 852, AFL	Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America
Moving Picture Painters and Scenic Artists, Local 644, AFL	Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America
Special Officers and Guards Local 193, AFL	Building Service Employees International Union
Building Service Employees Local 278, AFL	Building Service Employees International Union
Studio Carpenters Local 946, AFL	United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America
Studio Electrical Workers Local 40, AFL	International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers
Studio Sheet Metal Workers Local 108, AFL	Studio Metal Workers International Union
Studio Machinists Local Cinema Lodge 1185	International Association of Machinists

[redacted] related that since the origin of the Conference of Studio Unions, several strikes have developed in the motion picture industry which basically were the result of jurisdictional disputes between the Communist bloc or Conference of Studio Unions and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees under the leadership of Richard Walsh, International President.

Concerning these strikes participated in by the Conference of Studio Unions, Informant [redacted] has advised that they were not legitimate labor disputes but rather strikes by a group of Communist dominated local unions using the question of jurisdiction as an excuse to create a strike. [redacted] stated that these disputes have been attempts by the Communist element to disrupt the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, and that the Communist issue was usually the question around which the dispute revolved rather than the usual issue of wages, hours, or working conditions. He related that Herbert K. Sorrell, head of the Conference of Studio Unions, received the support of the Communist Party locals in these jurisdictional disputes.

[redacted] related that during the period of the Conference of Studio Unions' development, the Communist propaganda machine was making full use of the war and the period of cooperation with Russia in order to strengthen its position in Hollywood. The Communists during this period established several political fronts, according to [redacted] and made successful penetrations into several of the active crafts and guilds within the motion picture industry. This struggle for power within the Hollywood studio motion picture unions was climaxed by the 1945 jurisdictional dispute.

Informant [redacted] related that on March 12, 1945, a jurisdictional dispute between the Conference of Studio Unions and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees precipitated a strike which was purely political in character and was an attempt on the part of the Conference of Studio Unions to break the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees unions in Hollywood. [redacted] continued that from March 12, 1945, until July 28, the Communist Party Line in the United States was one of collaboration which had been adopted at the time Russia was invaded by Germany in June of 1941. He stated that in view of this, the Communist Party did not take an active part in this strike. However, on July 28, 1945, the Communist Political Association reverted to the tenets of the Communist Party, USA, and elected William Z. Foster as the new National Chairman. [redacted] related that on this occasion the Party announced that it would relinquish its Browder revisionist policies and return to the basic Marxist-Leninist principles. Immediately after the change in the Party Line, the Communist press began to support the strike and the Communist Party in Los Angeles began to issue leaflets through its various branches calling on the workers to man the picket lines in the strike.

As a further verification of the Communist Party's attitude toward this strike, it should be pointed out that on March 15, 1945, the West Coast Communist newspaper, the daily "People's World", carried an editorial captioned "End the Movie Strike at Once". This editorial pointed out that strikes in wartime were not under any circumstances permissible and further went on to discuss at length the fact that there is no excuse for any kind of a strike when the nation is at war. However, an editorial appearing in the July 24, 1945, issue of the People's World captioned "Support the Strike of the Film Unions" reflected that this motion picture strike was no longer a jurisdictional dispute as it had originally been represented to be by the producers but that it has now been revealed to be a strike of the union versus anti-union forces. The editorial concluded by stating that every effort should be made by all conscientious workers to support the strike in every way.

According to Informant [redacted] it was obvious that the Communist Party and its members were whipping the situation toward the violent stage. During October of 1945 numerous individuals were injured and violence reached such a pitch that the public and traffic were not permitted in the vicinity of Warner Brothers Studio. This strike was settled on October 29, 1945, when an agreement was reached between high AFL union officials and Eric Johnston of the Motion Picture Producers Association.

Confidential Informant [redacted] related that the real purpose of the Conference of Studio Unions was two-fold: first, the union desired to keep the general labor situation agitated in line with the Communist Party program of creating confusion in the United States; and, secondly, to maintain intact the leadership of Herbert K. Sorrell.

A strike was again called on September 26, 1946, by the Conference of Studio Unions. Informant [redacted] as well as [redacted] who was in charge of the [redacted] advised that this strike was again a purely jurisdictional matter between the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and the Conference of Studio Unions. They stated that this was merely a continuation of the previous strike in 1945 which lasted for some eight months. This strike resulted in numerous strikers and union leaders being arrested in Los Angeles.

[redacted] related that some 1189 defendants were arrested in connection with this strike.

According to the records of the [redacted] on October 11, 1946, 26 defendants were arrested at the Technicolor Studios, charged with violation of Section 23.10 of the Los Angeles Municipal Code which is parading without a permit. Following the arrests, however, this Section of the Municipal Code was declared unconstitutional by the Appellate Division of the Los Angeles Court which resulted in all 26 defendants' being dismissed.

[redacted] stated that on October 14, 1946, 208 defendants were arrested at Columbia Studios charged with violation of failure to abide by the Court's injunction which prohibited mass picketing at the studio unions. Of the original number arrested, 113 defendants pled guilty; 41 were dismissed for lack of evidence; 47 were found not guilty; 6 defendants are off the calendar pending other action while 1 defendant jumped bond and there is at present a bench warrant outstanding for him. The disposition of these cases involved fines being levied against those convicted ranging from $30 to $200 each.

The records also reflected that on October 26, 1946, 125 defendants were arrested at Columbia Studios for violation of Municipal Code 23.10 (parading without a permit). Of the 125 arrested, 3 defendants were dismissed for lack of evidence; 11 pled guilty, receiving fines up to $25 or sentences up to 5 days; 30 were convicted, in most cases fines being imposed of from $10 to $75, however some fines were as high as $150; and in the case of James Shelton, he was sentenced to 30 days in jail. All of the above have appealed their cases. The trial on the additional 81 defendants is slated for October 15 pending the appeal of the 30 persons convicted in this case.

On November 15, 1946, 696 defendants were arrested at Columbia Studios charged with violating Municipal Code 23.10 (parading without a permit). Of these 600 pled guilty to the charge and each one paid a fine of $25; 88 defendants were dismissed for various reasons, it being pointed out by the Los Angeles City Attorney Donald M. Redwine that many of the officers used to make these mass arrests were inexperienced and not in permanent status with the Police Department. Consequently they could not be used to testify which resulted in insufficient evidence in many cases. The records also reflected that two persons made bail and forfeiture was made later resulting in bench warrants being issued for these two individuals. 6 defendants were taken off the calendar because they are defendants in Superior Court on conspiracy counts and will be referred to hereinafter.

On November 16, 1946, at Columbia Studios, an additional 124 defendants were arrested for violation of the California Penal Code 166.4 which has reference to the disregarding of a Superior Court order which in this case was an injunction prohibiting mass picketing. Of the 124 defendants, 70 were convicted. The minimum fine for each person was $300 and the maximum fine was $300 and one year in jail. 13 defendants were dismissed by the court because of insufficient evidence or the temporary status of the policemen making the arrests. 39 defendants were dismissed upon a motion of the City Attorney, and 2 defendants will be tried in October, 1947.

In addition to the above figures, [redacted] pointed out that there were 10 individual arrests made at various locations in the Hollywood area in connection with the motion picture strike.

Under date of November 22, 1946, the Los Angeles Daily News contained an article which reflected that felony indictments had been returned by the County Grand Jury on that date against 14 Hollywood film leaders for activity in the film strike. The article reflected that the 14 so indicted were arraigned before Judge William R. McKay and subsequently freed on $5,000 bail. Those charged were as follows:

Herbert K. Sorrell	Matthew Matison
Averill Berman	Carl Head
Ed Gilbert	Russell McKnight
Norval Crutcher	John Martin
James Skelton	Roy Tindall
Andrew Lawless	Frank Drdlik
Louis Whitman	Wilbur R. Highie

Specifically, Sorrell is accused of advising and encouraging the Conference of Studio Unions' members in their picketing of Columbia Studios. Berman is alleged to have incited pickets at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios during which demonstration several Deputy Sheriffs were injured. Gilbert, Matison and Frank Drdlik are charged with having incited pickets to disregard court orders at various union meetings. Lawless was accused of an attack upon Henry Siccardi, a non-striking film technician, on October 22, 1946. Sorrell, Matison and Gilbert are also named as having advised picketing of Columbia Studios on November 14, 1946. The other men are alleged to have directed picketing activities.

On July 19, 1947, Frank Barnes, Assistant District Attorney in Los Angeles, California, related that the indictments against Berman, Skelton, Tindall and Drdlik were dismissed because of insufficient evidence. He also stated that a challenge to the indictment had been presented which contended that the Grand Jury had not been selected in a manner provided by law. He stated that the Grand Jury did not represent a true cross section of society. Following is a brief background as well as the Communist affiliations of each of the individuals originally indicted:

Averill Joseph Berman

Berman is a Radio Commentator who resides at 1116-4/5 Tamarind, Hollywood, California. He was born on April 19, 1919, at Minneapolis, Minnesota. Berman was released on bond on November 19, 1946, after having been charged with violation of California Penal Code, Sections 182, 409, 166, 245 and 518. With regard to Berman's Communist connections, there exists to date no documentary evidence of his membership in the Los Angeles County Communist Party. However, he has been active on behalf of Communist front organizations in the Los Angeles area. A pamphlet was made available entitled "Campus Currents", which is a bulletin published by the Four Freedoms Club of the American Youth for Democracy, in Los Angeles. Page 1 of this bulletin for November 12, 1945, carried a heading, "Averill Berman, Addresses First AYD Meeting." The article stated that Berman, CIO reporter and Army orientation lecturer, highlighted the first meeting of the Four Freedoms Club on Friday, November 10, 1945. On January 9, 1946, Confidential Plant Informant, [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office, made available documentary evidence of an address made by Berman at the American Youth for Democracy Conference held on October 21, 1945, at Los Angeles City College.

[redacted] an active informant of the Los Angeles Office who furnishes [redacted] 6th C.D. Section of the Communist Party, provided a mimeographed announcement on July 29, 1946, distributed by the Executive Committee of this Section of the Communist Party urging members to attend a mass meeting scheduled for July 29, 1946, at the Gilmore Stadium Auto Parking Lot. Agents of the Los Angeles Office attending this meeting reported that Gordon Williams, candidate for the 59th Assembly District, State of California Legislature, was the Chairman of this meeting and that he introduced Averill Berman. Following Berman's talk, Williams introduced Emil Freed as Chairman of the 59th District Communist Club.

The East Side Journal, a local Los Angeles newspaper, on March 27, 1947, commented on the opinion expressed by Averill Berman in his news analysis over radio station KXLA. The newspaper specifically reflected that Berman pointed out the danger of Fascism in the proposed outlawing of the Communist Party and that he stated that the battle ground "has changed to the community where we must fight the corruption of our educational system, police force and local courts".

Norval Dixon Crutcher

Crutcher is Secretary-Treasurer of Local 683 of the Film Technicians Union, International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees. He resides at 2050 Hightower Street, Los Angeles, California. Crutcher was born in Louisville, Kentucky, on October 17, 1889. [redacted] Street, Los Angeles, stated that Crutcher joined the Communist Party in 1937 under the name of Norman Newman. [redacted] a discontinued paid informant of the Los Angeles Office who was formerly a member of the Los Angeles Police Department assigned to Communist and radical investigations, related that Crutcher joined the Communist Party on September 27, 1937, under the name of Norman Newman, having been recruited into the Party by Sidney Martin who was at that time one of the most active Communists in Hollywood.

Through [redacted] a functionary of the Communist Party in Los Angeles, it was ascertained that in 1944 Crutcher held 1944 Communist Political Association Card 47439. According to this source, the membership card was issued on December 6, 1944. Through this same source, it was also ascertained that Crutcher was also a member of the commission which governed the cultural and miscellaneous groups in the Hollywood area. Confidential Informant [redacted] related that in 1944, Crutcher was a member of the Hollywood Democratic Committee, an organization known to have been infiltrated by and under the influence of Communists.

Frank J. Drdlik

This individual, who is a member of the Set Designers Union #1421, resides at 5922 Carlton Way, Hollywood, California. Drdlik was born on August 19, 1901, in Yugoslavia. He was naturalized on February 20, 1922, in Douglas County, Nebraska, having Certificate #1659434. On May 17, 1947, an extremely reliable but highly delicate source advised that Drdlik was a member of the Communist Party. The record which this source made available was dated on December 11, 1945, and indicated he most probably had Communist Party membership card #49925.

Edward McCreary Gilbert

Gilbert, who is Business Agent of the Set Decorators Union #1421, resides at 1051 East Magnolia Avenue, Burbank, California. Gilbert, who is 43 years of age, has been affiliated with the Communist Party in Los Angeles for a considerable length of time. Through a highly confidential but thoroughly reliable source it was ascertained on February 11, 1947, that Gilbert had returned from special leave to the Whitman Branch of the Communist Party.

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office who is a member of the Communist Party, attended a homecoming party of the Walt Whitman Communist Party Club in Los Angeles on December 1, 1945, held at the home of Art and Evelyn Shapiro, both Communists, in honor of returned veterans. According to this reliable source, Gilbert was in attendance at this meeting.

This same source advised that on January 11, 1946, at a meeting of the Whitman Club of the Communist Party, Gilbert was nominated for the position of Chairman but declined after George Sandy, Los Angeles County Financial Director of the Communist Party, stated that Gilbert was "tied up in studio unions".

Carl C. Head, also known as Earl Clark Head

Head is chairman of the Conference of Studio Unions and Assistant Business Agent of the Painters Union Local #644. He resides at 143 North Mariposa, Los Angeles, California.

Head, who is 51 years of age, has not been identified as a member of the Communist Party in Los Angeles to date.

Wilbur R. Higbie, also known as Ray Higby

Higbie, who is a member of the Carpenters Union Local #946, resides at 909½ South Catalina Street, Los Angeles. Higbie, who is 47 years of age, has no previous Communist record according to the Los Angeles Office.

Herbert Knott Sorrell

Sorrell is the Business Agent of Local #644, Studio Painters Union, AFL, and is the President of the Conference of Studio Unions. Sorrell resides at 1153 Norton Avenue, Glendale, California. At the time of his arrest in November, 1946, Sorrell was 49 years of age.

The [redacted] records also show that Sorrell was arrested on November 8, 1930, on a gambling charge. As a result of this arrest, he was fined $10 and given 5 days in jail. In October, 1946, Tom Cavitt, Representative of the California Tenney Committee Investigating Un-American Activities, provided the Los Angeles Office with a photograph of a receipt for a Communist Party membership book #60622 on which appears the signature "Herb Stewart". The signature appears to have been started as "So" and then the "T" written over the "o". This receipt refers to book #74283 signed "Herbert Stewart".

[redacted] California, furnished the Los Angeles Office on June 6, 1941, with a 1938 Communist Party registration blank filled out in handprinting under the Party name: "Herbert Stewart". The Bureau's Laboratory, after a handwriting comparison, positively identified the document as having been prepared by Herbert K. Sorrell. The Los Angeles Office has no documentary evidence of membership on the part of Sorrell in the Communist Party or the Communist Political Association since 1938.

From [redacted] in Los Angeles, it was ascertained on October 31, 1945, that a discussion was had regarding the strike situation participated in by members of the Hollywood Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party. During this discussion the probability of having Herbert Sorrell actually join the Communist Party was discussed. MacClelland, who at that time was a functionary of the Hollywood Section, terminated this discussion by stating she had discussed this possibility with Sorrell, who advised her he had considered it but decided not to because he would turn red in the face if someone were to ask him if he were a member and it was necessary for him to reply that he was not, knowing himself that he actually was. MacClelland stated that Sorrell had advised her he was conscious of the class struggle.

A 6-page information bulletin released by the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees dated November 13, 1945, entitled "The Record of Herbert K. Sorrell, President of CSU (Conference of Studio Unions) and Strike Leader in the Hollywood Strike Commencing March 12, 1945" was obtained. The subheading for this bulletin was "Communist Activities from 1938 up to the Present Time". According to this bulletin, Sorrell was associated with the following organizations. The following quotations are taken directly from the bulletin:

"1. Motion Picture Democratic Committee. Herbert K. Sorrell was a member of this Executive Board and continued actively to support the new position of the organization, which was in strict conformance with the Communist Party line.

"2. Hollywood Democratic Committee. Herbert K. Sorrell now emerges as a member of the Executive Board of this organization, whose program is just the reverse of its predecessor where he was also a member of the Executive Board.

"3. Labor's Non-Partisan League. Herbert K. Sorrell was State President of this organization and opposed the third term for President Roosevelt, denouncing him for leading us into war.

"4. Patterson Slate. This organization opposed aid to England and was strictly isolationist. It followed the Communist Party line and was in sympathy with the aims of the Party.

"5. Workers Alliance. Herbert K. Sorrell was one of the speakers at a mass demonstration of this organization before the Hollywood District SHA headquarters, 245 South Western Avenue, March 7, 1940.

"6. National Federation for Constitutional Liberties. The Attorney General of the United States has pronounced this organization to be a Communist front. Herbert K. Sorrell in the official announcement of the meeting appears as one of the sponsors of this organization. This organization has followed every twist and turn of the Communist Party Line and is still in operation.

"7. Yanks Are Not Coming Committee. Herbert K. Sorrell was listed as one of the speakers at the Student Union, University of California at Los Angeles, on April 18, 1940. The purpose of the meeting was to induce the students of the college to stage a 'peace strike'.

"8. Schneiderman-Darcy Defense Committee. Herbert K. Sorrell was a member of the committee to protest the deportation of William Schneiderman and Samuel Darcy, two top officials of the Communist Party.

"9. Earl Browder. Sorrell sent a petition demanding the immediate release of Earl Browder, head of the Communist Party in the United States, during his incarceration in the Atlanta Penitentiary.

"10. Leo Gallagher Testimonial. Sorrell was one of the sponsors of a testimonial dinner given in honor of Leo Gallagher, Communist of the law firm of Katz, Gallagher and Margolis, given at the Wilshire Bowl in Los Angeles on June 2, 1941.

"11. Harry Bridges Committee to Defeat Deportation. Herbert Sorrell was one of the signers of an open letter addressed to the President of the United States protesting the deportation of Bridges.

"12. American Youth for Democracy. On December 1, 1944, the AYD in the Los Angeles area held a meeting for the celebration of the first anniversary of the change of the name Young Communist League to American Youth for Democracy. Herbert K. Sorrell was one of the sponsors of the meeting.

"13. People's World Press Conference. The People's World is a Communist publication on the West Coast. On August 4, 1943, a press conference was held for the benefit of this publication at 2936 West 8th Street, Los Angeles, California. Sorrell was one of the sponsors of the conference.

"14. Third Annual Convention, Los Angeles County Communist Party. This convention was held April 29 and 30 and May 1, 1938, at 121 West 18th Street, Los Angeles. Herbert K. Sorrell has denied that he has ever been a member of the Communist Party. A photostatic copy of the minutes of the above Communist convention shows the following names written on the back page: William Schneiderman, State Secretary of the Communist Party, District 13; Don Healy; High Wilkins; Herb Sorrell and Urchel Daniels."

Andrew Lawless

Lawless is a member of the Studio Painters Union #644 and resides at 10736 Lawler Street, Los Angeles, California. At the time of his arrest Lawless gave his age as 45.

On October 4, 1946, [redacted] Los Angeles, advised the Los Angeles Office by telephone that [redacted] Andrew Lawless, a carpenter, was taking a leading part in the studio strike in Hollywood. He described [redacted] Andrew as a "right-hand man of Herbert Sorrell". He stated [redacted] was a loyal American citizen who was not a member of the Communist Party. [redacted] readily admitted the fact that there were numerous Communists in the Conference of Studio Unions.

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office advised that Andrew Lawless was "one of the sluggers for Herbert Sorrell". [redacted] related that, although Lawless has "played along with the Communists", he did not believe him to be an actual member of the Communist Party.

Russell L. McKnight

McKnight is the President of Local #683 which is the Film Technicians Union affiliated with the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees. McKnight resides at 4317 Bakman Street, North Hollywood, California, and at the time of his arrest in November, 1946, he gave his age as 33.

The masthead of the November, 1943, issue of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, Local 683, publication called "Flashes" reflects that Russell L. McKnight was President of the organization. Norval D. Crutcher, previously identified as a Communist, was Secretary and Treasurer.

On July 21, 1947, [redacted] who is an investigator of the Los Angeles District Attorney's Office, exhibited a sworn statement which he took from [redacted] in the office of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees on April 1, 1947. This statement was taken in connection with the Conference of Studio Unions' Strike. The following excerpts were taken from this statement reflecting McKnight's Communist tendencies. According to [redacted] in 1944 he was working as technical editor of the magazine "Flashes". He related that during this period he differed with the policies of McKnight who was the editor of the magazine. He stated he told McKnight that he was plugging Communism and that it was [redacted] desire that the magazine contain writings of a technical nature. [redacted] stated it was his wish to publish a magazine representative of the film technicians and not a magazine dealing in politics or Communism. Continuing his comments regarding his differences with McKnight in the publication of the magazine, he stated as follows:

> "Then when he went so far to the left that I couldn't take it any longer -- I couldn't ask people like Bell and Howell to advertise in a paper that showed a cartoon of Westbrook Pegler living in a sewer and called the President a Fascist. I couldn't go for that. Then he called me a Fascist and I resigned. I told him I won't go on with this stuff. He said, 'O.K., across your card at the union office which I have filed I have written "traitor"'. I said, 'All right then, and when your office is some day broken into by the FBI, I will be very happy to have them see that record, that I was not one of your party'. Those are my exact words to him."

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office, reported that Russell McKnight ran for the Los Angeles City Council from the Hollywood area in the 1947 Spring elections, but was defeated. He advised that the Communist Party supported McKnight and commented as follows regarding the Communist Party support given him. [redacted] stated he was present at a meeting of the Communist Club held on February 18, 1947, at which John Stapp, Hollywood functionary of the Communist Party, stated that the Party agreed to handle completely the 125 precincts in the second district for the McKnight campaign, working in the name of the campaign and not in the name of the Party. He stated that the progressive AFL had come out in favor of McKnight. He related that the Communist Party was only supporting and not endorsing McKnight, continuing that "We endorse only Communist candidates".

John R. Martin

Martin is the Business Representative of Local 683, Film Technicians Union, and resides at 2144 Midvale Avenue, West Los Angeles.

The Hollywood Reporter for March 2, 1945, (a trade paper) stated that John R. Martin was a member of the Board of Hollywood Guilds and Unions. Confidential Informant [redacted] related that an organization known as the "Motion Picture Labor Committee for Political Action" was set up on September 6, 1943, at a meeting held at 1627 Tujunga Boulevard. The purpose of this organization, according to [redacted] was ostensibly to take part in the forthcoming elections, nationally and locally and to elect candidates favorable to the cause of the Communist Party. John R. Martin attended this meeting representing his Local Union #683. The masthead of the November, 1943, issue of "Flashes", previously identified, reflected that Martin was the Business Agent with known Communist Norval D. Crutcher, previously referred to herein, as Secretary-Treasurer.

Matthew Irving Matison (frequently spelled Mattison)

Matison is the President of the Screen Story Analysts Guild. He resides at 8441 Ukon Trail, Court #2, Canoga Park, California. Matison was born in Boston, Massachusetts, on May 30, 1915. The records of the Registry Department in the City of Boston reflect that Matison's father and mother were born in Russia.

On March 25, 1945, Confidential Informant [redacted] a paid reliable informant of the Los Angeles Office, who has access [redacted] Communist Party headquarters in Los Angeles, produced a piece of paper with the following notation thereon:

> "(March 20, 1945). Matthew Matison, No. 75899 (1945) from East End Club, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. Has no transfer. Lives with George Maki of the East Los Angeles Club, 4306 East 5th Street, Los Angeles 22. Looking for work. From New England."

Through this same source, it was ascertained in March, 1945, that Matthew Matison, who was issued Communist Political Association membership card 75899 was transferred from the East End Club of Pittsburgh Communist Political Association to the Los Angeles County Communist Political Association. It was also ascertained through a highly confidential and delicate source that Matison was a member of the North Hollywood Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party during 1946.

James N. Skelton

The Business Agent of Local 946 of the Studio Carpenters, AFL, Skelton resides at 3760 Dover Street, Los Angeles, California. According to Confidential Informant [redacted] Skelton is not a Communist and he is definitely anti-Communist. He stated that Skelton accepts the support of the Communists to try to win the strike for the Conference of Studio Unions.

Roy Tindall, with alias Roy Tyndall

Tindall is the Business Agent of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local #40. He resides at 1225 North Highland, Los Angeles, California. There is no information available in the Los Angeles Field Division reflecting that Tindall has any connections with the Communist Party.

Louis Whitman

This individual is a member of the Studio Carpenters Union Local 946 and was a picket captain in the Conference of Studio Unions' strike. He resides at 935½ North Vendome Street, Los Angeles. At the time of Whitman's arrest, he gave his age as 50 and Social Security number as 067-16-0680. The Los Angeles Office has no information or evidence that Whitman is a member of the Communist Party.

The Los Angeles Daily News of July 7, 1947, carried an article reflecting that 11 major Hollywood Studios in the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees were sued on July 7, 1947, for $43,000,000 by the striking Conference of Studio Unions. According to the article, former Attorney General for the State of California, Robert W. Kenny, and his law partner, Morris E. Cohn, filed suit in Federal Court. The suit was based on the provisions of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act charging the existence of a "back scratching" agreement between the producers and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees to kill off competition in their respective fields. If the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees helped the major studios kill off independent competition, the suit said, the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees would help the major producers crush the Conference of Studio Unions. The suit charged that Willie Bioff, former head of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, who, according to the news article, was convicted of extorting bribes in the film industry still "formulates, directs and supervises the affairs of the defendant, the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees". The article also reflected that this was the second million dollar suit filed in four days relating to the 10 month old Conference of Studio Unions strike. Sixteen members of the AFL Studio Carpenters Brotherhood asked for $28,000,000 in back pay in a suit filed against the major producers and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees.

Screen Writers Guild

The Motion Picture Almanac for 1942 and 1943 reflected that the Screen Writers Guild was an affiliate of the Authors League of America, Inc.

The Authors League of America does not have a local organization in Los Angeles. The representative of the Authors League of America in Los Angeles until recently was Ann Roth Morgan, who was secretary of the Screen Writers Guild. According to a highly confidential but most delicate source, Morgan was a member of the Communist Party, USA, assigned to Branch A-1 of the Northwest Section, and as of November 1[illegible], 1945, was a member of the Communist Party, Northwest Section, Los Angeles, California.

The Hollywood Press Times, (a weekly "throw away" tabloid which according to informant [redacted] followed the Communist Party line) for November 10, 1944, reflected that the Screen Writers Guild was organized in 1933 in the Hollywood motion picture industry. Informant [redacted] has reported that this was one of the first unions in the cultural field to come under the influence of Communists in Hollywood. He related that among the original organizers were John Howard Lawson, Samuel Ornitz, and Guy Endore. These individuals who have been identified as Communists, are referred to in Section I of this memorandum where their Communist affiliations are set forth. According to [redacted] John Howard Lawson, Robert Rossen, Lester Cole, Hugo Butler, Waldo Salt, and Ring Lardner, Jr., are among the leading Communists in the Guild who have been most influential in the forming of its policies. All of these individuals have been identified as Communists and their Communist affiliations are set out in Section I of this memorandum.

[redacted]
California, [illegible] June, 1945, [redacted]
Screen Writers Guild. He stated that between 1935 and 1939, he realized that Communists were gaining control of the Screen Writers Guild. He related that the Communists gained this control through their untiring efforts in seeking to project their ideals in the Guild. He stated that they called more meetings "than any human being but one interest in Communism could ever desire to attend". He recalled specifically that from 1935 to 1939 he spent almost all of his evenings attending meetings primarily directed at his personal effort to keep the Communists from controlling the Screen Writers Guild. He related that after years of fighting, he found it impossible to do anything about the Communist control of the Guild which resulted in his withdrawing his membership. He emphatically stated that there was no question in his mind but that the Communist element was in complete control despite the fact that the majority of the membership in the Screen Writers Guild, in his opinion, were neither Communist members nor Communist sympathizers. This source related that John Howard Lawson has a strong influence on the members of the Executive Board of the Screen Writers Guild. He related that in his opinion, John Howard Lawson, Gordon Kahn and Ring Lardner, Jr., are the three most dangerous Communists in Hollywood.

According to the organization's official publication in June of 1945 there were approximately 13,000 members of the Screen Writers Guild.

Of this number about 100 were identified as Communists at that time through information obtained by a very confidential but extremely delicate source. The names of these individuals who are still affiliated with the motion picture industry are set out in Section I of this memorandum. In addition, a great many others, according to [redacted] were associates of Communists, reported to be sympathetic to Communist ideologies and/or members of Communist front organizations.

However, in order to show the true significance of these figures, it is necessary to consider the reports of such confidential informants as [redacted] as well as [redacted] of the Motion Picture Alliance for the Preservation of American Ideals, the latter group having been formed to oppose Communist influence in the motion picture industry during February of 1944. These informants have stated that the Screen Writers Guild is actually controlled and operated by between 100 and 300 members who take an active interest in the work of the organization. As a further clarification of these figures, it was noted that in January of 1946, the "Screen Writer", the official publication of the Screen Writers Guild, contained a report reflecting that there were 1317 members of the Screen Writers Guild. The report classified 972 members as being active and 345 as associate members. The associate members were identified as writers who have been elevated to directorships or producerships in the motion picture industry. It also pointed out that of the 972 members of the Screen Writers Guild, only 366 were employed at that time in the eight major studios in the motion picture industry.

Informan[redacted] related that the majority of the members of the Screen Writers Guild belonged to the Guild as a bargaining agency and not for any "political reasons". However, Communists belong to the Guild for "political reasons". Hence the majority of the members of the Screen Writers Guild do not attend the regular meetings and take no active interest in the Guild. [redacted] of the Motion Picture Alliance, [redacted] Beverley Hills, California, reported that for 14 years he carried on an open fight with the leaders of the Screen Writers Guild due to the fact that it was completely dominated and controlled by Communists since its organization. He identified the following individuals as the principal figures in the Communist controlled group.

John Howard Lawson	Lester Cole
Sam Ornitz	Borris Ingster
Gordon Kahn	John Bright
Fred Rinaldo	Dorothy Parker
Dashiell Hammett	Marian Spitzer
Donald Ogden Stewart	Ring Lardner, Jr.

[redacted] stated that he is certain that these individuals are all Communists. He continued by relating that many years ago he thought a man could not be called a Communist unless he carried a card (Communist Party membership card) but that he has come to learn that the most dangerous Communists do not carry cards. He related that he could prove every one of these individuals was a Communist by his strict adherence to the Communist Party policy over the past 14 year period.

According to the Hollywood Reporter a Hollywood studio daily paper, dated August 21, 1946, the "second report on Un-American Activities in California, published by the Joint Fact-Finding Committee of the State Legislature, stated that the Committee members consider John Howard Lawson one of the most important Marxist strategists in Southern California. John Leech, former Secretary of the Communist Party for Los Angeles County, testified before the Los Angeles County Grand Jury that Lawson had been sent from New York to Hollywood by the Central Committee of the Communist Party and that he had immediately become active in Hollywood Study Clubs and in the Communist faction of studio unions, particularly in the organization of the Screen Writers Guild. Leech stated that Lawson became a dominant figure in Communist Party drama groups and attended Communist Party faction meetings in New York and Hollywood. Thus, Leech's testimony establishes that the Screen Writers Guild's founder, the first president, came directly to Hollywood from Communist Headquarters in New York and that the establishment of the Screen Writers Guild was the mission he was entrusted with by that headquarters. Lawson was the first commissar of thought planted by the Communist Party in the motion picture industry."

[redacted] of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, on July 17, 1947, stated that the Screen Writers Guild is definitely under the control of the Communist Party, principally through three men, John Howard Lawson, its founder; Gordon Kahn and Emmet Lavery, the present President of the group. According to this source, all three of these individuals are Communists. He stated that they do not necessarily have membership cards in the Party so far as any documentary proof is concerned but their policies and dealings in the Screen Writers Guild which have always coincided with the current Communist Party Line, cause him to believe they are Communists. He related he thinks Lavery knows what "the score is" and "Party member or not, he is not being innocently taken in by the Communist Party".

The Communist connections of Kahn and Lawson are set out in Section I of this memorandum.

There is no evidence in the Los Angeles Office indicating Lavery is a member of the Communist Party. However, [redacted] former National Communist functionary [redacted] who is now acting as an informant for the New York Office, related that Emmet Lavery is supposed to be a well-known Catholic. According to [redacted] it was felt by the Party that because of Lavery's being known as a Catholic, Lavery could be effective where a man better known for his Communist connections might have been at a disadvantage. Although supposedly a Catholic, [redacted] related Lavery was regarded by Communist Party leaders at the National Headquarters as a loyal and faithful follower of the Communist Party Line. [redacted] remarked that Lavery might not have been as much under the influence and control of the Communists at the outset of his affiliation with the Guild as he became later on. He may have eventually become an actual member of the Communist Party although [redacted] was not sure of this. In any case, Communist leaders were well aware of Lavery's weaknesses and made very good use of him in connection with their program in the Screen Writers Guild.

[redacted] related that, with regard to the Screen Writers Guild generally, the Communists were either organizers of or a big factor in the organization of the Screen Writers Guild. He stated that the Communists definitely have control of this organization and that the development of the Guild was part of the Communist program to infiltrate the movie industry and to dictate policies to the industry. He stated that he recalls hearing the Screen Writers Guild and its activities discussed by the Communist leaders and remembers discussions by the Cultural Committee of the Communist Party in which it was agreed that the control of the writers in Hollywood would provide the wedge for control of all Hollywood. The purpose of the Guild, he stated, was to obtain better conditions for its members and to further the Communist Party's position in influencing public opinion. After the Guild was fully organized, [redacted] related the Party used it in many ways including for the purpose of "pulling the leg of management". In accordance with Communist Party strategy of using the negative approach when the positive was found to be unsuccessful or unsuitable, the Guild was also utilized successfully for its "disintegrating effect". [redacted] explained that he meant by this that management and influential persons were forced into line to avoid criticism. So-called "experts" within the Guild have been, by belittling and harping along certain lines, effective in isolating persons who opposed the Party's line or at least were successful in destroying their effectiveness. [redacted] knows from reports seen by him at the Daily Worker Office and at Party Headquarters, that at the time he left the Party which was in the Fall of 1945, the Guild was as completely under the Party's control as such organizations as the International Workers Order.

The May, 1946, issue of "Screen Writer", listed the Screen Writers Guild's studio chairmen. This list included Melvin Levy for Columbia Studios, Isobel Lennart for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Abe Polonsky for Paramount, and Henry Myers for RKO. All of these individuals have been identified as Communists and their Communist affiliations are set out in Section I.

According to the "Screen Writer," Volume No. III, No. 2, dated July, 1947, the present officers and executive board members of the Screen Writers Guild are as follows:

Emmet Lavery	President
Mary McCall, Jr.	First Vice President
Howard Estabrook	Second Vice President
Hugo Butler	Third Vice President
F. Hugh Herbert	Secretary
Harold Buchman	Treasurer

Executive Board

Melvill Baker	F. Hugh Herbert
Harold Buchman	Talbot Jennings
Hugo Butler	Ring Lardner, Jr.
James M. Cain	Ranald MacDougall
Lester Cole	Mary McCall, Jr.
Philip Dunne	George Seaton
Howard Estabrook	Leo Townsend

Alternate Executive Board Members

Maurice Rapf	Henry Myers
Gordon Kahn	David Hertz
Isobel Lennart	Morris E. Cohn, Counsel
Valentine Daview	Alice Penneman, Secretary

Of the above 28 officers and executives the following 10 are, or have been, members of the Communist Party.

Harold Buchman

Buchman has been identified through a highly confidential but most delicate technique on August 31, 1944, January 8 and 16, February 26 and November 19, 1945, as a member of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party or Communist Political Association. Through this source it was also ascertained that he was a functionary of the Party and held 1945 Book #46802.

Hugo Butler

Through this same source it was ascertained on August 31, 1944, January 8 and 16, 1945, and February 26, 1945, that Butler was a member of Branch A-3 of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party and that he had been a member of the Communist Political Association.

Lester Cole

The same source advised that on August 31, 1944, January 8 and 16, 1945, and February 26, 1945, Cole was a member of Branch A-3 of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Political Association and his 1945 Book Number was 46805.

David Hertz

The same confidential source also related that on January 16, 1945, Hertz was a member of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Political Association.

Gordon Kahn

The same source related that on August 31, 1944, January 8 and 16, February 26, and November 19, 1945, Kahn was a member of the Northwest Section of the Communist Political Association or the Communist Party. His 1945 Book was #46823.

Ring Lardner, Jr.

On August 31, 1944, January 8 and 16, February 26 and November 19, 1945, the same confidential source advised that Lardner was a member of Branch A-1 of the Los Angeles County Communist Political Association or Communist Party. He held 1945 Book #46806.

Isobel Lennart

The same source related that on August 31, 1944, January 8 and 16, February 26, and November 19, 1945, Lennart was a member of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party or the Los Angeles Communist Political Association. She held 1945 book #46816.

Henry Myers, also known as Henry Meyers

On August 31, 1944, January 8 and 16, and February 26, 1945, the same source advised that Myers was a member of the Los Angeles County Communist Political Association and in 1945 held Book #41819.

Lawrice Rapf

On August 31, 1944, January 8 and 16, February 26 and November 19, 1945, Rapf was a member of Branch A-1 of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Political Association or Communist Party, according to the same source. In addition this source reported that he was a member of the Communist Party in 1943, at that time listed as a functionary of the Northwest Section.

Leo Townsend

On August 31, 1944, January 8 and 16, February 26 and November 19, 1945, Townsend was a member of Branch A-1 of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party and held 1945 Book #41824. In addition, he was also a member of the Communist Political Association.

Former Special Agent [redacted] on December 11, 1946, ascertained that Ann Roth Morgan, 860 Westmont Drive, Los Angeles, and Ruth Birnkrant were employed as secretaries in the office of the Screen Writers Guild. This highly confidential but delicate source, referred to above, on January 16, 1945, identified both of these women as members of the Los Angeles County Communist Political Association.

The "Screen Writer", which is the official publication of the Screen Writers Guild, is a monthly publication. The following individuals are responsible for its publication, according to Volume 3, Number 2, dated July, 1947:

Editor:	Gordon Kahn
Director of Publications:	Robert Shaw
Editorial Committee:	Art Arthur	Herbert Clyde Lewis
	Martin Field	Harris Gable
	Richard Hubler	Lester Koenig
	Isobel Lennart	Ronald MacDougall
	Bernard Schoenfeld	Theodore Strauss

In addition to the above, a review of the December, 1946, and January, 1947, issues of the Screen Writer was made and it was noted that the following individuals have had responsibilities in connection with the publication of the magazine:

Editorial Committee:	Sidney Boehm
Director of Publications in 1946:	Harold J. Salemson
Editorial Committee:	Paul Trivers
Editor in 1946:	Dalton Trumbo
	Adele Buffington
	Philip Dunne
	Ring Lardner, Jr.
	Sonya Levien
	Stephen Morehouse Avery

Of the 21 individuals listed above, 8 are or have been members of the Communist Party or Communist Political Association. They includes

Herbert Clyde Lewis	Bernard Schoenfeld
Theodore Strauss	Paul Trivers
Dalton Trumbo	Gordon Kahn
Isobel Lennart	Ring Lardner, Jr.

The Communist connections of these individuals are set out in Section I of this memorandum.

Exemplar of the influence had by these Communists within the organization was the October, 1946, issue of the "Screen Writer". In this publication, an editorial appears concerning the Communist-inspired American Authors Authority; an article concerning the scope of the Screen Writers Guild; a third article by Communists Howard Dimsdale and Guy Endore; a fourth article on a technical phase of writing; the fifth on opinions and motion pictures; and the sixth by Communist screen writer Lester Cole on wage negotiations for screen writers. The Communist affiliations of Howard Dimsdale, Guy Endore and Lester Cole are set out in Section I.

In the back of the publication, there is a section entitled "News Notes". An analysis of these notes also clearly shows how the Communist cause is disseminated by this publication. For example, "News Notes" in this issue carried an announcement by the California Labor School, a Communist inspired group, of a series of courses, a production by the Communist influenced Actors Laboratory, an announcement of the Communist influenced People's Educational Center carrying details of the curriculum of this school as well as a report concerning the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, a Communist influenced group. The Communist connections of the Actors Laboratory, the People's Educational Center, and the Hollywood Writers Mobilization are set out in Section III of this memorandum.

The American Authors Authority, previously referred to, was said to have been established and conceived by the Screen Writers Guild. The inception of this plan, according to the "Screen Writer", resulted from a meeting of the Screen Writers Guild Original Material Committee of which Communist Ring Lardner is the head. Confidential Informant [redacted] advised on December 13, 1946, that the American Authors Authority is a proposed agency to be set up by the Authors League of America and its affiliated branches, the Authors Guild, the Dramatists Guild, the Radio Writers Guild and the Screen Writers Guild. The purpose of this agency is to protect the economic interests of all writers and authors of every kind who write for the screen, for publishing houses, magazines, radio, etc., by making this agency in effect an over all "holding agency" of all the written material produced by the writers in the United States. The formation of this American Authors Authority is based on one central idea, that is, that no writer may sell outright to any film company or publisher of any kind his written material but that such written material shall be "leased" only and that the copyright of all such material is assigned by the writer to the American Authors Authority when it is offered for sale originally. Thus, while the writer is technically the owner of the story, article or screen play, the copyright on same would be held by the American Authors Authority under its control. The American Authors Authority maintains that there are only three issues involved in the plan and states them as follows:

1. Under the authority they (the film producer or publisher) will not through re-makes be able to make two or more profits out of one story purchased.

2. They will be restrained from accepting as a free gift from the writer his secondary rights in any piece of material such as television, radio, serial, etc.

3. They will be restrained from freezing a writer's material on their shelves for an indefinite period while he watches the chances for other sales pass by.

Confidential Informant [redacted] related that the formation of the American Authors Authority within the Screen Writers Guild of Hollywood "has a relation to the general activities of the Communist Party as shown by the individuals of the over all committee of that guild and who are given the task of putting it across." The names appearing in this committee as reported by [redacted] are as follows:

Emmet Lavery, Chairman	Ring Lardner, Jr., Vice President
Robert Ardrey	Arthur Edmund Beloin
Alvah Bessie	True Boardman
James M. Cain	Morris E. Cohn
Philip Dunne	Joseph Fields
Audrey Finn	Everett Freeman
Frances Goodrich	Albert Hackett
T. Hugh Herbert	Boris Ingster
Albert Maltz	Mary McCall, Jr.
Sam Moore	Arch Oboler
William Pomerance	Allen Rivkin
Adele Rogers St. John	Louise Rousseau
Arthur Schwartz

Ring Lardner, Jr., Alvah Bessie and Albert Maltz have been identified as Communists in Section 1 of this memorandum. In addition, through a highly confidential but very delicate source, Aubrey Finn was identified August 31, 1944, January 8 and 16, and February 26, 1945, as a member of the Communist Party on special leave since December, 1942, having entered that status in January, 1943, from Branch-D of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party. In 1943 his Communist Party Book was #215153.

Through this same source on January 16, 1945, Sam Moore was identified as a member of Branch D of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Political Association. He was educational director of that Branch and was assigned Book #44635.

Through this same source, William Pomerance on January 16, 1945, was identified as a member of Branch A-3 of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Political Association and was assigned Communist Book #46294.

In this connection it is of interest to point out that it was ascertained [redacted] that Lawson on May 23, 1946, stated in a conversation with Bert Bargeman that the best method to fight "Fascism" was to Communize the writers and producers in Hollywood and, eventually, control every picture and fiction story produced in Hollywood. He continued that perhaps one day it would be possible to control every news article in the United States that the people read. By way of identification concerning Bert Bargeman, it should be pointed out that at that time she was employed as a secretary at the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

It is through the Communists in this group, the Screen Writers Guild, that Communist ideology is disseminated to the fellow traveler, Communist sympathizer, and unsuspecting writers who are affiliated with the Guild in the motion picture industry. The Communists and Communist pressure in the Guild thus caused the injection into motion picture scripts of Communist propaganda and the elimination of anti-Communist statements and scenes from original motion picture scripts.

Screen Writers Guild Members Connected with the Office of War Information Overseas Film Program

In July of 1945 over fifty writers, all members of the Screen Writers Guild, were working on scripts for pictures to be produced in conjunction with the Office of War Information Overseas Film Program. Among the editorial board members were the following members of the Screen Writers Guild:

John Howard Lawson	Robert Rossen
Marc Connelly	Howard Estabrook
Sidney Buchman	Howard Koch
Charles Brackett	Harry Tugend
John Houseman	Talbot Jennings

John Howard Lawson, Sidney Buchman and Robert Rossen have been identified as Communists, and their Communist Party affiliations are set out in Section I.

Marc Connelly has been reported by Informant [redacted] in 1944 as having been a member of the Communist Party. [redacted] has also stated that he was a member of the League of American Writers and the Hollywood Democratic Committee. The Communist connections of these two organizations are set out in Section III of this memorandum.

Charles Brackett has been identified by Informant [redacted] as having been a member of the Screen Writers Guild. The League of American Writers and the Hollywood Democratic Committee.

John Houseman has been identified by Informant [redacted] as having been a member of the League of American Writers. The People's World, a Communist publication for June 10, 1944, reflected that Houseman was a member of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

Howard Estabrook has been identified by Informant [redacted] as having been a member of the League of American Writers, an instructor at the Peoples Educational Center in Hollywood and a member of the Executive Council of Hollywood Democratic Committee.

Informant [redacted] has reported that Howard Koch has been a member of the League of American Writers, The Screen Writers Guild, and the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee for the Arts, Sciences and Professions.

Informant [redacted] has related with regard to Harry Tugend that he was a member of the Screen Writers Guild and a member of the Hollywood Democratic Committee. The People's World for June 10, 1944, reflected that Tugend was a member of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

According to Informant [redacted] Talbot Jennings was a member of the League of American Writers and the Screen Writers Guild.

As has been previously indicated in this section the organizational affiliations of the above individuals have been set out to show that these individuals have been connected with organizations which have been infiltrated by Communists or are under the influence of Communists. The organizations with which these individuals are affiliated are discussed in Section III of this memorandum.

Screen Actors Guild

On April 10, 1947, Special Agents of the Los Angeles Office interviewed Ronald Reagan and his wife, Jane Wyman, at their request in order that they might furnish information to this Bureau regarding the activities of some members of the Guild who they suspected were carrying on Communist Party work. Reagan advised that the Screen Actors Guild had 12 officers and that the work of the Guild was carried on principally through the Executive Board composed of 12 officers plus past presidents.

Reagan and his wife advised that for the past several months they had observed during the Guild meetings there were two "cliques" of members, one headed by Anne Revere and the other by Karen Morley which on all questions of policy confronting the Guild, followed the Communist Party Line. Reagan related that Revere and Morley do not appear to be particularly close, but whenever an occasion arises necessitating the appointment of some member to a committee or to an office, the two cliques invariably either nominate or support the same individual. Reagan and his wife listed the following actors and actresses as supporting Revere and Morley:

Alexander Knox	Howard DeSilva
Hume Cronyn	Dorothy Tree
Howland Chamberlain	Senela Royale

Reagan also mentioned Larry Parks has also supported this group on several occasions. Of the individuals mentioned by Reagan and his wife, those known to the Los Angeles Office as being or having been members of the Communist Political Association or the Communist Party are as follows:

Anne Revere	Karen Morley
Howard DeSilva	Dorothy Tree
Howland Chamberlain	Larry Parks

Reagan advised that recently an actor by the name of Lloyd Gough appeared to be a particularly close friend of Karen Morley and had very vociferously supported Revere and Morley. He stated that Gough had recently been named Chairman of the clique within the Guild which calls itself the "Combined Actors Committee". He related that this Committee includes in its membership the element which he and his wife consider the radical element. He also related that this group apparently meets separately prior to the Guild meetings and agrees on the policy it will follow at the meetings. Lloyd Gough was identified as a member of the Communist Party through a highly confidential but very delicate source in May of this year. Through another very reliable but extremely delicate source, it was ascertained that the records of the Communist Party have reflected that 71 members are listed as actors or actresses. Of this number, 54 have been verified through the Guild as Guild members, 42 of which are in a current status. This verification was made on July 31, 1947.

The following 42 persons currently in good standing with the Screen Actors Guild are known to be members of the Hollywood Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party and/or former members of the Los Angeles County Communist Political Association. The Communist affiliations of these actors and actresses are set out in Section I of this memorandum.

Georgia Backus	Helen Beverly
Roman Bohnen	Lloyd Bridges
Joseph Bromberg	Morris Carnovsky
Howland Chamberlin	Lee Cobb
Howard DeSilva	Mary Jo Ellis
Virginia Farmer	June Foray
Julie Gibson	Jody Gilbert
Lloyd Gough	Freddy Graff
Alvin Hammer	Tom Holland
Victoria Horne	Victor Killian
Mark Lawrence	Canada Lee
Norman Lloyd	Ray Mayer
John (Skins) Miller	Patricia Miller
Karen Morley	Ruth Nelson
Larry Parks	Stanley Prager
Lucien Privel	Anne Revere
Amelia Romano	Shimen Ruskin
Robin Short	Art Smith
Gale Sondergaard	Dorothy Tree
Peter Virgo	Ernest Whitman
Lynn Whitney	Buddy Yarus

Screen Cartoonists Guild

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office advised that the Screen Cartoonists Guild was organized and founded in the motion picture industry in Hollywood, California, during the Fall of 1939 as an independent union having jurisdiction over cartoonists, sketch artists and animators who were engaged in the motion picture industry.

He related that this union continued as an independent union until the Spring of 1941 at which time it secured a charter of affiliation with the AFL. [redacted] stated that after the charter was granted, a strike was called at the Walt Disney Studios which lasted for about 40 days. This strike according to [redacted] brought out conclusively that the Screen Cartoonists Guild was Communist infiltrated and was evidenced by the fact that the entire strength of the Communist machine in the Los Angeles and Hollywood areas was thrown into the strike, resulting in the anti-Communist unions in the studios entering the dispute to bring about a settlement. The strike was settled on July 9, 1941, with the Screen Cartoonists Guild gaining its objectives by being recognized as the sole bargaining agency for the cartoonists and the Communists in the Cartoonists Guild considered this a major victory.

[redacted] related that the persons chiefly responsible for the organization and founding of this guild included the following individuals:

Herbert K. Sorrell	David Hilberman
Ed M. Gilbert	Arthur Babbitt
Phyllis Lambertson	George E. Bodle
William Littlejohn

It should be noted with regard to the above that Herbert K. Sorrell is a former Communist. His background is set out under the section devoted to the Conference of Studio Unions.

Concerning David Hilberman, whose Party name is said to be William Foldal, Confidential Informant [redacted] related on May 2, 1943, that Hilberman was present at the Annual Communist Party May Day Festival held at the Los Angeles Breakfast Club and was responsible for the cartoon which was posted in that hall demanding a second front. Through a highly confidential and very delicate source, it was ascertained that Hilberman, on October 5, 1943, purchased a $25 War Bond through the Communist Party in Los Angeles. Former paid informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office related in January, 1944, that Hilberman joined the Communist Party in 1935 under the name of William Foldal and that he held 1939 Communist Party Book #3171.

With regard to Ed M. Gilbert, a highly confidential and extremely delicate source in May, 1947, made available information indicating that Gilbert had been a member of the Communist Party for 12 years and was an active member of the Party at that time.

With regard to the policies propagated by this group, Confidential Informant [redacted] has related that the Screen Cartoonists Guild, prior to the time Germany invaded Russia, came out strongly against United States aid to Britain and against the United States entry into the war. However, when Russia was invaded by the Germans, the Screen Cartoonists Guild called for the United States to enter the war and the establishment of a second front.

[redacted] related that the leading functionary of the Screen Cartoonists Guild from 1943 to 1945 was Mortimer William Pomerance, who, during that period, was the Business Representative of the union and used his influence to direct and control union activities which would bring the union into the Communist orbit. The Communist connections of Pomerance are set out in Section I of this memorandum.

[redacted] related in February, 1944, that the Communist Party in Los Angeles was working through its members and fellow travelers in the Hollywood movie industry and had gained control or at least strong influence in 17 studio guild unions, one of which was the Screen Cartoonists Guild. This latter union was a member of the Conference of Studio Unions which was then under Communist influence. [redacted] related that the Screen Cartoonists Guild was one of the studio guilds which sponsored the Hollywood Writers Mobilization (a Communist front group discussed in Section III), which, from its inception, started clamoring for a second front and continued to follow the Communist Party line. From [redacted] a functionary of the Communist Party in Los Angeles, it was ascertained that on April 21, 1944, Mortimer William Pomerance, acting as the Business Representative of the Screen Cartoonists Guild, conferred with Elizabeth Glenn. On this occasion, Glenn was advised by Pomerance that the Guild had no objection to Communist Party meetings being held at the Screen Cartoonists Hall.

Through a highly confidential but delicate source it was ascertained on January 16, 1945, that Elizabeth Leach, Organizer of the Northwest Section of the Communist Political Association, Los Angeles County, had a report which dealt with the Screen Cartoonists Guild. This report stated:

> "The Screen Cartoonists Guild has done a great deal toward developing understanding of the possibilities of the cartoon film as a propagandist educational medium. Through the educational activities of the Union it has been possible to achieve more consistent democratic content in the regular governmental films themselves. In addition, members of the Guild have undertaken to make films for labor and police organizations. The first of these was the United Auto Workers cartoon 'Hell Bent for Election' which was conceived and produced by members of the Guild."

[redacted] California, advised on June 16, 1947, that Mary Sherret, Cecil Beard and Norman McCabe, who are cartoonists and artists in the motion picture industry, were contacting numerous cartoonists who were then unemployed through the Screen Cartoonists Guild and were making plans to put out a series of cartoon books for children as well as adults in order to influence their thinking toward Communism. Mary Sherret told this informant, [redacted] that if children will follow these cartoon booklets, it will result, when they become adult, in their being masters of the machine rather than the machine mastering them. It should be pointed out that there is no information available in Los Angeles reflecting that any of the above three individuals are members of the Communist Party.

Confidential Informant [redacted] as well as informants [redacted] and [redacted] Walt Disney Studios, advised that the Screen Cartoonists Guild presently has its offices in Union Hall at 6272 Yucca Street, Hollywood, California. According to [redacted] there are approximately 800 members of the Screen Cartoonists Guild, 300 of whom are unemployed. According to all of the above mentioned informants, the Screen Cartoonists Guild held an election of officers on June 24, 1947, at which time the following individuals were elected who are members of the Communist Party or who have indicated Communist sympathies:

Robert Carlson

Carlson, who was elected Treasurer of the Screen Cartoonists Guild, was reported by Mr. [redacted] Texas, in June, 1947, as having received Communist literature at the YMCA where he resided during his visit to El Paso, Texas, in the latter part of 1946. [redacted] also stated that Carlson talked openly in favor of Communism.

Maurice Howard

Maurice Howard was elected the Business Agent of the Screen Cartoonists Guild. He was identified as a Communist in Hollywood on 2/26/45 through a most reliable and very delicate source. It is also known through an extremely reliable but very delicate source that his wife, Evelyn, was also a member of the Communist Party. Through [redacted] it was ascertained that Howard was in frequent contact with Glenn during July, 1945, Glenn at that time being the organizer for the Communist Political Association in the Hollywood area.

Milton S. Tyre

Tyre is the Legal Advisor for the Screen Cartoonists Guild. Through [redacted] paid informant of the Los Angeles Office who furnishes information concerning the activities at the Los Angeles County Communist Party headquarters, supplied data during July, 1945, indicating that Tyre was a member of the Communist Political Association, having transferred from the 59th A.D. Branch to the Wilshire-Fairfax Branch. This report from this source was also verified on June 15, 1947, through a very reliable but highly delicate source which reflected that Tyre was still a member of the Communist Party and that he had held membership in the Party for a period of two years.

William "Bill" Higgins

Higgins, who was a member of the Board of Trustees of this Guild, was reported by [redacted] an informant of the Los Angeles Office, to have been very pro-Communist and pro-Russian in his speech while he was in the United States Army at Camp Roach. [redacted] also reported that Higgins had Communist Party literature in his possession.

Cecil Beard

Beard is also a member of the Board of Trustees and has the position of delegate in the Conference of Studio Unions. The Communist connections of Beard are set out in Section I of this memorandum which will reflect that Beard is a member of the Communist Party and a former member of the Communist Political Association.

Thomas Byrnes

Byrnes is a member of the Board of Trustees of the Guild. Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office stated on July 30, 1947, that he was well acquainted with Byrnes who to his knowledge married a woman who is a member of the Communist Party. However, the informant was unable to furnish the name of Byrnes wife. He stated that Byrnes agrees with and is under the influence of Maurice Howard and Cecil Beard, identified above.

It is also of interest to note that [redacted] reported that Arthur Babbitt, the former President of this organization and one who has exercised a great deal of influence in the Guild, has now gone to France on a temporary mission to assist in the making of motion pictures. [redacted]

[redacted] reported with regard to Babbitt that on June 20, 1940, Babbitt was one of a number of cartoonists who spent several evenings each week making drawings and cartoons to be sent to Communist Party headquarters in New York and in turn published in Communist Party publications. According to Informant [redacted] California, Babbitt was discharged by the Walt Disney Studios on June 6, 1941, for endeavoring to influence other employees to become interested in Communist matters and also for the distribution of Communist literature.

Through a highly confidential but very delicate source, it was ascertained that the following individuals who are screen cartoonists, are members of the Communist Party. Their Communist Party affiliations are set out in Section I of this memorandum:

Cecil Beard	Morton Diamondstein
Mary Lou Eastman	Burton Freund
William Gray	Spencer Peel
Gordon Stewart	George Stone

Screen Office Employees Guild, AFL Local 1391

[redacted] of the Studio Drivers Transportation Union, AFL Local 399, and Chairman of the Motion Picture Alliance, reported that the Screen Office Employees Guild was originally affiliated with the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America, AFL Local 1391.

He related that in 1945 when the Conference of Studio Unions called a strike in the film industry, all of the members of the Screen Office Employees Guild were not in full accord with the provisions of the strike. Consequently, about half of the members in the union went back to work. He also related that in the interim between the 1945 strike and the current film strike, the National Labor Relations Board held an election within the Screen Office Employees Guild at which time the Screen Office Employees Guild voted to affiliate with the AFL "Office Employees Industrial Union". Accordingly, the Screen Office Employees Guild no longer exists.

On July 24, 1947, this same source related that at one time the Screen Office Employees Guild was strongly dominated by the Communist Party and contained many members within its organization who were members of the Communist Party. This source based his statement on the long experience and his observations of the tactics and policies followed by various individuals listed hereinafter who were members of the Screen Office Employees Guild as of July 30, 1944.

President:	Margaret Bennett (Wills)
Recording Secretary:	Blanche Cole
Financial Secretary:	Bernard Lusher (Luscher)
Treasurer:	Claire Horgan
Warden:	Jack Reed
Conductor:	Barbara Alexander (Barbara Myers)
Organizer:	Florence Contini
Special Organizer:	Min Selvin
Business Representative:	Glenn Pratt

This same source related that in addition to the above, Herta Uerkvitz who was a member of the Board of Directors of the Screen Office Employees Guild and a delegate to the Central Labour Council, was a Communist.

Margaret Bennett (Margaret Bennett Wills)

The Communist connections of this individual are set out in Section I of this memorandum. It should be pointed out that she is at the present time connected with the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions. She is not at the present time connected with the Office Employees Industrial Union which succeeded the Screen Office Employees Guild.

Blanche Cole

Blanche Cole on July 26, 1943, was Educational Director of Branch N of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party, according to information received from a very reliable but extremely delicate source. According to informant [redacted] she is not associated with the Office Employees Industrial Union at the present time.

Bernard Lusher (Luscher)

He is identified in Section I of this memorandum as a Communist.

Barbara Alexander (Barbara Myers)

Barbara Alexander has also been identified in Section I as a Communist.

Min Selvin

According to a very reliable but extremely delicate source, in 1943 Selvin was a member of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party. In addition, informant [redacted] has related that Selvin recently married Norval D. Crutcher, who has been identified in Section I as a former member of the Communist Party.

Herta Uerkvitz

She has also been identified as a member of the Communist Party through former paid Confidential Informant [redacted] who was a former member of the Communist Party.

Informant [redacted] related he believed that those individuals who had Communist connections and who were affiliated with the Screen Office Employees Guild had for the most part dropped out of the Office Employees Industrial Union and that there was no indication at the present time that this latter union, the Office Employees Industrial Union, was under the control of the Communist elements.

Screen Directors Guild, Inc.

The Hollywood Studio Blu-Book Directory, spring edition, 1947, lists 18 officers of the Screen Directors Guild, none of whom have been identified as Communists and therefore the names of the officers and directors are not being set out. Through a very highly confidential and most delicate source, it was ascertained that 9 directors presently connected with the motion picture industry are or have been members of the Communist Party. They are set forth as follows:

Jack Berry, Universal Studios
Louis Brandt, Assistant Director in charge of production at Audio Pictures, Inc.
Herbert Biberman, Freelance, unemployed at present
Jules Dassin, Offices of Mark Hellinger
Edward Dmytryk, RKO Studios
Cyril Enfield, Comet Pictures
Lester Fuller, Paramount Studios in 1945 (unemployed at present)
Benjamin Kadish, Early in 1947 Director for Massour Studios, at present making independent picture
Frank Wright Tuttle, at present unemployed.

In addition to the above, Confidential Informant [redacted] who is a member of the Board of Directors of the Screen Writers Guild, advised that the following directors are not members of the Screen Directors Guild. However, they have been identified through highly confidential but most delicate sources as members of the Communist Party or the Communist Political Association.

Herman Rotstein, In 1945 employed by Columbia Studios
Ben Shaw, an Assistant Director
William Edward Watts, Freelance Assistant Director

Musicians Mutual Protective Association
(Local 47, American Federation of Musicians, Affiliated with the American Federation of Labor)

[redacted] Los Angeles, [redacted] American Federation of Musicians, stated on July 23, 1947, that this union, Musicians Mutual Protective Association, included all professional white musicians in the Los Angeles area.

The April, 1947, edition of the Musicians Directory, an official publication of this union, listed approximately 13,000 members in good standing. The July, 1947, "Overture" which is the official journal of this union, listed the '47 officers. The only individual listed among the current officers who has been identified as a Communist is Don E. Wight, a member of the Trial Board and Delegate to the Pasadena Central Labor Council. Wight was identified as a member of the Communist Party in April, 1943, possessing Communist Party Book #36200 by a highly confidential and most delicate source.

Information concerning this group is set out in the report of the Joint Fact-Finding Committee of the California Legislature on Un-American Activities for 1947, which reflects that from 1937 to 1939, the President of this group was California State Senator, Jack B. Tenney, whose candidacy had originally been supported by a group of approximately 65 Communist Party members. According to the report, during Tenney's term of office, he conducted an investigation of Communism within the local which resulted in a number of expulsions. In 1939, Tenney was defeated for reelection and according to the report, since that time the activities of the Communists within the union have resulted in its withdrawal from affiliation with the Los Angeles Central Labor Council and from the State Federation of Labor. According to Informant [redacted] the President of the Local, J. K. (Spike) Wallace, succeeded Tenney as President due to the fact that he had received the Communist support in the union. He related that during the period from 1939 until 1947, Wallace cooperated with the Communist members of the union to such an extent that the Communists actually exercised control over the policies of the local. He related that the local's constitution provides that 150 members constitutes a quorum and that it was extremely difficult to secure an attendance as large as this at a union meeting. Consequently, there have only been four quorum meetings of the union during the past five years with the result that the general membership estimated at nearly 15,000 had no voice in the affairs of the local. According to this source, the Communists made numerous demands upon Wallace during the last National Convention of the group with which Wallace found it impossible to comply. As a result, Wallace was severely criticized by this faction but indicated to this source that from now on he was through with the Communists. Each of the following individuals are members in good standing of Local 47 of the American Federation of Musicians. They have been identified through a highly confidential but very delicate source as members of the Communist Political Association as of January 16, 1945, or Communist Party as of May 17, 1947:

Doris Albert	Samuel Albert
Mischa Altman	Philip Bass
Kalman Bloch	Russell Brodine
Morris Browda	Miriam G. Chassan
Don Christlieb	Beatrice Dassin
Paul Dessau	Lina Di Fiore
Joe Eger	Milton Feher
Roy Frankson	Eunice Shapiro Gottlieb
Chas. Gould	Max Gralnick
Sidney Greene	Serge Hovey
Tamara Hovey	Ramez Idriss
George Kast	Eugene B. Lehrman
Herbert Lessner	Edgar Lustgarten
Lily Mahler	Herbert Offner
Joseph Pass	George Pepper
Paul Powell	Esther Roth
Henry Roth	George Sandell
Leonard Selic	Cyril Towbin
Alexander Walden	Fred Warren
Rose Watkins	Norman Granz
Gilbert Grau

Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions

This organization was formed originally as the "Emergency Committee of the Hollywood Guilds and Unions" to combat the so-called "Fascist Motion Picture Alliance for the Preservation of American Ideals" and held its first meeting on Wednesday, June 28, 1944, in Hollywood, California. The purpose of this original meeting was, according to an official announcement which appeared in the Hollywood Reporter, to get together representatives of 17 guilds and unions in the Motion Picture Industry to set up a constructive program during the war and after which would protect the industry and its workers from anti-labor and semi-Fascist attacks.

By way of identification, it should be pointed out that the Motion Picture Alliance for the Preservation of American Ideals, according to its statement of principles has been set up believing in the American way of life in an effort to combat Communism, Fascism and kindred beliefs that sought by subversive means to undermine our American Government. Confidential Informant [redacted] previously identified, has related that several meetings took place in order to formulate plans for an organization set up to combat the Motion Picture Alliance. One of these meetings took place on February 7, 1944, two days after the publicity announcing the formation of the Motion Picture Alliance. [redacted] it was ascertained that Paul Cline, a Communist functionary in Los Angeles and publicly identified, according to the Voters' Registration in Los Angeles, as a member of the Communist Party, met with Carl Winter, the Executive Secretary of the Los Angeles County Communist Party, to consider ways and means to attack the Motion Picture Alliance.

A surveillance on March 2, 1944, by Agents of the Los Angeles Office reflected that the following Communists gathered at Sardi's Restaurant to formulate a program directed against the Motion Picture Alliance: Elizabeth Leach, William Pomerance and George Pepper. Likewise a conference was had between John Howard Lawson, leading Communist functionary in the Motion Picture Industry, and Robert Rossen, former President of the Screen Writers Guild, and Hollywood Writers Mobilization, identified in Section I of this memorandum as a Communist, with a similar purpose. [redacted] Through this same source on March 31, 1944, it was ascertained that Lawson told William Pomerance that the Screen Writers Guild should start the ball rolling in forming an attack on the Motion Picture Alliance. Lawson suggested that the attack be made against persons who were leading the Motion Picture Alliance and that the attack be worded in such a way to indicate that the persons responsible for the Motion Picture Alliance were against the war effort. Through this [redacted] source, it was also ascertained that a meeting was held during March, 1944, at the home of Albert Maltz, screen writer whose Communist affiliations are set out in Section I, to further formulate plans to fight the Motion Picture Alliance. At this meeting, Agents surveilling the residence of Maltz identified such active Communist functionaries as Lester Cole and Elizabeth Leach.

Through [redacted] it was ascertained that a conference was had between Lawson and Katz on May 2, 1944, relative to the "dirt the Communist Party was then attempting to uncover concerning the Motion Picture Alliance leaders". By way of identification concerning the Katz with whom Lawson held this conference, it should be pointed out that this individual is Charles Katz, a Los Angeles attorney whom John Leech, when testifying before a Los Angeles County Grand Jury, identified as a Communist Party member. John Leech himself is a former Communist Party Organizer in Los Angeles.

On May 9, 1944, an article appeared in the West Coast Communist newspaper, the People's World, listing 38 film unions and guilds which sent delegates to a meeting on May 2, 1944. This meeting was called according to former Confidential Informant, [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office, to formulate plans for the organization to be set up which would fight the Motion Picture Alliance.

On May 16, 1944, through [redacted] it was ascertained that Dalton Trumbo, Communist screen writer, conferred with Lawson concerning the Motion Picture Alliance. On this occasion, Trumbo indicated he had prepared a report which set out the long-range program being planned by the Communist Party in its attack against the Motion Picture Alliance. Trumbo stated that the opponents of the Motion Picture Alliance should be prepared to offer a constructive program in contrast to the Motion Picture Alliance's destructive one. Trumbo stated that it was necessary to hold a mass meeting and suggested the use of the Publicists Guild in obtaining the widest possible press space concerning the meeting. It was Trumbo's opinion that the primary aim of this meeting should be a complete exposure of the Motion Picture Alliance. Trumbo believed that it should be brought out at this meeting the inability of the Motion Picture Alliance to name one single picture containing their objective (Communist propaganda). Trumbo believed that this was a very vital point inasmuch as he did not feel that this organization could attack a specific motion picture without attacking specific picture producing organizations and at that moment the Motion Picture Alliance would be giving the opposition new allies. Trumbo indicated the guilds and unions should consider their economic interests in the postwar world as being one that directly coincides with the economic interests of the producers and of the industry as a whole. Trumbo also indicated that the economic interest of all was directly dependent upon the kind of pictures made.

He mentioned that the Motion Picture Alliance was against shaping the contents of a movie for any other purpose than that of making money. He also felt that they proposed to change the world of motion pictures, thereby doing exactly what the Motion Picture Alliance was fighting. Concerning Trumbo, it should be pointed out that he is a Communist screen writer and that his Communist connections are set out in Section I of this memorandum. In reporting on this meeting held on May 16, 1944, Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office who was a former Communist Party member, stated that the idea was stressed to emphasize to the public the role the motion pictures played against Fascism as well as the role pictures will play in the postwar world. He stated that this proposed organization was Communist inspired and was created to fight "red baiting". He stated that if this proposed organization was successful it would help further Communist Propaganda in the motion picture industry.

He related that most of the individuals attending this meeting were either Communist Party members or active Communist Party supporters. [redacted] related that on June 6, 1944, at the Screen Cartoonists Hall, he attended a meeting which was called "an emergency meeting of the Hollywood Guilds and Unions". According to [redacted] approximately 18 persons were present, including Robert Rossen, who acted as Chairman; William Pomerance; Herbert K. Sorrell and Lester Cole, all of whom have been identified in Section I of this memorandum as being or having been members of the Communist Party or Communist Political Association.

The Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions as previously pointed out, was actually formed on June 28, 1944. According to Informant [redacted] one of the purposes for which the Council was built was to "smack down any individual group who attempts to attack the Communist front organizations in motion pictures". According to [redacted] the Motion Picture Alliance was to be attacked from all angles and connected with everything subversive. It was to be accused of Fascism, anti-Democracy, anti-Semitism, anti-Catholicism, anti-Negro, anti-labor, anti-British, anti-Soviet, etc., so that the Motion Picture Alliance would have nothing left to throw back at the Communists without being a "copy cat".

Informant [redacted] related that 17 guilds and unions signed the announcement of the formation of the Emergency Committee of Hollywood Guilds and Unions.

On January 20, 1947, through a highly confidential but very delicate source, it was ascertained that there were 7 unions affiliated with the Conference of Studio Unions which belonged to the Council and that there were 2 International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees locals, 2 independent unions and one AFL union which comprised the membership of the Council at that time. These were as follows:

Screen Story Analyst Guild
Screen Cartoonist Guild
Screen Costumers Guild
Film Technicians
Film Electricians, Local 40
Machinists Guild
Musicians Local 767 (This is not the musicians union to which musicians in the studios belong.)
Painters Union
Screen Publicists Union
Screen Supervisors Union
Screen Set Decorators
Screen Writers Guild

This source related that the Council had lost, mainly because of the difficulties over the current film strike, the Screen Actors Guild, the Screen Office Employees Guild and Musicians Local #47. Informant [redacted] related the Council had supported all "left-wing, radical elements within the labor movement". This source, who is an official in the labor movement, stated on July 24, 1947, that a radical element packed the first meeting of the Council and took it over. He expressed the opinion the Council was strictly Communist dominated, and, although the Council was relatively dormant at the present time, it must still be regarded as a force in the radical labor wing and will probably spring out soon in support of the third party movement. With regard to the present officers, the latest report available concerning the officers of the Hollywood Guilds and Unions was found in the Hollywood Reporter for March 2, 1945. This publication reflected the following officers of the Council were elected:

Chairman:	Mary C. McCall, Jr.	(Screen Writers Guild)
Vice Chairman:	Paul Harvey	(Screen Actors Guild)
Secretary-Treasurer:	Ted Ellsworth	(Motion Picture Costumers)
Board of Directors:	John R. Martin	(Film Technicians)
	Bill Blowitz	(Screen Publicists Guild)
	Min Selvin	(Screen Office Employees Guild)
	Howard Estabrook	(Screen Writers Guild)
	Sig Nesselroth	(Moving Picture Painters, AFL, Local 644)

Of the above listed individuals, Min Selvin and Bill Blowitz are known Communists and their communistic connections are set out in Section I of this memorandum.

It should also be pointed out that Margaret Bennett Wills accepted the position of Executive Secretary of the Council according to Informant [redacted] in February, 1946. [redacted] related that she indicated she was formerly President of the Screen Office Employees Guild and a delegate to the Central Labor Council. Wills' Communist connections are set out under Section I of this memorandum.

III. COMMUNIST INFILTRATION OF INTELLECTUAL GROUPS

The Communist Party Directive of 1935, as reported by Confidential Informant [redacted] previously referred to herein which directed the Communists to penetrate the motion picture industry, included a specific call to the Communists requesting that they concentrate on the so-called intellectual groups composed of directors, writers, artists, actors, actresses, and highly paid technicians. In this field of intellectual groups, particularly among the writers and directors, the Communists have been most successful and their influence has been far reaching. According to [redacted] the Communist activity in this field has been to work through front organizations which were not openly identified as Communist Party groups but, nevertheless, were controlled or under the influence of the Party through its official membership.

To further substantiate the report of Informant [redacted] Confidential Informant [redacted] of the New York Office has related that a part of the Communist Party's general program to infiltrate the motion picture industry was to penetrate the so-called intellectual groups in Hollywood. According to [redacted] one of the key figures of the Communist Party in propagating this plan of infiltrating the intellectual groups is John Howard Lawson. Lawson has been identified as a Communist screen writer in Section I of this memorandum.

Informant [redacted] reported that in 1930, in the Soviet Union there was set up an organization known as the International Union of Revolutionary Theatre. This group was the parent of a multitude of sub-organizations which, in the United States, were known as Workers' Theatres, Theatre Groups, et cetera. The first group formed as an outgrowth of the International Union of Revolutionary Theatres was the League of Workers' Theatres, created in New York in approximately 1932. During 1934, its name was changed to the New Theatre League.

New Theatre League

Informant [redacted] has reported that this organization set up a National Executive Board in 1935, composed of representatives in the writing and directing field throughout the United States. Among the individuals who were associated with this group in an executive capacity and who have been active in Hollywood are John Howard Lawson, writer; Albert Maltz, writer; Clifford Odets, writer; Jay Leyda, director; Lester Cole, writer; Herbert Biberman, director; Frank Tuttle, director; J. Edgar Bromberg, actor; Lionel Stander, actor; and Donald Ogden Stewart, writer. Of the above mentioned individuals Lawson, Maltz, Leyda, Cole, Biberman, Tuttle, and Bromberg all have been identified as Communists and their Communist Party affiliations are set out in Section I. Clifford Odets, according to Informant [redacted] was one of the original organizers of the League of American Writers.

Lionel Stander has been reported by Informant [redacted] as having been a member of the American League for Peace and Democracy, as well as having been active in the American League Against War and Fascism and the North American Committee To Aid Spanish Democracy. Informant [redacted] has advised that Stander was at one time one of the most active Communists of the Hollywood professional set. Donald Ogden Stewart, according to Informant [redacted] was a member of the League of American Writers, the American Peace Mobilization, International Workers Order, Screen Writers Guild, Hollywood Writers Mobilization and the American League for Peace and Democracy. Stewart has been identified by Informant [redacted] as a Communist.

The American League Against War and Fascism and the American League for Peace and Democracy both are subversive organizations and have been declared subversive within the purview of the Hatch Act. The North American Committee To Aid Spanish Democracy is a Communist influenced organization as is the International Workers Order, both of which have been referred to the Department for its consideration under Executive Order Number 9835, dated March 21, 1947. The Hollywood organizations with which these individuals are affiliated are discussed in this Section of the memorandum.

League of American Writers

According to [redacted] another mobilizing force in the cultural field which was active in the early 1930s in Hollywood, California, was the League of American Writers. The League of American Writers was said to be a part of an international organization of writers and intellectuals which had its origin at a World Congress of Writers held in Kharkov, Russia, during November of 1930.

Soon after this Congress, there appeared in the United States groups of writers in the larger cities who organized themselves under the direction of the Communist Party into what were called John Reed Clubs. According to Informant [redacted], a convention, in January 1935, was held in New York City of the John Reed Clubs. According to this source, the principal business transacted by this session was to call another Congress of writers which was to be held in New York City, April 1935. When this Congress convened, all John Reed Clubs were dissolved and in their place a much broader organization was formed known as the League of American Writers. Confidential Informant [redacted] related that at this first writers Congress, the Communist Party was openly represented and the Congress was under the direction of Earl Browder, at that time secretary of the Communist Party, USA. Soon after this meeting, the Hollywood motion pictures began to attract writers from all parts of the United States and in fact from all parts of the world. This resulted in the establishment of the Hollywood Chapter of the League of American Writers in the Fall of 1935. According to Informant [redacted] the purpose of this group was to bring the writers employed in the motion picture industry under the influence of the League of American Writers which at that time was the foremost Communist front organization operating in the so-called intellectual fields for the Communist Party in the United States. He related that the efforts of this group were extremely successful which resulted in this branch becoming, in a short time, the dominant unit of the League and one of its strongest propaganda instruments.

[redacted] related that up until the time of the signing of the Hitler-Stalin Pact on August 23, 1939, the League of American Writers, including the Hollywood Chapter, worked out in the open and was most successful in its Communist activities. However, following the signing of this Pact the League being completely under the control of the Communist Party changed its position from one of collective security to isolation which resulted in the League becoming very cautious and working practically in secret. This change in policy exposed the League to the public as a Communist front organization. On July 17, 1947, Informant [redacted] furnished a list of the last set of officers and executive board members of the League of American Writers, which was taken from the stationery of the organization. According to [redacted] these officers were elected at the Fourth Writers' Congress held in New York City, June 6-8, 1941, for a term of two years. According to [redacted] these officers remained in office until the organization went out of existance in 1943. The officers elected in June of 1941, were the following:

Theodore Dreiser	Honorary President	Novelist
Daschiell Hammett	President	Screen Writer
Donald Ogden Stewart	Vice President	Screen Writer
John Howard Lawson	Vice President	Screen Writer
Albert Maltz	Vice President	Screen Writer
Meridel Leseuer	Vice President	Writer for "New Masses"
George Seldes	Vice President	Editor of "In Fact"
Richard Wright	Vice President - Negro -	Writer
Franklin Folsom	Executive Secretary

The executive board consisted of 36 members of which 9 have Communist Party records. In addition to these 9, the Honorary President Dreiser and the Vice President Maltz also have Communist records. These Communist records are as follows:

Theodore Dreiser

The "Daily Worker", Communist newspaper, on July 30, 1945, carried the following headlines: "Theodore Joins The Communist Party." It stated "Dreiser, an outstanding novelist of the world, applied for membership in the newly reconstituted Communist Party and was admitted by a unanimous vote of the delegates at the convention in New York City." Dreiser died on December 29, 1945.

John Howard Lawson

The Communist Party affiliations of John Howard Lawson are set out in Section I of this memorandum.

Albert Maltz

The Communist Party affiliations of Maltz are also set out in Section I of this memorandum.

11c

Georgia Backus also known as Mrs. Herman J. Alexander

The Communist Party affiliations of this individual will also be found set out in Section I of this memorandum. With regard to Backus, it should be pointed out that [redacted] a Confidential Informant of the Los Angeles Office, advised that in May of 1943, Backus was in the cast of the new radio play "The Life of Riley" at the National Broadcasting Company.

Alvah Cecil Bessie

The Communist affiliations of this individual are also set out in Section I of this memorandum. From [redacted] it was ascertained in March of 1940, that Bessie was dismissed from Warner Brothers because of his activities in the studio strike and due to the fact that following the strike, it became apparent that he was sympathetic with the Communist element. In 1938 Bessie fought in the ranks of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade and following the conflict, he wrote, "Men in Battle."

John Milton Bright

John Milton Bright, a screen writer, has been identified through a highly confidential but most delicate source on November 4, 1943, as a member of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party. At this time through this source, it was ascertained that he held the position of educational director of Branch C. in the Party.

Lester Cole

Lester Cole, who is a screen writer by profession, has been identified as a member of the Communist Political Association and the Communist Party. His Communist connections are set out in Section I of this memorandum.

Ruth McKenney
Richard Branston also known as Bruce Minton

Ruth McKenney, writer and the wife of Richard Branston, admitted membership in the Communist Party before a victory rally held in Washington, D. C. on January 16, 1942, according to Sally Muchmore of the Washington, D.C. Press Bureau. Through a highly confidential but most delicate source, it was ascertained on May 6, 1944, that on March 1, 1944 Bruce Minton transferred from the Washington, D.C. Branch of the Communist Party to the Hollywood, California Branch and that his wife, Ruth McKenney likewise transferred from the White Collar Branch of the Communist Party in Washington, D. C., to the Communist Party in Hollywood, California.

The Los Angeles "Daily News" in the September 19, 1946, issue carried an article reflecting that Bruce Minton and his wife Ruth McKenney were ousted from the Communist Party.

W. L. River

River, who is employed as a screen writer, has been identified as a member of the Communist Political Association and the Communist Party. His Communist Party affiliations are set out in Section I of this memorandum.

Philip Edward Stevenson

Stevenson, a novelist, playwright and short story writer, has been identified as a member of the Communist Party and Communist Political Association. His Communist affiliations are set out in Section I of this memorandum.

Tess Slessinger, with alias Tess Shlesinger, also known as Mrs. Frank Davis

Tess Slessinger collaborated with Frank Davis on the screen play, "Claudia and David," for Twentieth Century Fox. She has been identified through a very reliable but extremely delicate source on August 31, 1944, as a member of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Political Association. The "Los Angeles Times", on February 23, 1945, reflected that Tess Slessinger died in Upland, California on February 22, 1945.

Hollywood School for Writers

The League of American Writers established in Hollywood, according to Informant [redacted] the Hollywood School for Writers which acted as a subsidiary of the League of American Writers and was said to be a transmission belt whereby budding writers were developed along political lines followed by the League of American Writers and conditioned for eventual membership in the League as well as the Communist Party. This School was established in October of 1939. An examination of its listed instructors and lecturers for 1942-1943 reflects that the majority of them have been identified with various Communist Front movements. Many of them actually were members of the Communist Party, such as John Howard Lawson, Guy Endore and Dalton Trumbo. The Communist Party affiliations of these individuals are set out in Section I of this memorandum.

Hollywood Writers Mobilization

According to Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office, the Hollywood Writers Mobilization is another offshoot of the League of American Writers. [redacted] stated that when the Communist Party line changed with the invasion of Russia by Adolf Hitler on June 22, 1941, it became necessary to dissolve such organizations as the Hollywood Peace Forum, the Hollywood League for Democratic Action, the American Peace Mobilization and the Motion Picture Democratic Committee which had been opposing the entrance of the United States into war. By February of 1942, [redacted] stated these organizations had been "liquidated" and the Communist Party had declared itself for full participation in the war.

The first of these to emerge, according to [redacted] was the Hollywood Writers Mobilization. [redacted] related that this organization actually came into existence early in 1942. He stated that the personnel of the new organization included writers in the motion picture industry who had heretofore been affiliated with the League of American Writers. The Chairman of this new organization was Robert Rossen whose Communist Party affiliations are set out in Section I. Rossen has also been active in the Screen Writers Guild, a Communist influenced group.

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office related that the following eight guilds sponsored the Hollywood Writers Mobilization at the time it was set up, and that each of these guilds was under Communist influence:

1. Screen Writers' Guild
2. Radio Writers' Guild
3. Screen Publicists' Guild
4. Screen Readers' Guild
5. Screen Cartoonists' Guild
6. American Newspaper Guild
7. Independent Publicists' Guild
8. Song Writers' Protective Association

He related that while the total membership of these Guilds was approximately 7,500, the Hollywood Writers Mobilization was operated by representatives or delegates from these Guilds which number not more than twenty-five individuals as John Howard Lawson, Robert Rossen, Francis Faragoh and Herbert Biberman, all of whom he described as Communists. The Communist affiliations of all of these individuals with the exception of Francis Faragoh, are set out in Section I of this memorandum. He related that the organization was a paper-type group which "stooged" for the League of American Writers, through which the latter continued to operate as a propaganda agency for the Communist Party.

The announced purpose of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization was to mobilize the writers in the screen industry to assist in the war effort and particularly to assist the various Government and military agencies in the preparation of propaganda material for use either against the enemy or for general morale purposes at home. [redacted] described the organization's primary purpose as being the providing of material for military camp shows slanted to project the Communist line. He further described it as a clearing house for Communist propaganda in Hollywood.

Marc Connelly, one of the dominant figures in the creation of this organization, in testifying before the Joint Fact Finding Committee on Un-American Activities in California on July 13, 1944, stated that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization "has been supplying the Office of War Information, the Army, the Navy, the USO and the Red Cross" with publicity material.

According to Informant [redacted] this organization injected such phases of Communist propaganda into its work as the demand for a second front, freedom for India, independence for Puerto Rico, racial equality and similar material which fostered the Communist Party program.

In May of 1942, the Los Angeles Office learned that the publication of t Hollywood Writers Mobilization known as the "Communique" was now captioned "Commun que, Hollywood Writers Mobilization for Defense in Cooperation with -- OEM". The publication was being mailed under the official Government frank which read "Execu tive Office of the President, Office of Emergency Management, Washington, D.C., Official Business. Penalty for Private Use to Avoid Payment of Postage, $300 GPO. The Los Angeles Office obtained two copies of this publication, one dated April 10 1942, and the other dated April 17, 1942. The April 17, 1942 issue is maintained in the files of the Bureau.

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office reported the following information concerning the background of this set up. He related that the head of the radio section of OEM at Washington was Bernard Schoenfeld, who was a close friend of Garson Kanin, the individual in charge of the film section of OEM. Michael Kanin, a brother of Garson and Fay Kanin, the wife of Michael are writers who were connected with the League of American Writers. Garson Kanin, according to this source, went to Schoenfeld in Washington and told him that he, Kanin, had a brother and sister-in-law who were in Hollywood. He stated that they were talented in writing and that they were very anxious and willing to be of assi tance in the OEM. As a result of these contacts, Fay Kanin was put to work on a radio project preparing information being put out by the OEM. After which, Michael Kanin appeared and suggested that they should get busy and contact the Hollywood League of American Writers and endeavor to have them prepare the information which was to be put out in the "Communique."

Mr. R. H. Washburne was contacted on October 13, 1942, at which time he advised that he was appointed by Bernard Schoenfeld of the Office of Emergency Management to be in charge of the Los Angeles Branch of the OEM, Information Division. He related that shortly thereafter he was contacted by Mrs. Fay Kanin, Michael Kanin, Ring Lardner, Jr. and others to discuss the means of obtaining the aid of certain film writers to publicize those things which the Office of Emergency Management, Information Division, wished to give publicity in order that correct information could be made known to the public by the best possible means. He stated that on this occasion the "Communique", an information letter, was decided upon as being the best method for this publicity.

Mr. Washburne related that he wrote a Mr. Robert Horton of the Office of Emergency Management, Washington, D.C., and obtained authority to publish the "Communique". The articles for the "Communique" were written by the committee which was composed of the aforementioned writers and others and were submitted to Mr. Washburne. Washburne related that he edited these articles which were then mimeographed, assembled and distributed by his staff to members of the Film Writer Guild. According to Washburne, the specific purpose of this information letter was to put information into the hands of the members of the Film Writers' Guild, with the idea that these persons would "spot it" in the production upon which they were working so that this information would be made available to the public and would give proper publicity to those things which the Office of Emergency Management felt should be publicized. Shortly after this committee was formed, Washburne stated that he was contacted by the Hollywood Writers Mobilization who informed him that their organization had been set up for just such a purpose and that therefore there was a duplication by the organization and the committee. Consequently he related, that the committee became a part of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization. He stated that the first eight editions of the "Communique" were prepared on paper furnished by the Office of Emergency Management and were mimeographed by the Office of Emergency Management Staff. He also related that the first three editions of the "Communique" were mailed under the franking privilege.

In March of 1943 the publication "Variety" reported that the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs would make transcripts of Office of War Information - Hollywood Writers Mobilization radio programs for broadcast in foreign languages. The air show referred to was a radio program entitled "Free World Theatre Air Show", which was instituted and produced jointly by the Office of War Information and the Hollywood Writers Mobilization. "Variety" also reflected that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization held a meeting of forty writers to supply ideas for this program under the Chairmanship of John Wexley, who has been identified as a Communist and whose Communist Party affiliations are set out in Section I of this memorandum. The Free World Theatre Program had such individuals connected with it as Jay Gorney, Edward Eliscu and Henry Myers, writers of the propaganda musical comedy "Meet the People." These individuals likewise have been identified as Communists and their Communist connections are set out in Section I of this memorandum.

[redacted] of the Los Angeles Office advised that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization also wrote and produced a series of short propaganda plays for the OWI for use in industrial plants and Army camps. Those assisting in this phase of activity included well-known members of the League of American Writers, a Communist front group. In addition, the Hollywood Writers Mobilization worked closely with Nelson Poynter who, until July of 1943, was coordinator for Government films for OWI. [redacted] related that the production of these films was under the direct control and supervision of Poynter and that Poynter before accepting these films demanded a pro-Russian slant as a prerequisite to acceptance. He reported that Poynter associated himself with the Hollywood Writers Mobilization and worked closely with Communists Robert Rossen, Waldo Salt and Frank Tuttle, all of whom have been identified as Communists in Section I of this memorandum. Poynter's office was discontinued in July of 1943.

In conjunction with the University of California at Los Angeles the Hollywood Writers Mobilization jointly sponsored the Writers' Congress. Actually, according to [redacted] this Writers' Congress was the Fifth Congress of the League of American Writers but was not termed as such due to the fact that the League of American Writers had become publicly branded as a Communist dominated group. This Congress was held as scheduled and attended by some fifteen hundred writers from all over the United States. Informant [redacted] related that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization was the medium whereby the Communist control of the entire proceedings was established and maintained. He stated that the leading Communist writers were said to have attended and dominated every session.

The "Peoples World", a west coast Communist newspaper for June 10, 1944, reflected that arrangements were made between Robert Riskin, Chief of the Overseas Film Bureau of the OWI and the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, whereby the screen writers would assume responsibility for the production and writing of all documentary films for overseas distribution. The program of films called for a "Projection of America" series and a new group of invasion films for distribution in Germany and the satellite countries.

The Hollywood Writers Mobilization, according to the article, had set up a working committee which was to consist of such well-known Communists as John Howard Lawson and Robert Rossen, identified in Section I of this memorandum. In addition, such prominent Communist sympathizers as Marc Connelly, Howard Estabrook, John Houseman, Talbot Jennings, Howard Koch and Harry Tugend, all of whom have been identified with Communist influenced or infiltrated groups previously in this memorandum were affiliated with this committee.

The August 7, 1944, issue of "Variety" reported that a program of eleven short subjects and five newsreel bulletins had been arranged for production by the Hollywood Writers Mobilization. The article reflected that the films would be produced in various Hollywood studios with players from the Screen Actors' Guild and writers from the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

The pictures planned to be produced included the following: "It's Murder," "The Story With Two Endings," "When He Comes Home," "So Far So Good", "Air Transport Command," and "World Peace Through World Trade." "It's Murder" was written by Henry Blankfort, who has been identified as a Communist. "The Story With Two Endings" was to be written by Harold Buchman and Lou Solomon, both of whom were identified as Communists. "When He Comes Home" was to be written by Paul Trivers. Trivers has also been identified as a Communist. "So Far So Good" was being written by Oscar Saul, also identified as a Communist. "World Peace Through World Trade" was to be written by Edward Eliscu, also identified as a Communist. All of the above individuals referred to as Communists have their Communist affiliations set out in Section I of this memorandum.

According to Informan[redacted] during the month of January, 1945, information was received that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, through its connection with the Office of War Information, had become a part of what was officially called the War Activities Committee, Hollywood Division. Other Organizations officially affiliated with the Committee were the Screen Writers' Guild, Screen Directors' Guild, Screen Actors' Guild, and other similar type groups.

According to Informant[redacted] in May of 1945, John Howard Lawson, one of the leading Communists in the motion picture industry, was appointed by the Hollywood Writers Mobilization to act as its representative as an observer at the United Nations Conference.

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office stated that during the spring of 1945 the work of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization in connection with the Office of War Information, Overseas Bureau, went into high gear as a result of a series of conferences between Robert Riskin, Chief of the Bureau for OWI, and the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, Editorial Committee on Overseas Films. It should be pointed out that seven out of the fourteen members of the Editorial Committee were identified as Communists, including John Howard Lawson, Melvyn Levy, Richard Collins, Waldo Salt, Leonardo Bercovici, Arthur Birnkrant, and Sidney Buchman. The Communist affiliations of these individuals are set out in Section I of this memorandum.

Confidential Informant [redacted] related that beginning on May 21, 1945, the Hollywood Writers Mobilization was to produce a series of radio programs over the Blue Network dealing with problems of the returning soldiers. The Committee producing this has been described as one strongly under the influence of known Communists such as Louis Solomon.

Confidential Informant [redacted] related that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization has been active in supporting and participating in the activities of the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, a Communist infiltrated and influenced organization. It also produced a quarterly magazine known as the "Hollywood Quarterly" in cooperation with the University of California at Los Angeles. Included as one of the editors of this publication was John Howard Lawson, one of the Communist Party leaders in the film industry. [redacted] related that other known Communists and Communist sympathizers were also affiliated with this publication in a lesser capacity.

Informant [redacted] related that in addition, this organization has shown Russian propaganda motion pictures at the Gordon Theatre in Los Angeles as well as at other independent theatres in the Los Angeles and Hollywood area. Other known Communist front groups have also participated in this type of activity.

Following the elimination of the Office of War Information as a Government agency, the Hollywood Writers Mobilization devoted its activities to the propaganda field through radio and publications. The official newspaper of the American Newspaper Guild in June of 1946 reflected that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization had rendered numerous war services, among which were the following:

Documentary and short subject films	- 210
Radio scripts	- 1069
War activity feature stories	- 125

Confidential Informant [redacted] related that this Communist controlled organization had narrowed its activities considerably, confining its functions primarily to the radio field.

A letterhead of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization dated January 8, 1947, reflected that there were 71 persons listed as members of the executive council of the organization as of that date. Twelve persons on the executive council have records of Communist membership and 5 of the members of the editorial board have also been identified as Communists. The following individuals are members of the editorial board who have been identified as Communists in Section I of this memorandum:

Ring Lardner, Jr.
Asa Bordages
Gordon Kahn
Bill Blowitz

In addition Evelyn Humphreys has been identified as a member of the Communist Political Association on January 16, 1945, through a very reliable but extremely delicate source of information. The individuals whose names appear on the executive council of this organization that have been identified as Communists are as follows:

Sam Moore	Second Vice Chairman	Radio writer
Abraham L. Polonsky	Secretary	Writer
Pauline Lauber Finn		Secretarial work
Bill Blowitz
Richard Collins		Screen writer
Jay Gorney		Screen writer
John Howard Lawson		Screen writer
Leon Meadow		Screen writer
William E. Oliver	a President, Los Angeles Newspaper Guild
Robert Rossen		Writer and Director
Bernard Vorhaus		Writer
John Weber		Writer

Of the above listed individuals, Moore, Polonsky, Blowitz, Collins, Gorney, Lawson and Rossen have been identified in Section I as Communists. The Communist connections of the remaining individuals are set out hereinafter.

Pauline Lauber Finn

Finn was identified through a very reliable but extremely delicate source as a member of the Communist Party and/or member of the Communist Political Association on June 30, 1944, August 31, 1944, January 16, 1945, and February 25, 1945. Through this same source in June of 1944 she was identified as educational director of Branch D of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Political Association.

Leon Meadow

Leon Meadow, a screen writer, was identified as of July 13, 1945, as a former member of Branch 3, Section C of the Communist Party of New York City and on December 7, 1944, transferred to "Karen's Group" in Hollywood. This information was obtained from [redacted] an informant of the Los Angeles Office who obtained [redacted] from the Los Angeles County Communist Party Headquarters.

William E. Oliver

Oliver was identified through an extemely confidential but very delicate source on March 8, 1944 as a member of the East Hollywood Communist Club. As of November 8, 1944, Oliver was reported to be the drama editor and critic of the "Los Angeles Herald Express."

Bernard Vorhaus

Bernard Vorhaus was identified through a very highly confidential but extremely delicate source on August 31, 1944, as having been a member of the Northwest Section of the Communist Party of Los Angeles County on special leave prior to 1943.

John Weber

John Weber, a screen writer, was identified in 1943 as a member of the Communist Party through an extremely confidential and most delicate source of information. He is a former president of the Screen Readers Guild and at present is in charge of the writers department of the William Morris Booking Agency in Hollywood. Through an extremely confidential but most delicate source of information, it was ascertained that during the summer of 1946 his wife acted as organizational secretary of the Cultural Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party.

A. The Writers Congress held at the University of Southern California at Los Angeles, November 1-3, 1943

The report of the Joint Fact Finding Committee of the 56th California Legislature, 1945, reflects that in August of 1943, under the auspices of the University of California and the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, a letter signed by Marc Connelly and Ralph Freud as Co-Chairman of the Congress Committee, announced the Writers Congress to be held at Royce Hall, University of Southern California at Los Angeles from October 1-3, 1943.

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office advised that while this Congress was not called the Fifth Writers Congress, it should have been called this due to the fact that many of the same individuals who were in charge of directing the activities of the First, Second, Third and Fourth Writers Congresses were also in charge of directing the affairs of this one.

The report of the Joint Fact Finding Committee of the 56th California Legislature, 1945, reflects that a superficial investigation of this Congress disclosed its Communist inspiration and guidance. The report reflected that many of the names included in the Congress and the advisory committee were "innocents", clearly unaware of the Communist interests and purposes of this Congress.

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office reported on January 5, 1945, that this Congress was attended by approximately 3000 writers and operated through panel forums and seminars. He stated that the proceedings of the Congress were published by the University of Southern California Press in 1944. He related that immediately following the Congress, a Writers Congress continuations committee of 41 members was set up to handle the work of the Congress. [redacted] related that 12 members of the continuations committee held membership in the Northwest Section of the Communist Party of Los Angeles County. They are as follows:

Bill Blowitz
Sidney Buchman
Abram S. Burrows
Richard Collins
John Howard Lawson
Melvin Levy
Josef Mischel
Sam Moore
Meta Reis
Robert Rossen
Victor Shapiro
Louis Solomon

The Communist affiliations of these individuals are set out in Section I of this memorandum, with the exception of Reis and Shapiro.

[redacted] of the University of Southern California Press advised Agents of the Los Angeles Office, who interviewed her [redacted] on July 22, 1947, that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization had ceased to exist. [redacted] advised that the Hollywood Quarterly which was published by the University of California Press, and the Hollywood Quarterly Associates would continue to be published by the Hollywood Quarterly Association, which organization had taken over the affairs of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

Hollywood Community Radio

Confidential Informant [redacted] has advised that the Hollywood Community Radio group is composed of a number of individuals who are known Communists and Communist sympathizers, many of whom were active members of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization. Among the known Communists on the Board of Directors of this organization are: Hy Kraft, screen writer and Abraham L. Polonsky, screen writer. The Communist affiliations of these individuals are set out in Section I of this memorandum.

Informant [redacted] has related that this group is endeavoring to obtain a license for a radio station in the vicinity of Los Angeles. According to Confidential Informant [redacted] if this permit is granted and the radio station set up, it will be run and operated by the Hollywood Writers Mobilization and will be an outlet for the Communist propaganda disseminated by this group.

The Federal Communications Commission is conducting hearings relative to the establishment of this radio station. As you will recall, the Communist connections of the individuals affiliated with this group have been furnished to the Federal Communications Commission by this Bureau.

People's Educational Center, also known as The Los Angeles Educational Association, Inc.

The People's Educational Center was first formed at a meeting on December 19, 1943. Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office who was a plant informant, made available a copy of a mimeographed letter written to the students of the Los Angeles Workers School, an organ of the Communist Party on November 29, 1943, advising that the Workers School had been an active participant in the formation of the People's Educational Center and had attempted to aid its organization and growth. This letter urged students of the workers School to support the People's Educational Center.

From [redacted] it was ascertained that an executive committee meeting was held on January 3, 1944, at which Max Silver, then organizational secretary, brought up the question of the People's Educational Center and stated that the Workers School had decided to cooperate officially with the People's Educational Center and that eventually the Workers School would be closed entirely. Subsequently the Workers School was discontinued by the Communist Party.

The People's Educational Center was incorporated under the laws of the State of California under the name of the Los Angeles Educational Association, Inc., wherein it was described as a non-profit educational club organized for the purpose of realizing through study and education the ideals of democracy and aid, through education, in the accomplishment of an enlightened and harmonious community.

Through Confidential Informant [redacted] Communist Party Headquarters in Los Angeles, it was ascertained that a meeting of the board of directors of this organization was held on January 25, 1947, at which time Mr. Sidney Davison, director of the school, announced that during the school year of 1946, enrollment had increased 60 per cent and that in the fall term of 1946, there were enrolled 553 individuals who took 635 classes. A total of 1808 individuals took 2058 classes during the war. The school as of that time was self-supporting and all debts had been paid off.

The school's catalogue for the summer of 1947 reflects that there are no formal entrance requirements for attendance at this school. The regular fee for a course is $6.00 except for certain designated courses. There are set forth hereinafter the members of the board of trustees and teaching staff of the People's Educational Center as reflected in their 1947 catalogue:

There are Winter, Spring, Summer and Fall terms at the School. The faculty of these schools vary each term, according to available personnel.

Lincoln Community Book Center, also known as Lincoln Book Shop

The records of the Los Angeles County Clerk's Office in Los Angeles, California, reflect that on July 16, 1943, Eugene Reed, Hollywood, California, had the name of The Lincoln Book Shop filed as a fictitious business name. Reed indicated that he intended to operate the business alone. The August 7, 1943 issue of the "Daily People's World," west coast Communist newspaper contained a feature article revealing that the Lincoln Book Shop would open at 1721 North Highland Avenue, on August 8, 1943. The shop was to be operated by Jack and Jessie Reed. Through a most reliable and very delicate source on August 31, 1944, it was ascertained that Eugene Reed was a Communist and a member of the Communist Political Association in Los Angeles.

Information was obtained through this same source on January 15, 1945, that Eugene John Reed and Jessica Reed were members of the Communist Political Association in the Northwest Section thereof. The report of the Joint Fact Finding Committee of the California Legislature on Un-American Activities for 1947 reflects that in September 1943, the Lincoln Book Shop had been designated by the Los Angeles County Communist Party for the sale of Communist literature to the clubs of the Communist area located in the Hollywood area.

The records of the County Clerk's Office in Los Angeles reflect that on March 5, 1945 the Articles of Incorporation of a group known as the Lincoln Community Book Center, a non-profit, non-stock membership group were filed with the Secretary of State in California. The purpose and object of the group was to educate the people of Hollywood. The persons executing the Articles of Incorporati included:

Samuel Freeman of 1962 Glencoe Way, Hollywood, California. Freeman was identified as a Communist on February 7, 1944 through information obtained from [redacted] who furnished information [redacted] on the Communist Party in Hollywood.

Elizabeth Glenn of 1604½ North Harvard, Los Angeles. Elizabeth Glenn has been reported by Confidential Informant [redacted] Communist Party, as the present financial director of the Los Angeles County Communist Party.

Emily Gordon who resides at 1056½ North Oxford, Los Angeles, California. Gordon was identified as the County literature director of the Communist Party and the Communist Political Association in 1944 and part of 1945, by Confidential Informant [redacted] This same informant revealed that in August of 1945, Gordon was nominated for the State Committee of the Communist Party but was not elected inasmuch as other leading comrades criticized her for being bureaucratic. Through the information obtained from [redacted] a paid reliable informant of the Los Angeles Office who furnishe[redacted] Communist Party in Los Angeles, it was ascertained that on April 21, 1947, Gordon had been dropped from the membership because of a "right opportunist disagreement".

During June 1946, Confidential Informant [redacted] the Los Angeles Office advised that the officers now serving on behalf of the Lincoln Community Book Center were John Howard Lawson, President; Waldo Salt, Vice President and Miriam Logan, secretary. The Communist background of both Lawson and Salt, who are screen writers in Hollywood has been set out in Section I of this memorandum. Miriam Logan, the secretary, was identified as a member of the Communist Party at San Pedro, California from June 1944 until December of 1946 by [redacted] a member of the Communist Party who is an informant of the Los Angeles Office.

Confidential Informan[redacted] of the Los Angeles Office, who is a functionary of the Communist Party in that area, advised that from 1945 through April 1947, the Lincoln Book Shop was the outlet of Marxist and Communist literature in Hollywood, California and that all clubs of the Hollywood Section Communist Party purchased literature at that store.

This same informant advised on May 1, 1945, that this book center was closed because of its poor financial condition. He stated that as of July 1947, the Communist Party does not maintain a book shop in the Hollywood area indicating that the Communist subsections in the Hollywood area presently obtain their literature from the home of Clarence L. Ricklefs, 984 Palm Avenue, Los Angeles.

Micklefs is literature director for the Community Subsection, Hollywood Section of the Communist Party.

The Motion Picture Democratic Committee

The "Studio Call" official organ of the Conference of Motion Picture Arts and Crafts, for June 30, 1938, stated that the Democratic Committee was a progressive political organization which should have the support of every employee of the motion picture industry. A full page advertisement appearing in this paper gave the aims of the Motion Picture Democratic Committee as follows:

1. To support and extend the New Deal nationally; to bring a new deal to California.

2. To remove from office all those officials who have made the government of California a government by the corporations.

3. To effect and maintain complete political freedom within the motion picture industry.

4. To aid in uniting all progressive forces within the Democratic Party, convinced that a liberal victory can be achieved at this time only by working within the Democratic Party.

5. To cooperate with all groups and persons who are working to re-establish democracy in the State, and oppose all movements which tend to split the progressive forces in California.

6. To support those candidates who on the basis of their records are best qualified to forward these aims.

Eugene Lyons on page 289 of his book, "The Red Decade" stated: "The Motion Picture Democratic Committee, a front for Stalinist fund raising, had no trouble rounding up seventeen hundred members." Rene M. Vale, an admitted Communist, in 1940 made a sworn statement in which she stated that perhaps the most bazaar flourish given to the Olsen for Governor campaign was provided by the fresh ideas and naive politics of the Motion Picture Democratic Committee, called by those who still ventured to express their dislike of "Hollywood-itis." The Motion Picture Democratic Committee was conceived and delivered by the Los Angeles County Political Commission of the Communist Party in the spring of 1938, in the home of Al Lane, 3989 Denker Avenue.

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office, referred to the August 1935 speech of George Dimitrov, head of the Communist International, as the famous "Trojan Horse" speech. Announcing the united front program of the Communist Party, he stated that as a part of this program the period known as the "popular front" was brought about with the August 23, 1939 signing of the Hitler-Stalin Pact. He related that many of these fronts which were formed during this period were established to influence and support the foreign policy of the Soviet Union. He referred to the "collective security" proposal and that the Communists everywhere were instructed to drop all revolutionary ideas and pose as liberals taking part in all established government affairs. He stated that in the United States they were instructed for voting purposes, to support the candidates of the Democratic Party. He related that they were to assume a "liberal" position and work to get themselves into any positions in political circles where they could use their positions and influence to create and gain support for the policies of the Soviet Union. [redacted] related that in following this line and this policy, the Communists in the Hollywood motion picture industry set up the Motion Picture Democratic Committee. He related that during the year 1938, this organization was going full force and was a very influential group in California and particularly in the Hollywood area. However with the signing of the Hitler-Stalin Pact, he stated that the Hollywood Motion Picture Democratic Committee changed its line shortly thereafter, at which time it began calling the President a "war monger" and that he was dragging the United States into the "imperialistic" war.

Early in 1940, according to Informant [redacted] the Motion Picture Democratic Committee was working in cooperation with the American peace crusades and sponsored peace meetings throughout Southern California. He stated that the organization issued a "newsletter" dated March 26, 1940, calling attention to a "knock-out script" written by Michael Blankfort, Jerome Chodorov, Joseph Fields, Paul Trivers, Carl Dreher, Cyril Kramer and okayed by the Hollywood Peace Council. This was to be presented at a rally at the Olympic Stadium on April 6, 1940 under the banner, "America Declares Peace."

According to [redacted] this was the last meeting at which the Motion Picture Democratic Committee actively participated. In the publication "Red Fascism" compiled by Jack Tenney, California State Senator and Chairman of the California Joint Fact Finding Committee of the 56th California Legislature, information is set out that the following persons were officers of the Motion Picture Democratic Committee in 1939 and 1940. The official stationery of this organization also reflects the same data.

Philip Dunne	Chairman	Screen writer
Melvyn Douglas	First Vice-Chairman	Screen actor
Miriam Hopkins	Second Vice-Chairman	Screen actress
John Ford	Third Vice-Chairman	Motion picture director
Maurice Murphy	Secretary	Writer
Gordon Rigby	Treasurer	Writer
Herbert K. Sorrell	Executive Board Member	Labor official
Harold Buchman	Executive Board Member	Screen writer
Al Caya	Executive Board Member	Teamster Union
John Cromwell	Executive Board Member	Actor and director

Norval Crutcher	Executive Board Member	Secretary of Technicians Guild No. 683
John Gree	Executive Board Member	Labor leader
Edward Mussa	Executive Board Member	Labor leader, Set Directors Guild
Irving Pichel	Executive Board Member	Screen director
Gloria Stuart	Executive Board Member	Screen actress
Frank Tuttle	Executive Board Member	Screen writer and director

Maurice Murphy, Harold Buchman, Herbet K. Sorrell, Norval Crutcher, and Frank Tuttle have been identified as being affiliated with the Communist Party either past or present and their Communist connections are set out in Section I of this memorandum.

Philip Dunne

Philip Dunne, as reported in an affidavit given by Rene Vale, a former member of the Communist Party before the Assembly Fact Finding Committee on Un-American Activities in California, on November 9, 1942, was a screen writer and representative of the Motion Picture Democratic Committee, as well as a member of the Los Angeles County Political Commission of the Communist Party.

Maurice Thomas Murphy

Murphy, according to [redacted] California, was an actor for 19 years. He has been treated for epilepsy since 1935. Through a most reliable but very delicate source, Murphy was identified on May 19, 1947, as a member of the Northwest Section of the Hollywood Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party.

Gordon Rigby

The Hollywood trade magazine "Variety" for September 12, 1945, reflected that Lieutenant Colonel Gordon Rigby retired from the Army after 4 years of service with the Signal Corp. The "Variety" also reflected that he was a veteran of World War I and an ex Hollywood writer and director at Columbia Studios. According to a most reliable but very delicate source Gordon Rigby, on August 31, 1944, was a member of the Communist Political Association, Northwest Section, Los Angeles, California, who had been on special leave from the Communist Party since before December of 1942.

Hollywood Democratic Committee

The Hollywood Democratic Committee, according to Confidential Informant [redacted] was set up in January 1943. The aims and purposes of this organization were shown by a circular issued at the time of the organization meeting held on January 14, 1943. They were as follows:

1. To support national, state and local legislation essential to victory in war.

2. To clarify political issues in relation to the war effort, and to promote discussion and education for this purpose.

3. To support candidates who are best fitted to serve a nation at war and who seek office on a "win-the-war" platform.

4. To cooperate with other organizations in Los Angeles and throughout the state and nation, whose aims are similar to our own.

Confidential Informant [redacted] in referring to this new organization, stated that for all intents and purposes it was nothing but the revival of the Motion Picture Democratic Committee previously discussed in this section of this memorandum. According to [redacted] the activities of the Hollywood Democratic Committee during the time of its existence coincided with the line of the Communist Political Association, which was "collaboration with capitalism" because of the needs of the Soviet Union for assistance. On September 25, 1943, Informant [redacted] related that the activities of this organization were confined largely to the open political field, such as putting pressure on law makers, local and national, and to have legislation passed which was either sponsored or supported by the Communist element in the United States, particularly in the Hollywood area. He stated that this pressure was exerted in two ways, (1) by forming delegations to visit law makers in an attempt to intimidate them, and (2) by a campaign of written propaganda circulated among labor unions and other organizations and the setting up of "committees of correspondence," the purpose of which was to flood the Congress with letters demanding the passage of measures which fell in line with the program of the Communist Party at that time.

On July 26, 1944, letterheads and literature issued by the Hollywood Democratic Committee reflected the following persons were elected officers for the coming year.

Marc Connelly	Chairman
John Cromwell	Vice Chairman
Gene Kelly	Vice Chairman
E. Y. Harburg	Vice Chairman
Norval D. Crutcher	Secretary
Albert Dekker	Treasurer

This same literature reflected that the organization had an executive board of 88 members. Of this number 22 have been identified as Communists through information obtained by the Los Angeles Office, through a most reliable but very delicate source. Of the 22 known Communists, the following individuals whose Communist Party affiliations are set out in Section I of this memorandum, have been identified with the motion picture industry.

Margaret Bennett Wills	Mrs. Nora Hellgren
Herbert Biberman	Rex Ingram
Henry Blankfort	Donald Key King
Sidney Robert Buchman	John Howard Lawson
Norval Dixon Crutcher	Barbara Alexander Myers
Edward Dmytryk	Samuel Badisch Ornitz
Edward McCreary Gilbert	Mortimer William Pomerance
Donald Alexander Gordon	Herbert K. Sorrell
Louis Harris

In addition to the above listed Communists it was also known that such prominent Communist Party figures in the motion picture industry as Frank Tuttle, motion picture director, were also active in this group. It has also been reported by Confidential Informant [redacted] that John Garfield, the pro-Communist actor, was associated with this group. Garfield has been identified by [redacted] as a member of the Communist Party. Garfield also, according to Informant [redacted] has been affiliated with the Young Communist League, the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League both of which were Communist front groups.

During 1944 the Hollywood Democratic Committee grew to be one of the most important political groups in Southern California, according to Confidential Informant [redacted] He reported that this was primarily due to its connection with the motion picture industry and the prestige derived therefrom.

This organization continued its political activities in the 1944 elections and announced that it was to become a permanent group, cooperating with and supporting the Political Action Committee and other progressive groups in politics.

On January 25, 1945, the "Daily Worker" carried an article reflecting that 100 Hollywood leaders sent a wire to President Roosevelt, requesting him to terminate the proceedings against Harry Bridges. The article reflected that the action was taken at a dinner sponsored by the Hollywood Democratic Committee. Among the signers of this telegram were Communists and many individuals who have supported the Communist movement in Hollywood. This article reflected that John Howard Lawson, writer; Jack Moss, producer; and Dalton Trumbo, writer, all known Communists in Hollywood, were among the signers of this communication. These individuals identified as Communists above are referred to in Section I, where their Communist affiliations are set out.

On June 6, 1945, in Hollywood, California, a meeting was called by the Hollywood Democratic Committee, at which time the name of this group was changed by unanimous decision to the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions.

Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions

The Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, a now defunct organization, was formed under the influence of Communists and Communist sympathizers and was supported throughout its existence by the Communists and the Communist press. Benjamin J. Davis, Jr., a member of the National Committee of the Communist Party, on August 11, 1945, read recommendations to the New York State Convention of the Communist Party of those individuals who had been nominated for the New York State Committee. Concerning Lionel Berman, Davis stated, "Comrade Berman, a Communist Party functionary, is Jewish and a member of the old State Committee.....I would say, (he) is the head of the Cultural Section of the Party.....It seems to me that in his work in the past, particularly in the elections when he was one of those instrumental in setting up the Independent Citizens Committee of Arts, Sciences and Professions, he has demonstrated a very excellent capacity for organization of a very excellent political character." This information was obtained through [redacted] State Convention.

[redacted] advised on April 4, 1946, that the organization of the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions by the Communist Party was directed and planned [redacted] in 1944, by Lionel Berman of the Communist Party Cultural Section, and Joseph Field of the Workers Library Publishing Company. He also advised that this organization was a Communist controlled group in spite of the fact that the majority of the membership was not Communist and a minority of the Communists were directing it.

With regard to the Hollywood Chapter of the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office, related that a meeting was called of the members of the Hollywood Democratic Committee at the American Legion Hall in Hollywood on June 6, 1945. He stated that at this meeting approximately 360 individuals were in attendance all believed to be members of the Hollywood Democratic Committee.

W. Emmett Lavery, President of the Screen Writers Guild, concerning whom information is set out under the Screen Writers Guild in this memorandum, was chairman of the meeting. He related that Herman Shumlin a motion picture producer, who has been affiliated with a long line of Communist organizations was present and proposed that the new organization which was known as the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions affiliate with the National organization called the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions. According to [redacted] John Howard Lawson led the Communist elements in this meeting. He stated that the ballot which had been previously selected was voted on as a mere formality and many of the members of the executive committee of the Hollywood Democratic Committee were elected and continued as members of the executive committee of the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions.

Confidential Informant [redacted] stated, with regard to this change in name and apparent change in complexion of the organization, that it was due to the fact that the Communist Party line had changed. He stated that from June 1945 until February 11, 1947, the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions had followed those of the Communist Party in the economic and political fields. He related that during the existence of this organization, it was the principal pressure group using the prestige and influence of the Hollywood motion picture industry to support legislation endorsed by the Communist Party and its sympathizers. A dodger stamped September 11, 1945, which is in the possession of the Los Angeles Office reflected that there were 98 members of the executive council of the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions. Of this number 14 have been identified as Communists through the most reliable but very delicate sources. These individuals are listed below and their Communist connections are set out in Section I of this memorandum.

Sidney Robert Buchman	William Frank Blowitz
Abram S. Burrows	Norval Dixon Crutcher
Louis Harris	Rex Ingram
John Howard Lawson	Sam Moore
Jack Moss	Mortimer William Pomerance
Earl Hawley Robinson	Dalton Trumbo
Frank Wright Tuttle	Margaret Bennett Wills

In December of 1946 Confidential Informant [redacted] reported that the National Headquarters of the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions was contemplating merging with the National Citizens Political Action Committee with the ultimate object of laying the foundation for a new so-called liberal group in the United States.

In January of 1947 Confidential Informant [redacted] stated that the Hollywood Chapter of this organization was preparing to go out of existence under its present name and emerge as the Hollywood Branch of the new organization which was formed in New York City on December 28 and 29, 1946, called the Progressive Citizens of America. This latter group was formed by the merger of the now defunct Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions and the National Citizens Political Action Committee.

Progressive Citizens of America

According to Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office, the Southern California Chapter of the Progressive Citizens of America was organized on February 11, 1947. A leaflet which was distributed in the Los Angeles area prior to February 11, 1947, announced that a meeting would be held on that date for the purpose of organizing this organization. The leaflet announced that Jo Davidson, National Chairman of the Progressive Citizens of America would be the principal speaker. For identification purposes it should be pointed out that Jo Davidson has been identified by [redacted] confidential informant of the New York Office, as a Communist.

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the San Diego Office reported that Edward Mosk acted as Chairman of the organizational meeting of the Progressive Citizens of America. Mosk, who outlined the purpose of the meeting introduced Dr. Linus Pauling. Pauling discussed the production of atomic energy and the atomic bomb and its significance to world government. John Cromwell, the retiring Chairman of the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions commented regarding the consolidation of the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions and the National Citizens Political Action Committee.

Jo Davidson, the National Chairman, then explained the purpose of the new organization. Following Davidson's remarks, Robert A. Kenny, former attorney general of California, was elected chairman of this branch. Vice Chairmen elected were Edward Mosk, Howard Koch, Dr. Linus Pauling, Lena Horne, Senial Ostrow and Gene Kelly, and Mrs. William Dieterle, secretary.

Of the 100 directors elected, the following known Communists, whose Communist Party affiliations are set out in Section I of this memorandum were included:

Sam Albert	Margaret Bennett Wills
Edward Biberman	Henry Blankfort
Abe Burrows	Howard Da Silva
Lou Harris	Sam Moore
John Howard Lawson	Fred Rinaldo
Anne Revere	Adrian Scott
Earl Robinson	Frank Tuttle
Dalton Trumbo

In addition, the following Communists who are not identified in Section I of this memorandum were also elected to the board of directors:

Dr. Murray Abowitz

Dr. Abowitz, who is presently practicing medicine at 658 South Bonney Brae Avenue, Los Angeles, has been identified by a most highly confidential but delicate source in 1943 as a member of the Medical Branch, Professional Section, Los Angeles Country Communist Party.

Philip M. Connelly

Connelly is a former president of the Los Angeles Newspaper Guild, Confidential Informant [redacted] a paid reliable informant of the Los Angeles Office [redacted] Party in Los Angeles, reported on July 16, 1947 that Connelly was paying $10.00 per month to the Los Angeles County Communist Party as a sustainer fee. [redacted] Connelly pays this fee, $10.00, regularly and other CIO functionaries also pay a regular sum monthly. Connelly is at present secretary-treasurer of the Los Angeles Industrial Union Council. In addition to this information [redacted] attended a meeting which was attended by some 30 Communist Party members at which Connelly was present. According to [redacted] Connelly identified himself as a Communist and attacked the leaders of the Communist Party at that time.

Charles J. Katz

Katz is an attorney in Los Angeles. He signed the brief of the Los Angeles County Communist Party petition filed before the California Supreme Court in June of 1942 placing the Party on the ballot. John Leach, former Communist Party organizer testified concerning Katz before the grand jury as follows: "I knew Katz as a Communist Party member; he was active in professional study groups, organizing professional study groups in Hollywood for the Communist Party. Katz was in the Communist fraction of the Anti-Nazi League. Katz received membership book from Stanley Lawrence....."

Ben Margolis

Through a highly confidential but most reliable source, it was ascertained that Ben Margolis was a member of the Engels Branch of the Los Angeles County Communist Party during 1946. Margolis was formerly a law partner of Katz, Gallagher and Margolis, a legal firm which represented CIO local unions and Communist Party members.

Loren Miller

Discontinued Informant [redacted] advised that Miller, a negro attorney in Los Angeles, was affiliated in 1937 with the Communist Party, having Communist Party book number 75-393. According to [redacted] Miller's Party name was Laurence Rossmore. Miller has also been identified with the National Lawyers Guild.

George Pepper

Pepper is the executive director of the Arts, Sciences and Professional Council of the Progressive Citizens of America. Through a most reliable but very delicate source of information, Pepper was identified on July 22, 1943 as a member of the Los Angeles County Communist Party. He was also identified on June 30, 1944, through this same source as a member of the Communist Political Association.

According to Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office, Robert W. Kenny, the chairman of this chapter during the past several years has been affiliated with or active in numerous Communist front organizations.

The program of the Progressive Citizens of America both in California and nationally has closely paralleled that of the Communist Party. This was one of the first organizations to most vigorously attack the President's proposal for aid to Greece and Turkey, as did the Communist Party. Also this organization joined with the Civil Rights Congress, a national front organization, in protesting against the city authorities of Peoria, Illinois, and Albany, New York, who failed to permit Paul Robeson to speak in the public schools. The national organization is now publishing a monthly paper called the "Progressive Citizens". This paper is being circulated by the California Chapter. The California group is represented on this staff by the following individuals: Herman Shumlin; Norman Corwin, radio commentator; John Cromwell, writer; Lillian Hellman, writer, Gene Kelly, actor; Frederic March, actor; Robert W. Kenny, ex-California State Attorney General; and Paul Robeson singer and actor.

With regard to Herman Shumlin, Informant [redacted] has reported that he was one of the endorsers of the American Peace Mobilization, a Communist front organization, a member of the League of American Writers, and a teacher at the Hollywood Writers School.

Norman Corwin, according to [redacted] was a lecturer at the Hollywood School for Writers and a member of the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions.

The writer, John Cromwell, has been referred to by Informant [redacted] as having been a member of the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions and also having participated in radio forums sponsored by the Hollywood Democratic Committee in Hollywood on January 5, 1945.

The writer, Lillian Hellman, according to [redacted] has been a member of the League of American Writers, the American Peace Mobilization, the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, and connected with the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee.

Actor Gene Kelly has been identified by [redacted] as having been a member of the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, and a member of the Progressive Citizens of America.

Actor Frederic March has been referred to by Informant [redacted] as a former member of the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions. [redacted] has reported that March is a member of the Communist Party.

Former California State Attorney General Robert W. Kenny has been identified as co-chairman of the Progressive Citizens of America. He also, according to [redacted] was affiliated with the National Win the Peace Conference and a member of the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professior

Singer Paul Robeson has been identified as having been active in the American Peace Mobilization, the National Win the Peace Conference, and the Council of African Affairs by Informant [redacted]

The above referred to organizations are discussed in this section of the memorandum, with the exception of the Council of African Affairs, a Communist influenced group.

The Progressive Citizens of America on May 9, 1947, issued an ultimatum printed in the "Daily Variety", Hollywood trade publication, protesting the investigations being conducted by the House Committee on Un-American Activities and defending the rights of the Communist Party in the United States.

Confidential Informant [redacted] related that the Progressive Citizens of America held a meeting for Henry A. Wallace in the Gilmore Stadium on the night of May 19, 1947. According to the "Daily People's World," West Coast Communist newspaper on May 21, 1947, 30,000 people were in attendence. According to [redacted] a collection was taken up at this meeting for the support of the PCA and the sum of approximately $86,000 was realized. He stated that a number of Hollywood celebrities including Charles Chaplin, Edward G. Robinson and Paul Henreid were among the large contributors.

According to Informant [redacted] the Progressive Citizens of America established a division in Hollywood on June 13, 1947 at a meeting called by Rose Hobart, screen actress; John Garfield, actor, Paul Draper, actor; and Anne Revere, screen actress. According to [redacted] this unit is to be known as the Hollywood Arts, Sciences and Professions Council of the PCA. Its chairman is John Cromwell, screen director and the group's executive director is George Pepper. The purpose of this Council, according to [redacted] is to participate in all local political affairs, elections and projects which the national PCA group endorses and supports. The Communist affiliations of Garfield, Revere and Pepper have been previously set out as have the affiliations of Cromwell with Communist infiltrated or influenced organizations.

This council published a brochure in early July of 1947 announcing that a conference on the subject of thought control in the United States was to be held at the Beverly Hills Hotel from July 9-13, 1947 under the auspices of the Progressive Citizens of America. This brochure announced that "in recent months an increasing number of incidents have occurred, indicating an unhealthy tendency in our national life--a tendency to prevent freedom of individual expression which had always been the guarantee of our democratic culture. This conference has been called in order to document and examine these incidents separately and as part of a majority tendency. If such a tendency does exist and continues to develop unchallenged, it can lead in only one direction-- biased control of the thought patterns of all the American people."

The opening session of this conference which was attended by Agents of the Los Angeles Office was addressed by John Howard Lawson, leading Communist Screen writer in the motion picture industry whose Communist Party affiliations are set out in Section I of this memorandum, Lawson commenced his remarks by mentioning that various individuals had recently accused Henry Wallace of giving Europe a false impression of America by saying that America is not imperialistic and has no imperialist aims. In his speech Lawson reviewed the historic struggles of progressive forces and individuals throughout United States history and also pointed out the imperialistic actions in its past and present foreign policy. The keynote speaker of the opening sessions was Norman Corwin, who according to Informant [redacted] is so close to the Party that it would be difficult to say he is not a member and who [redacted] has heard discussed favorably by Communist Party officers on numerous occasions in connection with the Communist Party program of infiltration in the motion picture industry. Corwin in his address condemned the war psychosis being put upon the people today and also condemned the activities of such groups as the House Committee on Un-American Activities, the Tenney Committee, which is the California State Un-American Activities Committee and the Hearst Press.

At the final session of the conference on thought control held on the evening of July 13, 1947, Robert Kenny, an executive of the PCA stated that the organization stands "for nationalization of public utilities, the coal industry, the steel industry and any other industry where nationalization would advance the common good." Kenny stated frequently that free enterprise was not working and that those proponents of this economy should admit this and reach for new solutions to the changing economic problems of our complex system. Prior to the adjournment of the conference, resolutions were adopted including the signing of a letter to the President advising him of the vicious type of thought control existing in the United States and that thought control evidenced a trend toward fascism. The resolution advocated the abolition of the Un-American Activities Committee and the abandonment of the Truman Doctrine. It further called for the discontinuing of the loyalty test recently instituted by the Federal Government.

Through [redacted] it was ascertained that George Pepper and Waldo Salt, who have previously been identified as Communists in Hollywood, had charge of all the arrangements for this thought control conference. In addition the program reflects that the following individuals, who have previously been identified as Communists either in Section I or Section III in connection with the various Communist front organizations active in the Hollywood area, participated actively in this program.

Edward Biberman	Albert Maltz
Philip Stevenson	Dan Jarves
Sam Ornitz	George Sklar
Charles J. Katz	Howard Da Silva
Morris Carnovsky	Anne Revere
Dr. Murray Abowitz	Guy Endore
Melvin Levy	Wilma Shore
Donald Ogden Stewart	Sam Moore
Adrian Scott	Lee Cobb
Gale Sondergaard

Hollywood Anti-Nazi League

The Hollywood Anti-Nazi League was set up in the motion picture industry for the purpose of defending America's democratic rights against Nazi influence. The organization had among its original officers such well-known Communists as Herbert Biberman, director, and Gale Sondergaard, actress. The Communist Party affiliations of these individuals are set out in Section I. Following the Hitler-Stalin Pact and the consequent change in the Communist Party line from opposition to Fascism to a program of general isolation, the organization was liquidated.

Hollywood League for Democratic Action

According to Informant [redacted] the Hollywood League for Democratic Action was made up of the same people who were active in the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League although its activities were just the reverse of the Anti-Nazi League because of the change in the Communist Party program. Many of the leading people in this organization were also identified with the Communist Party, such as Dalton Trumbo, Frank Tuttle and John Wexley. The Communist Party affiliations of these individuals are set out in Section I of this memorandum. This organization dropped out of the picture with the coming of the American Peace Mobilization.

The American Peace Mobilization

This organization was a national Communist front group which, in Hollywood, was under the leadership of Herbert Biberman. Other known Communists active in this movement were John Howard Lawson, Dalton Trumbo, Frank Tuttle and Guy Endore. The Communist Party affiliations of these individuals are set out in Section I. Many of the so-called "intellectuals" who had been active in Communist front movements in Hollywood were also active in supporting the American Peace Mobilization. Probably one of the most prominent of these so-called "intellectuals" was Donald Ogden Stewart, a member of the League of American Writers, International Labor Defense, Screen Writers Guild, and the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, according to Confidential Informant [redacted]

The Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee

Informant [redacted] related that from 1937 on, during the period of the Spanish Revolution, numerous Communist front groups were formed in the United States to assist the Communist cause in Spain. Prominent among these groups were the Spanish Refugee Ship Mission, the Medical Bureau to Aid Spanish Democracy, Spanish Refugee Relief Campaign, Friends of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade, Hollywood Committee for Writers in Exile, and the United American Spanish Aid Committee. These groups had found membership and support among the intellectual group in the Hollywood area. The remnants of these groups were consolidated together with the formation of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee. This organization, a Communist influenced group, was said to be interested only in those refugees whose political opinions coincided with those who were in control of the Committee.

[redacted] Communist Party Headquarters on January 5, 1944, there was made available an official directive from the "National Org. Dept." addressed to "Dear Comrades." This directive which was dated April 13, 1943 stated in part:

"The Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee has undertaken the patriotic duty of organizing a mass campaign for the release and rehabilitation of anti-Fascist refugees in North America.....Comrade Browder placed this question as one of paramount concern to America.... We are therefore suggesting that your State Executive Committee discuss how the Y.C.L. can effectively participate in this campaign.....and would also be well if every district made a contribution to work of this committee.....We are sending you under separate cover publicity petitions and post cards....."

From [redacted] it was ascertained on February 16, 1945, that Felix Kusman of the national office of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee and Marian Owens of the San Francisco Chapter of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee met with Carl Winter, at that time President of the Los Angeles County Communist Political Association, regarding the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee policy. Carl Winter summarized the decisions made at this meeting as follows:

1. Consolidation of the Los Angeles and Hollywood offices of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee should be effected.

2. An executive committee should be established.

3. Closer relations with War Veterans should be effected.

The following officers, past and present of the Los Angeles Branch of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee are known Communists:

One Helen Manfield Fischer at present is executive secretary of the Los Angeles Branch of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee, having held this position since at least April 7, 1942. Informant [redacted] Communist Party Headquarters in Los Angeles produced data reflecting that Fischer on October 26, 1943, was listed as a guest to be invited to the Los Angeles County Communist Convention held October 30, 31, 1943 in Los Angeles. She was listed as a guest from Branch E (Cartoonists of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party). This data was further confirmed by information received from a most reliable but very delicate source on November 16, 1943, which reflected that she was a member of the Communist Party.

According to the information obtained from [redacted] who [redacted] Communist Party Headquarters, the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee since January 5, 1945 has opened the "Spanish Refugee Appeal." The letterheads of this "Spanish Refugee Appeal" of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee list among others 14 individuals from the motion picture industry of whom the following are known Communists and their Communist connections are set out in Section I of this memorandum:

Canada Lee
Albert Maltz
Karen Morley

Robert Rossen
Dalton Trumbo

An an example of the fund raising activities of this group, Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office, who is a Communist Party member, advised on May 19, 1945 that the women's division of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee held a Spanish Refugee Appeal luncheon at the Beverly Hills Hotel on May 2, 1945. The sponsors of this luncheon included the following persons identified with the motion picture industry, according to this source:

Mrs. John Howard Lawson, identified as a member of the Los Angeles County Communist Party through a very reliable but most delicate source on November 16, 1943.

Mrs. Albert Maltz, also identified as a member of the Communist Party by this same source on the same date.

Mrs. Dalton Trumbo was also identified as a member of the Communist Party through this same source on this same date.

Mrs. Frank Tuttle, she was identified as a member of the Los Angeles County Communist Party on December 19, 1946 by Samuel Davenport Russell, educational director of the Hollywood Northeast Women's Club of the Communist Party.

Miss Gale Sondergaard also known as Mrs. Herbert Biberman. Sondergaard was identified as a Communist through a most reliable but very delicate source on the following dates, August 31, 1944, January 8, 1945, January 16, 1945, February 26, 1945 and November 19, 1945.

The following Hollywood personalities have appeared as headliners for the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee in the Los Angeles functions of this group:

Olivia de Haviland and Phillip Dorn on March 12, 1943. This information was obtained from Confidential Informant [redacted] a former member of the Communist Party, who furnished this data on March 30, 1943.

Paul Robeson and Hazel Scott on August 5, 1943. This information was obtained from the West coast Communist newspaper the "Peoples World" on July 10, 1943.

John Garfield and Paul Robeson on February 4, 1945. This information was obtained from personal observation of a Special Agent of the Los Angeles Field Division.

Rita Hayworth. According to the "Peoples World" of June 20, 1946, Rita Rayworth was listed as the honorary chairman of the women's division, Spanish Refugee Appeal for a function on June 2, 1946.

The Actors Laboratory

The Actors Laboratory, according to Confidential Informant [redacted] is a Communist controlled institution where screen and stage acting is purportedly taught by directors, actors and writers affiliated with the motion picture industry. He stated that this school was formerly located in New York City under the name of the Group Theatre. The Group Theatre was said to be affiliated with the New Theatre League, an alleged Communist venture. He related that the New Theatre League, from about 1932 until 1938, was a propaganda agency making use of the stage as a medium which was successful in turning out actors who later served the Communist movement in the United States. He reported that the Actors Laboratory cooperates with such organizations as the Hollywood Writers Mobilization and formerly the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions.

The certificate of incorporation of this organization filed in the County Clerk's Office in Los Angeles reflects the following aims and purposes of this organization:

"1. To conduct classes for study of theatre arts, acting, dancing, stage craft, play writing, radio acting and performing.

2. To conduct classes in the study of analysis of contemporary plays, moving pictures and radio programs.

3. To produce and present dramatic material such as plays, review and radio programs, for the purpose of informing and educating the members of the public.

4. To conduct social affairs deemed to be for the benefit and interest of the members of this corporation."

Through a most reliable but very delicate source, information contained in a report prepared by Elizabeth Leach, organizer of the Northwest Section of the Los Angeles County Communist Party Political Association, was obtained on January 16, 1945, from which the following is quoted:

> "To provide a center for professional actors to experiment with and develop their acting technique, to provide a means by which professional actors can render greater war service; and a school.

"The laboratory has quite an extensive camp show program which has now expanded to include overseas units and hospital shows. It is now presenting weekly a program of one act plays to finance the war service program which have been very favorably reviewed in the press. There are very serious weaknesses in relation to the political content of the material presented by the laboratory. (Tendencies toward estheticism, pessimism) and some of the weaknesses of the group theater have been carried over since many of the leading figures of the laboratory are from the group."

[redacted] 20th Century Fox Studios, furnished the names of the executive board members of the Actors Laboratory as of April 7, 1947. There were 19 names shown on this list. Out of this number 11 have records of Communist activities and membership. The following 10 individuals have been previously identified in Section I of this memorandum as Communists where their Communist connections are set out:

Roman Bohnen	Mary Tarcai
J. Edward Bromberg	Lloyd Bridges
Larry Parks	Phoebe Brand
Art Smith	Morris Carnovsky
Abraham L. Polonsky	Hy Kraft

Jack Bragin, also one of the executive board members is an attorney whose practice is confined to the motion picture field. According to a most reliable and very delicate source of information, he has also been identified as a Communist.

According to [redacted] there are 11 members of the faculty of the school of the Actors Laboratory. Of these 11 members the actress Jacobina Caro and actress Phoebe Brand are Communists and their Communist Party affiliations are set out in Section I of this memorandum.

The American Youth for Democracy

The American Youth for Democracy, a nationally known Communist youth movement, has received the support of many Communists and Communist sympathizers in the Hollywood area. The American Youth for Democracy is a successor to the Young Communist League . Among those individuals in the motion picture industry who have been active in the support of this group are Edward Dmytryk, director, Ring Lardner, Jr., writer, Dalton Trumbo, writer, Albert Maltz, writer, Sam Ornitz, writer and John Howard Lawson, writer, all of whom are known to be Communists. The Communist Party affiliations of these individuals are set out in Section I.

Citizens Committee for the Motion Picture Strikers

This organization, according to Confidential Informant [redacted] was set up for the purpose of aiding the strike in the motion picture industry which occurred in March of 1945. This strike developed as a result of a jurisdictional dispute between the Conference of Studio Unions and the IATSE and was discussed under the section headed "Conference of Studio Unions." He stated that this Committee was under Communist control and that it was made up of individuals who were active in such Communist front groups in Hollywood as the Hollywood Writers Mobilization and the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee, as well as the Screen Writers' Guild. Known Communist Party members, according to [redacted] were active in leading this Committee. They included Frank Tuttle, Edward Dmytryk, and Mrs. Sadie Ornitz, wife of Sam Ornitz, formerly a Communist Party functionary in Los Angeles. The Communist Party affiliations of Tuttle, Dmytryk, and Sam Ornitz are set out in Section I of this memorandum. [redacted] related that the entire strength of the Communist Party was concentrated on the strike through this Committee. He stated that leaflets and bulletins signed by the Los Angeles County Communist Party and other Communist Party branches were distributed freely by members of this group who engaged in picket duty.

The National Committee to Win the Peace

Confidential Informant [redacted] related that this organization came into existence in Hollywood on May 12, 1946, and was sponsored by many individuals who have previously been affiliated with the Communist movement through various front organizations. In this connection, it should be pointed out that the National Committee to Win the Peace is known to have been promulgated and supported by the Communist Party, its press and supporters. The Los Angeles meeting held on May 12, 1946, referred to above, was under the guidance of Communist William Pomerance, Executive Secretary of the Screen Writer's Guild, and Communist sympathizer Willis J. Hill, President of the People's Educational Center. The Communist infiltration and influence in these two groups have been discussed in this section of the memorandum.

The Hollywood Forum

The Hollywood Forum, according to Informant [redacted] was held under the auspices of the "Daily People's World," West Coast Communist newspaper. This group, devoted to the discussion of Communism or Communist propaganda, was under the control of many Communists and Communist sympathizers affiliated with the motion picture industry. Individuals who have been active in this group include Waldo Salt, Sam Ornitz, John Howard Lawson, and Alvah Bessie, all of whom have been identified as Communists. Their Communist Party affiliations are set out in Section I of this memorandum.

John Barnes and Associates

In August of 1946 Confidential Informant [redacted] related that this organization was a recently formed "public relations"-type group which had announced that its functions were to "see that liberal, progressive commentators such as are listed as supporting the organization, are kept on the air as an antidote to the radio prostitutes who put their personal well-being above that of their fellow Americans....." Among the persons listed as supporting this group who are directly or indirectly connected with the Hollywood Film Industry are: Averill Berman, radio commentator who was a member of the Executive Council of the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee for the Arts, Sciences, and Professions, and Peter DeLima, radio commentator who has been connected with the Progressive Citizens of America as well as the Hollywood Writers Mobilization. All of these organizations mentioned above have been subjected to Communist infiltration or influence. Confidential Informant [redacted] reported that also listed as supporting this venture were businessmen in Los Angeles, all of whom lean toward the Communist position.

Western Council for Progressive Business, Labor and Agriculture

Confidential Informant [redacted] has related that this is also a pressure-type organization in the Hollywood Section which cooperates with John Barnes and Associates. This group, according to [redacted] is obviously a Communist pressure group because of the names given as supporting it. Some of them are: Paul Robeson, Bartley C. Crum, and Robert W. Kenny. The Communist affiliations of Kenny and Robeson are previously set out in this section of this memorandum. Concerning Bartley C. Crum, the Washington Daily News for September 4, 1946, reflected that Crum was Vice-President of the American Committee for Spanish Freedom, a sponsor of the American Youth for Democracy, an initiating sponsor of the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences, and Professions, and a Vice-President of the National Lawyers Guild. All of the above groups have been infiltrated or were under the influence of Communists or Communist sympathizers.

The American-Russian Institute

Confidential Informant [redacted] stated in March of this year that the American-Russian Institute opened an office at 6607 Hollywood Boulevard. It should be pointed out that the American-Russian Institute is a Soviet propaganda-type organization which acts as a dissemination center for Russian propaganda in Hollywood. Alvah Bessie, writer, identified in Section I as a Communist, and Lewis Milestone, who has been reported by Informant [redacted] as having been a member of the Hollywood Democratic Committee, the League of American Writers and the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, have been affiliated with this organization. Additional information concerning the American-Russian Institute is also set out in this summary under the section captioned, "Soviet Activities in Hollywood."

The Civil Rights Congress

The Civil Rights Congress is a national Communist front organization formed as the result of the merger of the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, International Labor Defense, and the Michigan Civil Rights Federation. The International Labor Defense was an organization under the influence of Communists and Communist sympathizers, and the other two above mentioned organizations were declared subversive by the Attorney General in that they came within the purview of the Hatch Act. The Civil Rights Congress has been active in smear-type activities directed at the Department of Justice and the Bureau. For example, the "Milwaukee Journal" on September 7, 1946, reflected that a letter had been sent by the Milwaukee Chapter of the Civil Rights Congress to the President of the United States, asking for the removal of Attorney General Tom Clark and Director John Edgar Hoover for failing to bring the lynchers to justice. In addition, this organization has been very active in fighting the Taft-Hartley Labor Bill, defending the civil rights of Gerhardt Eisler and denouncing all efforts to outlaw the Communist Party. This organization has received the support of such well known Communists in the motion picture industry as Ring Lardner, Jr., who has been carried as a member of the National Board of the Civil Rights Congress. The Communist Party affiliations of Ring Lardner, Jr., are set out in Section I of this memorandum.

Southern Conference for Human Welfare

The Southern Conference for Human Welfare, a national Communist front movement, which has been described by Earl Browder as a transmission belt used by the Party for the dissemination of its propaganda, received the support of the motion picture industry, primarily through the efforts of Melvyn Douglas, husband of Helen Gahagan Douglas, who has been affiliated with such groups as the Hollywood Democratic Committee in an executive capacity. This affiliation of Melvyn Douglas is set out in the Jack Tenney Un-American Activities report for the State of California to the 55th California Legislature. Informant [redacted] reported during March of 1947 that Melvyn Douglas acted as the Hollywood representative of this organization in a money-raising campaign. He mailed out letters soliciting funds under his own signature.

The National Negro Congress

The National Negro Congress is a nationally known Communist front organization under the control of Dr. Max Yergan, a known Communist. This organization has been declared subversive by the Attorney General in that it comes within the purview of the Hatch Act. The December 12, 1946 issue of the Los Angeles Sentinel, Negro Newspaper, carried a list of the members of the Executive Board of the Los Angeles Chapter of the National Negro Congress. Included among those listed was John Howard Lawson, Communist screen writer.

The Russian-American Club

Informant [redacted] related that in August of 1944 this Club was created in Hollywood with the announced purpose of raising money for the people of the Soviet Union through the Russian-American Society for Medical Aid to Russia. Included among the Communists who have supported this organization is Frank Tuttle who has been identified in Section I as a Communist. In addition, Lewis Milestone, previously identified in this section of the memorandum, together with others who have supported the Communist front movement, supported this organization.

IV. COMMUNIST INFLUENCE IN MOTION PICTURES

As a preface to this section, it should be pointed out that it has not been a function of this Bureau to review motion picture productions for political content for it was not believed that the Bureau's representatives are experts in this field nor was it believed that censorship of motion pictures was within the purview of the activities of the Bureau. Our investigation of Communism in Hollywood has for the most part been directed toward the investigation of the individual Communists, Communist front organizations, Communist infiltration of the labor groups and the general activities of the Communist Party in the Los Angeles area. However, in conjunction with our investigations, reports have been received from Confidential Informants and other sources concerning the tactics used by the Communists in their attempt to influence motion pictures and actual examples of Communist propaganda in motion picture films. This data will be set out in this section.

Background and Tactics Used by the Communists to Inject Communist Propaganda in the Motion Pictures

As has been pointed out in Section I of this memorandum, an article in the Daily Worker for August 15, 1925, was written by Willy Muenzenberg, the German Communist propagandist, in which he quotes Vladimir Ilitch Lenin as stating with regard to the motion picture:

> "You must powerfully develop film production, taking especially the proletarian kino (motion picture theatres) to the city masses, in still a much greater extent to the village. You must always consider that of all the arts the motion picture is for us the most important."

Likewise Muenzenberg quoted Gregory E. Zinoviev, the Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Communist International in 1925, as stating:

> "The motion picture in the possession of the bourgeoise is the strongest means for the portrayal and befuddling of the masses. In our hands, it can and must become a mighty weapon of Communist propaganda and further enlightenment of the widest working masses."

With the preceding quotations set out to show the importance placed upon the motion picture by leaders of the Communist International, it is readily understandable how in 1935 the top structure of the Communist Party, USA, according to Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office, set down instructions to the Communist Party in the Los Angeles area to concentrate their activities on the motion picture industry, specifically requesting that they concentrate on the so-called intellectual groups which are composed of directors, writers, actors and high-paid technicians.

According to [redacted] the Communist Party has continued its program of concentrating on the writers and directors in the motion picture industry for the purpose of injecting propaganda into the motion pictures. These writers and directors are in a position in the creative field to determine the content of the picture. The writer who creates a dialogue and the director who interprets the same are in a position to influence political feeling contained in any given picture. For this reason, [redacted] has stated, the political views and background of the writer and director in the motion picture industry are utilized to the fullest extent by the Communist Party. This has resulted in the infiltration of known Communists and fellow travelers into the writers' and directors' groups.

[redacted] has related that World War II permitted those writers and directors who acted under Communist guidance to insert sequences and episodes into a picture in a most clever manner. For this reason, he related, the Communist apparatus in the motion picture industry has been most successful, having placed in the majority of war pictures those writers and directors who were in sympathy with the cause of Communism. [redacted] stated that the crowning achievement in this respect was the picture "Mission to Moscow".

[redacted] has related that this picture raised such a controversy throughout the United States it was necessary that the Communist technique be changed. He related that the Communists then decided that the Communist writers and directors must become more subtle. He stated they are now content to insert a line, a sentence or a situation carrying the Communist Party line into an otherwise non-political picture, having found that this method is more effective by reason of the fact that it does not appear to be purposeful but just incidental. He related that this subtle method of getting propaganda into the pictures was not restricted to war-type pictures or serious drama. He stated that the Communist message was also conveyed in the so-called "musicals".

He also related the Communists, in influencing the production of these pictures, do not only direct their efforts at injecting propaganda into the pictures, but also prevent all material that the Party might consider objectionable to its current program from appearing in pictures. It has been reported that on several instances the Communist element has actually prevented the making of certain pictures.

Among the pictures of this type, according to [redacted] was "Uncle Tom's Cabin", written from the book by Harriet Beecher Stowe. Production of this picture was particularly attacked by elements of the Communist Party due to the fact that it was felt that the picture did not reflect a proper attitude on the part of the negroes. As a result of this pressure, this picture was withdrawn. Another picture, "The Life of Eddie Rickenbacker" met similar pressure. The Communist Party objected to him because of his expressed political opinions regarding labor. He was labeled as a Fascist, a Nazi sympathizer, a reactionary and an isolationist. Pressure was said to have been put on a number of film stars to refuse leading roles in the picture. It was also said that a number of writers were threatened causing some of them to refuse to do the script. This again resulted in the picture being withdrawn from production.

[redacted] has related that a group of motion picture writers, producers and directors who are aware of the Communist activity within the motion picture industry, had assembled considerable information setting forth the purposes and aims of the Communists in connection with the production of motion pictures. Among those who had done this were: James McGuinness, and Ayn Rand, screen writers; Robert Arthur, producer; Mrs. Robert Arthur and Morris Ryskind, free-lance screen writers as well as Lela Rogers, screen writer and producer. There is set out hereinafter the purpose of the Communists in Hollywood according to the information assembled by this group:

> "The purpose of the Communists in Hollywood is not the production of political movies openly advocating Communism. Their purpose is to corrupt non-political movies by introducing small casual bits of propaganda into innocent stories and to make people absorb the basic premises of Collectivism by indirection and implication. Few people would take Communism straight, but a constant stream of hints, lines, touches, and suggestions battering the public from the screen will act like drops of water that split a rock if continued long enough. The rock that they are trying to split is Americanism".

This group has also prepared a list of some of the more common devices used by the Communists to disseminate their propaganda. They include the smearing of the free enterprise system, the smearing of industrialists, presenting of wealth as evil, presenting of success as evil, glorification of failure, glorifying depravity, glorifying collectivism, smearing the independent man and belittling of American political institutions.

In addition to the above, this group has pointed out that it is the Communist aim never to show the Soviet form of government or Soviet policies in an unfavorable light. According to [redacted] only 25% of a screen story has to be written by a particular screen writer to obtain the screen credits for writing the screen play. Consequently other writers, according to these sources, particularly Communists, can work on a motion picture script and their identity would not become publicly known.

As an additional indication of the influence to which members of the Screen Writers Guild were subjected, the following quotation is being set out. This quotation was taken from the Hollywood Reporter dated August 20, 1946, and is a statement made by John Howard Lawson at a "Party Line Indoctrination Center" to a young group of student actors.

> "Unless you portray any role given you in a manner to further the Revolution and the Class War, you have no right to call yourself an artist or an actor...You must do this regardless of what the script says or of what the director tells you. Even if you are nothing more than an extra, you can portray a society woman in a manner to make her appear a villainess and a snob. And you can portray a working girl in such a way so as to make her seem a sympathetic victim of the capitalist system. It is your duty to do this at whatever studio you may find yourself employed."

In addition to the foregoing data, it must also be pointed out that the Communists' strategy and tactics included the use of the Aesopian language to disseminate and propagate their Communist ideologies. In other words, the Communists will use such words as Fascism or Democracy not in the same fashion as a true American. We understand as the meaning of Fascism, the type of government under Hitler and Mussolini, whereas the Communists in using the term Fascism mean any political action or word which is contrary to the Soviet Union. When we refer to a democratic government, we mean a true democracy as we have in the United States today, whereas the Communists in using the term democracy as applied to a form of government mean a government under the control of the State, free from capitalism and free enterprise which can only be possible in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. The use of this type of veiled propaganda utilized by the Communists may also be injected into motion picture films by the Communists and Communist sympathizers active in the writing and production of motion picture films.

Analysis of Motion Pictures Disclosing Communist Propaganda Therein

"KEEPER OF THE FLAME"

Released by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer on February 5, 1943
Producer -- Victor Saville
Associate Producer -- Leon Gordon
Director -- George Cukor
Screen Play -- Donald Ogden Stewart
(Based upon a novel by I.A.R. Wylie)
Cast -- Starring Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn

The author of the screen play, Donald Ogden Stewart, has been identified by Confidential Informant [redacted] national functionaries of the Communist Party, as a Communist. In addition, Howard DeSilva, the actor, is a member of the supporting case of this film and he has been identified as a Communist in Section I.

Katharine Hepburn, according to [redacted] has been associated with Communist inspired or directed activities in the Hollywood area. [redacted] made available a portion of the script of this picture which is taken from the opening scene. Christine is played by Katharine Hepburn and Steve by Spencer Tracy. Immediately preceding the scenes depicted in this script, Christine was married to a successful doctor but let him go to his death by driving into a washed-out bridge when she could have prevented his death. Christine is attempting to explain to Steve why she let her husband go to his death:

"Steve: I can believe in you so much that you can't help yourself. You'll have to be what I believe you are.

"Christine: (softly) I have been wanting to talk to you since that first night you came. I can fight you no longer. (after a moment) I married a legend—a legend about a hero. I didn't know that at first. I worshipped Robert. Perhaps to worship anyone is to destroy them. Everybody worshipped him——no, the image of him, the image that had been carefully built up in people's minds, deliberately built up I now believe, built up with a terrible purpose. When I found out what that purpose was I had to destroy the image. No, I had to destroy the man to save the image. Yes, that was it.

"Steve: What terrible purpose?

"Christine: I didn't know it was terrible once. You heard his mother this afternoon.

"Steve: His mother is insane.

"Christine: But Robert wasn't. He really believed in Hitler's new order.

"Steve: Robert Forrest!

"Christine: He had come to despise the people who worshipped him--all of us. (as Steve looks at her) Yes, me too. We were all beneath him. I didn't know what had happened. I suppose I was a bit like that myself. I believed in a few. Leaders. Rulers. And then, as Robert began to change, I saw the face of Fascism in my own home. Hatred. Arrogance. Cruelty. I saw what German women were facing. I saw the enemy.

"Steve: Robert Forrest.

"Christine: On the morning of the accident, I stole his keys, came here and opened this. (she moves to an enormous, specially-built filing cabinet) This is what I found. (as she speaks, she throws open the doors of the cabinet and we see a well-ordered array of drawers, cubby-holes, etc., containing papers, long lists of alphabetically indicated documents) Here is the key to Robert Forrest's Fascist organiztion. (she presses a button and a secret drawer jumps out) Of course, they didn't call it Fascism—they painted it red, white and blue and called it Americanism. (she takes out an ominous bunch of stocks and bonds) These are the funds to see it through, (she hands a stack of unnegotiable bonds to Steve) a fantastic amount subscribed by a few men to whom money meant nothing any more, but who wanted political power and knew they could never get it by democratic means. (she takes a card from an index) Here are their names. (Steve takes the card, glances at it, puts it in his pocket. Christine turns back to the cabinet) But what really sickened me was the essence of their plan. Here are some articles -- (from a drawer she pulls out a stack of typed manuscripts) all ready for release, to stir up the little hatreds of the whole nation against each other. (she hands Steve the first article) This is the copy of an article to be used in an anti-Semitic paper attacking the Jews. (she hands Steve the second article) This was to be used in the Farmers Gazette to stir them up against the city dwellers. (handing him another article) Here is an article to stir up hatred against the Catholics..(she gives him still another article) This is anti-negro...(handing him another article) This is against trade unions..(she gives him still another page) This is a subtle appeal to the Klu Klux Klan.

Steve examines each of the papers as she gives them to him. She goes back to the cabinet and produces more evidence.

"Christine: This is an interesting list of newspaper editors who had either sought public office in vain or had sought to dictate who would occupy office, and because they didn't succeed believed that the people were a great, stupid beast.

(while Steve is glancing at this paper, she turns back and runs her finger over the card index in a long drawer as she speaks) These were men who served their country in the last war but who were failures in business, who again longed for the power of rank and the prestige of a uniform. (she presses a button, which opens a spring door in the cabinet. She lifts out a small book) This contains the names and addresses of the men who were designated to be America's first storm troopers. (Steve's face hardens as he takes the book and shoves it into his pocket grimly) But what shocked me the most was the complete cynicism of the plan! Each of these groups was merely to be used until its usefulness was exhausted. Hates were to be played against hates. When one group seemed to be getting too powerful, it would be killed off with another group. And in the end all these poor little dupes who never realized to what purpose they were lending themselves would be in the same chains, cowed and enslaved, with Robert Forrest and his handful of power-thirsty henchmen cracking the whip."

According to [redacted] this is a good example of the negative approach and the indirect tactics used by the Communist writers in getting across the Communist Party line. He stated that in this script the writer has, in a veiled manner, attempted to make the audience believe that Fascism and Americanism are synonymous.

"THE MASTER RACE"

Producer — Robert Golden
Writer and Director — Herbert Biberman
Collaborators with Biberman — Anne Froelich
Rowland Leigh
Cast included — Morris Carnovsky
Lloyd Bridges

The Director and script writer, Herbert Biberman, is identified in Section I, of this memorandum, as a Communist. Anne Froelich, who collaborated with Biberman, is also identified in Section I of this memorandum as a Communist. Actors Lloyd Bridges and Morris Carnovsky have also been identified by most reliable and very delicate sources as Communists and their Communist connections are set out in Section I.

This picture was reviewed on February 14, 1945, by three Agents of the Los Angeles Office who were well schooled in Communist investigations and Communist Party propaganda. After reviewing this picture, they independently wrote reviews setting forth their opinions as to the Communist propaganda set out in the picture. A summary of their opinions is set out below.

In the first instance, the character, Colonel Von Beck, the German underground leader, was created and depicted as possessing all of the detested qualities attributed to the German race. The Major Phillip Carson, the American Army officer in charge of the liberated town of Kolar was depicted as a man and officer of very mediocre abilities. The British officer, Captain Forsythe, was depicted as being far below Major Carson in abilities and radiated weakness in all of his activities, whereas Lt. Andrei Krestov of the Russian Army was depicted as a superman in physical appearance and ability. He was shown as possessing ability to perform any type of task assigned to him and as being a real leader. A second example which appeared to contain propaganda was a series of scenes intended to give the impression that religious freedom exists in Russia. One of the scenes reflected that the young German officer was surprised to learn that religion was permitted in Russia. He appeared to be haunted by the vision of having thrown a hand grenade upon the altar of a church in the Ukraine. The main theme of the story was to establish unity of the United Nations in war and peace, which, of course, was the Communist Political Association line at the time this picture was produced. This is a praiseworthy theme, but it has particular significance when it is realized that the writer, Biberman, is a former active leader of the American Peace Mobilization in Hollywood and later, with the change in Soviet policy, called for all out unity.

"NORTH STAR"

Released by RKO Pictures, Inc. on October 13, 1943
Producer -- Samuel Goldwyn
Associate Producer -- William Cameron Menzles
Director -- Lewis Milestone
Author -- Lillian Hellman
Screen play -- Lillian Hellman
Cast: Starring -- Anne Baxter, Dana Andrews, Walter Houston, Walter Brennan, Ann Harding, Jane Withers

The author and writer of the screen play for this production, Lillian Hellman, has been identified by [redacted] Confidential Informant of the New York Office, as a Communist. In addition, Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office has reported that Hellman is a high ranking Communist who has associated exclusively with known Communists and Communist sympathizers for the past 20 years.

Lewis Milestone, the Director, according to [redacted] has associated with known Communists and Communist sympathizers.

Also, in the supporting cast is Ruth Nelson, actress, who is identified in Section I as a Communist.

In conjunction with this picture, it should be pointed out that Goldie Arthur, the ex-secretary of Samuel Goldwyn, well-known motion picture producer, and presently the wife of Robert Arthur, Universal Studios' producer, indicated that she was closely associated with the detail involved in the production of this picture. She related that Samuel Goldwyn had attempted to delete much of the obvious propaganda which was originally injected into this film. However, he was unable to take all of it out. This source reported that in addition to the giving of a fictitious picture of the situation in Russia, the film portrayed the idea that collective farming was the only successful way to farm.

"PRIDE OF THE MARINES"

Released by Warner Brothers on August 7, 1945
Producer -- Jerry Wald
Director -- Delmar Daves
Author -- Roger Butterfield
Screen play -- Albert Maltz
Adaptation -- Marvin Borowsky
Cast: Starring -- John Garfield
Eleanor Parker

Albert Maltz, writer of the screen play has been identified in Section I as a Communist. In addition, John Garfield, leading actor in the motion picture, has been identified as a Communist.

According to [redacted] Jack Moffitt, who wrote a review of this film in the Hollywood Review of September 10, 1945, is alert to the Communist tactics in the motion pictures and admitted this picture which was entertaining and well done, had Communist propaganda injected into it by the author. The following quotation is taken from Moffitt's article:

"Unfortunately, the soap box hasn't been completely eliminated. In one sequence Mr. Daves and Mr. Maltz have dragged the old Party Line into their love story about as gracefully as if they were lugging a dead bear up a flight of stairs into a boudoir. They say everything they can think of to provoke doubts concerning representative government and the free enterprise system. Employers are accused of everything from racial prejudice to a conspiracy to scuttle the G.I. Bill of Rights. The screen should be used as a forum for public discussion. But there is a great deal of difference between honest argument and biased propaganda. There should be, as Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes once put it, 'A free trade in ideas' so that the public can choose what is best in 'the competition of the open market'. That is the theory behind the American constitution. In the scene I refer to, many accusations are hurled which the other side gets no chance to answer. It represents, not a discussion, but a monopoly of ideas."

"SONG TO REMEMBER"

Released by Columbia Pictures, Inc., January 8, 1945
Producer — Louis F. Edelman
Director -- Charles Vidor
Author -- Ernst Marischka
Screen Play — Sidney Buchman
Cast: Starring -- Paul Muni
Merle Oberon
Cornel Wilde

The author of the screen play, Sidney Buchman, a well-known screen writer, has been identified in Section I of this Memorandum as a Communist.

[redacted], made the following remarks with regard to Communist propaganda injected into this picture, "Song to Remember":

"This motion picture represents a subtle complete distortion of historical facts. It deals with the life of Chopin. Chopin escapes from Poland and works in the underground against Russia during the revolutionary period in 1917. He further flees to Paris where he becomes acquainted with a rich woman who feels sorry for him because he is poor and ill. She takes him in and encourages him to study and compose music so that he may make something of himself and gain material wealth. Chopin's friends from Poland contact him and ask him to stop his work of composing and go on a tour and collect money which is to be donated to the people for the people's causes. They accuse him of being selfish.

"The rich woman who befriended Chopin is pictured as very evil. The picture deals much with the individual rights as against the rights of the masses. Chopin is convinced he must go to work for the people so he gives up his desire to carry on his work from Paris and goes on a tour where he becomes more ill and finally dies.

"The chief propaganda in addition to the above is that the man has no rights for himself but should live for the people and particularly persons of prominence like Chopin should even give his life for the masses so as to lead inspiration for them instead of gaining fame or glory for himself."

According to [redacted] formerly associated with RKO Studios who is an independent writer and producer, Artur Rubinstein, the well-known pianist was known to have protested to Harry Cohen, head of Columbia Pictures due to the fact that the production distorted the fact. Cohen informed Rubinstein that very few of the American people would know the difference and he thought the picture would make money.

"THE BEST YEARS OF OUR LIVES"

Released by Samuel Goldwyn through RKO Pictures, Inc. On December 25, 1946

Producer -- Samuel Goldwyn
Director -- William Wyler
Screen play -- Robert Sherwood
(From the novel Glory for Me by Mackinlay Kantor)
Cast: Starring -- Myrna Loy
Frederic March
Dana Andrews

According to [redacted] the writer of this screen play, although not known to be definitely a Communist, was one who associated with them and frequently gave them aid and comfort. It was pointed out by these individuals that this was a good example of a picture in which the screen credits did not reflect any outstanding or well-known Communists as associated with the production of the picture but it was believed by these individuals that the script was "dressed" by Communist writers who did not receive screen credits. According to [redacted] Howard Koch had done some of the work as a writer on this script. Koch is believed by [redacted] to be a Communist.

[redacted]

[redacted]

Frederic March, one of the starring actors in this play, has been identified by Confidential Informant [redacted] as a Communist.

Roman Bohnen and Howland Chamberlain, both of whom are identified in Section I of this memorandum as Communists, were included in the supporting cast.

The publication "Plain Talk," in the April, 1947, issue, carried an article written by William Markham in which Markham pointed out that this picture contained Communist propaganda which was subtly injected into the film. It was referred to as a masterpiece of "subversive half-truth."

[redacted] in discussing the picture, "The Best Years of Our Lives," stated the picture portrayed the upper class in a bad light. He recalled that the banker was portrayed as a mean, avaricious individual. One scene which [redacted] discussed as illustrating his point occurred when Frederic March went to see his boss, the banker, to tell the latter that he, March, had made a loan to a GI. Once March turned away, the banker's face changed and he registered disapproval of the former's action. This tended to show the banker as a mean individual. In the picture, according to [redacted] March attacked the banker at a public meeting which tends to give the audience the impression that bankers as a class are evil. [redacted] related that other unnecessary "stuff" was also put in.

William Z. Foster, national leader of the Communist Party, USA, held a meeting on September 10, 1947, in a Los Angeles Hotel with California State Secretary William Schneiderman and Los Angeles County Communist Party Chairman Ned Sparks. Agents of the Los Angeles Office who were in an adjoining room overheard Foster, in speaking of current motion picture productions, state with regard to the motion picture "The Best Years of Our Lives," "That was real stuff." He referred to this picture as well as "The Farmer's Daughter" and "Crossfire," which are also discussed in this Section, by stating, "They are standing them on their ears." Foster indicated that all three of these pictures were very fine productions.

"IT'S A WONDERFUL LIFE"

Released by RKO Pictures, Inc. on December 19, 1946.
Producer -- Frank Capra
Director -- Frank Capra
Screen play -- Frances Goodrick, Albert Hackett, Frank Capra
Cast: Starring -- James Stewart
Donna Reed
Lionel Barrymore

According to Informants [redacted] in this picture the screen credits again fail to reflect the Communist support given to the screen writers. According to [redacted] the writers Frances Goodrick and Albert Hackett were very close to known Communists and on one occasion in the recent past while these two writers were doing a picture for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Goodrick and Hackett practically lived with known Communists and were observed eating luncheon daily with such Communists as Lester Cole, screen writer, and Earl Robinson, screen writer. Both of these individuals are identified in Section I of this memorandum as Communists.

With regard to the picture, "It's A Wonderful Life", [redacted] stated in substance that the film represented a rather obvious attempt to discredit bankers by casting Lionel Barrymore as a "scrooge-type" so that he would be the most hated man in the picture. This, according to these sources, is a common trick used by Communists.

In addition, [redacted] stated that, in his opinion, this picture deliberately maligned the upper class, attempting to show the people who had money were mean and despicable characters. [redacted] related that if he had made this picture portraying the banker, he would have shown this individual to have been following the rules as laid down by the State Bank Examiners in connection with making loans. Further, [redacted] stated that the scene wouldn't have "suffered at all" in portraying the banker as a man who was protecting funds put in his care by private individuals and adhering to the rules governing the loan of that money rather than portraying the part as it was shown. In summary, [redacted] stated that it was not necessary to make the banker such a mean character and "I would never have done it that way".

[redacted] recalled that approximately 15 years ago, the picture entitled "The Letter" was made in Russia and was later shown in this country. He recalled that in this Russian picture, an individual who had lost his self-respect as well as that of his friends and neighbors because of drunkeness, was given one last chance to redeem himself by going to the bank to get some money to pay off a debt. The old man was a sympathetic character and was so pleased at his opportunity that he was extremely nervous, inferring he might lose the letter of credit or the money itself. In summary, the old man made the journey of several days duration to the bank and back with no mishap until he fell asleep on the homeward journey because of his determination to succeed. On this occasion the package of money dropped out of his pocket. Upon arriving home, the old man was so chagrined he hung himself. The next day someone returned the package of money to his wife saying it had been found. [redacted] draws a parallel of this scene and that of the picture previously discussed, showing that Thomas Mitchell who played the part of the man losing the money in the Capra picture suffered the same consequences as the man in the Russian picture in that Mitchell was too old a man to go out and make money to pay off his debt to the banker.

"THE FARMER'S DAUGHTER"

Released by RKO Pictures, Inc., on May 6, 1947
Starring: Loretta Young
Joseph Cotten
Ethel Barrymore

[redacted] an independent writer and producer, previously referred to in this section of the memorandum, related that the Communist propaganda in this picture was undoubtedly condoned by Dore Schary, producer, who [redacted] has had numerous arguments concerning the Communist form of government. Schary, according to [redacted] instructed at the People's Educational Center, a Communist influenced school previously discussed in this memorandum. According to Informant [redacted] Schary has been a close follower of the Communist Party line for a considerable number of years. In referring to the picture, [redacted] stated in substance that it was an obvious attempt to belittle present Congressional form of government in this country.

William Mooring, in an article entitled "From the Hollywood Sets" appearing in the National Catholic Monthly Magazine issue of August, 1947, stated with regard to the picture, "The Farmer's Daughter", the underlying effect of the film, viewed as one of the steady diets of such things, is to throw mud at the political factions known to oppose Communism, and furthermore, at the same time without naming the "Progressive" Party whose politics it upholds. It leaves with us the thought that only those who, like the farmer's daughter, believe in the naturalization of the banking system and other familiar tenets of Communism, are honest or humanitarian.

[redacted] in referring to this picture, advised that he did not believe it contained any direct Communist ideology. He stated it exposed the crooked dealings of the upper class in politics and that it showed the complete control by political methods of a wealthy family in a community. [redacted] stated that it was tempered, however, and that this family was not shown as a vicious one.

"CROSSFIRE"

Released by RKO Pictures, Inc., June, 1947
Producer -- Adrian Scott
Director -- Edward Dmytryk
Screen play -- John Paxton
(Adopted from novel "The Brick Foxhole")
Starring: Robert Young

The producer of this picture is Adrian Scott and the Director Edward Dmytryk, both of whom are identified in Section I of this memorandum as Communists.

According to Informants [redacted] this picture is a good example in which the racial angle has been unduly emphasized. In a report prepared by the Southern California Motion Picture Council, Inc., which is a known non-commercial, non-political, and non-sectarian group of organizations which furnish representatives to review motion pictures as they are released and make certain recommendations, the following information is disclosed concerning "Crossfire":

> "This picture is near treasonable in its implications and seeding efforts to arouse race and religious hatred, through mis-leading accusations; the use of a drunken, mal-adjusted soldier to typify our courageous service men and the use of minority groups to arouse suspicion and sympathy. This country was founded for religious freedom and has ever been the haven of security for the oppressed and persecuted of all nations. Here they have found peace, security and prosperity under just and equitable laws. Any effort to arouse class consciousness or antagonism is un-American; morally unsound; a perversion of facts and a sowing effort to create pernicious propaganda against unity and peace. It could have been a great picture, had the message of love instead of hate been consumated but it missed the mark, because one group was presented as intollerant, cruel and murderous, when all classes involved were to blame. The technical qualities are excellent. The photography is unusual. The opening scenes and music, which was impressive throughout, create an atmosphere of impending doom. The story, a complex murder mystery, involves four service men, Keeley, Montgomery, Mitchell, Floyd and Samuels, a Jew. The picture is socially and morally unsound and cannot be commended for any audience."

Mrs. William A. Turk, President of this organization, stated that in this picture one race is placed against another. [redacted] was advised with regard to this picture that certain of the speeches made by the actors were changed on the set and did not show up in the script. Specifically, he stated that a speech made by Robert Young in which he stated, "Jews have been killed, Catholics have been killed, that is the history of America", was altered on the set by the addition of the last phrase "that is the history of America".

It is of interest to point out that the Communist newspaper, the Daily Worker for August 31, 1947, in the column entitled "The Movies" by Harold J. Salemson, indicates that the Daily Worker has taken the stand that the picture "Crossfire" is "a fine document against intolerance....It seems to us that the unconscious and semi-conscious anti-semitics are reacting very violently. The film MUST be hitting its mark..."

"BRUTE FORCE"

Released by United Artists, July, 1947
Producer -- Mark Hellinger
Director -- Jules Dassin
Screen play -- Richard Brooks
Starring: Burt Lancaster
Hume Cronyn
Charles Bickford

The director of this production, Jules Dassin, has been identified as a Communist in Section I of this memorandum.

Life Magazine dated August 11, 1947, in reviewing this picture pointed out that it was a picture with some good acting in it but "less praiseworthy is a turn about moral code which portrays each representative of law and order almost as a case history of depravity, while all the law breakers seem like real nice fellows". A review made by the California Congress of Parents and Teachers of Los Angeles, California, in the publication "Unbiased Opinions" reflected the following information concerning the film.

> "The characters portraying the officers are as follows: the Captain of the guard is a Hitler type; the warden is a weakling holding on for retirement; the prison doctor is a humanitarian who can endure the suffering he sees only by using drink as a narcotic."

The review in this periodical by the California Federation of Business and Professional Clubs, states in part as follows:

> "Socially, it is insidious for sympathy, (it) is directed toward criminals while officers pledged to uphold the law are presented as cruel, vicious, and sadistic."

[redacted] a confidential source of the Los Angeles Office who [redacted] reported that during the making of "Brute Force", Jules Dassin, the director, attempted to insert a scene which in [redacted] opinion was Communist propaganda. Dassin intended showing negroes and whites occupying the same cells and intended depicting some sort of strife between the races. [redacted]

"MISSION TO MOSCOW"

Released by Warner Brothers, May, 1943
Producer — Robert H. Buckner
Dechnical Director: Jay Leyda
Screen Play — Erskine Caldwell
Author — Joseph E. Davies

"Mission to Moscow", a Warner Brothers release of May, 1943, was produced by Robert H. Buckner. Buckner was a former correspondent in Moscow of the "London Daily Mail". According to [redacted] he selected J. Leyda to act as technical director for the picture. Leyda had been in Moscow at the same time as Buckner where he had been connected with the Bureau of Revolutionary Writers of the Soviet Motion Picture Industry. Leyda is identified in Section I of this memorandum as a Communist. He was also active in the League of American Writers, a Communist front group.

[redacted] has related that the actual writer of the screen play "Mission to Moscow" was Erskine Caldwell. Caldwell has been a member of the League of American Writers for many years. He also made several trips to the Soviet Union. At one time, he was associate editor of "Soviet Russia Today", a Soviet propaganda publication. Prior to August, 193[illegible], he was in favor of a collective security. During the life of the Hitler-Stalin Non-Aggression Pact, he supported the program of the American Peace Mobilization and openly opposed Lend-Lease and Selective Service. After June 22, 1941, which was the date that the Soviet Union was invaded by the Nazis, he called for all-out aid to Britain, Soviet Russia and China.

The picture, "Mission to Moscow" is based upon the book, "Mission to Moscow" written by former United States Ambassador to Russia, Joseph E. Davies. The pro-Soviet propaganda disseminated through this picture was so obvious that it was criticized by numerous newspapers on these grounds. Informant [redacted] related the picture caused a controversy which resulted in the Communist Party's changing its tecnique of inserting Communist propaganda into motion pictures.

"CASS TIMBERLANE"
Written by — Donald Ogden Stewart

Donald Ogden Stewart has been identified by Confidential Informant [redacted] of the New York Office as a Communist. According to Informant [redacted] Stewart has been affiliated with the Communist element in the motion picture industry for many years. [redacted] related that the captioned film is an example of distortion of facts. He related that the script deals with the "country club set" attempting to get government war contracts. Considerable effort on the behalf of this group was expended to maneuver Judge Timberlane out of town as he is represented as being an honest judge, the inference being that there are dishonest judges and this one was an exception. [redacted] related that furthermore this judge was pictured as a State judge when in reality a judge dealing with war contract cases should have been a Federal judge. Also this judge would have disqualified himself in connection with the trial in question.

According to [redacted] this picture, which has not as yet been released, is to be made available to the public in the immediate future.

"BUCK PRIVATES COME HOME"

Screen play -- Frederick Rinaldo
Starring -- Bud Abbott
Lou Costello

The screen writer, Frederick Rinaldo, has been identified in Section I of this memorandum as a current member of the Communist Party in the Los Angeles area.

According to [redacted] in the picture "Buck Privates Come Home", one scene portrays a party given for a General in the Army whereas intermingling scenes disclose an enlisted man on KP duty making the audience unnecessarily class conscious. In other scenes he depicts an enlisted soldier who remarks he is unable to go to the nurses quarters and makes the statement that enlisted man cannot go out with officers, the nurse in this case being an officer.

"TIME OF YOUR LIFE"
Screen play -- William Saroyan
Producer -- James Cagney

This picture is cited as an example of the rejection of anti-Communist propaganda, which was displayed at a session of the Arts, Sciences and Professions Conference of the Progressive Citizens of America held on thought control at the Beverley Hills Hotel on July 12, 1947. This meeting was attended by an Agent of the Los Angeles Office who related that the session was dominated by known Communists with the key-note address given by John Howard Lawson, Communist screen writer identified in Section I.

The last speaker at this meeting was Paul Draper, a well-known dancer, who discussed the captioned production. Draper stated that while reading the script he noted that it was to depict a play during the life of the Hitler regime and that his script required him to say a line which ridiculed Hitler and had the effect of calling Hitler the most serious menace of the day. Draper stated he realized that the comment concerning Hitler could have been written in Hitler's time and realized that the script should be revised. He related he asked the director, whose name he did not give, as to what line should be substituted for this line concerning Hitler. The director told Draper to substitute the name of Stalin for Hitler. Draper indicated that he realized the significance of such a statement and said he could not say such a line in the movie. He then commented to the audience that he had a great ambition to dance in the Soviet Union and the Balkans at some future date.

"BODY AND SOUL"

Released by Enterprise Productions

Producer -- R. B. Roberts
Director -- Robert Rossen
Screen Play -- Abraham Polonsky
Cast: Starring -- John Garfield
Lili Palmer
Anne Revere

The director, Robert Rossen, has been identified as a member of the Communist Party in Los Angeles. His Communist connections are set out in Section I of this memorandum. The screen writer, Abraham Polonsky, has also been identified as a Communist and his Communist connections are set out in Section I.

The cast includes John Garfield, who has been identified by Confidential Informant [redacted] as a Communist, and Anne Revere, who also has been identified as a Communist and her Communist connections are set out in Section I of this memorandum.

[redacted] who reviewed the picture "Body and Soul," stated that it deals with the prize fight racket and as far as Communist propaganda is concerned, he did not believe it was "as hot as others" he had seen. He related, "It portrays the rich and successful man in a bad light and the finest character of them all is a colored fighter." The colored fighter is managed by a dishonest promoter and is maneuvered into a position where he fights a bout with a clot on his brain and is killed. The manager, according to [redacted] "knows it will kill him and in the picture uses the line 'so what, it's business.'"

In bribing various fighters, [redacted] related, the white man takes the bribe and the negro refuses $60,000 to throw a fight, portraying the negro in a fine light, which, according to [redacted] is the principal form of propaganda in this picture. The negro fighting while injured knowing that he is injured and his manager knowing that it may be his death as well as the negro refusing a bribe while the white man accepts it shows the negro as a noble character and sympathetic character while the successful promoter is shown as an unscrupulous, dishonest, heartless individual.

"ANOTHER PART OF THE FOREST"

Presently in production at Universal-International Studios

Producer -- Jerry Bresler
Director -- William Gordon
Screen Play -- Lillian Hellman
Screen Adaptation -- Vladimir Pozner
Cast: Starring -- Frederic March
Florence Eldridge

The screen play of the above picture was written by Lillian Hellman, who [redacted] has described as a Communist. In addition, the cast stars Frederic March and Florence Eldridge, March's wife. [redacted] has also identified March and his wife as Communists.

With regard to Lillian Hellman, Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office in 1944 stated that she was a high-ranking Communist who had associated exclusively with known Communists and Communist front organizations for at least twenty years. In this connection, it should be pointed out that Informant [redacted] is a former member of the Communist Party in Los Angeles.

According to [redacted] this story deals with "the most degenerate characters I know." He related that the story has to do with a Southern family living in a period immediately following the Civil War. The father has made considerable money by profiteering during the war which has resulted in continuous squabbles over money between him and his family. [redacted] related that the story deals with the reconstruction period and portrays the Southern aristocracy as a degenerate and ignorant class.

[redacted] writer at Warner Brothers Studio, reviewed the script for this picture and has made the following remarks:

"This script as a whole, in story, theme, intention, and implication, is most certainly propaganda for Communism - or, more specifically, it is vicious propaganda against the capitalist system.

"The story presents a family of monsters in a small Southern town in the year 1880. All the members of the family are unspeakably depraved (except the mother, who is insane) and indulge in every possible kind of villainy, including incest. They are shown in a manner which implies that they represent a rising new social class - the businessmen.

"The sole motive of the family is greed for money. The father got his start by alleged 'profiteering' during the Civil War and by betraying Confederate soldiers to the Union Army for a financial reward. (He led Union soldiers to a Confederate camp, with the result that 27 young Confederates were slaughtered in their sleep - not a very flattering incident for the Union Army, incidentally.)

"The father, the two sons and the daughter now spend all their time lying, cheating, double-crossing, blackmailing one another and everybody - in order to get money. The pursuit of money is made to appear evil and sickening - and the audience is left with the impression that money can be obtained only by such methods, that these are the only kind of people who can become rich. This is not said explicitly, but it is implied very forcefully - because there is not one line of dialogue, not a single reference to any honest method of acquiring wealth. The Hubbards are not presented as a freak family of scoundrels. They are presented, by implication, as the rich.

"All the other characters of the story, everybody in the town where the action takes place, are poor, ruined by the Civil War. The Hubbards are the only rich in the midst of general devastation. If there are any other kind of rich people in the town, the story never mentions them.

"There is not a single 'good' or actually sympathetic character in the whole story. As sole contrast to the Hubbards, there are only some ruined Southern aristocrats, who are futile, helpless and stupid - such as the stuffy John Bagtry and the half-witted Birdie. These are presented as the only honest people and are placed in the position of 'sympathetic' characters - yet here is what they stand for:

"Pages 101-102:

BIRDIE
'John wants to go to Brazil right now. The radical people down there are trying to abolish slavery, Mr. Hubbard, and ruin the 165

"'country. The planters have been looking for Confederate officers so John will be able to fight again for his ideals.'

MARCUS
'Why don't you choose the other side? Every man needs to win once in his life.'

JOHN
'I don't like that way of saying it. I fight for a way of life.'

"Here it is clearly driven home that John is not just a character in a story, but the representative of a 'way of life.' The only representative of the other, new 'way of life' which has defeated him, the representative of the capitalistic North as against the feudal South, the accomplice of the Union Army - is Marcus Hubbard (and his vicious children). No, Marcus is not just a villain - he is the symbol of the new economic order. This is stressed explicitly on page 102, where Marcus says to John:

'Well, I disapprove of you. Your people deserved to lose their war and their world. It was a backward world, getting in the way of history. Appalling that you still don't realize it.'

"The political message of the picture is certainly appalling. It tells people, in effect, that the course of American history consisted of a slave system which was replaced by something still worse, by the rise of capitalism - as exemplified by Marcus Hubbard. America had nothing to offer - except a choice between the 'ideals' of John Bagtry and the modern world of the Hubbards.

"This is not left merely to implication. It is stressed in a conversation between the two subhuman Hubbard sons, when Ben, the oldest, takes over his father's fortune through blackmail and looks forward to a brilliant financial future for himself.

"Pages 155-156:

BEN
'Big things doing all over the country. Railroads going across, oil, coal.'

"OSCAR
(Eagerly)
'Think we got a chance to be big rich, Ben?'
Ben smiles.

"Here you have the filthy, contemptible implication that the magnificent progress of American industry in the last 19th century, the great spurt of productive energy unequalled in history, the 'railroads, oil and coal' were created by or for the profit of men such as Ben and Oscar!

"If the audience took this picture seriously, they would go out of the theater and murder the first person wearing a mink coat. The only thing to prevent this, will not be the authors' intention, but the lurid preposterousness of the story. The nondiscriminating, however, will leave the theater with a good charge of hatred and indignation against the rich, the businessmen and the American system as a whole.

"On page 119, Marcus Hubbard describes his past as follows:

'At nine years old I was carrying water for two bits a week. I took the first dollar I ever had and went to the paying library to buy a card. At fourteen I was driving mules all day and most of the night. But that was the year I learned my Greek, read my classics, taught myself --'

"This is a fairly subtle point, and the audience might safely miss it, but this passage is a parody on the life story of a self-made man. If Marcus Hubbard were intended to be taken as a plain criminal, he would have been shown spending his youth in reform schools or indulging in petty larcenies. But no, he is given the standard biographyof a hard-working, ambitious self-made man. Only Communists would sneer at and discredit the kind of effort Hubbard claims to have made in order to rise and educate himself.

"On page 44, Hubbard's wife explains how he made his money during the Civil War:

LAVINIA
'People were dying for salt, and I thought it would be a kindness to run the blockade and bring it to them....Only I didn't think he would be asking eight dollars a bag for it - a tiny little one pound bag. Making money out of other people's misery!'

"Most people are quite confused on what constitutes war profiteering - so it is a standard Communist practice to denounce legitimate capitalist

"methods in the guise of denouncing 'war profiteering.' By the proper definitions of a free economy, only dishonesty in obtaining or executing government contracts can be classified as 'war profiteering.' The activity denounced in the above dialogue - a man running a blockade and making a profit on a product which he alone is able to supply - is not profiteering, and is not reprehensible. People were not forced to buy his product, they needed it desperately, and there is no definable limit to how much profit a man may or may not make. The mere conception of limiting profit is a collectivist idea. In a free economy, profit is established by supply and demand - and nothing else whatever.

"Such a line as the suggestion that somebody should run a blockade out of 'kindness' is economic demagoguery of the worst kind. Neither 'kindness,' nor 'noble intentions,' nor altruistic motives can produce goods or pay for them. Somebody has to produce them and somebody has to pay. It is this mixture of 'kindness' with economics that is the sure sign of someone preaching a Communist economy.

"The line 'Making money out of other people's misery!' is practically a bromide of the Communist propaganda machine. If such a slogan is repeated often enough and people actually accept it, it would justify any hungry bum in looting any grocer, because the grocer, too, could be defined as making money out of the bum's misery. The implication here is that it is evil to make money on something which others need. Since nobody buys anything unless he needs it, the further implication is that all profitmaking business is evil.

"Page 111, More of the same disgusting tripe:

> LAURETTE
> ' -- you got rich, bringing in salt and making poor, dying people give up everything for it. Right in the middle of the war, men dying for you, and you making their kinfolk give you all their goods and money!'

"Page 110, Marcus Hubbard says about his son:

> MARCUS
> 'And he steals a little. Nothing much, not enough to be respectable.'

"This may be just a wisecrack - or it may imply that you have to steal a lot in order to become respectable in our society."

[redacted] also read the script and stated as follows:

"'The Children's Hour,' 'The Little Foxes' and now this. Three in a row dealing with the most degenerate characters I know. 'The Children's Hour' was a great picture, but made you sick at your stomach. 'The Little Foxes' - you wanted to go out and brush your teeth after you saw it. It was diseased; every character in it was diseased, and yet it was beautifully written. This script is beautifully written, and every character in it is diseased. There is no character here that has any virtue unless it be the mother who was sick-minded, with the exception of three negroes, the three servants in the house. When they appear they are bright and good.

"This picture deals with the South in 1880. It starts with a celebration of a kind of Memorial Day for 20 young Confederates who were murdered, massacred by the Union Army because someone led them to the place where the men were camping and it had never been known who led them. Well, the story develops that it was the rich man of the town today who led the Army to the hiding place. His name is Marcus; he is a money lender and owns the store and lends money at tremendous rates; he is either a Greek or he likes Greeks; he is always reading Aristotle. The mother is a weak, frightened woman, Lavinia, as we first see her, and she is nervous and jumpy and comes down to pray at this field and her husband has forbidden her to go to it. This fine young colored girl gets her in time to bring her back to the house because her husband is a martinet. There is a character of a fine decent Northern money lender who comes down to loan money at 7 per cent and not the 10 and 15 per cent that Marcus has been charging, and the Ku Klux Klan, of which the younger son of Marcus is a member, rides him down and beats him up. The suggestion here was that his father had ordered him to do it because he tried to get money from his father for the act.

"Regina, the younger sister, and daughter of Marcus, has been sleeping with one of the young Confederate men with whom she is in love who does not love her, and the elder brother plots against that situation in order to mix it up because he wants the sister to marry another young rich man. The Southern boy does not have any money. The brother wants his sister to marry a rich man instead of a poor one.

"It is a completely diseased group mentally and morally. The family attitudes and life are beyond belief when you read it, however, every character is believable because it is so finely done; that is to say, it is the same in all three plays. The characters are as believable in this play as they were in 'The Little Foxes' and 'The Children's Hour' because they are so magnificently drawn; because the woman is a magnificent writer."

The author, in portraying the characters, as has been stated above, showed them to be a completely degenerate lot. [redacted] said:

"They are the same people we met in 'The Little Foxes,' decayed gentry. Oscar, the second son of Marcus, is going to marry a little chippy that he calls one of the lower class, a little dance hall girl. The father answers: 'Some people are democrats by choice and some by necessity.' Ben, one of the brothers, tells his sister, in speaking of his father - 'Go up to him Regina, put your arms around him. Lie to him like you always do;' and in talking about his daughter's lover, Marcus epitomizes him as follows: 'A dead man, a foolish man from an idiot world, a man who wants nothing but war, any war, just a war; a man who believes in nothing and never will.'"

This line, according to [redacted] portrayed antiwar propaganda. [redacted] considered it significant that "all the children hate each other; the line occurred 'John wants to go to Brazil right now. The radical people down there are trying to abolish slavery and ruin the country. The planters have been looking for Confederate officers, so John will be able to fight again for his ideals.'" [redacted] stated that this gave him the opinion that this character wanted war anywhere at any time.

The speech on page 102 saying "Your people deserved to lose their war and their world. It was a backward world, getting in the way of history" was, according t[redacted] Communist propaganda. Other Communist propaganda lines, according to [redacted] was a speech on page 111 when a character named Lorette said: "How you got rich, bringing in salt and making poor, dying people give up everything for it; right in the middle of the war, men dying for you and making their kinfolk give you all their goods and money."

[redacted] considered the following line Communistic propaganda when Marcus, speaking of his son, said: "He steals a little. Nothing much, not enough to be respectable."

[redacted] further said, "The only characters there that are decent are the negroes and the insane mother." One incident was portrayed wherein none of the members of the family remembered the mother's birthday but the three negroes appeared in the scene in the midst of a family quarrel, carrying a cake which they had baked, showing that they were the only persons in the house who remembered the mother's birthday.

[redacted] considered significant the following incident in the script when the elder son returned home: He tells the negro to carry his suitcase upstairs, whereupon Marcus says: "Take your valise to your room. It is not seemly for a man to load his goods on other men, black or white."

[redacted]aw Communistic propaganda in the following line of the father: "Though ignorance becomes a Southern gentleman, cowardice does not." And in speaking of his sons, Marcus says: "My eldest, a penny-grubbing trickster; my second, a proud illiterate." The scene wherein Colonel Isham, who represents the best people in the town, accepts bribe from Marcus because the Ku Klux Klan rode down and injured a waiter, is propaganda because it portrays the entire community as rotten and penurious. [redacted] summarized this picture by saying: "It is as straight a piece of propaganda as you could have for poisoning the mind against successful people."

[redacted]With reference to the reviews and comments of [redacted] and [redacted]t should be pointed out that they have vehemently requested that the Bureau keep confidential their identities as well as other individuals who review scripts for the Bureau. It is significant to point out that the scripts were obtained by the Los Angeles Office from reliable contacts at Universal-International and Paramount Studios who would be greatly embarrassed if it became known that the scripts were read by anyone connected with another studio. These scripts are considered as sacred property to the individual studio, and it is very difficult to get them for review.

Lawson, Maltz, Trumbo, Bessie, Dmytryk, Wexley, Rosson and Cole are Communists and their Communist affiliations are set out in Section I of this memorandum. Edward G. Robinson has been identified as a Communist by Informant [redacted] Charles Chaplin, according to [redacted] may or may not be a member of the Communist Party. However, [redacted] has stated that Chaplin has always gone along with the Communist Party and has helped them financially. He stated that Chaplin has financed the West Coast Communist newspaper "Peoples World." John Garfield, according to Informant [redacted] has been affiliated with the Actors Laboratory, the Young Communist League, Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, Hollywood Democratic Committee and the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee for the Arts, Sciences and Professions. All of the above organizations, with the exception of the Young Communist League, the former youth group of the Communist Party, USA, are discussed in Section III of this memorandum. Garfield has also been identified as a Communist by [redacted]

Mikhail Kalatozov, Soviet motion picture representative came to Hollywood in August of 1943, where he endeavored to purchase American films. Among the films he sought to purchase were "Little Foxes" and the " Earl of Chicago." The first of these films depicts a degenerate Southern family, the latter is a story of a Chicago gangster in England. It may well be a part of Kalatozov's plan or propaganda technique to obtain such pictures in order to exhibit American life at its worst to the Soviet people, much in the manner that Adolf Hitler, through his propaganda ministry, tried to convince the German people for several years before the war that the United States was nothing more than a nation of Chicago gangsters.

[redacted]

[redacted]

Following Kalatozov's return to the Soviet Union, his duties were turned over to the Vice Consul in Los Angeles. Since that time there have been limited contacts between Soviet diplomatic representatives and motion picture personalities.

In May of 1946, Gregory L. Irsky, formerly of the Amtorg Trading Corporation; Leonid Kozmatov, film camera man; and Boris Tolstogowsov, a film technician, came to the United States from the Soviet Union as a commission to study scientific technique on behalf of the Soviet Union, to arrange for cinematographic equipment and to negotiate for technical assistance in the motion picture field. Informant [redacted] motion picture manufacturing company, related that Irsky in his contacts [redacted] indicated that he was endeavoring to disseminate Russian propaganda type films on various phases of Soviet life, such as the Soviet military strength, under the guise of educational features, to American schools and colleges. This project, of course, did not materialize.

[redacted]

The Los Angeles papers carried numerous stories reflecting that Konstantin Simonov held a party aboard a Russian ship anchored in the harbor at Los Angeles. Among those who attended this party were Mr. and Mrs. John Garfield, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Chaplin and Lewis Milestone. The Los Angeles

Herald for May 28, 1946, reflected that the Jack Tenney (California State Legislature Un-American Activities Committee) group was going to conduct an investigation of thie party. It was reflected that the committee was interested in the elaborate banquet which was provided for the guests---- "While millions are starving in Europe----providing an ironic touch to the celebration honoring the proletariat."

With regard to Simonov's visit to this country, the June, 1946 issue of the "Screen Writer," which is the official publication of the Screen Writers Guild, carried a transcript of an informal discussion held under the auspices of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization between Simonov and members of the Screen Writers Guild. The informal discussion was presided over by Dalton Trumbo, a Communist, whose Communist affiliations are set out in Section I and who is employed as a screen writer in the motion picture industry.

This article contained a question propounded to Simonov concerning the rights of a writer of his material. Simonov replied that Soviet writers do not sell their work outright to the film industry but rather only sell the right for screening, indicating that the right for publishing the material remains in the hands of the author. It should be pointed out that the Screen Writers Guild is the organization supporting the American Authors Authority, which program, conceived under Communist guidance, calls for the copyrighting and subsequent leasing of screen plays rather than the selling of screen plays to producers.

Artkino Pictures, Incorporated

Artkino Pictures, Incorporated, was chartered in New York on July 22, 1940. It was registered, listing as its foreign principal, Soyuzintorgkino, Moscow, USSR.

The organization claims that it is engaged in the importation of motion picture films from Soviet Russia and the distribution of these films in the Western Hemisphere. Although there is no apparent direct connection between Artkino Pictures, Incorporated, and the Communist Party, USA, several of the people associated with the organization have been identified either as members of the Communist Party, Communist Political Association or closely associated with the Communist movement through front organizations.

Rose Madell, who was listed as Vice President in January of 1947 of Artkino Pictures, Incorporated, is married to Sam Madell, alias Sam Muldofsky. Sam Madell has been reported by several reliable sources, including [redacted] and reliable informant [redacted] as being actively affiliated with the Waterfront Section of the Communist Party in New York.

Ginger Canor, switchboard operator at Artkino, is believed to be identical with Gertrude Canor, who was born in New York City on February 2, 1925. Reliable informant [redacted] a former member of the Communist Party and former confidential informant of the New York Office, reported that Ginger Robeson, believed to be identical with Ginger Canor, was among those present at the Innwood Victory Club of the Communist Political Association on February 6, 1945, at New York City. He also reported that she was among those present at two other meetings of this same Club, one held on December 26, 1944, and the other on January 23, 1945. Nancy Markoff, listed as a telephone operator at Artkino, has been referred to by informant [redacted] as a member of the OGPU, presently known as the MGB. At the present time this allegation has not been proven or disproven. However, investigation is being made to determine the exact status of this individual.

VI. INVESTIGATION OF COMMUNIST ACTIVITIES IN THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY BY THE COMMITTEE ON UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

The House Committee on Un-American Activities publicly announced on June 20, 1945, that it had voted to investigate subversive activities in Hollywood to determine whether film stars and producers were involved in a plot to overthrow the Government.

It would appear that this decision on the part of the Committee was reached as a result of articles appearing in Los Angeles newspapers following a meeting in the City of Los Angeles on June 8, 1945, sponsored by the "New Masses," a Communist publication, and held in honor of William Gropper, cartoonist for the publication. Principal speakers included Richard Bransten, also known as Bruce Minton, former contributing editor of the "New Masses," and his wife, Ruth McKenney, also a former contributing editor of the "New Masses," as well as Joseph Foster, film editor of "New Masses." With regard to Richard Bransten and Ruth McKenney, it will be recalled that on September 19, 1946, these individuals were expelled from the Communist Party for an unauthorized release of a report on the National Plenum of the Communist Party held in July of 1946.

The Los Angeles papers reflected that the speakers indicated that Communist propaganda and activities in the future would be centered around Hollywood, that Communists were seeking to strengthen their ties with the White House, that pressure must be exerted to continue lend-lease to Russia and that "the thousands of pretty young girls in our Communist Youth Movement must volunteer as hostesses in USO's, canteens, churches, social groups—wherever the soldiers, sailors, and marines seek recreation and are prone to listen to persuasive voices." The latter quoted statement concerning young girls in the Communist movement appeared in the Los Angeles Examiner. However, the Agents of the Los Angeles Office who were in attendance at this meeting stated that this quotation was an inaccuracy on the part of the paper. The Agents attending the meeting also pointed out that the Examiner made the statement that the program presented had been "carefully blueprinted in New York City by Earl Browder and other American Soviets." No such statement in fact had been made at the meeting.

The Congressional investigation was held as a result, and following the investigation the Committee prepared three confidential reports. The first report contained many blanket statements and conclusions which did not appear to be supported by evidence.

The first section of this report was devoted to the naming of some of the prominent Communists in Hollywood. The second section dealt with the Actors Laboratory, a Communist-influenced group, the Hollywood Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions (formerly known as the Hollywood Democratic Committee), the Emergency Committee on KFI, the Anti-Defamation League, the Peoples Educational Center and the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, all of which were referred to as Communist-inspired groups, with brief statements concerning the activities of known Communists connected with these groups.

The next section set forth a list of names of individuals "believed to be" members of the Party in the Hollywood area. Section Four dealt with Communist activities in the various guilds in Hollywood and contained for the most part general statements concerning these guilds.

Part Five entitled "Communists in Labor Unions," was devoted in the main to Herbert K. Sorrell, one of the principal figures in the motion picture industry strikes. Part Six entitled "Russian Government's Interest in Motion Pictures," discussed primarily the visit of Mikhail Kalotozov to Hollywood. Kalotozov, who was in Hollywood during 1943 was a representative of the Soviet Film Industry, Soyuzintorgkino. The motion picture, "Mission to Moscow" was also discussed in this section, particularly with regard to the newspaper comments made concerning it, indicating that the picture was nonfactual and untruthful. The conclusion of the report discussed the aforementioned Communist meeting held in honor of the "New Masses." A considerable portion was also devoted to the alleged trouble that Ivan Levedoff, actor and writer, had in obtaining employment because he was opposed to Communists and Communism.

The second report, which was called a supplemental report, was dated September 28, 1945, and reviewed the publications: "International Theater," said to be an official publication of the International Union of the Revolutionary Committee, published in Moscow, Russia; "The New Theater," an American publication, the organ of the Workers Committee, which was a section of the International Union of the Revolutionary Theater; "International Literature," said to be an organ of the International Union of Revolutionary Writers published in Moscow; and the "T.A.C. Magazine," an American publication sponsored by the Theater Arts Committee. The international and Communist connections of these publications from available copies were reviewed and set out in this report.

The third report, another supplemental report, issued early in 1946, limited its scope to the activities and affiliations of the Communist activities engaged in by the writers employed by Metro-Goldwyn Mayer Studios.

This same Congressional Committee on December 3, 1946, held a preliminary hearing in Los Angeles concerning the Communist activity in the film industry and, according to reports received, only three witnesses were called and the hearings were superficial. The Committee announced, however, that it would return in January of 1947 to conduct extensive hearings on all phases of this type of activity in Hollywood.

The next statement concerning Communist activity in the motion picture industry was made by you in your testimony before this group on March 26, 1947. On this occasion you pointed out that the Communists launched their attack in Hollywood during 1935, directing their activities at the infiltration of labor unions and so-called intellectual and creative fields. You stated that the Communist activity in Hollywood was effective and was furthered by Communists and Communist sympathizers who used the prestige of prominent individuals in the film colony to further their cause. You also stated that the Communists endeavored to insert into motion pictures Communist propaganda and to eliminate anti-Communist statements.

Following your testimony you will recall that Eric Johnston, of the motion picture industry, testified before this Committee. The Washington Post in reference to Johnston's appearance quoted him as stating, "As for there being Communist influence in the movies, such an accusation is absurd. If Hollywood were a Communist network, I should not be attacked every morning in the 'Daily Worker'! — as I can assure you I am ——."

As you will further recall, Father Cronin telephonically advised Mr. Tamm that Johnston had requested him to draw up a program for the elimination of Communists in the motion picture industry. You will also undoubtedly have noted that Mr. Johnston and his associates have retained former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes. Byrnes, however, is only to act in an advisory capacity concerning the pending Un-American Activities hearings on Communism in the motion picture industry. These actions on the part of Johnston do not show a consistency with his statements as quoted in the Washington Post and referred to above.

Confidential Informant [redacted] of the Los Angeles Office, advised that members of the Un-American Activities Committee arrived in Hollywood on May 8, 1947, amid a great fanfare of press releases and headlines, to conduct an inquiry concerning Communism in the motion picture industry and to ascertain specifically the activities of Hanns Eisler, the brother of Gerhardt Eisler, who is employed in the motion picture industry as a writer.

Novelist Rupert Hughes testified before the Committee on May 15, 1947, at which time he stated that Communists dominated Hollywood to a large degree and specifically mentioned Charles Chaplin and John Howard Lawson. Jack Warner, Vice President of Warner Brothers Studio, also is said to have testified and complimented the Committee on the work it was doing.

Chairman Thomas of the Committee complimented Adolf Menjou for his enlightening presentation before the Committee, stating that Menjou testified that Communists in the film industry were so powerful that many of the "little people" were afraid to move against them.

Mrs. Lela Rogers, mother of Ginger Rogers, who appeared before the Committee, referred to "The Little Red School House" as being the People's Educational Center in Hollywood and also testified concerning an alleged Communist statement that her daughter refused to say in the motion picture "Tender Comrade."

Robert Taylor also testified, relating that he was forced by Lowell Mellett, former Administrative Assistant to the late President Roosevelt, into playing in a motion picture which favored Russian ideologies over American. The Los Angeles Examiner of May 15, 1947, from which this information was obtained, reflected that Mellett was also affiliated with the Office of War Information as the Director of the Motion Picture Division. The article further reflected that Mellett specifically came to Hollywood for the express purpose of overruling Taylor's objection to appearing in the 1943 release "Song of Russia."

Other individuals prominent in the film world who appeared before the Committee included screen actor Richard Arlen and Henry Ginsberg, Vice President in Charge of Production at Paramount Studios. Viktor Kravchenko, estranged Soviet official, appeared before the Committee and was quoted by the Los Angeles Examiner for May 17, 1947, as having stated that Hollywood was a serious intellectual front in the United States and it was necessary to clear Hollywood of the Communists and Communist sympathizers.

The New York Times of May 17, 1947, quoted Chairman J. Parnell Thomas of the Un-American Activities Committee as asserting after a week of hearings on subversive activities in Hollywood that "ninety per cent of the Communist infiltration" was in the screen writing field, but that the Federal Government had also abetted the work. He related that in the testimony of fourteen actors, writers, and producers, a very outstanding point that appeared many times was the influence of the "Government in aiding the Communist conspiracy."

The article also reflected that Mr. Thomas stated he reported testimony reflecting that even the White House exerted its influence on certain people in Hollywood to have certain pro-Russian motion pictures filmed during the regime of the late President Roosevelt.

He also indicated that he was not only referring to the incident which came out as a result of the testimony of Robert Taylor, but to other statements made by actors and producers who indicated how the Government persuaded them to put out Communist propaganda in their productions.

On July 21, 1947, it was ascertained that the Un-American Activities Committee had retained the services of former Special Agents H. Allen Smith and A. Bernard Leckie to investigate Communist infiltration of the motion picture industry in the Hollywood area. In connection with this assignment, Mr. Smith called at the Bureau and was interviewed by Mr. J. P. Mohr, at which time he advised that he had been retained by the Committee at the rate of $25 per day and that his legal associate, former Special Agent A. B. Leckie, would receive $22.50 per day. Smith related that he had been informed that the objective of his investigation was to line up friendly witnesses and those unfriendly witnesses which the Committee will desire to call. He said it was his purpose to line up approximately 25 or 30 good witnesses who can through proper questioning expose the entire Communist infiltration of the motion picture industry. According to Smith, he gathered the definite impression that he could anticipate considerable pressure to buy him off and to buy off his investigators. He anticipated this pressure would come from Eric Johnston and through sources employed by him. He related that he was informed that two of Johnston's representatives visited the Committee in an effort to find out what the Committee intended to do and how far they intended to go in their investigation of Communism in Hollywood. Smith related that he understood that Congressman Thomas told these representatives he wanted to have nothing to do with them and kicked them out of the office. Smith indicated that he would keep the Los Angeles Office of the Bureau fully informed of his activities and that he is desirous of letting the Bureau know of anything pertinent to our investigations which may come to his attention.

On July 23, 1947, SAC Hood had a lengthy interview with L. B. Mayer of MGM Studios concerning the hearings conducted last spring by the Un-American Activities Committee. According to Mayer, the Committee did itself a great deal of harm by publishing the testimony of Robert Taylor, inasmuch as it was understood by Taylor and other witnesses that their testimony was to be "off the record." Mayer stated that Robert Taylor was mistaken about the actual facts to which he referred, and Mayer attributed this to Taylor's antagonism toward Communism and related that if necessary he, Mayer, would have to state that Taylor was mistaken. Mayer related that at one time during the war he received a telephone call from Elmer Davis, the head of the Office of War Information, requesting that the film "Mrs. Miniver" be released nationwide as soon as possible in an effort to combat the strong anti-British feeling which was developing in this country. Instead, therefore, of playing large houses in the big cities, which is done with big pictures, it appeared almost simultaneously throughout the country. As a result, the studio's gross was approximately $5,000,000 less than it would have been had it been distributed in a normal way. He related that sometime later, Government officials were most anxious that some kind of a picture be made to put the Russians in a better light with the American people. Consequently, the film, "Song of Russia," starring Robert Taylor, was made by MGM. Mayer, according to Mr. Hood, could not or would not state exactly who had requested that this film be made. Mayer stated that there were many governmental agencies maintaining liaison with the studio and that he could not recall which one of them handled this particular picture. He stated that he recalled that there was some Communist propaganda in the script as it first appeared and he ordered that all references to collective bargaining and the like be stricken. Mr. Mayer related that he is certain that the film contains no Communist propaganda. Mayer told Lowell Mellett and the Secretary of the Navy, Frank Knox, that he did not care whether they made the picture or not, but if the Government wanted it made and wanted Taylor in it, then it would be necessary that his induction into the Navy Air Service be postponed until the picture could be completed. It was felt that if his Naval induction was held up, he might be inducted into the Army by his Draft Board and, therefore, it was necessary to make a deal with the Draft Board to defer his induction, resulting in Taylor being permitted to remain and the film being produced. Mayer stated positively that this was the real truth of the story, and that Taylor was not ordered by anyone to make the film and he feels that when hearings are held in Washington in September, Mellett's testimony and his, Mayer's, if he is called upon, will make the Committee look ridiculous for having jumped at the publicity on Taylor's erroneous statement.

It is of interest to point out that Mayer was frank to admit to Mr. Hood that he knew there were some Communists in his studio and related that he was willing to discharge all these Communists, but that if he did so his Communist writers would be grabbed up by other studios immediately and paid more money than he is paying them at the present time. This, apparently, was his excuse for having these people on his pay roll.

The Washington Evening Star on July 30, 1947, carried an Associated Press release reflecting the statement made by Representative Nixon, Republican of California, in which he said that the Un-American Activities Committee intends to name names and to produce witnesses who will testify that they have seen persons prominent in Hollywood at Communist meetings and who will report what they said. Nixon related that most of the big stars who may figure in the inquiry will be listed as "tinged with pink, rather than as bright red Communists." According to Nixon, whether any actual Communists or fellow travelers will testify at the hearings, even under subpoena, will develop later. He said that they may follow the Party line of refusing to testify on the grounds that they would incriminate themselves.

The Washington Times-Herald on August 27, 1947, carried a United Press release indicating that former Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles; George Messersmith, former Assistant Secretary of State and Ambassador to Mexico and Argentina; Joseph Saboretti, Assistant Immigration Commissioner; Clarence R. Porter, Chief Inspector of the Immigration Service in Calexico, California; and Mr. P. C. Hutton, Second Secretary and Consul of the United States Embassy at Guatemala City, were to be subpoenaed before the Un-American Activities Committee. Specifically, the Committee, according to the article, wants Welles "and presumably the other four," to explain how and why Hollywood writer Hanns Eisler, brother of Gerhardt Eisler, got official permission to enter and remain in the United States.

[redacted] Investigator for the House Committee on Un-American Activities confidentially furnished Special Agent in Charge R. B. Hood of the Los Angeles Office with a list of possible unfriendly witnesses whom the Committee intends to subpoena in connection with the pending hearings of the Committee in Washington, D. C., to be held in the latter part of this month:

Berman, Lionel
Bessie, Alvah
Cole, Lester
Collins, Richard J.
Cromwell, John
Dmytryk, Edward Garfield, John
Kahn, Gordon
Kibre, Jeff
Koch, Howard
Lardner, Ring, Jr.
Lawson, John Howard
Maltz, Albert
McKenney, Ruth
Milestone, Lewis or Louis
Morley, Karen
Odets, Clifford
Ornitz, Samuel
Parks, Larry
Pomerance, William
Revere, Ann
Robinson, Edward G.
Salt, Waldo
Stapp, John
Stewart, Donald Ogden
Trumbo, Dalton
Tuttle, Frank

[redacted] also advised Mr. Hood that the following individuals are intended to be used as friendly witnesses:

Brewer, Roy E.	Moffitt, John Charles
Chase, Bordon	Montgomery, Robert
Cooper, Gary	Murphy, George
Disney, Walt	Rand, Ayn
Gibbons, Cedric	Reagan, Ronald
Hughes, Rupert	Rogers, Lela E.
McCarey, Thomas Leo	Ryskind, Morrie
McGuinness, James	Taylor, Robert
Menjou, Adolphe	Wood, Sam

In connection with this pending hearing, [redacted] has confidentially advised Mr. Hood of a recent telephonic conversation he had with Robert Stripling of the House Committee on Un-American Activities. According to [redacted] he was advised that a tremendous amount of pressure had been put on the Committee by all sources, including Congressional, to call off or otherwise influence the Committee's action on this pending hearing into Communism in the motion picture industry. [redacted] related that in his conversation with Stripling he proposed that the witnesses be called approximately as he has indicated in the schedule prepared by [redacted] for the hearing; however, Stripling was not in complete accord with [redacted] desire in this regard.

Investigator [redacted] has informed Mr. Hood that he is concerned over the procedure and method of operations to be utilized by the Committee in handling the pending hearing. [redacted] has related that he has definitely promised the witnesses from California that they are going to testify along the lines which he has discussed with them. [redacted] related that a great number of the witnesses are worried that the Committee in an effort to create publicity will go off on some tangent. He related that he has tried to point out to Stripling that he wants to give the impression that the inquiry is not one to attack the industry but rather to show that the motion picture industry is being attacked by the Communists. [redacted] related that it is his desire to show that the House Committee on Un-American Activities is endeavoring to expose this Communist activity and thus strengthen the position of the industry.

[redacted] has indicated that he intended to proceed by air to New York on September 15, 1947, and on the following day meet with Mr. J. Parnell Thomas, Chairman of the Committee, as well as other members of the Committee in order to make plans for the hearing. Prior to leaving California, [redacted] furnished Special Agent in Charge Hood of the Los Angeles Office with a copy of a schedule of witnesses which he hopes will be used at the hearing. This schedule is set out in its entirety hereinafter:

"After several discussions between [redacted] and [redacted] the following tentative schedule of witnesses has been arranged:

1. Jack L. Warner — Time allowed: ½ day
   Co-Owner, Warner Brothers

   Comment: From reading Warner's previous testimony, it appears that it is the best that we have, and he can lay a fine pattern of Communism in the industry. He can show the trouble that he had and what he did, and express his wonder as to why the others have not followed his actions. He will call them what they are, and state he threw them out.

   Let him say that he is an American and even if he has to suffer financially, he does not intend to have them in his studio, and will continue to suffer financially until such time as he has all Americans. Then, it is interesting to note that last year the Warner Brothers' statement was the best in its history, and it might be that we can bring this in to our benefit. We have not interviewed Warner, and he will not be back until around October 1st, but we are advised that he will not go back on his testimony.

2. Louis B. Mayer — Time allowed: ½ day
   Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

   Comment: Mayer can testify regarding 'Song of Russia,' 'Tennessee Johnson,' and the fact that there is no law and until there is a law, he does not feel there is anything particular he can do to Communists. We believe he will say that if there is a law, or if the other studios would get together, he would dismiss them, but he does not want to fire somebody and have another studio get the benefit of it. We think that having Mayer follow Warner will have the psychological effect that Mayer will try to be a better American than Warner.

3. Leo Cherne — Time allowed: 1 hour

   Comment: This individual is in New York and his name has been forwarded to Stripling. It is stated that he is very reliable and can lay a general pattern of the development of Communism.

"4. Roy E. Brewer — Time allowed: 1 day
Internat'l Representative, IATSE

Comment: This individual can lay a general pattern of Communism in the labor industry.

 Two unfriendly Communist witnesses should be called at this point, their names to be selected later.

5. Robert Mongomery)
6. George Murphy) All Actors — Time allowed: 1 day
7. Ronald Reagan)

Comment: The first two of the above individuals are past presidents of the Screen Actors Guild. Reagan is now President. They can give the history of Communism in the Guild, and express their opinions otherwise.

 Two or three more Communists, to be selected later, should be called at this point.

8. Robert Taylor — Time allowed: 2 hours
Actor

9. Sam Wood — Time allowed: 2 hours
Director-Producer

 We should call Lowell Millett here.

 A couple more Communists, to be selected later, should be called here: Possibly Richard J. Collins, if we have sufficient information, as he was a writer on 'Song of Russia,' regarding which incidents Taylor and Wood will discuss from the Millett angle.

10. Adolphe Menjou — Time allowed: ½ day
Actor

Comment: He will discuss the general situation.

11. James K. McGuinness — Time allowed: ½ day
Vice President, MGM

Comment: He will discuss the general situation, the beginning of the fight in the Screen Writers Guild, the young writers' troubles, Authors Authority, and 'Tennessee Johnson.'

"12. Morrie Ryskind — Time allowed: 1½ hours
Writer

Comment: Will discuss the situation in the Screen Writers Guild

13. Borden Chase — Time allowed: 1½ hours

Comment: Will discuss comparison between Screen Writers Guild magazine and the Communist Party line.

 Call a couple more Communists, who should be writers, at this point.

14. John Charles Moffett — Time allowed: 3/4 day

Comment: Will give an analysis of the pictures, following the writers. He might qualify himself by stating that when Gilbert and Sullivan wrote criticisms, they did it as Englishmen, and the Communists criticize everybody on behalf of Communists, and in analyzing the pictures he is keeping in mind Communist Party policies and politics.

15. Rupert Hughes — Time allowed: 2 hrs.
Author

Comment: Can give a general analysis from the writer's standpoint.

 Call a couple of Communist directors and actors at this point.

18. Gary Cooper — Time allowed: 1 hour
Actor

19. Walt Disney — Time allowed: 1 hour

Comment: In summary, he can state that he believes in Americanism, is against all other 'isms,' and against Communism; Communists will not be allowed in his studio if possible to keep them out, etc.

"20. Leo McCarey Time allowed: 1 hour

Comment: Concluding witness, from his statements regarding Americanism, that he will not permit Communists in his pictures, etc. Would not make a picture with Hepburn, etc.

Note:

If we call Lewis Milestone as an unfriendly witness, he probably should be subpoenaed just before Cooper, and if we locate Louis D. Lighton and he can testify, we should probably substitute him in place of someone else, possibly Lela Rogers; or let him testify along with Cooper.

One reason for calling Cooper and McCarey the last day is that they are both engaged in a picture, and if we can bring them back together we will save them thousands of dollars.

From the above schedule, we have first the studio heads, followed by the labor and technical experts, followed by actors from the Screen Actors Guild standpoint; then the special incidents of Robert Taylor, 'Song of Russia,' Wood, and Lowell Millett; followed by general witnesses; then the Screen Writers Guild, the picture analysis, and closing with three witnesses who are very pro-American."

VII. ASSOCIATION OF MOTION PICTURE PRODUCERS, INCORPORATED
5504 HOLLYWOOD BOULEVARD, LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

James Howie of 5504 Hollywood Boulevard, who is the counsel for the Association of Motion Picture Producers, Incorporated, on July 24, 1947, advised that the captioned group was incorporated in the State of California in January of 1924. He stated that this organization is affiliated with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, formerly known as the Hayes Office, which was organized and incorporated in New York in 1922.

The Hollywood Studio Blue Book Directory, Spring Edition, 1947, lists the following officers and members of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, Incorporated:

Eric Johnston	President
(Temporarily vacant)	Executive Vice President and Chairman of the Board
James S. Howie	Secretary and Treasurer

Board of Directors

John Beck, Jr.	B. B. Kahane
Warren Doane	Edgar J. Mannix
Marvin Ezzell	N. Peter Rathvon
Y. Frank Freeman	Joseph M. Schenck
Herbert Freston	Allen Wilson

Members

Columbia Pictures Corporation	Samuel Goldwyn Productions
Loew's Incorporated	Paramount Pictures, Incorporated
RKO Radio Pictures, Inc.	Republic Productions
20th Century Fox Film Corporation	Hal Roach Studios
Universal Pictures Company	Warner Brothers Pictures

The Los Angeles Office has advised that the data contained in their files, together with a check of all other sources and informants on Communist activities, fails to reflect any Communist activities or associations on the part of the above-named individuals.

In connection with the officers set out above, it should be pointed out that the Los Angeles Times newspaper for June 3, 1947, disclosed that Eric Johnston had announced the election of Y. Frank Freeman, a Vice President of Paramount Pictures, Incorporated, to the Chairmanship of the Board of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, Incorporated, and that James F. Byrnes, former Secretary of State, would serve as counsel for the Association. In this same article Johnston is quoted as saying, "We are determined that subversive propaganda, government pressure or political censorship will never undermine the freedom of the screen, which, like the freedom of the press and radio, is indispensable to a free America."

According to Mr. Howie, the Association of Motion Picture Producers, Incorporated, was originally organized to invest a moral code on the motion picture industry and that the Association had never had any legal or other provision to keep out or to investigate Communist propaganda and activities in the preparation of motion pictures by member studios. Howie related that there is at present considerable controversy among the members of the Association as to the setting up of a committee to investigate Communist activity in the motion picture industry and to eliminate those individuals responsible for it, or to merely restrict its scope to the making of recommendations to the industry.

According to Mr. Howie, Eric Johnston, President of the Association, during the week of July 14, 1947, held a conference of the officers of the Association, at which time he made the following statement:

> "We must have legal proof that a person is a Communist or otherwise subversive before this office will recommend that he be fired, because most persons in the industry are working under contract, which would result in legal suits for damages. We will cooperate with responsible agencies of the government to unearth subversive activities, but we are not in agreement with some of their methods."

According to Mr. Howie, Johnston indicated that he did not like the publicity seeking committees who were injecting political angles into their investigations and, in particular, mentioned Dies, Rankin and Thomas as being in this category.

Eric Johnston's present personal assistant is Edward T. Cheyfitz, who, according to Mr. Howie, spends a considerable part of his time in Washington and New York City making frequent trips to the Hollywood area on major assignments given him by Eric Johnston. He related that some weeks ago Cheyfitz came to the West Coast to collaborate in the making of particular labor propaganda pictures for the Motion Picture Association at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios. Cheyfitz's one-time affiliation with the Communist Party is admitted by him.

On October 13, 1942, at his own request, Cheyfitz was interviewed by Speical Agents in Toledo, Ohio, at which time he volunteered certain information concerning his past activities in the Party. He admitted having been a Communist member at large in the State of Ohio and active as an organizer in the CIO Die Casters Union throughout the United States with other Communist leaders who had been appointed by him at the recommendation of John Williamson of the Communist Party National Committee. Cheyfitz claims he was expelled from the Communist Party shortly after the Soviet-Nazi non-aggression pact due to an article he wrote in opposition to the pact.

The Los Angeles Office has at the present time no record or other evidence indicating that Cheyfitz is currently a member of the Communist Party. [redacted] of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees in Hollywood, California, related that in his dealings with Cheyfitz he has been led to believe that Cheyfitz is sincerely anti-Communist at the present time.

As a possible indication of the current estimate of Cheyfitz by the local Communist element in the Hollywood area, the Los Angeles Office has advised it is in possession of the original of a letter dated July 26, 1946, on the letterhead of the Los Angeles CIO Council. This letter, which was made available by [redacted] who is at present [redacted] at the University of California at Los Angeles, on May 10, 1947, is signed by Philip M. (Slim) Connelly, Secretary of the CIO Council, and is addressed to Pauline Lauber of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization, both of whom have been identified in this memorandum as Communists. The letter reads as follows:

> "You may remember the jerk who signs the attached letter (Edward T. Cheyfitz). He was once National Secretary of one of our unions and was as phoney as hell. I'm sending this to you simply for information, however, if the boys feel that any time they can benefit by contact with Cheyfitz they should feel free to do so."

[redacted] who is an extremely reliable confidential source of the Los Angeles Office, advised that Paul McNutt had agreed to represent the Policy Committee of the Motion Picture Industry in the pending hearings before the Un-American Activities Committee and that former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes would act in the capacity of an advisor. [redacted] related that he believed it was not proper for a former Justice of the Supreme Court and a former Secretary of State to become involved in the political end of these hearings. It is anticipated, according to this source, that McNutt will be in constant attendance during the sessions of the pending hearings and will attempt to formulate questions and handle the people who are appearing from the motion picture industry in order to prevent a smear of the Hollywood motion picture industry. According to [redacted] the Policy Committee of the motion picture industry is made up of the following individuals: Nate Spingold; Austin Keough; Robert Rubin and Joe Hazen of New York; Mendel Silberberg; Maurice Benjamin; Al Wright and this source of Hollywood. [redacted] identified these individuals by stating that they are for the most part attorneys.

The 1947-48 International Motion Picture Almanac contained the following identification with regard to the above individuals:

Spingold, Nate. First Vice President, Columbia Pictures Corporation.

Keough, Austin. General Counsel, Vice President and Director Paramount Pictures.

Rubin, Robert. Vice President, General Counsel, MGM.

Hazen, Joseph H. With the law firm of Thomas and Friedman. In 1944 resigned as Vice President and Director of Warner Brothers to join Hal Wallis Productions as President.

Silberberg, Mendel. Attorney, General Counsel for Columbia Pictures in Los Angeles

Benjamin, Maurice. Attorney, West Coast Counsel for MGM.

This source, [redacted] related that Byrnes was thinking of asking the FBI in Washington to give him the names of persons prominent in the motion picture industry who are Communists so that they can really be exposed at the forthcoming hearings.
